Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Official Figures.

St. Paul.—Figures issued by the state canvassing board show that J. F. Jacobson, Republican candidate for governor, received a total of 147,357 votes, a gain of 300 over the unofficial returns. Gov. Johnson received 175,136 votes, a gain of 100 over the unofficial count. The official majority of Johnson is 27,779. There is little change in the figures on the other candidates.

The totals on the state officials as issued by the state canvassing board show only occasional changes from the unofficial totals issued by Secretary of State Schmahl a month ago. The official figures on state officers are:

Governor: Jacobson, 147,357, Johnson, 175,136, Haggard 7,024, Moore 6,516, Allen, 593.

Lieutenant governor: Eberhart, 164,884; Reiter, 109,010; Anderson, 19,317; Higbee, 2,919.

Secretary of state: Schmahl, 175,564; Lamb, 96,561; Damon, 15,216; Lefevre, 10,939; Waterston, 2,024.

Attorney general: Simpson, 180,521, Mathers, 98,569; Uhl, 12,661; Power, 3,636.

State treasurer: Dinehart, 179,867; Nelson, 103,330; Kolu, 12,394; Nordlaef, 2,861.

Railway and warehouse commissioner: Mills, 143,778; Elmquist, 140,804; Bjorge, 85,857; Mee, 81,404; Lindsay, 20,790.

The total number of those who registered was 388,262 males and 24,749 females. There were 355,263 ballots cast by males and 16,700 by females.

Layman's Conference.

The Minnesota Conference of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, which is to be held at Minneapolis, Feb. 4-7, it is expected, will surpass in general interest any religious campaign ever held in the Northwest. It is to be state wide in its influence, as it is inter-denominational and inter-county in its organization.

It is distinctively a laymen's movement, inaugurated, financed and managed by them, with the sole purpose of quickening interest in missions and unifying the effort for evangelizing the non-Christian countries of the world.

The movement had a spontaneous beginning at New York two years ago and since then great meetings have been held in twelve cities of the south and west, in every city in Canada from Halifax to Vancouver, and last November in Boston.

Numerous representatives of missionary boards and missionaries, who are on furlough, are expected to attend and prominent speakers will address meetings to be held in a number of churches each day of the conference. There is also to be a dinner, at which Pres. Northrop, of the Minn. State University, will preside, which it is expected will be attended by many leading laymen of all denominations.

Among the prominent speakers expected are: Col. Elijah W. Halford, the founder of the Chicago-Inter-Ocean; W. T. Ellis, a newspaper correspondent of world-wide fame; J. Campbell White, regarded as the greatest foreign missionary speaker of this generation and E. F. Wilber, U. S. Consul at Halifax. Gov. John A. Johnson has signified his desire to take an active part.

Tree Planting.

Bounties for tree planting have been distributed during the present year from the state treasury to 2,529 persons, who planted 7,443½ acres in trees and received $18,608.75 of bounty money.

The amounts distributed by counties are as follows:

Becker, $195.63; Benton, $12.50; Big Stone, $416.25; Blue Earth, $773.75; Brown, $668.13; Chippewa, $1,510.62; Clay, $526.25; Cottonwood, $845.62; Dodge, $101.25; Douglas, $42.50; Faribault, $372.50; Freeborn, $71.25; Goodhue, $10.63; Grant, $161.25; Jackson, $655.62; Kandiyohi, $434.38; Kittson, $25; Lac qui Parle, $337.50; Lincoln, $253.75; Lyon, $435; McLeod, $5; Martin, $513.12; Meeker, $433.13; Mower, $686.25; Murray, $1,244.37; Nicollet, $95; Nobles, $243.13; Olmsted, $22.75; Otter Tail, $165.62; Pipestone, $70.63; Polk, $88.75; Pope, $380; Redwood, $2,086.87; Renville, $1,104.38; Rock, $97.50; Sibley, $543.75; Stearns, $81.87; Steele, $72.50; Stevens, $134.38; Swift, $421.87; Traverse, $85; Waseca, $315.63; Watonwan, $711.25; Wilkin, $410; Yellow Medicine, $785.62.

NEWS NOTES.

Minneapolis.—Standing indictments against W. K. Hicks, secretary of the board of education, are nolled.

Minneapolis.—Minneapolis lid goes down on all gambling houses and unlicensed drinking places.

St. Paul.—Suicide of James Dugan at Stillwater marks the last of the famous Rice street gang.

Zumbrota. — Speaker-elect Rockne denies any intention of securing reduction in salaries of house employes.

Washington.—Charles B. Romkey has been appointed postmaster at Stockwood, Clay county, vice S. Shermoen, resigned.

Minneapolis.—More than 700 men, women and children, from more than half the states in the union, have been reported missing in Minneapolis in the last year.

Minneapolis.—Six hundred more building permits have been issued by J. G. Houghton, city building inspector, so far this year, than issued during the entire year of 1907.

Duluth.—The Duluth Belt Line settled a suit recently brought by the attorney general with a draft for $325.92. This represents the gross-earnings tax for 1907 at 5 per cent penalty for failure to pay within the time limit.

Otisville.—John M. Jonasson, postmaster at Scandia for twenty-nine years, died, aged eighty-five years. Two years ago he had a paralytic stroke from which he never recovered, and which left him nearly speechless.

Minneapolis.—One of the most important engagements of the theatrical season at Bijou Opera House, Minneapolis, will be that of the great college play, "Strongheart," which will be seen at that playhouse the week of January 3rd.

Two Harbors.—The Jordan mine in the Chisholm district is exhausted and mining operations have been discontinued. The mine was operated by Corrigan, McKinney & Co., which firm is now moving the machinery to other properties.

Red Wing.—Winter fishing is becoming popular in Minnesota, both as a business and as a sport, judging from the records of the state game and fish commission. Within a few days the commission has issued a total of over 1,200 licenses for fish houses.

St. Paul.—Work has started on the bridge to be built by the St. Paul Bridge and Terminal company and which will span the Mississippi river at South Park, facilitating to a great extent the shipping of stock to South St. Paul, and shortening the present haul by eight miles.

St. Paul.—The estate of the late Franklin L. Greenleaf of Minneapolis, valued at $110,553.19, paid an inheritance tax into the state treasury amounting to $1,043.40. The estate of Auguste E. Richards of New York, paid a tax of $210 to cover certain property situated in Ramsey county.

Winona.—A pall of gloom has been lowered over the German Lutheran congregation, the largest in Winona, by the death of Rev. Philip von Rohr, the pastor for two score years, which occurred here. All day messages of condolence from all the Northwest and the nation, as well, have reached the sorrowing family.

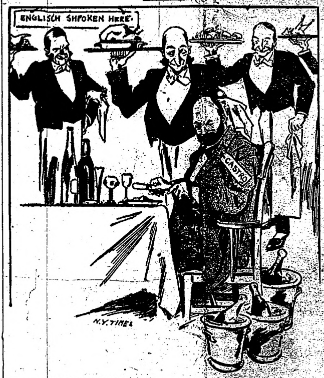
Rochester.—In the morbid cravings of a weak mind, shattered by hysteria, and seeking to end it all, is found the solution of the mystery why Mrs. Jennie Cook Turcell of this city, who took her life last night by locking herself in a trunk and inhaling chloroform, adopted such a gruesome and novel method to accomplish her object.

Heron Lake.—Possibilities of murder for purposes of robbery are seen by the police in connection with the finding of the dead body of Jacob Kalmenson in a shack a few miles from here, where he had been living alone for the last year. Kalmenson, who was about 45 years old, was at one time a prosperous merchant in Philadelphia.

St. Paul.—A. B. Stickney resigned as receiver of the Chicago Great Western, ultimately, it is claimed, to resign from the presidency. Horace G Burt, former president of the Union Pacific, and some time ago selected by English stockholders to look into the condition of the road and make a report, becomes receiver in Mr. Stickney's place, and will eventually succeed him as president of the road.

St. Paul.—If the state historical society is not to be hampered, it will be almost necessary for the new legislature to provide means to begin a home for the society. The 400 daily and weekly papers of the state which the society receives have so crowded the space it has in the basement of the capitol that outside room soon will have to be found, as room for 400 more bound volumes soon will be required.

THE HORRORS OF WAR.



UNION LABOR LEADERS GIVEN PRISON TERMS

Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison Sentenced to Twelve, Nine and Six Months Respectively and Severely Scored in the Bucks Stove Case.

Washington.—Twelve months in jail for Samuel Gompers, president; nine months for John Mitchell, one of the vice-presidents, and six months for Frank Morrison, secretary, all of the American Federation of Labor, was the sentence imposed by Justice Wright of the supreme court of the District of Columbia Wednesday for contempt of court in violating an order previously issued enjoining them from placing on the "Unfair" or "We don't patronize" list the Bucks Stove & Range Company of St. Louis, Mo.

Samuel Gompers.

All three of the defendants were in court when sentence was pronounced, and notice of an appeal to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia at once was filed, Gompers being released on $5,000 bond; Mitchell on $4,000 and Morrison on $3,000. In addition to the wife and daughter of Gompers, there were present a number of local labor leaders, and others who were attracted by the notice that a decision of the famous case would be announced. Mr. Gompers' family were visibly affected.

Gompers Weeps When Sentenced.

With tears coursing down his own cheeks, President Gompers heard the order of the court which condemned him to prison for a year. Both Mitchell and Morrison seemed stunned by the sentence, although Mitchell appeared to be the least concerned.

Asked if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced, President Gompers declared that he had not consciously violated any law. There was much he would like to say, he said, but he could not do it at that time. He added, however, that "this is a struggle of the working people of our country and it is a struggle of the working people for the right.

Mitchell and Morrison confined themselves to an indorsement of what Gompers had said.

The decision of Justice Wright, which consumed two hours and 20 minutes in reading, was one of the most scathing arraignments that ever came from the bench in this city.

"Everywhere," the court said, "all over, within the court and out, utter, rampant, insolent defiance is heralded and proclaimed; unrefined insult, coarse affront, vulgar indignity measures the litigant's conception of the tribunal's due, wherein his cause still pends." The law's command has been, he said, to "stand! Hands off, until justice for this matter can be ascertained," but, he said, there had been a studied, determined, defiant conflict "precipitated in the light of open day, between the decrees of a tribunal ordained by the government of the federal union, and of the tribunals of another federation grown up in the land." One or the other, he declared, must succumb, "for those who would unlaw the land are public enemies."

Says Customers Were Intimidated.

The customers of the stove company, the court said, had been intimidated, browbeaten and coerced out of their business relations with their customers "by direct interference with and boycott of their (the customers') trade relations with their own customers and the public generally."

Following an exhaustive discussion of conspiracies in restraint of trade, Justice Wright said:

"From the foregoing it ought to seem apparent to thoughtful men that the defendants to the bill, each and all of them, have combined together for the purpose of:

"1. Bringing about the breach of plaintiff's existing contracts with others.

John A. Mitchell.

"2. Depriving plaintiff of property (the value of the good will of its business) without due process of law.

"3. Restraining trade among the several states.

"4. Restraining commerce among the several states.

The ultimate purpose of the defendants, the court said in this connection, was unlawful, their concerted project an offense against the law, and, it added, they were guilty of crime.

OIL TRUST OUSTED

THREE COMPANIES ARE DRIVEN FROM MISSOURI.

EACH IS FINED $50,000

Standard of Indiana, Republic and Waters-Pierce Found Guilty of Conspiracy by Supreme Court.

Jefferson City, Mo.—Declaring that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the Republic Oil Company of Ohio and the Waters-Pierce Oil Company of Missouri had conspired and combined to monopolize the oil business in this state, the supreme court of Missouri Wednesday issued a decree ousting all three from the commonwealth, and fining them $50,000 each.

The decree against the Waters-Pierce Oil Company is tempered by the proviso that it may continue in business if, by March 1, 1909, it can show to the court that it has taken steps to operate as an independent concern and has satisfied the judgment against it. The other companies are given until March 1, 1909, to wind up their affairs in the state.

Decision Is Most Sweeping.

The decision, which was unanimous on the part of the seven judges, is so sweeping that Attorney General Hadley and Gov. Folk hail it as the end of illegal commercial combinations in Missouri, and the former asserts that, in conjunction with the decision of the supreme court of the United States in the tobacco trust case, it will affect similar suits in other states.

Attorney General Hadley, who has prosecuted the Missouri case since its inception in March, 1905, will become governor in less than a month and then will be charged with the enforcement of the decree issued.

Tried to Compromise Suit.

The attorney general followed up the promulgation by the court with a statement in which he asserted that attempts had been made to compromise the suit.

"At least three efforts have been made by attorneys for the oil companies to get me to compromise the cases," he said. "I invariably told them that the ultimate decision must be made by the courts, and refused their offers. It was intimated to me that the oil companies were willing to accept a good large fine and concede a victory to the state. The propositions were never reduced to details, but they were entirely legitimate and such as might be made in any other form of litigation."

Points in the Decision.

In coming to its decision the court says:

"If such abuses as those complained of are permitted to continue, untrammeled, it would be only a question of time until they would sap the strength and patriotism from the very foundations of our government, overturn the republic, destroy our free institutions and substitute, in lieu thereof, some other form of government.'

The principal indictments against the companies are:

"That they have created and become members of a pool, trust, agreement, confederation, combination, arrangement and understanding among themselves for the following purposes:

"First, to regulate, fix and control the prices to be paid by retail dealers and others in the state of Missouri for the refined products of petroleum sold and offered for sale in this state.

"Second, to control and limit the trade in refined products of petroleum in this state.

"Third, to control, limit and prevent competition in the business of buying and selling refined products of petroleum in this state between themselves and others engaged in like business, and,

"Fourth, to mislead the public into the belief that they were separate and distinct corporations and pursuing an independent business as legitimate competitors in the purchase and sale of the products of petroleum."

Suit Started Four Years Ago.

The state's ouster suit against the Standard, Republic and Waters-Pierce companies was instituted almost four years ago. The evidence was taken in St. Louis and in New York, where H. H. Rogers, principal, was compelled to testify before a special commissioner.

At the same time Rockefeller was compelled to remain in New Jersey to avoid Hadley subpoena service.

Stevens' Slayer Is Convicted.

San Francisco. — In Whan Chang, the Korean who shot Durham White Stevens, the American diplomat and adviser to the Korean emperor, in this city on March 23 of this year, resulting in Mr. Stevens' death two days later, was found guilty of murder in the second degree by a jury in Judge Carroll Cook's department of the superior court. Sentence will be passed December 26. The minimum penalty is ten years and the maximum life imprisonment.

CITY FATHERS WERE CHEAP

SHOCKING STATE OF AFFAIRS IN PITTSBURG REVEALED.

Accused Ex-Bank Officers and City Fathers Are Held After Preliminary Examination.

Pittsburg, Pa.—With a suddenness that startled Pittsburg from end to end, this city Wednesday moved into first place in the role of corruption and municipal graft.

Late at night, many hours after thunderbolts in the shape of sensational testimony were exploded, the people of Pittsburg were dumbfounded and unable to realize that the city is in a position to demand every laurel for being the champion legislative scandal center of America. The troubles of San Francisco are tame in comparison.

Furthermore it is stated the shocking developments here are mere preliminaries and subsequent steps against additional councilmen and business men will startle not only Pittsburg, but the whole country.

Apparently, from the testimony offered in court, the city's councils are absolutely rotten in every sense of the word. It was intimated strongly that over three score councilmen are "easy to reach" and the "reaching" necessitated only small sums ranging from $100 to $5.

Out of a mass of testimony it was gleaned that a majority of the council body of Pittsburg have been "reached." In the passage of one ordinance alone it was testified that 60 councilmen had divided $45,000.

Sensations followed one another in rapid succession during the hearing of the seven councilmen and two former bank officers arrested on charges of bribery, corrupt solicitation and conspiracy last Monday night.

W. W. Ramsey and A. A. Vilsack, former president and cashier of the German National bank, were first placed on trial and were held for court in the sum of $14,000 bail each.

The seven councilmen, President Brand and Members Klein, Soffel, Wasson, Melaney and Ferguson of common council and Atkinson of select, were then called for trial. Detectives told how they trapped them and they, too, were held in bail.

The principal witness was Robert Wilson, a private detective and superintendent of the Municipal league of Scranton, Pa., who is employed by the Voters' league of Pittsburg.

AUTOMOBILE RACE IS FATAL.

One Man Killed and Three Persons Hurt at Oakland, Cal.

Oakland, Cal.—As a result of a wild automobile race on the Foot Hill boulevard early Friday one man was instantly killed and another man and two young women were severely injured. The accident occurred a short distance from San Leandro.

The dead man was William L. Mowery, chauffeur; the injured are A. Jorgensen, Miss Marie Jorgenson, his sister, and Mary Jensen.

Mowery, with his party, was racing with another machine driven by John Morgan. The former machine came to grief on a sharp and dangerous double turn which Mowery attempted to make while going at terrific speed. The automobile broke away from the control of its driver, skidded to one side, struck the curb and turned completely over.

JOHNSON DEFEATS BURNS.

Negro Wins Heavyweight Title in Battle at Sydney.

Sydney, N. S. W.—Jack Johnson Saturday won the heavyweight championship of the world from Tommy Burns. The fight went 14 rounds and Johnson was declared the winner on points. The police stopped the bout.

Jack Johnson is the first negro who ever won the world's heavyweight pugilistic championship—in fact, he is the only negro who ever was permitted to battle for the honor. He was born in Galveston, Tex., in 1878 and began his ring career in 1901. He is 6 feet 1¾ inches in height and weighed at the ringside close to 190 pounds.

Ryan Quits Directorates.

New York.—Thomas F. Ryan, admittedly one of the greatest powers in the financial world, announced Wednesday that, yielding to the advice of his physicians, he had resigned from the directorate of 31 corporations. The only enterprises in the management of which the noted financier retains a hand are the Morton Trust Company, the National Bank of Commerce and the American Tobacco Company.

Deeds of Danish Ghouls.

Copenhagen.—The cathedral of Roeskilde, the burial place for centuries past of the Danish kings, was looted by burglars Tuesday night and large numbers of costly gold and silver wreaths, urns and shields were carried away. The tombs of both King Christian and Queen Louise were robbed of all the valuable gold and silver memorials sent by the crowned heads of Europe and the city of Denmark.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. C. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 20, 1906, at the post office at Sunbeam, Minn., under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Next comes the meeting of the legislature, says the corporations.

The government is 52 million in the dificit hole and yet Uncle Sam is not kicking about hard times.

The Eleven towns is the best wheat raising part of Red Lake county and our wheat farmers are going to come to the front, in a few years.

What is the use to nominate a republican candidate for governor of Minnesota, as long as about forty thousand republicans in the state are of the opinion that the governorship belongs to the democratic party.

Bedes Budget: The erstwhile democratic candidate for judge of probate of Mille Lacs county says he was defeated because his opponent had to big a family. The next time he runs he wants to look after these little things.

And we have a man up here in Red Lake county who was defeated for register of deeds because his opponent got his feet cut off in a railroad accident, and he got so mad at the editors because they diden't stop the cars, that he won't pay them for publishing his political announcements.

WAKE UP THE DEVIL.

The editor?, who thinks he is running a newspaper up at Erie and has been looking for fame, in the way of trouble, with THE SUNBEAM, had better stir up the printers devil and "star reporters" and see if he can't get them to answer. If they are short of space to publish "news" they can leave the picture of a sheep out for one week, or that add of patents, which the thing has in its editorial colums If you have not got type enough you might go down to Bagley and try to pick up a little more of the old truck that was thrown aside in the Independent office, where you got the rest of your old truck, that has given you the "big head" so bad. If you are short of brains it is a bad case, but you might leave off sour dough pancakes and try "grape nuts," as we understand it is highly recommended as brain food, althou it may not be of any good to a man that has no brains at all. Better take a tumble you ignoramus and either hire an editor to do some writeing for you, or keep your mouth shut, and not be sticking your crooked nose into streight peopels business.

RED LAKE COUNTY FIRST.

Now what do you think of this? Joseph Parenteau, the Terrebonne cheese maker sent a sample of the product of his factory to the National Dairy Show, at Chicago and has recived word that he carried off the first prize. His cheese tested 98¼, a record breaking score. He has received a draft for $85.00, accompanied by many complimentary letters regarding the excellent work he had done. This is catainly a feather in the cap of Red Lake county Minnesota, as it is a demonstration that this is to become one of the best dairy countrys in the "bread and butter state."

POWER OF WATER.

Under Certain Conditions It Is Practically Irresistible.

When a man goes in swimming at the seashore and slaps the water forcibly with his hand or takes a back dive from a pier and lands squarely on his back he realizes that the unstable liquid offers not a little resistance. Yet, says a writer in the New York Tribune, it would surprise almost anybody to see what water will do under certain conditions.

A stream from a fireman's hose will knock a man down. The jet from a nozzle used in placer mining in the west eats away a large piece of land in a day, toys with great bowlders as if they were pebbles and would shoot a man over the country as though he were a projectile from a cannon.

There is a story of an eastern blacksmith who went west and made a bet that he could knock a hole through the jet of one of these nozzles with a sledge hammer. He lifted his arms, swung the sledge and came down on the ten inch stream with a force that would have dented an anvil. But the jet, never penetrated, whisked the massive hammer out of the blacksmith's hands and tossed it several hundred feet away into the debris of gold bearing gravel beneath a crumbling cliff. After this the blacksmith left out iron when he spoke of hard substances.

There is also a power plant near Durango, Colo., where a United States cavalryman one day thought he had an easy job in cutting a two inch stream with his sword. He made a valiant attack. The result was that his sword was shivered in two and his wrist broken.

A little thinner jet of water descending 1,000 feet to a manufactory at Grenoble, Spain, and traveling at the moderate speed of 100 yards a second fractures the best blades of Toledo.

Of course some people will not believe such stories without having seen the thing, and one may think it a proof of the scientific imagination to say that an inch thick sheet of water, provided it had sufficient velocity, would ward off bombshells as well as steel plate.

Nevertheless many persons while traveling have seen a brakeman put a small hydraulic jack under one end of a Pullman car and lift twenty tons or so by a few leisurely strokes of the pump handle, and the experience of riding every day in a hydraulic elevator tends to remove doubts of the magic power possessed by water hitched to a machine.

SIMPLE FAITH.

A Burly Burglar's Confidence In an Editor's Business Acumen.

A man who admitted that he came direct from state prison tried to sell to the city ed'tor of a New York newspaper a weird and startling story of a missing will which he declared had been revealed to him by a fellow convict. He was a burly fellow with a prognathous jaw, and he had lost an eye in battle. The mere look of him would frighten a timid citizen into tremors. Mr. White, the expert in criminology, cross examined the man as follows:

"Why were you in Auburn?"

"Highway" (meaning, of course, highway robbery).

"I suppose you were wrongfully convicted."

"Nah; dey had me right."

Such engaging candor made Mr. White feel that the man was truthful, and he was greatly disappointed when strict investigation disclosed the fact that the story of the missing will was all fictitious. The man was disappointed, too, at the failure of his romance, but he went away from the newspaper office in cheerful mood, with some remark about better luck next time.

A week later Mr. White was summoned to the reception room of the newspaper, and there he found his friend, the burly highwayman, his shoulders broader, his single eye fiercer than ever. But his visit was quite friendly, although somewhat tinged with business. He evidently believed he could rely on Mr. White's good faith and business acumen. Fixing Mr. White with his glittering eye, the strong armed one plucked him by the sleeve over to a corner of the room and there in a loud, hoarse whisper inquired:

"Say, couldjer do anyt'ing wit' a couple o' watches?"—Harper's Weekly.

Bimini and the Fountain of Youth.

Bimini was a fabulous island firmly believed in by the Indians of the Antilles, though they could give no further clew to its location than that it lay some hundreds of leagues north of Hispaniola. On this island was the famous fountain of youth, giving perpetual health and vigor. It was the search for this fountain that led Ponce de Leon and Hernando de Soto to Florida, on the outskirts of which the island was generally supposed to be situated.

A Substitute.

"I am sorry, my dear sir, but I neglected to bring my surgical instruments with me."

"That will be all right, doctor. The plumber who has been working in the cellar has left his tools here."—Exchange.

The Fatted Calf.

That mighty unfair trick of killing the fatted calf for the prodigal causes more family rows than anything else on earth except the division of father's money.—Atchison Globe.

Out of a great evil may come a great good.—Italian Proverb.

A Wedding Decoration.

Whether it was a mistake or a joke or simply an example of bad taste is a question that is still puzzling most of the passengers. But no matter about that. It certainly was a floral masterpiece. Full four feet it stood from the ground, in the form of a cross. Roses white and roses red composed the body of the cross, and dainty white blossoms and green leaves formed the trimmings. In the center the word "Peace" was spelled out in rosebuds.

Everybody in the car admired the offering, and when the boy set it down on the floor all leaned forward to examine it more closely. At length one old gentleman stood up and readjusted his glasses in order to get a better look at it.

"That is a mighty pretty posy you've got there," he said. "Who, may I ask, is dead?"

The boy giggled.

"Nobody 't I know of," he said. "This ain't for a funeral; it's for a wedding."

The old gentleman sat down heavily.

"Good Lord!" he said. "What idiot ever ordered 'Peace' inscribed on a wedding decoration?"

The rest of the passengers smiled, and many of them, being married, wondered as well, but nobody ventured an explanation.—New York Times.

Death and Snuff.

A certain Margaret Wilson of Westminster, who was an inveterate snuff taker, enjoined that a quantity of Scotch snuff should be placed in her coffin. She also ordered that the arrangements connected with her funeral should be as follows: "Six men to be my bearers who are known to be the greatest snuff takers in the parish of St. James, Westminster. Instead of mourning, each to wear a snuff colored beaver hat, which I desire may be bought for the purpose and given to them. Six maidens of my old acquaintance to bear my pall, each to carry a box filled with the best Scotch snuff, to take for their refreshment as they go along." Snuff was also to be thrown on the threshold of deceased's dwelling before the cortege passed out, snuff was to be strewn on the ground at every twenty yards in advance of the coffin, and the officiating clergyman's fee was to be proportionate to the quantity of snuff he consumed during the ceremony.—London Globe.

What the Peruvians Believed.

A unique idea of the future state was that of the ancient Peruvians. As the disembodied soul winged its way to eternity it encountered two rocks, upon one of which it must needs rest. The choice was determined by the morality of the life in the flesh. If it rested upon the left hand rock it was instantly translated to "Po," or oblivion, a state analogous to the Nirvana of the orient. If through early misdeeds, however, the unhappy spirit was guided to the right hand rock it entered into a purgatorial hell where fiends grated away the flesh from all the bones in succession, after which the skeleton was reclothed and sent back to earth for another try. There was no haste about this grating process. It took sometimes over 10,000 years.

Cause of Car Sickness.

W. C. Wood attributes car sickness to the nystagmus produced by looking out of the car windows. Look out of a car window and observe how rapidly the telegraph poles flit by. Each one is seen and involuntarily followed by the eye until it is opposite, when the eye shifts to the one following. This is true of near buildings. Objects farther away seem to move slower, and those very far off seem to be almost stationary until the whole landscape appears to be revolving round a common center. The unconscious effort to take in everything produces a rapid lateral oscillation of the eyeballs, as any one can observe by watching the eyes of his fellow passengers. The eye strain is enormous and is the chief factor in producing car sickness. This can be proved by asking a patient who is subject to car sickness to look steadily at a mirror which is moved rapidly to and fro or tilted backward and forward. He will immediately complain of nausea and vertigo. The treatment consists of advising the patient to avoid looking out of the car windows and in giving him a grain of citrated caffeine shortly before he takes the cars and repeating it every hour as long as there is any tendency to be sick. The author has been enabled by this procedure to relieve many sufferers from car sickness.—New York Medical Journal.

The Ship's Bell Clock.

In its most ordinary form the ship's bell clock is a stout, well made clock, a good timekeeper, contained in a round nickel plated case six or seven inches in diameter which is mounted on a board that can be hung on or screwed to a wall or bulkhead. The face of the clock, the dial, is of finished steel, and its pointers are of blued steel, so that with its nickeled case the whole clock has a metallic, solid, serviceable look.

Attached to a projection of the board upon which the clock is placed, outside the clock and immediately below it, is the clock's gong, with the hammers—there are two of them—brought down into it on arms extending through an opening in the clock's case and striking on the gong's inner side. It is a sturdy gong two or three inches in diameter, and it sounds with a strong, clear, resolute note when the hammer strikes it. On this clock's face you can tell the time in the usual way, but the hours are struck as they are at sea on a ship's bell.—New York Sun

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

SPECIAL OFFER:

Marlin

THE Marlin Model 1894 is a medium light weight repeating rifle, a well proportioned, finely balanced gun with all the advantages and comforts of the Marlin solid-top, side-ejecting construction. It is quick and easy of operation, accurate up to 300 yards and a very pleasant gun to carry and to shoot.

For settled districts and farming country where the shooting at woodchucks, badgers, foxes, 'coons, hawks, etc., is at ranges from 100 to 200 yards, the .25-20 and .32-20 rifles with the black and low-pressure smokeless loads cannot be equalled for accuracy and safety. The factory ammunition for the Model '94 rifles is cheap, and can be reloaded at very small cost.

The up-to-date sportsman needs the "Marlin Book" every day in the year. It contains 136 pages of live stuff for the man who loves a good gun, and wants to know everything about it. FREE for 3 stamps postage.

Gossip of Washington

What Is Going On at the National Capital.

Federal Sleuths Kept on the Jump

WASHINGTON.—That branch of the public service which its detractors called "the government spy system," or "the Black Cabinet," has been brought into conspicuous prominence by the tiff between congress and the president, growing out of the criticism in the president's message of the action of congress in circumscribing the activities of the secret service.

The system of government espionage over the private citizen has grown in an unprecedented manner under the administration of President Roosevelt. Whether it conduces to the general public welfare is a matter for publicists to discuss, but as to the fact that the secret service has reached greater extensions than ever before there can be no doubt.

This extension has been brought about by the executive branch of the government, and its justification, in large degree, is that a law has no value unless it is enforced, and the only way to enforce it is to look after violations.

Originally the secret service of the United States had two functions and two only. Those were the detection of counterfeiters and the hunting down of illicit distillers. A good many years ago, however, long before Mr. Roosevelt entered public life, one of the presidents detailed secret service men to serve at the White House. There was not the slightest authority in law for such a procedure, but congress had a good deal of consideration for the executive and this violation of law went on year after year. Finally congress, seeing that the practice had become permanent and not wishing to engage in a dispute with the executive branch, conferred the legal authority necessary to enable presidents to make such a detail.

Gradually the presidents enlarged the practice of detailing secret service men and sent them hither and yonder on all sorts of errands. Then other administration officers—cabinet chiefs and even bureau heads—without the remotest authority in law, called upon the secret service branch for agents to send out on confidential missions. Chief Wilkie of the secret service was up a tree, figuratively speaking. He did not have men enough to go around. Congress allowed him a blanket appropriation, but it was not large enough to hire all of the detectives demanded.

Time to Call a Halt on the Practice

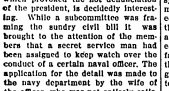
SECRET SERVICE
FIND OUT WHETHER HER HAIR IS REAL OR NOT

THE origin of the paragraph in the last sundry civil bill, restricting the activities of the secret service, which provoked the hot denunciation of the president, is decidedly interesting. While a subcommittee was framing the sundry civil bill it was brought to the attention of the members that a secret service man had been assigned to keep watch over the conduct of a certain naval officer. The application for the detail was made to the navy department by the wife of the officer, who was not entirely satisfied as to the faithfulness of her spouse. The officer was not even on duty at the time, but was away on leave of absence.

It occurred to members of the appropriations committee that this was the limit of governmental espionage and that the time had come to call a halt. President Roosevelt, of course, had a secret service sleuth detailed for such a purpose and when the subcommittee wrote and inserted a provision limiting the functions of the secret service, it was not striking at the president, but at a custom. At least that is the solemn assertion of all the members who had anything to do with it. Representative Walter L. Smith of Iowa, drafted the provision and it was put in with the approval of Chairman Tawney and all the members of the appropriations committee.

Gradually congress itself has enlarged the inspection, or espionage, system of the government, but for the most part, it has done so under executive pressure. Naturally, the fact that the congressmen helped to create so many "spies" would be expected to stop their criticism, but it is fashionable now to blame a good many things on the president. The army of government detectives numbers all told about 5,000. Nearly all of these men are engaged in traveling about the country and mingling with the 80,000,000 people outside of Washington. The list includes secret service men, postoffice inspectors, special agents of the land service, pure food inspectors, meat inspectors and others. The talk that in some instances secret service agents have been used to work up damaging information about congressmen who are objectionable to the administration seems to be without the slightest foundation.

Gridiron Club Gives Annual Dinner



THE annual fall dinner of the Gridiron club, held the other night, was made noteworthy by the presence of a distinguished company of guests. An extended program devoted entirely to fun-making made the night one long to be remembered by the organization. The company was one only possible to bring together at the capital of the nation. The president, vice-president, president-elect, vice-president-elect, presidential possibilities of the future, senators and representatives almost without number, an English lord, diplomats of this and other countries, newspaper men whose names are known far and wide, captains of finance and industry, and men of affairs generally were seated about the gridiron-shaped table. Coming so soon after the recent national campaign, the dinner presented an exceptional opportunity for the merry-makers.

One of the funniest skits was a roll call after the recent national political battle. The mournful tap of a drum was heard in the anteroom and there came marching in a tattered and dilapidated troop. The uniforms showed the members had been on the firing line. The president of the club announced in solemn voice that the slaughter had been terrific. The members of the troop answered to the roll call. Sergt. Jim Watson was reported as "killed while riding to the front on the water wagon." Private Charlie Landis "fell at Watson's side," Private Charles G. Dawes "passed in his checks," and Private Frank Lowden was "shot in the pocket." Corporal Norman E. Mack was reported as "burying the dead," Corporal William J. Bryan was "among the missing," Corporal Loeb was "in the hands of his friends," Private Taft was reported present and Color Sergt. Hitchcock was announced as "here, with the colors."

Shameful Treatment of Uncle Ike

COMMITTEE ROOM

UNCLE IKE STEPHENSON, champion buttonhole story teller of the senate, has certainly been treated shamefully since he came down here last winter to take Mr. Spooner's place as one of Wisconsin's legislators. He has the distinction of being the oldest man in the senate and at the same time of being one of the wealthiest, and he is used to having his own way.

He had no sooner got here last December than he discovered he had been assigned a committee room over in the Maltby building, on B street northwest. This was too far from base to suit Uncle Ike, so he made a good-sized kick, and finally got himself assigned to a room on the senate terrace, away down in the ground.

But a great surprise was in store for Uncle Ike when he returned this December. He had no room at all. His office furniture was all standing out in the corridor. This was too much. Off he went to see about it. What he found out was that there had to be a place to put a new power plant, and his room was the only one available. Where was he to go now? Oh, he'd have to go over in the house office building until the senate office building was finished.

So now, Uncle Ike, who has more money than he knows how to spend and who could buy himself a thousand committee rooms, is located away over in the extreme southeastern corner of the house office building—Anacostia they call it in the house—and it looks as if he will have to stay there for a few months anyhow.

As a consequence, he is an exceedingly sad-looking senator these days. It is said that some one heard him remark the other day that he would put up a temporary office building of his own on the capitol grounds if he could get the permission. Vain hope

Two other senators have been sent over to the house office building with Uncle Ike. They are Cummins of Iowa and Du Pont of Delaware. But that doesn't console him any.

CHOSEN CAPTAIN OF YALE ELEVEN

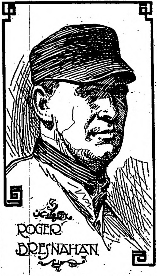
BRESNAHAN TO MANAGE ST. LOUIS CARDINALS

McGraw Trades Star Catcher for Schlei, Murray and Karger—Deal Involves Five Men.

One of the most important baseball deals of the past few years was completed the other day, when in a three-cornered transaction Roger Bresnahan, star catcher of the New York Giants, was released to St. Louis, where he will become manager of the Cardinals. In exchange for Bresnahan New York got catcher Schlei of the Cincinnati Reds and outfielder Murray and pitcher Raymond of St. Louis. For the release of Schei to St. Louis so that the deal could be made, St. Louis gives to Cincinnati pitchers Karger and either Fromme or Lush.

Murray is one of the best in the country, being a fast ground coverer as well as a steady hitter. In releasing Bresnahan it became necessary for McGraw to get a good catcher, and the only man he wanted was Schlei of Cincinnati.



It seems that St. Louis had to make a sacrifice to get Bresnahan, as it loses three pitchers and an outfielder. Cincinnati loses a catcher, but gets two pitchers in return, both good men.

Gotham fans will regret the loss of Bresnahan, as he has been the mainstay of the Giants for years. It has always been a question as to whether he or Johnny Kling of Chicago was the better catcher.

Bresnahan for a long time has been anxious to test his ability as a manager, and at last he has the opportunity. He says that he has several plans on foot by which he can make the Cardinals a serious factor in the race for the National league pennant.

Manager McGraw feels that his club has been benefited by the deal, as he gets the outfielder he has long wanted. The only weak place in the New York club last year was left field, and the new star is just the man to fill the hole. The trade was brewing for several days. It appeared to have fallen flat until Clark Griffith was made manager of the Cincinnati Reds. He quickly got in consultation with Stanley Robison, owner of St. Louis, and made the Schlei deal, so that St. Louis would be in a position to trade with New York.

Collins to Manage Toledo.

Jimmy Collins, formerly the third baseman for Philadelphia, will manage the Toledo baseball club next season.

YALE FOOTBALL CAPTAIN IS A VERSATILE FELLOW

Ted Coy One of Most Brilliant and Sensational Players in History of the University.

Edward H. Coy, Yale's new captain, is a New Haven boy, and he is the first New Haven boy to be elected captain in over 25 years, the only other one having been Walter Camp, who was captain in 1878 and 1879.

Captain-elect Coy is one of the most brilliant and sensational players Yale has had in many years. He is 20 years old, the youngest captain ever chosen; is just six feet tall and weighs 195 pounds. His magnificent playing won the Princeton game last fall, and his brace in the second half this year won the game against the Tigers. In the Harvard game Coy played well, but had poor support.

Coy is the regular fullback, but has played several other positions on his team. At Hotchkiss he was fullback and started in in that position when captain of the freshman team here. The night before the Yale-Princeton game two years ago seven of the regulars were laid off the team and Coy went up to tackle, playing a great game. In the Yale-Princeton game this fall he played at end, but shifted himself to fullback between the halves.

Coy is active in many other sports besides football. His freshman year he played on the baseball team and when the baseball game was over he trotted over to the track meet with the Princeton freshmen and won the high jump. In this spring's varsity meet he won the high jump and the hammer throw, but was ill at the time of the intercollegiates. For a while last spring he played first base on the baseball nine. He was on his freshman basketball team and on the university hockey team. When he gets time he plays tennis and at Hotchkiss was school champion.

Coy's father was the late Edward Coy, who for many years was head master at Hotchkiss school, Lakeville. His brother is Sherman Coy, Yale, 1901, who played end on Gordon Brown's famous eleven, and who was manager of the track team in his senior year. "Ted" Coy is a member of the glee club and of the junior promenade committee, the highest honor of junior year socially.

THE HOT STOVE CIRCUIT

Billy Hogg says he wants $416.67, which the Highlanders held out of his salary while he was suspended.

McGraw thinks that Crandall will be a star next season. "He was just learning the game this year," says Muggsy.

Hooper, the new Boston American player, is called the "Pacific Ty Cobb" out in California.

It will take all the foxiness Clarke Griffith is said to possess to make a winner out of the Reds and satisfy the Cincinnati fans.

The sale of Lou Criger to St. Louis by Boston is said to have been caused by enmity between the veteran catcher and John I. Taylor, owner of the team.

Jennings thinks he has two great catchers in embryo—Beckendorf and Stanage. Both have done a lot of campaigning in the slower company.

Indianapolis may have to be content without the services of Outfielder Charbourne. New York has a claim in for him, and the national commission is to be invited to adjust the claims of the clubs contending for his services.

WHAT THE DOLLIES HAD.

Small Wonder That the Little Mother Was Really Alarmed.

Little Mary was really very ill. Mother said she was sure it was an attack of appendicitis, but Grandma was equally sure the little one was threatened with convulsions.

The argument waxed warm in Mary's presence, and appropriate remedies were used, and the next day she was better.

Coming into her mother's room during her play she said:

"Mamma, two of my dollies are very sick this morning."

"Indeed, dear, I am very sorry. What is the matter with them?"

"Well I don't really know, mamma, but I think Gwendolyn has 'a pint o'spiders' and Marguerite is going to have 'envulsions.'"

Fearful Eczema All Over Baby's Face—Professional Treatment Failed.

A Perfect Cure by Cuticura.

"When my little girl was six months old I noticed small red spots on her right cheek. They grew so large that I sent for the doctor but, instead of helping the eruption, his ointment seemed to make it worse. Then I went to a second doctor who said it was eczema. He also gave me an ointment which did not help either. The disease spread all over the face and the eyes began to swell. The itching grew intolerable and it was a terrible sight to see. I consulted doctors for months, but they were unable to cure the baby. I paid out from $20 to $30 without relief. One evening I began to use the Cuticura Remedies. The next morning the baby's face was all white instead of red. I continued until the eczema entirely disappeared. Mrs. P. E. Gumbin, Sheldon, Ia., July 13,'08."

EARTHQUAKE IN ITALY KILLS 100,000 PERSONS

Messina, Reggio and Many Other Cities Ruined by Shocks, Tidal Waves and Fire--Appalling Disaster Described by Eye-Witnesses--American Consul Dies.

LATEST NEWS OF QUAKE

Latest estimate of dead, 100,000.

Latest death estimate in Messina, 50,000.

Mount Etna in eruption, adding to terror.

Whole southern Italy and Sicily panic stricken.

Fire in many towns killed hundreds.

Message of sympathy from President Roosevelt.

President Fallieres of France sent message of sympathy.

King and queen of Italy at work in stricken district ministering aid.

United States Red Cross sent aid and will raise fund.

Pope started fund for sufferers.

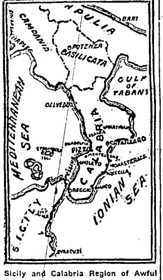
Catholic headquarters and officials in stricken district wiped out.

Scores of persons, buried under the ruins, are said to be alive, with no hope of rescuing them.

Vandals found looting and robbing the dead are being shot down by troops. Soldiers patrol the stricken towns, and what is practically martial law prevails.

Rome.—One hundred thousand persons are believed to have perished in the awful earthquake that devastated Calabria and the island of Sicily on Monday. The seismic shocks lasted only 23 seconds, but in that brief space of time cities, towns and villages were shattered and the lives of thousands were crushed out. The entire country is stunned by the horror of the catastrophe and the whole world mourns with Italy for her dead.

Messina, whose tragic history has been marked by tidal waves and war, and which was the center of Monday's terrestrial maelstrom, was shaken to ruins. Flames burst forth to complete the city's destruction and to burn alive untold numbers helplessly pinioned beneath fallen walls and broken timbers. The Strait of Messina was shaken and twisted by the earth's trembling, for mariners report the channel altered beyond recognition. The ports and villages on both the continental and Sicilian sides were wrecked or inundated and all lighthouses along the coasts were swallowed up. Navigation now is dangerous and in some places impossible.



Sicily and Calabria Region of Awful Earthquake Disaster.

Seaport of Reggio Wiped Out.

In the Calabrian district, which was only beginning to recover from the effects of the earthquake of 1905. Reggio was the center of the earth's upheaval. The seaport of Reggio is reported as no longer existing and the city proper is in ruins. The loss of life on both sides of the strait and in eastern Sicily was enormous.

One of the refugees from Reggio who was the first to bring the news of the city's destruction tried to make his way to Sicily in a sailboat, but was compelled to return, and finally found safety at a peninsula port. In describing his experience he said:

"The sea was strangely, mysteriously agitated, and the heavens were ablaze. Nearing Sicily, the clearing smoke revealed the mystery; Messina was in flames. In the frenzy of despair I turned my boat back to Calabria."

Terrible Scenes at Messina.

Starving, bleeding from injuries and almost insane from their terrifying experiences, Messina's survivors are fleeing in all directions. The spectacle presented by the ruined seaport is described as terrifying. Tumbling buildings both killed and mutilated, while hundreds of the injured imprisoned in the wreckage were abandoned to their fate by the fleeing populace. One man said: "The earth seemed to drop and then turn violently on its axis. The whole population, who practically were precipitated from the houses rent in twain, were spun around like tops as they ran through the streets. Many fell crushed to death and others, bewildered, took refuge for breath beside the tottering walls, where they soon met the fate of their companions."

Brave Work of Rescuers.

Already British and Russian squadrons have arrived at Messina. Sailors and marines have been disembarked and they have performed courageous acts in rescuing the injured and removing the wounded. A large number of survivors have been transferred to the warships, which are transformed into great floating hospitals. It is imperative that the dead be removed from the ruins in order to avoid a pestilence. Steamers with doctors, druggists, firemen and workmen have arrived at Messina from Catania and other places.

All Nations Offer Aid.

The hands of all the nations have been extended to Italy in her affliction. From rulers have crossed messages of condolence and from the peoples spontaneous promise of that aid which brings the world closer together in times of great calamity. Great Britain, France and Russia have sent their warships quick as the flash of the telegraph could carry the orders to lend assistance to the stricken cities. Relief funds have already been started and a hundred ships and trains are on their way carrying supplies and reinforcements to the south. Rome, Milan, Florence, Naples and other cities are sending physicians, police and firemen.

King and Queen Go to Sicily.

King Victor Emmanuel and the queen, who left for the scene of the calamity, reached Naples last night and proceeded at once to Sicily. A large number of people saw their majesties depart from Rome and one among the number of deputies at the station observed to the king: "The presence of your majesty will suffice to console the stricken population."

The king turned sharply upon the speaker and said abruptly: "Don't talk nonsense."

Described by Naval Officer.

At the time of the earthquake the torpedo boat Sappho was lying in the harbor of Messian and one of the officers told of the occurrences as follows:

"At half-past five in the morning the sea suddenly became terribly agitated, seeming literally to pick up our boat and shake it. Other craft near-by were similarly treated and the ships looked like bits of cork bobbing about in a tempest. Almost immediately a tidal wave of huge proportions swept across the strait, mounting the coasts and carrying everything before it. Scores of ships were damaged and the Hungarian mail boat Andrassy parted her anchors and went crashing into other vessels. Messina bay was wiped out and the sea was soon covered with masses of wreckage, which was carried off in the arms of the receding waters."

American Consul and Wife Die.

Washington.—That Arthur S. Cheney, American consul at Messina, Sicily, and his wife lost their lives in the earthquake disaster which devastated that city Monday, is indicated by an official dispatch received last night by the state department from Stuart Lupton, American vice-consul at Messina.

The following dispatch came via Malta, Maltese Islands, in the Mediterranean, being received there by wireless from Messina by Consul William H. Gale, and transmitted by him to the state department:

"The Messina consulate destroyed and consul and wife supposed to be dead.—Lupton."

Arthur S. Cheney is a native of Illinois, but was appointed consul to Messina from Connecticut August 15, 1907. Stuart Lupton, who is from Tennessee, was only recently appointed vice and deputy consul at Messina.

CHIEF SAYS HOUSE MISUNDERSTOOD

Message to Lower Branch on Secret Service.

BIG STICK FALLS ON FOUR

Champions of Provision to Limit Scope of Investigators Are Raked Over the Coals by Roosevelt—Federal Sleuths Defended by Executive.

Washington.—President Roosevelt's big stick crashed down upon the heads of Representatives Tawney of Minnesota, Smith of Iowa, Sherley of Kentucky, and Fitzgerald of New York, when the executive sent a special message to the house of representatives, berating those solons for being champions of the successful move to place limitations upon the scope of the secret service.

The president also declared that the interpretation of the house of the secret service clause in his last message was misunderstood, and had there been any evidence which would point to the necessity of an investigation of members, such evidence would long ago have been turned over to the proper authorities.

The message was in answer to the resolution transmitted from the house in which the representatives asked for evidence upon which Mr. Roosevelt based his statements that the "chief argument in favor of the provision was that the congressmen did not themselves wish to be investigated by secret service men."

For the Ananias Club.

The message in part:

"I am wholly at a loss to understand the concluding portion of the resolution. I have made no charges of corruption against congress nor against any member of the present house. If I had proof of such corruption affecting any member of the house in any matter as to which the federal government has jurisdiction, action would at once be brought, as was done in the cases of Senators Mitchell and Burton, and Representatives Williamson, Herrman and Driggs, at different times since I have been president. This would simply be doing my duty in the execution and enforcement of the laws without respect to persons. But I do not regard it as within the province or the duties of the president to report to the house 'alleged delinquencies' of members, or the supposed 'corrupt action' of a member 'in his official capacity.' The membership of the house is by the constitution placed within the power of the house alone. In the prosecution of criminals and the enforcement of the laws the president must resort to the courts of the United States.

"In the third and fourth clauses of the preamble it is stated that the meaning of my words is that 'the majority of the congressmen are in fear of being investigated by secret service men' and that 'congress as a whole was actuated by that motive in enacting the provision in question,' and that this is an impeachment of the honor and integrity of the congress. These statements are not, I think, in accordance with the facts."

Misunderstood, He Says.

"This allegation in the resolution, therefore, must certainly be due to an entire failure to understand my message.

"The resolution continues: 'That the president be requested to transmit to the house any evidence upon which he based his statements that the "chief argument in favor of the provision was that the congressmen did not themselves wish to be investigated by secret service men."' This statement, which was an attack upon no one, still less upon the congress, is sustained by the facts.

"If you will turn to the Congressional Record for May 1 last, pages 5553 to 5560, inclusive, you will find the debate on this subject. Mr. Tawney of Minnesota, Mr. Smith of Iowa, Mr. Sherley of Kentucky, and Mr. Fitzgerald of New York appear in this debate as the special champions of the provision referred to. Messrs. Parsons, Bennet and Driscoll were the leaders of those who opposed the adoption of the amendment and upheld the right of the government to use the most efficient means possible in order to detect criminals and to prevent and punish crime. The amendment was carried in the committee of the whole, where no votes of the individual members are recorded; so I am unable to discriminate by mentioning the members who voted for and the members who voted against the provision, but its passage, the journal records, was greeted with applause. I am well aware, however, that in any case of this kind many members who have no particular knowledge of the point at issue are content simply to follow the lead of the committee which had considered the matter, and I have no doubt that many members of the house simply followed the lead of Messrs. Tawney and Smith."

Asks Reversal of Action.

Concluding, the president said:

"In conclusion, I most arnestly ask, in the name of good government and decent administration, in the name of honesty and for the purpose of bringing to justice violators of the federal laws wherever they may be found, whether in public or private life, that the action taken by the house last year be reversed. When this action was taken, the senate committee, under the lead of the late Senator Allison, having before it a strongly-worded protest from Secretary Cortelyou like that he had sent to Mr. Tawney, accepted the secretary's views; and the senate passed the bill in the shape presented by Senator Allison. In the conference, however, the house conferees insisted on the retention of the provision they had inserted, and the senate yielded.

"The chief of the secret service is paid a salary utterly inadequate to the importance of his functions and to the admirable way in which he has performed them. I earnestly urge that it may be increased to $6,000 per annum. I also urge that the secret service be placed where it properly belongs, and made a bureau in the department of justice, as the chief of the secret service has repeatedly requested; but whether this is done or not, it should be explicitly provided that the secret service can be used to detect and punish crime wherever it is found

MOCK SUICIDE PROVES FATAL

ERNEST A. MEADOWS, WHILE ON HIS WAY TO CHURCH KILLS HIMSELF.

Minneapolis Youth Ends His Life Because of Fancied Slight. The Tragedy Occurs in Presence of His Sisters,

Minneapolis, Jan. 4.—While on the way to church last evening Ernest A. Meadows, nineteen years old accidentally shot and killed himself in the presence of his two younger sisters, Blanche and Mabel and several other young people.

It is said that Meadow's tragic death resulted from an attempt to terrify his companions into making an apology for a fancied slight put on himself. He was a son of A. H. Meadows, 3401 Aldrich avenue.

The theory advanced is that the youth, who was subject to fits of temper, sought to frighten his companions by acting the role of a suicide and that he did not intend to end his own life.

"I'll make you sorry yet," he cried as he drew his weapon from his pocket. He fired one shot in the air and then drew his hand back and fired again. The second bullet struck him above the right ear and he fell dead in the snow.

The fatal shooting occurred about 7:30 o'clock, within a block of the boy's home. He had started with a party of young people to attend the Bible class service at the Lyndale Congregational church, Aldrich avenue and Lake street.

Shortly after leaving the house he returned and went to his room probably to get his revolver. The weapon was a small thirty-two-caliber revolver, which he purchased last year to use in celebrating the Fourth of July.

At Thirty-third street the party turned from Aldrich to Lyndale avenue to meet other young people who were to attend the service, and here it was that young Meadows drew the gun and fired the fatal shot. Death was instantaneous.

The coronor decided it was accidental death.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Mrs. Lefshef Burns to Death in Unaccountable Manner.

Minneapolis, Jan. 2.—Mrs. Rose Lefshef, 529 Colfax avenue north, who was burned at her home in an unexplained manner yesterday afternoon, died at the City hospital at 8:30 last night, after suffering untold agony.

At the time of the accident, the woman was in the kitchen, surrounded by her three children, all of whom are under four years of age. Her plight was first noticed by neighbors who saw her rush to the back porch, her clothing wrapped in flames. Mrs. Lefshef tore at the burning garments as she staggered into the next house, her agonized shrieks bringing assistance. She was wrapped in blankets and rolled on the floor, and upon the arrival of the police ambulance was taken to the hospital.

BATTLE OF INDIANS.

Two Drunken Redskins Engage in Bloody Battle.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., Jan. 2.—Blood flowed freely in the Winnebago Indian settlement at Genoa, north of the city, when George Brown and his brother-in-law, Grizzly Bear, became engaged in a battle, caused by too much "fire water."

Grizzly Bear drove a knife deep into Brown's breast, just over the heart. Brown staggered and fell, but jumped to his feet, ran to his tepee close by, grabbed a shotgun and fired three times at his assailant. One charge took effect in the left shoulder and neck, making an ugly wound.

The tribal "medicine man" says both combatants will die.

BANDIT IS FATALLY SHOT.

Bullet Fired by Passenger in Car Hold-up at Spokane.

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 2.—In an attempt to hold up a crowded street car early yesterday, Theodore Adams of Anaconda, Mont., was perhaps fatally wounded by C. U. Smith, a passenger. The shooting was followed by a panic among the women passengers.

Smith was sitting near the door when he saw Adams and a companion enter. He saw they were bent on robbery and drew his revolver. The bullet penetrated Adams' head.

As the wounded man fell, his companion jumped and ran away.

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Railroad Values.

St. Paul.—"Right of way values" on railroad land, as computed by D. C. Morgan, expert engineer for the state railroad commission, were placed in evidence in the hearing of the railroad rate cases before Judge C. E. Otis as master in chancery.

Mr. Morgan introduced his Exhibit A, which is a detailed valuation of the Northern Pacific's property in Minnesota. It differs in two particulars from Exhibit B. The item of land values is placed at $15,385,078.47, instead of $9,498,099.27, and an item of $1,613,612.76 is included for "adaptation and solidification of roadbed." This brings the total valuation of the Northern Pacific to $61,099,563.40, as present value, while its cost of reproduction, new, is placed at $69,397,954.87.

The experts have carefully determined actual value of land owned by the roads for terminals and for right of way. This was shown in Exhibit B. When it comes to acquire land for railroad purposes a higher figure has to be paid to cover damages to property. So for cost of reproduction the Exhibit A shows what the road would have to pay over the market value of its land. The average is 1.6 times the actual or market value.

State Fair Need.

Hamline.—One and one-half million dollars is named by C. M. Griggs, for many years an important figure in the management of the Minnesota state fair, as the need of the state fair in the next five years, with additional help from the Twin City merchants and manufacturers in the way of a few years' advance rent for space in a new main building. Mr. Griggs would have the legislature appropriate $500,000 for 1909, $400,000 of which will be required for the new grandstand, and $200,000 every year for the next five years. The advance rent from the business men would amount to between $75,000 to $100,000.

The fair can never earn enough money to pay for its permanent buildings for exposition purposes, says Mr. Griggs. It will always take all the profits for maintenance, show purposes, parking of the grounds and expansion along several lines. In a letter to President B. F. Nelson of the Minnesota State Agricultural society, in Minneapolis, Mr. Griggs urges the need of more Twin City "boosts" for the fair, the necessity of a new grandstand, and, second only to the grandstand, a complete revision of the street car service to the fair grounds, whose woeful inadequacy he comments upon as being simply ridiculous.

Work on Iron Range.

Hibbing.—The United States Steel corporation has let stripping contracts in the Chisholm and Hibbing districts which will entail an expenditure of at least $2,000,000.

All of this work will be started in 1909 and will take from one to three years to complete. Some of the operations are already under way. The performance of the contracts will necessitate the employment of hundreds of men. The contracts in the aggregate are probably the largest ever let on the Mesaba range in one season by a single operator.

The ranges should hum with business next season. Some of the greatest stripping operations in the history of the Mesaba will be carried on simultaneously with the production of a tonnage of ore which, it is believed, will reach between 25,000,000 and 30,000,000 tons.

The stripping operations of the Steel corporation will be carried on in the Canisteo district on the western Mesaba, as well as in the central portion. The corporation is doing its own work near Coleraine. Many hundreds of thousands of cubic yards of overburden will be removed in the several districts.

Important Discovery.

Minneapolis.—Prof. George R. Frankforter, of the University of Minnesota, has perfected a machine which will probably evolve a new era in the manufacture of white print paper for use of publishers. The professor has discovered a process which will use up the hitherto useless waste in the manufacture of lumber.

Scientific men all over the world are watching the outcome of the new discovery. Small tests have proved successful and should larger tests prove that the theory is right, the white paper problem will no longer bother the world and the price of the material will be brought down to a proper basis again.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul.—Medical inspection for the schools is strongly recommended by J. W. Olsen, state superintendent of public instruction, in his biennial report.

Duluth.—Bill requiring state supervision of certain class of investment companies will be introduced in legislature.

St. Paul.—Five windows with symbolical medallions were installed recently at St. Paul's Universalist church.

Mankato.—The new charter commission has organized by electing George M. Palmer chairman and C. O. Dalley secretary and attorney.

Stillwater.—The state prison twine plant turned $68,000 of its December receipts into the state treasury today, and the state institutions remitted their November receipts, amounting to $20,706.46.

Minneapolis.—The powers that be of Northwestern railways have sat in judgment and the turkey cannot ride on the sleepers of trains leaving St. Paul, no matter if it is carried like a babe in arms.

St. Paul.—Following the robbery of postal station No. 24, in the drug store of F. A. Munch, Rice and Summit streets, St. Paul, two men who gave the names of Harry Collins and Oscar Larson were arrested.

Thief River Falls.—Among other legislation of an educational nature that will demand the attention of the lawmakers next month will be the establishment of a sixth state normal school in the northwestern portion of the state.

Minneapolis.—A decided increase in the number of automobiles in Minneapolis is shown in the report of the city clerk for 1908. A gain of 1,716 automobiles and motorcycles licenses is shown over the year 1907. Reciepts show an increase of $2,410.

Minneapolis. — Election night in New York with its wild excitement is seen to advantage in one of the big scenes depicted in Owen Davis' melodramatic novelty, "The Prince of Swindlers," which comes to the Bijou, Minneapolis, the week of January 10th.

Winona.—The funeral services of Rev. Philip von Rohr were held here. Nearly sixty-five clergymen of the German Lutheran church in the northwest, including nearly all the ministers in the Wisconsin synod of which Mr. von Rohr was the president, were in attendance.

Duluth.—The case of St. Peter's and St. Paul's Polish Roman society against the Rev. Father Leon M. Laskowsky for the recovery of certain church property located at Twenty-fourth avenue west and Third street, was begun before Judge Ensign in district court today.

Hastings.—Frank Tyler, indicted for grand larceny in the second degree, at South St. Paul, was sentenced by Judge Crosby to eight months in state's prison. Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Reed of Hastings will celebrate their golden wedding at Daytona Beach, Fla., on the 2nd prox.

St. Paul.—The Northwestern Telephone Exchange company reported to the state auditor that its gross earnings for the year ending Nov. 30, on business confined to Minnesota, were $1,583,354.83. The 3 per cent tax on the earnings, which is paid to the state, will be $47,500.64.

St. James.—Rev. Londahl has been doing some detective work and has reported the results of his labors to Mayor Rowe. He told where poker games were played, and Mayor Rowe, as a result, demanded Chief of Police Wermerskirchen's resignation, a day or so ago, and it was forthcoming.

Duluth.—A. E. Bickford, city clerk of Virginia, had a very narrow escape from being blown to atoms by an infernal machine, which was sent to him by some unknown person. It was due to his disregarding directions as to how to open the package that the one-half pound of dynamite it contained was not exploded.

St. Paul.—S. G. Iverson, state auditor, recommends to the legislature that his department be divided and that a new elective office be created, that of state land commissioner, who should assume entire charge of the state's holdings of land, including timber and minerals, with an advisory board of other state officers.

St. Paul.—During the two years ending July 31, 1908, the permanent trust fund increased by $2,257,485, the school fund getting the lion's share, $1,885,248, giving this fund a total of $19,709,383. The permanent university fund is now $1,413,817; the internal improvement land fund, $2,939.67, and the swamp land fund, $1,243,272.

Moorhead.—A plot to liberate Joe Wolff, alias George T. Frankhauser, who is now being held in the Clay county jail for boxcar robberies and who has confessed to the robbery of the Oriental Limited of the Great Northern at Rondo, Mont., in September, 1907, when $50,000 booty was taken, was made known yesterday.

We having been to the city of Thief River Falls this week, and returnd Tue-day the coldest day of the winter, and have not got thawed out enough to warm up our editerial colum.

Fresh.

There was no doubt about it. He was very angry when he entered the village grocery store and demanded to see the proprietor.

"You sold my wife some eggs yesterday, Mr. Peavey," he said when the grocer appeared.

"Waal, yes," said Mr. Peavey genially, "believe I did."

"And you told her that they were fresh eggs," continued the visitor.

"Waal, yes; it seems to me I did," said Mr. Peavey.

"But, see here, Peavey, you had no business to say they were fresh eggs."

"Why not? I bought 'em for fresh—from Si Wiley too."

"I don't believe it. Si Wiley's an honest man."

"Waal, Si said it, all right. He come in here with his basket full of 'em and put 'em down on the counter and traded 'em off for a box of sody biscuits."

"When was this?"

"Oh, I dunno. 'Bout six weeks ago, I guess."—Baltimore American.

How He Knew.

A ragman who was gathering up wornout clothing in the country purchased a pair of discarded trousers at a farmhouse and remarked to the man of the house as he paid for the stuff he had bought:

"I see, sir, that you are about to lose your land on a mortgage."

"Guess you are right," said the discouraged looking farmer, "but will you tell me how the Sam Hill you found that out?"

"Easy enough," said the cheerful ragman as he settled back on the seat of his peddling wagon. "I notice that these old pants are completely played out, so far as the part of 'em you sat down on is concerned, but they show mighty little wear anywhere else."—Exchange.

The Dogskin Wouldn't Go Round.

Hungary swarms with barristers. It is the greatest ambition of the Hungarian peasant to make one of his sons an advocate.

The son of a small farmer in the neighborhood of Budapest was sent by his father to the law school of that town, but either from lack of parts or the necessary application he was plucked in the qualifying examination.

Not daring to return to the paternal abode empty handed after all the money that had been spent on his education, he conceived and executed the plan of forging a legal diploma. The father was not, however, so ignorant as not to be aware that such diplomas are always written on parchment—kutya-ber (dogskin)—in Hungary.

"Why is your certificate not made out on kutya-ber?" asked the old man.

"The fact is, father," coolly replied the youth, "there are more barristers than dogs in Hungary, and so there is not enough kutya-ber to make diplomas for us all."—London Answers.

Gam's Dry Humor.

When the gallant Welsh captain David Gam was sent forward by Henry V. to reconnoiter the French army before the battle of Agincourt he found that the enemy outnumbered the English by about five to one. His report to the king is historic:

"There are enough to be killed, enough to be taken prisoners and enough to run away."

This quaint forecast of the result of the battle at once spread through the camp, and doubtless every yeoman archer of the valiant company felt an inch taller. We know that it was almost literally justified by the event. Poor Gam's dry humor was equaled by his courage. He was killed while in the act of saving the life of his prince.—London Standard.

Distilled Water.

Distilled water after having been exposed to the air is one of the most salubrious of drinks. Its daily use in measured quantities is helpful in cases of dyspepsia and greatly assists the general functions of the body. Every large steamer carries a water distilling apparatus by which sea water is made fresh. In the days before steamers primitive distilling apparatus was used on warships and vessels carrying passengers.

A Sponger.

"The worse of Spongely is he never pays anything," said Grabbles.

"Oh, doesn't he, though? Ask him to pay you a visit and see," retorted [illegible]

THE WITCH'S CURSE.

A Bucksport Legend of Colonial Days in Maine.

Close by the road on the outskirts of the old seaport town of Bucksport, on the Penobscot river, is a small family cemetery. Within its inclosure sleep the Bucks, the blue blooded folk who first settled the town and bequeathed it their name and a legend.

The largest and most conspicuous monument in the cemetery is a tall granite shaft, which is in plain sight of the highway. On one side is the inscription: "Col. John Buck, the Founder of Bucksport, A. D. 1762. Born in Haverhill, Mass., 1718. Died March 18, 1795."

On the other side is the single word "Buck," and also something not wrought by the marble worker. On the smooth surface of the pedestal is a curious outline, which can be easily imagined to be a foot of normal size. The people who say that it is a foot believe in the legend which has oft been told in Bucksport.

The story is that Colonel Jonathan Buck was a very harsh man and the leading spirit in his day and generation. He was the highest in civil authority, and his word was law in the community in which he resided. He was an out and out Puritan, and to him witchcraft was the incarnation of blasphemy. Thus, so the story goes, when a certain woman was accused of witchcraft, at the first clamorings of the populace Colonel Buck ordered that she be imprisoned, and later she was sentenced to be executed as a witch.

The execution day came, and the woman went to the gallows, cursing her judge with such terrible words that the people shuddered, but the magistrate stood unmoved. All was ready, and the hangman was about to perform his duty, when the woman turned to Colonel Buck, and, raising one hand toward heaven, she said:

"Jonathan Buck, listen to these words, the last my tongue shall utter. It is the spirit of the only living God which bids me speak to you. You will soon die, and over your grave they will erect a stone, that all may know the spot where your bones lie and crumble to dust.

"Upon that stone the imprint of my foot shall appear, and for all time, after your accursed race has vanished from the face of the earth, will the people from far and near know that you murdered a woman."

She then turned to her executioners, and another act transpired to make a part of American colonial history. The "witch curse" had been almost forgotten until the monument was erected to the founder of Bucksport.

It had been in position hardly a month when a faint outline was discovered on it. It grew more and more distinct, until some person made the discovery that it was the outline of a foot. The old legend was revived.

They said that the "witch's curse" had been fulfilled. An attempt was made to remove the stain, but every effort only tended to make it plainer.

The imprint of the foot is there today as plain as ever. Amateur photographers have taken pictures of it, and a visit to the Buck cemetery to see the "witch's foot" is one of the pastimes of every summer visitor to the pretty little town.—New York World.

Encouraging the Boy.

"Son," remarked Mr. Erastus Pinkley, "I done heard you talkin' 'bout bein' a great hunter."

"Dat's what I said," answered pickaninny Jim. "I's gwinter hunt lions."

"An' you mentioned bein' er ahtic explorer."

"Yas-'r."

"Well, jes' by way of practice befo' you tackles any lions lemme see if you kin get de cow out'n pasture wifout bein' hooked, an' den as de winter comes along you kin train foh de north pole by wadin' out in de snow to de wood pile twice a day. An' don' lemme hyeh no mo' 'bout not incouragin' yeh youthful ambitions."—Washington Star.

He Hits Back.

There had been a domestic spat at breakfast.

"You monster!" snapped the matron, who was always scolding. "You are not like my two former husbands. They were tender men."

"I never doubted that they were tender, Maria," ventured the meek man, "when you kept them in hot water all the time." And he just cleared the front porch two yards ahead of the rolling pin.—Chicago News.

The Senate's Hole in the Wall.

When the nineteenth century was as yet only half grown, senators applied customarily for their toddies at the so called Hole in the Wall, a small circular room just off the postoffice of the upper house. The latter body then occupied what is now the chamber of the supreme court, and the postoffice was across the main corridor of the building on the same floor. When a wearer of the toga found himself in need of a "snifter" he had only to cross over to the mails department and pass through it to the little circular room aforesaid, which was about the size of a pantry. The Hole in the Wall was the first senate restaurant, and the bill of fare for edibles was short, though to the point. There was ham, guaranteed to have been smoked for six months, a veritable sublimation of the pork product; there were corned beef and bread and cheese, but very little else. They served, however, as an accompaniment for the fluids, and when the Hole was crowded, as was often the case, senators ate their sandwiches outside, in the postoffice.—Washington Post.

The Aurora Borealis.

The aurora borealis, or northern light, is something that we have all heard about, but very few, perhaps, can give any explanation of it. No one definitely knows what causes it, but the scientists are pretty well agreed that it is due to electricity. They believe that the light is made by the recomposition of the positive and negative electricity always in the upper and lower strata of air, respectively. M. Lenstrom made an interesting experiment in Finland in 1882, his object being to determine the nature of the aurora. He had the peak of a mountain surrounded by a copper wire, pointed at intervals with tin tips. When he had charged the wire with electricity a yellow light appeared on the tin tips, and an examination of the light by the spectroscope revealed the greenish yellow ray that is a marked feature of the aurora. This evidence among scientists is almost convincing, for it is by means of the spectroscope that we discover the constituent parts of the sun and the stars.—Exchange.

"Thou Diest on Point of Fox."

Fox blades were celebrated all through the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries for their excellent temper, and mention of them is frequent in English drama. This is their history:

There was a certain Julian del Rei, believed to be a Morisco, who set up a forge at Toledo in the early part of the sixteenth century and became famous for the excellence of his sword blades, which were regarded as the best of Toledo. That city had for many ages previous been renowned for swordmaking, it being supposed that the Moors introduced the art, as they did so many good things, from the east.

Julian del Rei's mark was a little dog, which came to be taken for a fox, and so the "fox blade" or simply "fox" for any good sword. See "Henry V.," act 4, scene 4, "Thou diest on point of fox." The brand came to be imitated in other places, and there are Solingen blades of comparatively modern manufacture which still bear the little dog of Julian del Rei.—London Notes and Queries.

A Royal Snake Slaughterer.

The "secretary bird" is one of the most precious birds in South Africa. It is royal game, and any person destroying one is liable to a fine of £50. Majestic looking birds, they stand about three feet high and generally go in pairs. They are of drab color, with black, feathery legs, and are valued for their propensity for killing snakes. Where the secretary bird is seen there are sure to be many reptiles about. The bird beats down its adversary first with one wing and then with the other, at the same time trampling on it with its feet until the snake is sufficiently stunned to catch it by the head with its claws. Then the bird rises far up in the air and drops its victim to the ground, to be killed. By this means thousands of venomous reptiles are destroyed.—London Scraps.

Men, Women and Adjectives.

Certain adjectives are reserved for men and others for women. A man is never called "beautiful." Along with "pretty" and "lovely" that adjective has become the property of women and children alone. "Handsome" and the weak "good looking" are the only two adjectives of the kind common to either sex. Even "belle" has no real masculine correlative in English, since "beau" came to signify something other than personal looks. It is singular that "handsome" should have become the word for a strikingly good looking person, since its literal meaning is handy, dexterous. But "pretty" likewise comes from the Anglo-Saxon word [illegible]

Cause of Fatty Heart.

The great danger from obesity lies in the liability of the fat to invade the cellular elements of the body, especially the muscles. This produces fatty degeneration of the muscular tissues, which greatly weakens and impairs their functional activity. When the fat invades the tissues of the heart muscles the disease known as "fatty degeneration of the heart" results, and the patient is in serious danger. Whenever a slight additional strain upon the circulation results from undue exercise, excitement or other cause the muscles interfere with the heart's action, and it is liable to cease beating. Anaemia and hysteria often are accompaniments of obesity. Because of the increased weight and difficulty of moving about such patients are prevented from taking an ordinary amount of exercise. Often, too, there are a lassitude and a positive dislike for muscular exertion of any kind.—What to Eat.

From Medicine to the Drama.

The earlier part of Victorien Sardou's career was beset with many trials and difficulties. His parents wished him to take up a medical career, and he began his studies with some zeal. The love of the drama, however, was far greater than the love of the pill box, and in the interval of the other work Sardou was busy upon a play. Life was a struggle for him, for he had little money, though he managed to get journalistic work to supplement his more slender income. His first play was a failure, and Sardou rushed from the theater vowing never to enter one again. He fell seriously ill, was nursed back to health by Mlle. de Brecourt, an actress who lived on a floor below, and from that time his fortune was made.

The Publisher's Claims Sustained

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

SPECIAL OFFER:

Marlin

THE Marlin Model 1894 is a medium light weight repeating rifle, a well proportioned, finely balanced gun with all the advantages and comforts of the Marlin solid-top, side-ejecting construction. It is quick and easy of operation, accurate up to 300 yards and a very pleasant gun to carry and to shoot.

For settled districts and farming country where the shooting at woodchucks, badgers, foxes, 'coons, hawks, etc., is at ranges from 100 to 200 yards, the .25-20 and .32-20 rifles with the black and low-pressure smokeless loads cannot be equalled for accuracy and safety. The factory ammunition for the Model '94 rifles is cheap, and can be reloaded at very small cost.

The up-to-date sportsman needs the "Marlin Book" every day in the year. It contains 136 pages of live stuff for the man who loves a good gun, and wants to know everything about it. FREE for 3 stamps postage.

LAME BACK PRESCRIPTION

The increased use of "Toris" for lame back and rheumatism is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring."

Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it as well as the other ingredients can be had from any good druggist.

Electricity's Beginnings.

The term "electricity" was derived from the Greek word meaning amber. Electricity itself is earliest described by Theophrastus (321 B. C.) and Pliny (70 A. D.), who mention the power of amber to attract straw and dry leaves. Dr. Gilbert of Colchester, physician to Queen Elizabeth (1540-1603) may be considered the founder of the science, as he appears to have been the first philosopher who carefully repeated the observations of the ancients and applied to them the principles of philosophical investigation.

MRS. ERB'S STORY

Accused Woman Tells a Weird Tale of Treatment.

VICTIM OF "SPREAD EAGLE"

Wife of Captain Relates Sensational Story of Cruelty in Media, Pa., Court —Gives Version of Cause Which Led Up to Slaying of Spouse.

Media, Pa., Jan. 4.—Mrs. M. Florence Erb, who, with her sister, Mrs. Catherine Beisel, is charged with the murder of Mrs. Erb's husband, took the witness stand Saturday and told a sensational story of extreme cruelty on the part of her husband as one of the causes leading up to the shooting of Capt. Erb by Mrs. Beisel during a violent family quarrel. Mrs. Erb appeared nervous, but told her story in a straightforward manner.

Mrs. Erb said she went to "Red Gables," the Erb country home, in May, 1906, with a housekeeper and two maids. Trouble between her and the captain, she said, started on the first night they were there. He cursed and swore and told her she did not know how to run a house.

Refused to House Brother.

Her husband, she said, refused to sit at the table with her brother, who had come to the house to install a bathtub, saying he would not eat with "common plumbers." We quarreled," she said, "and he struck me with the back of his hand and knocked me over a chair. The next day I had to call a physician to treat me.

"Another time he quarreled about the food. I became afraid and ran into the tower of the house to sleep there. He found me and grabbed me by the hair and dragged me down the steps to his room, where he kept me all night and treated me cruelly.

Ousted, She Says.

"In December, 1906, he put me out of the house, and as I was standing on the porch, thinking what to do, he came out and seized me by the throat and threw me to the floor. An ornament in my hair was broken and my head was hurt. I was unconscious, and when the housekeeper came out and found me there Capt. Erb told her I had fainted. As a result of my injury I had to go to a sanitarium."

"Tell us about the 'spread eagle' incident," said her counsel.

Tells "Spread Eagle" Incident.

"One evening the captain found fault with some article of food on the table," said the woman. "He blamed it on me. I tried to tell him it was not my fault, but he swore at me and I ran to my room. He followed and yelled at me: 'You must leave this house at once or I'll blow your brains out.' He got his revolver and put it away again. I was so afraid he would shoot me that when he left the house a little later I went to his room and took it and hid it.

"When he came home," she continued, "he demanded the revolver. I told him I had hid it. He chased me around the table in the dining room trying to hit me, and when he couldn't catch up he spit in my face.

Pleas by Her Maid.

"Later he followed me to the library and as I took the revolver from behind some books he caught me and grabbed for the pistol. As we struggled for the weapon he deliberately bent me over a davenport, put his knee on my stomach and pressed till I cried for mercy and let go of the revolver. One of the maids came in said: 'Please, Mr. Erb, let her go.'

"Finally he did release me and I was helped to my room. That night he came to my room and told me I must go. In the morning he forced the maids to pack my clothes, and with jeers and laughter made me leave the house, weak and faint as I was from the injury received when he knelt on my stomach."

Compelled to Secure Treatment.

After telling of her movements, she said she went to the Erb's town house in Philadelphia. "It was there," she said, "that the colored man Poulson climbed into my room window one night to open the door when I would not let the captain in."

She then went on to tell of the so-called "spread eagle" incident, after first insulting her in the presence of the housekeeper by calling her names and saying she "came from the Point Breeze dumps." He told her he was going to "spread eagle" her.

"Getting some straps, he threw me on a sofa," she said. "'I am going to begin now,' he shouted. 'I am going to make it hot for you.' He didn't do it, but swung his fist under my chin and drove my teeth through my tongue. He kept me on the sofa until three o'clock in the morning threatening to 'spread eagle' me, but finally he decided not to do so. The strain was awful, and the next day I had to go to Hot Springs for treatment."

Two years after I went to the —— hospital and remained almost six months, but my case seemed hopeless. The urine passed involuntarily. Two months ago I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and the improvement has been wonderful. Four boxes have done me more good than all the doctoring of seven years. I gained so much that my friends wonder at it."

HANDS RAW AND SCALY.

Itched and Burned Terribly—Could Not Move Thumbs Without Flesh Cracking—Sleep Impossible.

Cuticura Soon Cured His Eczema.

"An itching humor covered both my hands and got up over my wrists and even up to the elbows. The itching and burning were terrible. My hands got all scaly and when I scratched, the surface would be covered with blisters and then get raw. The eczema got so bad that I could not move my thumbs without deep cracks appearing. I went to my doctor, but his medicine could only stop the itching. At night I suffered so fearfully that I could not sleep. I could not bear to touch my hands with water. This went on for three months and I was fairly worn out. At last I got the Cuticura Remedies and in a month I was cured. Walter H. Cox, 16 Somerset St., Boston, Mass., Sept. 25, 1908."

A Distinction.

When Bill Burns first struck Washington he stopped at one of the hotels. Finding the expense would not be so great at a boarding house, he packed up his belongings and set forth.

A couple of weeks afterward, Murphy of the Athletics said he heard he was living at a boarding house.

"You heard wrong," replied Bill. "I'm boarding in a boarding house."—Washington Star.

Thankful He Isn't Rich.

One Adam Croaker is enjoying the limelight of the following paragraph: "I am thankful I am not a millionaire. I do not, however, claim any special credit. It seems to run in the family. I have traced the history of the Croaker family back to the jumping-on place and find there has not been a wealthy one in the whole bunch, and the records show that there has never been a duke or count who tried to break in."—Atlanta Constitution.

The Unexpected.

The judge was about to pass sentence upon the condemned man.

"In view of certain contingent circumstances," he said, "I'm inclined to treat you with leniency."

A veiled woman who was sitting at a little distance suddenly burst into tears.

"Are you the prisoner's wife?" his honor inquired.

The woman could only nod.

"I think that in view of all these mitigating influences," the judge resumed, "I will fix three years—"

The veiled woman suddenly gasped.

"It ain't half enough, judge; it ain't half enough!" she wildly shrieked.

THEN AND NOW

Complete Recovery from Coffee Ills.

"About nine years ago my daughter, from coffee drinking, was on the verge of nervous prostration," writes a Louisville lady. "She was confined for the most part to her home.

"When she attempted a trip down town she was often brought home in a cab and would be prostrated for days afterwards.

"On the advice of her physician she gave up coffee and tea, drank Postum, and ate Grape-Nuts for breakfast.

"She liked Postum from the very beginning and we soon saw improvement. To-day she is in perfect health, the mother of five children, all of whom are fond of Postum.

"She has recovered, is a member of three charity organizations and a club, holding an office in each. We give Postum and Grape-Nuts the credit for her recovery."

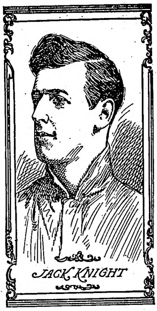
SPORTING GOSSIP

Jack Knight, who was purchased by the New York Americans from Baltimore for $4,000, is likely to be the Highlanders' regular shortstop in 1909. President Farrell and Manager Stallings think highly of the former Oriole, and have heard great reports of him. Ned Hanlon, who by this time ought to be able to tell a player when he sees one, says Knight is a wonder, and will be a sensation in New York a month after he plays here. Knight is a Philadelphian and started to play professional baseball when 18 years old. He made a reputation for himself as a hitter and fielder in the Chester Valley league in 1904, and joined the Philadelphia Americans the next season. Connie Mack impressed the youngster into service as a regular when Monte Cross was hurt, and so well did Knight play that Monte was kept on the bench long after his injury had healed. Knight, in his first month in the American league, hit over .400, but then the pitchers got wise to him and his average was condensed. Knight remained with the Athletics until June, 1907, when he was traded by Mack to Boston for Jimmy Collins. The Plymouth Rocks sold Knight to Baltimore last spring, and he was considered easily the best of the Eastern league shortstops. Knight's stick credit in 1908 was low but both President Hanlon and Manager Dunn of the Orioles say the new Highlander had the happy faculty of making hits at the right time. Knight is a six-footer, has a great reach and handles grounders beautifully.



Hugo Kelly is the latest sensation in the middleweight class. Billy Papke, who a few weeks ago was the champion, is now apparently down and out and is reported to have reached a decision to give up the game for once and all, which, of course, he won't. Kelly put up a great fight against Papke at Los Angeles and when Jeffries called it a draw at the end of 25 rounds there were few in the audience who did not believe that an injustice had been done the Italian. Although Kelly had a margin in at least 15 of the sessions, Papke scored the only knockdown, and consequently appears to have merited the even break accorded him by Jeff's decision. Kelly is now dangling for another match with Ketchel, and probably will get it ultimately, although the champion is not disposed to fight anyone for several months. But Kelly will never be champion—at least, not until he abandons his style of extreme caution, and jumps in and fights. Tommy Ryan, the retired champion middleweight, holds that Papke is the champion dunce of the century for fighting Ketchel the last time at 158 pounds. "The legitimate middleweight limit is 154 pounds," says Ryan. "This is the figure at which Fitzsimmons and Dempsey fought. Of the present crop of middleweights, Papke is the only one who can make that weight and be at his best. After whipping Ketchel, what a glorious opportunity he had of refusing to meet Ketchel or Kelly or any of them unless they stripped at 154. Had he done that, not only would he still be champion, but he would have performed a lasting service to the boxing game." Ryan's argument is along the line of contention for a strict adherence to the recognized weight limits.

Sam Langford, who dispatched Jim Flynn in such a hurry at San Francisco, has issued a sweeping challenge to any fighter in the world, barring Jack Johnson. Langford's great showing against the Pueblo fireman is the talk of the 'Frisco fight colony. The dusky middle-weight made a great impression in his first fight there. In the challenge which Langford issued through his manager he names Tommy Burns and Stanley Ketchel as prospective opponents he would like to sign up. Of course, Burns being in Australia will prevent any kind of arrangements being made for that match, but promoters have expressed a willingness to stage a battle between Ketchel and Langford in the near future.

Waiting for His Little Airship.

The birds were flying south. Presently they espied a lone robin perched on a lofty limb.

"Come on," they cried, "and join the bunch."

But the robin perked his head on one side and shook it vigorously.

"What are you waiting for?" they cried.

"I'm waiting," replied the robin, "for one of these daffy little airship chappies to blow along and then mebby I can sneak a ride."

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE
As further inducement to settlement of the wheat-raising lands of Western Canada, the Canadian Government has increased the area that may be taken by a homesteader to 320 acres—160 free and 160 to be purchased at $3.00 per acre. These lands are in the grain-raising area, where mixed farming is also carried on with unqualified success. A railway will shortly be built to Hudson Bay, bringing the world's markets a thousand miles nearer these wheat-fields, where schools and churches are convenient, climate excellent, railways close to all settlements, and local markets good.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. VIII. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JANUARY 15, 1909. NO. 42.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON'S MESSAGE

THE GOVERNOR INFORMS LEGISLATURE OF STATE'S NEEDS.

DELIVERED IN JOINT CONVENTION

Some Interesting Facts and Figures Are Very Ably Presented—Question of Railroad and Timber Laws Are Fully Brought Out.

For the third time it becomes my duty, as it is my privilege, under the Constitution to address the Legislature, giving my views on such matters as may appear to me to be of general concern to the people, and which may be of value in promoting the general domestic welfare.

Fortunately for us all, the last Legislature did its work so well that the problems confronting you are not so numerous as in other years. Those we have, however, are not less important, and they will necessarily require the best thought and energy of all who contribute officially to the business of the state.

We have much cause for congratulation in the general prosperity of the people and of the excellent condition of the affairs of the state particularly. A glance at the financial affairs of the commonwealth is certainly reassuring. The report of the state auditor reveals the fact during the past two years there has been added to the

Permanent school fund	$1,885,248.79
Permanent university fund...	24,959.25
Internal improvement land fund	16,185.85
Swamp land fund	331,099.97

Permanent School Fund.

The permanent school fund had, on July 31, 1908, reached the splendid total of $19,709,382.91, and is now approximately $20,000,000, and placing us at the head of all of the states in this particular. The fund is safely invested in state, municipal, school and other lands. This amount will be augmented from year to year, and with the proper development of our mineral, timber and other resources will in time exceed an hundred million dollars. The permanent university fund has reached the total of $1,413,817.35; the internal improvement land fund, $2,939,671.62; and the swamp land fund, $1,243,272.35. The state auditor in his report to you has also given to you his estimate of receipts and expenditures for the coming three years. According to his estimate, the receipts for 1909 will be $8,265,690.67, with estimated disbursements for the same year, $7,735,916.86. For 1910, the income is estimated at $6,940,000, with expenses aggregating $6,425,800. For 1911, the receipts are estimated to be $7,040,000 with disbursements of $6,808,800. The total estimated revenue for the three years he places at $22,245,690.67, and expenditures of $20,970,516.55.

Railroads.

Although the first mile of railroad was not laid in Minnesota until four years after the adoption of the state constitution, today Minnesota's railway investment of $400,000,000 is equalled by that of only four other states, and its 8,200 miles of main track exceeds the total of the six New England states. In twenty-five years, our railway freight tonnage has multiplied six-fold, the average freight and passenger rate has been cut in half, while the state taxes on gross earnings have multiplied eight-fold to a total of $3,500,000 a year. Unknown in the iron world until 1884, Minnesota has contributed to the world's wealth in twenty-four years over $600,000,000 worth of iron ore, and now has over 1,000,000,000 tons in sight with new discoveries every season. Our annual iron ore shipment of approximately 30,000,000 tons is more than half the total American output and nearly one-fourth the world total; while the assessed valuation of $155,000,000 applied to the mines by the Minnesota Tax Commission has multiplied the state revenue from that source, as compared with even five years ago, nearly six-fold. One-half of the aggregate volume of public revenue collected within the State of Minnesota, both state and local, is expended upon the public schools. Our school enrollment of 450,000 exceeds the combined enrollment of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire and Rhode Island; while our state university attendance of 4,500 is the fourth largest in America. Minnesota possesses the greatest permanent school and university fund and estate in the world; the $20,000,000 already yielded by our vast educational heritage of timber, iron and agricultural lands being only the minor fraction of a future income that may exceed $100,000,000.

Drainage.

The subject of drainage is more than ever a proper one for your consideration. The last two years have been marked by the greatest progress in this direction ever made in a similar period of the history of the state. In fact, because of the generous and wise policy of the last two legislatures more miles of state ditches have been constructed, more water has been removed from swamp lands, and more acres of land reclaimed than in all the previous years of our state history. The experience of the past convinces me that wise business policy would demand even a more generous policy in the future.

The total number of acres of state land benefited by the construction of state ditches during the past two years is 177,400, as shown by the report of the viewers in the several ditches, which report also shows that 163,000 acres of private lands were benefited. The total benefit to the state and private lands is $34,300.

Railway Taxes.

If possible a change should be made in the present law so far as it relates to the payment of railway taxes. The laws of the state now provide for the payment of aid to the graded schools, high schools, semi-graded schools and rural schools, to the extent of upwards of $600,000 annually, and further provide for these payments in October of each year. The payments are in advance of the appropriation on its way to the state treasury, and in consequence necessitate temporary loans and overdrafts thus creating a deficiency in the treasury. To bridge the period from October, when the school appropriations are payable, to the following March, when taxes are available, the treasurer under legislative authority, has been obliged to borrow funds to meet this emergency, and has been compelled to pay interest averaging over five (5) per cent annually for the past six years. During the year 1905-6, the amount borrowed was $1,715,683.08, upon which the state paid in interest $24,315.15. The next year the loan was $650,929.40 and the interest at 5½ per cent was $9,799.67. Last year the treasurer borrowed $910,139.22, the rate being seven (7) per cent; the interest amount paid by the state being $7,074.27. This condition could be avoided altogether by amending the law and requiring corporation gross earning taxes to be paid semi-annually on or before September 1, and March 1, respectively.

Taxation of Telephone Companies.

Sections 1035-6-7, R. L. 1905, provide for a three per cent gross earnings tax on all telephone companies doing business in the state. The public examiner reports that with few exceptions the various telephone companies have been reporting for taxation purposes the earnings originating and terminating within the state, and have not reported earnings on interstate business. Action has been instituted against one of the companies neglecting to report interstate business, and the matter is now pending in the courts. The decision in the lower court was in favor of the state, and the company appealed the case to the supreme court. In view of the ambiguous term of the statute, it would be best to repeal the present statute and pass a new law which will be specific in its terms and provide for a tax on all interstate business and the state share on all business, and which will provide the necessary penalties for failure to make returns of gross earnings.

Railway Regulation.

The maintenance of a maximum rate of two cents per mile for the transportation of passengers undoubtedly tends to equality of rates and perhaps lessens the discretion which the carriers formerly had to grant special rates either to a particular class of persons or upon particular occasions where it was expected or desired greatly increased travel would occur. In my judgment the arguments against the rates fixed by the legislature of 1907, are of little force as compared with those in favor of that law, but whatever may be said upon this subject there can be no question in the mind of any reasonable or fair minded person that the legislative discretion upon this subject must be supreme if the state in truth does possess the power to regulate the business of railroad transportation. The carrier must be allowed fair remuneration for the services rendered by it, but when this is secured the authority to say whether or not such remuneration shall come equally from all the traveling public or whether or not special rates may be granted by means of mileage books, excursion rates or other special rates, is certainly vested in the sound discretion of the legislature.

Education.

The last two years have been marked by a continuation of actual progress in the schools of the state. There has been a slight lengthening of the school terms. Teachers' wages are higher. The proportional number of graduates from high schools, normal schools and colleges has increased. More schools than ever before have qualified for and received special state aid in their respective classes; and schools in general are better provided than ever with libraries and equipment generally.

Communications from many of the most experienced school superintendents indicate that the compulsory attendance law now upon the statute books is practically a dead letter, due very largely to the fact that school officers do not desire to risk neighborhood troubles by appointing truant officers. I would renew my previous recommendation that legislative provision be made for a non-resident officer to enforce our educational laws in the country districts. Poverty is not responsible to any great extent in keeping children from school, people of means being largely among the worst offenders along this line. Certain it is that every child in the state should receive the benefits of our splendid educational system; and provisions should certainly be made to compel the attendance of children in the public schools.

Logs and Lumber.

The past year was eventful because of the unusual commercial and financial conditions which have obtained. The stringency of the money market, and the attendant business depression so far affected the lumber industry that the state timber board deemed it wise to have no stumpage sale during the past year. The law provides arbitrarily that there shall be but one general stumpage sale each year except in case of an emergency, and as the conditions did not justify this, no sale was held. The timber board has had less difficulty than formerly in the adjustment of settlements for voluntary or involuntary trespass. Because of the inexorable rule of the board which made no settlements except in strict accordance with the law, timber operators have found it cheaper to buy the timber in the regular way and pay for it accordingly. There have been some trespass cases, but they are gradually growing less, a condition much to be desired. The board finds that now and then the law works a hardship to those who have not intended to violate the law, and in such cases the board has been obliged to turn cases over to the attorney general to have the courts do that which the board itself cannot do, but which it would do if it were permitted to do under the law. It seems to me that a board comprising the Governor, State Auditor, Attorney General and State Treasurer could safely be trusted to safeguard the interests of the state, and therefore should have wider latitude and greater authority in settling controversies and making adjustments than is now possessed.

Insurance.

At the last session of the legislature our insurance laws were modified and readjusted to such an extent that we have now, in my judgment, one of the best insurance codes of any state in the union. Under these laws, the department of insurance has been able to accomplish much in the way of regulating and supervising the insurance business of the state in the interests of the insured, as well as to the ultimate interest of the insurance companies themselves. The insurance business is upon a sounder basis than at any other previous time in the history of our state, and the people who invest in insurance can now feel assured that their investment is a safe one. The department itself has made wonderful progress. In 1900, the fees collected by the insurance department amounted to $28,524.80. In 1904, the fees were not materially increased. Beginning with 1905 the fees collected were $36,579.53, in 1906, $52,822.73, in 1907, $52,042.93. During the eleven months up to December 1, 1908, the fees reached a total of $54,325.63, almost $2,000 more than in any eleven months in any previous year in the history of the department. The taxes collected by the department have also been materially increased.

Labor Legislation.

I desire at this time to most earnestly and seriously renew the suggestions previously made by me to the legislature in 1905, and again to the legislature of 1907, for legislation upon a subject which, to my mind is of the greatest importance to all classes of the laboring people of this state, and which is generally described as the common law doctrine as to the non-liability of a master to a servant for injuries occurring through the negligence of a fellow-servant. Whatever may have been proper in the past as to this common law doctrine, the present law is certainly ill-suited to the present time. High-geared and dangerous machinery performs a large part in the production of manufacturing articles and in the construction of buildings.

Labor Department.

Chapter 356, general laws of 1907, reorganized the Bureau of Labor and by reason of the enlarged force of factory inspectors the department has been enabled to extend its field of usefulness, into many towns and cities, and to make two inspection visits annually to the larger industrial centers of the state.

A total number of 5,191 establishments, located in 239 cities and towns, were inspected. The total number of wage earners whose welfare was looked after was 117,250. It was found necessary to issue 360 written orders for the safeguarding of machinery, for better ventilation and sanitary conditions, and for better fire protection.

The reports show a total of 1318 accidents in factories, workshops and mines for the year ending August 1, 1907, and 1,002 for the year ending August 1, 1908, a reduction of 316 or 24.3 per cent for the latter year. Of the total number for the two years, 253 were fatal.

I would suggest the passage of a law by this Legislature giving inspectors power to seal up ovens and utensils of bakeries when places are unclean, if not cleansed within a reasonable time after notification by inspector.

State Prison.

At this particular time the policy of the state with regard to the future of the Minnesota state prison is a matter of great import. In addition to the function of the state in the care and detention of the criminal population confined within the prison, there has come the added feature of the business of one of the greatest commercial enterprises of the state. In the first instance, it is sufficient to say that the methods employed at the Minnesota state prison are in keeping with the best reform methods adopted anywhere in the country, and the only reason that it is not equal in every way to any other prison in the United States is because of old buildings and inadequate facilities. As you doubtless know, steps have been taken looking toward the establishment of a new prison. This, in my judgment, is very important and merits the most earnest consideration of the Legislature at this time. The institution in its manufacture of shoes, twine, and in the future of farm machinery, has made it necessary that the best business methods obtain, and that there should be no handicap in denying to the institution, and those in charge of it, every opportunity to work out the very best results from a state standpoint.

Regulation of Public Utilities.

Minnesota is one of the states that have not yet taken up the subject of state regulation of public utility corporations, like street and suburban electric railways, telephone, telegraph, and power and lighting companies. We have a railway and warehouse commission for the supervision of railroads and elevators; but the time has come in the state's development when the supervision of street and suburban electric railways, and of telephone and telegraph companies is likewise of prime importance, both in the interests of the general public, which receives the service, the state and municipality, which grants the franchises for the use of the public streets and highways, and the stockholders and other investors.

Department of Public Examiner.

The report of the Public Examiner for the biennial period ending July 31, 1908, shows a remarkable growth in state banks, and the recovery of a large volume of public revenue from the examination of public and corporate accounts. The growth in number of state banks, from 427 in 1906 to 607 in 1908, is due largely to the operations of Chapter III of the laws of 1907, regulating private banks. Of something like 200 private banks existing in this state four years ago, only four are now in operation, and these are under state supervision with the prospect of their early conversion into state or national institutions. A total of 178 private banks have incorporated into the state system. Partially as a result of this incorporation of private banks, the state banks of Minnesota show a growth during the past two years of 180 in number, $2,500,000 in capital and surplus, $10,000,000 in deposits, and over $12,500,000 in aggregate resources.

State Game and Fish Commission.

The State Game and Fish Commission has, during the past two years, expended $156,490.15 for all purposes, including maintenance of the several fish hatcheries, gathering and distribution of fish spawn and fry, salaries and expense of game wardens and other employes, and a number of permanent improvements at fish hatcheries, including the construction of two dwelling houses, concrete and cement hatching house and ponds, a fish car with side track and car shed, the acquisition of lands for hatchery purposes, and other expenses, and has on hand December 1, 1908, in all funds, $32,718.18.

The distribution of fish fry for the two years 1907 and 1908, to the streams and lakes of the state has been 99,381,300 of all varieties propagated and distributed, including the several varieties of trout, pike, perch, bass and crappies. Practically all approved application for fry have been filled during 1908.

Live Stock Sanitary Board.

The State Live Stock Sanitary Board has done effective work during the last biennial period in efforts to rid the state of contagious diseases affecting horses, cattle and swine. The board in its report to me has made a number of recommendations which I herewith transmit to your body, and in which I heartily concur.

On August 1, 1908, claims amounting to $27,392.82 were on file representing amounts due owners of glandered and tuberculous animals killed under Chapter 115, Laws of 1905. In January, 1906, a special deficiency appropriation of $60,000, was voted by the legislature to care for claims then on file. No provision was, however, made for animals killed between that time and the close of the fiscal year, the 31st of July, 1907.

Grain Inspection.

During the past two years there have been but few complaints, so far as I am advised, of discrimination in the state inspection of wheat. Certain millers of this and adjacent states about a year ago asked for a change in the grades, but both the railroad and warehouse commission and the grain inspection board opposed such change, and I concurred in their views. The discussion was valuable chiefly for the development of the suggestion made by me for the establishment of a state laboratory and the employment of a state chemist, the same to be under the supervision of the grain inspection board. I believe all grades of grain should be established on a commercial value, and not on a physical appearance of the cereal. Manufacturers are equipping themselves with laboratories and chemists, and they naturally take advantage of their scientific findings, and this puts the producer at a decided disadvantage whenever the issue is involved. Analyses made by the grain inspection board through unofficial laboratories have proven satisfactory, and the state should be on even terms with manufacturers that the grain grower, who looks to the state for protection, should receive that protection.

Conclusion.

Finally, gentlemen of the legislature, we live in and owe allegiance to one of the greatest commonwealths in the American Union, and we approach our respective duties at the period of the state's highest development and prosperity, and therefore at the period of the state's greatest legislative and executive responsibility and opportunity. Whatever may be our respective personal and political affiliations and ideas, our duties and our purposes, I am sure, are one: namely, the protection and advancement of the highest public interests of our commonwealth. Elected to our respective positions by the same people and to serve the one common cause, our mission here is one and the same, to give the best service there is in us to the state as a whole, as we have sworn to do under the guidance of our constitution. Whatever may appear to be our respective obligations to parties, classes and sections, these obligations are swallowed up and patriotically and religiously redeemed in the one duty of public service to the state of Minnesota. There is surely no obligation to party, class or section, paramount to our sworn obligation to the state as a whole, which includes all parties, classes and sections. When we have fulfilled our highest duty to the whole, we have met our obligations to each part; and, therefore, in our great co-operative mission, legislative on your part and executive on mine, there should be, and I have faith to believe there are, no differences or allotments of party, class or section to divert us from the great highway of public duty—the moral, educational, financial and industrial development of our commonwealth.

LEGISLATURE BEGINS

MINNESOTA SOLONS MEET IN THIRTY-SIXTH SESSION.

Both Branches Organize. Rockne is Elected Speaker. Gov. Johnson Delivers Message.

Speaker—A. J. Rockne, Zumbrota.
Chief Clerk—A. H. Vernon, St. Paul.
First Assistant—Oscar Arneson, Herman.
Second Assistant—F. L. Austin, Chisholm.
Enrolling Clerk—Crawford Sheldon, Little Falls.
Engrossing Clerk—Wm. A. Gulick, Minneapolis.
Sergeant-at-Arms—B. F. Seiz, Red Wing.
Assistant—Geo. H. Deans, Foreston.
Postmaster—Sidney J. Huntley, Spring Valley.
Assistant—N. O. Erdahl, Blue Earth.
Chaplain—C. W. B. Ellis, Hawley.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—The republican members of the Minnesota legislative house met in party caucus at the capitol last evening and decided upon the above list of officers to fill the elective positions in the house. The slate had been fixed up at a meeting in the afternoon of the steering committee, consisting of three from each legislative district, and accordingly the work of the caucus went along as if oiled, every vote being unanimous. Dr. A. J. Gates presided. Mr. Rockne in response to demands for "speech" made a brief response. "This is all so sudden, so unexpected (laughter and applause) that I have no set speech prepared," said Rockne. "I pledge, however, to give my best endeavor to you one and all, and to the state of Minnesota. I will doubtless make some mistakes. All speakers have. But these mistakes will be unintentional, I assure you, and in every instance without malice. I appreciate the honor you have conferred upon me, and will do my best to merit it."

Today both house and senate convene at noon and will pass their preliminary resolutions for organization for the session. Tomorrow both houses will listen to the governor's message.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—The twenty-sixth session of the Minnesota legislature convened at the new capitol at noon today and formally organized. In the senate, Lieut. Gov. A. O. Eberhart was first sworn in by the chief justice, Charles M. Start. George R. French, elected from Winona to succeed the late Senator P. Fitzpatrick, then took the oath. Adoption of the general slate of officers of the senate followed, secretary of the senate, former Senator George W. Peachey; assistants, W. H. Simonton, I. L. Ingbritsen, J. H. Mitchell and E. V. Nyquist; secretary to the lieutenant governor, A. D. Brown (chairman state republican committee); sergeant-at-arms, James H. Ege; assistant, Ira Padden; enrolling clerk, Geo. M. Landon; engrossing clerk, E. A. Nelson; chaplain, Rev. B. B. Jonsson. Then followed the usual lengthy list of committee clerks. The chair was also authorized to appoint seven pages. The resolution naming the various committee clerks was presented by Senator Laybourn of Duluth.

Temporary committees were named on rules, mileage, and to wait on the governor and notify him the senate was organized.

In the house, the representatives were called to order by Secretary of State Julius Schmahl. George McKenzie nominated A. J. Rockne of Zumbrota for speaker. T. J. Brady nominated James Handlan of St. Paul as candidate of the democratic minority. The voting was on strictly party lines, 92 for Rockne, and 21 for Handlan. Mr. Rockne made a brief speech of thanks, in which he pledged his best endeavor toward fairness and the good of the state. The rest of the slate went through as arranged, although there was some contest on the chaplaincy. The vote on chaplain resulted as follows: C. W. Ellis, 65; O. E. Phillips, 28; W. R. Kesie, 4. Other slated officers went in by unanimous votes, as follows: Chief clerk, A. H. Vernon; assistants, Oscar Arneson and F. L. Austin; sergeant-at-arms, B. F. Seiz; assistant, G. H. Deans; postmaster, S. J. Huntley; assistant, N. O. Erdahl; enrolling clerk, C. Sheldon; engrossing clerk, W. A. Gulick.

Both houses will meet in joint session tomorrow to listen to the message of the governor, John A. Johnson.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 6.—Gov. John A. Johnson today took his oath of office for a third term as governor, and delivered his biennial message to the members of both houses of the legislature assembled in the representatives' chamber. The galleries were packed with hundreds of visitors—a large portion being ladies—who desired to hear and witness the event. The oath of office was administered by Chief Justice Charles M. Start of the state supreme court. Following this, Gov. Johnson read his message.

The message was the most lengthy of any ever delivered to a Minnesota legislature. It began with a lengthy recital of the vast resources of Minnesota. The governor then gave attention to the need for greater development of northern Minnesota. Here is a vast area, rich with opportunities for settlers; great in its unharnessed water-powers and natural resources. To aid in the work of development, it is recommended there be created a special department of state to take charge of the state's wealth in lands, mines and forests. The governor reminded his hearers that the school lands alone represent a wealth of $100,000,000.

Drainage is redeeming much of the swamp lands of the state, and when drained, this swamp soil becomes the most productive. For this reason, large appropriations should be made for drainage. The work of the state immigration board is but started. The legislature should see that it is not hampered for lack of funds in its future work.

More equality in taxation is desirable. Taxes should be imposed in proportion to the benefits derived, and in proportion to the ability of those taxed to pay. The governor suggested that a county assessor system be established in preference to the township and city assessor systems now in vogue. In Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis counties, a county tax commission for each of three members is suggested. Attention is directed to the report of the state tax commission, which says the gross earnings taxes of railroads is not equal to other property taxes on an ad valorem basis. The mining interests in the state should be made to pay their just taxes, whether tonnage or ad valorem basis, and the fact should not be lost sight of that the towns where the mines are located are entitled to their fair share of this tax. In event of the state supreme court declaring the so-called wide-open tax amendment to the constitution is not adopted, it should be re-submitted to the people at the next election.

On the subject of railroads, the governor says the two cent a mile rate for carrying passengers is sufficiently high to allow the roads fair profit and should be maintained.

Under the head education, the governor recommends an additional assistant superintendent of instruction and at least $1,500 more a year for department clerk hire. In the sale of timber, all sales should be based on the actual amount of timber sold, instead of on rough estimates.

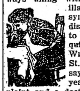
The house did no work today except to listen to the governor's message. In the senate, however, a number of bills were introduced, including the appropriation bill, carrying $150,000 for the expenses of the session, which passed the senate under suspension of the rules. Senator Canfield introduced several bills—one providing that no liquor licenses shall be issued in towns of 20,000 or less, to places owned by, or to agents controlled by, liquor manufacturers or wholesale dealers; another providing that all contracts made with corporations or combinations which are in restraint of trade, be declared void and that money paid under such contracts may be secured back by proper suits.

Senator Sullivan fathered several important bills; one provides for establishment of a state legislative reference department, in charge of an assistant attorney general to draw $3,500 a year; another establishing a farm machinery plant at the state prison and permitting use of $300,000 twine fund money for this purpose; and a third providing for an annual levy of $200,000 a year till $2,000,000 is raised for completion of the new prison at Stillwater.

There was no break in the caucus slate until the nominations for chaplain were called. John McGrath presented the name of Rev. C. W. B. Ellis of Hawley, the caucus selection. T. J. Brady, on behalf on the minority, nominated Rev. R. D. Phillips of Hastings, who was chaplain at the former session of the legislature. A. K. Ware of Northfield broke away from the caucus by nominating Rev. W. R. Keesey. This brought Ben Dixon to his feet with a plea for harmony. Many of the republican members voted for Mr. Phillips, while ten or more refused to vote at all. The result of the roll call was as follows: Ellis 65; Phillips 28, and Keesey 4. Rev. Mr. Ellis having received a majority, was declared elected chaplain of the house.

Lawrence H. Johnson moved the appointment of a committee of three to inform the governor that the house was organized and ready to receive the message. Speaker Rockne appointed Lawrence H. Johnson, W. H. Putnam and James Handlan. The committee returned after a short absence and reported that Governor Johnson would deliver his message to the house at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

The first appointment announced by Speaker Rockne was that of William Lovely of Minneapolis, who was appointed sergeant-at-arms of the reserve gallery.



PATIENT SUFFERING.

Many Women Think They Are Doomed to Backache.

It is not right for women to be always ailing with backache, urinary ills, headache and other symptoms of kidney disease. There is a way to end these troubles quickly. Mrs. John H. Wrght, 606 East First St., Mitchell, S. D., says: "I suffered ten years with kidney complaint and a doctor told me I would never get more than temporary relief. A dragging pain and lameness in my back almost disabled me. Dizzy spells came and went and the kidney secretions were irregular. Doan's Kidney Pills rid me of these troubles and I feel better than for years past."

Two Perfect Cures by Cuticura.

"For several years my husband was a missionary in the Southwest. Every one in that high and dry atmosphere has more or less trouble with dandruff and my daughter's scalp became so encrusted with it that I was alarmed for fear she would lose all her hair. After trying various remedies, in desperation I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. They left the scalp beautifully clean and free from dandruff, and I am happy to say that the Cuticura Remedies were a complete success. I have also used successfully the Cuticura Remedies for so-called 'milk-crust' on baby's head. Cuticura is a blessing. Mrs. J. A. Darling, 310 Fifth St., Carthage, Ohio, Jan. 20, 1908."

Unique Visiting Card.

Mme. Johanna Gadski has brought to this country a fad that has become quite the rage in Germany, where it was introduced by no less a personage than the crown princess herself. It is a new form of visiting card, containing not only an elaborately engraved border, but a silhouette of the person it represents. The custom calls for a design appropriate to the holder's station. Thus, in Mme. Gardski's case the prima donna's head is framed in a border of laurel, while a lyre forms the base of the design. The card is not only unique but exceedingly pretty and effective.

Warmth and Illumination Needed.

A philosophy without heart and a faith without intellect are abstractions from the true life and being of knowledge and faith. The man whom philosophy leaves cold, and the man whom real faith does not illumine, may be assured that the fault lies in themselves, not in knowledge and faith. The former is still an alien from philosophy, the latter an alien from faith.—Hegel.

Too Skeptical for Fairies.

The modern child believes in fairies probably no more than he does in Santa Claus. The next generation will most likely dispense with children's books altogether. And yet, it is said, and no doubt truly, that there was never an age when so much literature for children's use was written.—Ladies' Field.

ROSY AND PLUMP

Good Health from Right Food.

"It's not a new food to me," remarked a Va. man, in speaking of Grape-Nuts.

"About twelve months ago my wife was in very bad health, could not keep anything on her stomach. The Doctor recommended milk half water but it was not sufficiently nourishing.

"A friend of mine told me one day to try Grape-Nuts and cream. The result was really marvelous. My wife soon regained her usual strength and to-day is as rosy and plump as when a girl of sixteen.

"These are plain facts and nothing I could say in praise of Grape-Nuts would exaggerate in the least the value of this great food."

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

A Bridge Wanted.

A monster petition is being circolated in this part of Red Lake county asking the state legislature for an appropriation to build a bridge across the Red Lake River, between sections 29 and 30 in the town of Highlanding. There is no bridge between this point and Thief River Falls, a distance of 22 miles, and the necessity for a bridge is great, with very little prospect of it being built for a number of years, without special aid from the big state of Minnesota.

A special act was passed by congressman Steenerson throu congress last winter granting premission to the Township of Highlanding to build this bridge, at this point, at the special request of the Supervisors of the Township.

Now all we lack is the money to build this bridge and we are going to ask the big state of Minnesota, through our representatives in the legislature to grant us an appropriation sufficient to build the bridge. We are aware of the fact, that Red Lake county has no representation in that state legislature, but the 61st legislative District have, and we are a part of it.

The petition will be presented to the legislature in about four weeks, but the bill will be drawn and introduced before that time, in order to come within the time limit, for the introduction of bills of this kind, and if we get the appropiation the bridge will be built, and if we don't it won't, but we will have an opprotunity to see whether our representatives want to try to do something for us, besides making periodical calls on us, evry two and four years, and hancing us a coby of their latest photograph, and asking for our votes

TO IMPROVE RED LAKE RIVER.

Congressman Steenerson has introdured and had referrd to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, his bill for the maintenence and improvement of Rivers and harbors in the State of Minnesota. The part that this locality is interested in is, that the bill carries with it the sume of fifty thousand dollars for deepening and removeing obstructions in Red Lake River between Thief River Falls and Red Lake, and the sum of two hundred and seventy thousand four hundred and fifty six dollars and and sixty cents, for the purpose of building a dam across Red Lake River at the outlet of Red Lake, and a reservoir in said lake for the purpose of aiding navigation and regulating the flow of water in the Red Lake River and the Red River of the North.

The amounts to be appropriated are the amounts recommended in report of Chief Engineers of the War Department, and is to be immediatly available to be extended under the direction of the Secretary of War and the supervision of the Chief of Engineers of the war Department. If the bill passes at this session of Congress, and we believe it will pass, we may expet these improvements to be made this summer, But you know! "Steenerson never does anything," is what some of his opponents say.

ROYAL STRONG ARMS

Famous Monarchs That Rivaled the Mighty Samson.

AMAZING FEATS OF MUSCLE.

The Emperor Maximianus Could Lift Three Men With One Hand—Augustus the Strong of Saxony Carried a Horse and Its Rider on His Back.

Curiously enough, a large percentage of the notably strong men of history have been of royal blood. One of the earliest of these royal athletes was Maximianus, called "Maximianus Hercules" because of his great strength. He was the son of a peasant and had an enormous physique. He became a common soldier and was finally made emperor by acclaim of his fellow soldiers during a stormy period of Roman history.

Maximianus' strength was prodigious. It was said that on foot he could run down a fox, that he could lift three men with one hand and that by gripping the wheel of a chariot with one finger he could resist the pull of three horses. Like most men of great physical strength, Maximianus was a heavy eater. History records that his daily allowance was forty pounds of meat and eighteen bottles of wine.

Augustus the Strong of Saxony was another of these royal Samsons. He would often seize two of his courtiers, grasping one with his right hand and another with his left, holding them up at arm's length and playfully twirling them about.

On one occasion the horse ridden by one of his attendants became balky and refused to budge. After some minutes of coaxing the king dismounted, placed his Herculean shoulder under the horse's chest, grasping it by the fore legs, and calmly walked away with both horse and rider. This remarkable performance was witnessed by a number of courtiers and attendants.

King Richard of England ("Coeur de Lion") had tremendous strength. During his captivity in Germany he gave a terrible demonstration of his physical powers. The son of one of the wardens was a youth locally renowned for his muscular strength and in his assurance invited the royal captive to an exchange of buffets. The young man by a cast of the dice won the right to the first stroke and struck the king a staggering blow on the side of the head. It was then the king's turn, and he landed a blow just behind his opponent's ear so heavy that the man was instantly killed.

This incident is used in Sir Walter Scott's famous historical novel "Ivanhoe," where King Richard, the "Black Knight," and the jolly outlaw Friar Tuck have an exchange of buffets, without, however, any fatal result.

Dom Pedro I., emperor of Brazil is also on the list of royal strong men. On the occasion of a carnival he arranged matters so that he was standing on the bow of the royal barge between two of his stateliest courtiers. Suddenly in the midst of the festivities the king reached out, grasped a courtier with each hand, and, after holding them for a few moments squirming in the air and begging to be released he relaxed his grip and allowed them to drop plump into the water, amid the frantic applause of the huge crowd that had assembled to view their monarch. The king joined heartily in the general hilarity, but what the drenched courtiers thought about this exquisite joke is not recorded.

Peter the Great of Russia, like Charlemagne, possessed great physical as well as mental power. His years of work as blacksmith and ship carpenter had so developed a naturally powerful physique that he was believed to be the strongest man in Russia.

The story is told that a certain blacksmith in a little country town had boasted that he was the only blacksmith in the world who could lift his own anvil. The emperor, hearing of the blacksmith's boast, disguised himself as a workman and with a single companion set out for the blacksmith's village. On learning of their errand the blacksmith without a word laid aside his tools and, grasping the anvil with his brawny hands lifted it with great effort about a foot from the floor. Then Peter took hold of the anvil, raised it a foot, two feet, three higher and higher, till he finally swung it to his shoulder and calmly walked away with it.

Charlemagne was said to be the most powerful man physically of his time. One of his favorite feats of strength was to break the heaviest horseshoe by gripping it with one hand.

A worthy successor of Peter the Great was the late Czar Alexander III., who was one of the strongest men in the world. He was often called "the Russian Samson." The czar's regular visiting card was a Russian coin somewhat larger than our silver quarter, which he would bend almost double with his powerful fingers.

Alexander was also fond of breaking horseshoes, and it is said he never found one he could not break in two. He could take two fresh packs of cards and by gripping the ends with his hands tear them straight down through the middle.

It is said that on one occasion a woman companion expressed a wish for a bouquet holder in which to place a large bunch of roses. The czar took a pewter tankard from a table nearby and with a few movements of his powerful hands fashioned it into a rough but picturesque and quite efficient bouquet holder.—W. R. C. Latson in New York Tribune.

GAVE THE ANSWER.

A Soldier Who Followed the Orders of General Jackson.

Illustrative of the exasperating ease with which chickens occasionally "come home to roost" is this story from "A Soldier's Letters to Charming Nellie." On a day in June, 1862, in the early part of the civil war General Hood of the Texas brigade halted each regiment in turn and gave his orders. To the Fourth he said:

"Soldiers of the Fourth, I know as little of your destination as you do. If, however, any of you learn or suspect it, keep it a secret. To every one who asks questions answer, 'I don't know.' We are now under the orders of General Jackson, and I repeat them to you."

General Jackson also gave strict orders against foraging, but apples were plentiful, and it was contrary to nature for hungry soldiers not to eat them, and so it came about that on the march to Staunton General Jackson came upon a Texan sitting on the limb of an apple tree busily engaged in filling his haversack with the choicest fruit.

The general reined in his old sorrel horse and in his customary curt tone asked:

"What are you doing in that tree, sir?"

"I don't know," replied the Texan.

"What command do you belong to?"

"I don't know."

"Is your command ahead of you or behind you?"

"I don't know."

Thus it went on, "I don't know" given as answer to every question. Finally Jackson asked sternly:

"Why do you give me that answer to every question?"

"'Cause them's the orders our general gin us this mornin', an' he tole us he got 'em that er way straight from ole Jackson," replied the man in the tree.

Disgusted with a too literal obedience to his own commands, but yet not caring to argue the point, General Jackson rode on.

A ONE NIGHT CONVERT.

Incident in the Temperance Career of Father Mathew.

In 1843, when Father Mathew was crusading for total abstinence in London, he created no small amusement for a large party at the hospitable mansion of an Irish nobleman by his attempts, partly playful, but also partly serious, to make a convert of Lord Brougham, who resisted good humoredly, but resolutely, the efforts of his zealous neighbor. The incident is related by Katharine Tynan in her biography of Father Mathew.

"I drink very little wine," said Brougham, "only half a glass at luncheon and two half glasses at dinner. And, though my medical adviser told me I should increase the quantity, I refused to do so."

"He was wrong, my lord, for advising you to increase the quantity, and you were wrong in taking the small quantity you do," said Father Mathew, "but I have my hopes of you."

And so, after a pleasant resistance on the part of the learned lord, Father Mathew invested his lordship with the silver medal and ribbon, the insignia and collar of the "new order of the Bath."

"Then I will keep it," said Brougham, "and take it to the house, where I shall be sure to meet old Lord —— the worse for liquor, and I will put it on him."

The announcement of this intention was received with much laughter for the noble lord referred to was notorious for his potations.

Lord Brougham was as good as his word, for on meeting the veteran peer he said, "Lord ——, I have a present from Father Mathew for you," and passed the ribbon rapidly over his neck.

"Then I tell you what it is, Brougham. I will keep sober for this night," was the peer's unexpected response. And he kept this vow, to the amazement of his friends.

This is how a driver of the prison van, known as Black Maria, distinguished himself. A would be wit on the causeway hailed him:

"There's room for one," replied the driver. "We kep' it for you."

Not entirely disconcerted, the wit made another shot.

"What's your fare?" he asked.

The answer entirely extinguished him.

The Great Circus.

The famous Coliseum in old Rome, massive as it was, was a mere toy in comparison with the great circus, which filled the valley between the Palatine and the Aventine hills. The Coliseum is said to have been able to seat 80,000 people, while the seating capacity of the great circus was, at different periods, 150,000, 250,000 and, lastly, 380,000 spectators. The great circus was probably the most stupendous building ever erected for public spectacles.—New York American.

The share holders of the High Landing Creamery Association elected the following as their new board of Directors at their annual meeting Monday: Sever Nelson, Anthony Dannaker, A Hammersteen, Ole Howard, Hans O. Hommy, John Poloni, and Henry Ealison. Only Mr. Nelson of the last years board was re elected, as it was agreed that directors serve free of charge until the creamery was paid for, and the honor of spending time for nothing passed around.

C. H. Martz Talks Bridge.

John Quirk, of Kratka was transacting business here on Monday last and improved the opprotunity to add his name to the big list of bridge petitioners. Mr. Quirk said he had been talking with C. H. Martz last week and that Mr. Martz had said that the proposed location for this bride was the best that could be chosen for a bridge across Red Lake River, in the eastern part of the county, as the banks were the best and a bridg at that place would accomidate the largest number of people to cross the river of any place it could be built. Mr Martz as County superintendent of roads last season took soundings and measurments at a good many points along the river, and he is a Civil Engineer that knows what he is talking about.

A Sporting Parson.

The inhibition of a hunting rector by his bishop reminds a correspondent that the Rev. Jack Russell, the famous west country sporting parson, was once cited to appear before the bishop of Exeter to answer charges of neglecting his spiritual and parochial duties, and he was also remonstrated with for keeping and following a pack of hounds. The charges were proved unfounded, and Russell refused to give up the sport, which he continued to pursue almost to the day of his death in 1883, at the age of eighty-eight. Besides being an insatiable hunter, he was, as his biographer pithily remarks, "a stanch supporter of Devonshire wrestlers, an admirable sparrer and an enthusiastic upholder of the virtues of Devonshire cider and cream." And in the pulpit he tried to reform conduct rather than to expound doctrine and was a stern denouncer of bad language, strong drink and "the filthy habit of smoking."—St. James' Gazette.

A Phonetic Purchase.

The late Henry Miller, who was guide, philosopher and friend to many book lovers within a thousand miles of New York, was a most successful salesman. One day he called on Collis P. Huntington and showed him a rare copy of a book.

"There are two volumes of this," said Mr. Miller. "The other volume is in perfect order, as you see this one is. You cannot possibly let them escape you, for you know you have nothing like this in your library."

"What is the price?" asked the railroad king.

"Seven hundred dollars," said the bookman.

"Those are too valuable volumes for my library," Mr. Huntington exclaimed.

Mr. Miller went back to his place and sent the books to Mr. Huntington's house with a bill for $700. Next day the railroad king sent for him.

"Why did you send me those books?" he demanded sharply.

"Because you bought them," was the bookman's calm reply.

"I certainly did not!" cried the millionaire.

"Oh, yes, you did!" answered Mr. Miller. "You'll remember perfectly well when I tell you what you said. You told me distinctly, 'Those are two valuable volumes for my library.'"—Harper's Weekly.

Books of Reference.

Newspaper editors like to answer questions addressed to them by their readers—if they are not too hard—and they deem themselves as arbiters rather than as accessories to a misdemeanor when they are appealed to for information "to decide a bet." But they wonder sometimes why certain questions are put to them for arbitrament when the answers are to be found in one of three very accessible books—an almanac, a grammar and a small dictionary.

These are books of reference that ought to be in every home library, however small. We guess that they are, but that they are sometimes dusty with misuse or out of easy reach on a top shelf. It is well to have an almanac, a dictionary or an atlas handy when you are reading your newspaper. By consulting them frequently the reader will find his daily paper relates his early historical studies to present events and makes his touch with the world closer and more significant. Get the habit!—New York Mail.

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

SPECIAL OFFER:

Marlin

THE Marlin Model 1894 is a medium light weight repeating rifle, a well proportioned, finely balanced gun with all the advantages and comforts of the Marlin solid-top, side-ejecting construction. It is quick and easy of operation, accurate up to 300 yards and a very pleasant gun to carry and to shoot.

For settled districts and farming country where the shooting at woodchucks, [illegible], foxes, coons, hawks, etc., is at ranges from 100 to 200 yards, the .25-20 and .32-20 rifles with the black and low-pressure smokeless loads cannot be equalled for accuracy and safety. The factory ammunition for the Model '94 rifles is cheap, and can be reloaded at very small cost.

The up-to-date sportsman needs the "Marlin Book" every day in the year. It contains [illegible] pages of live stuff for the man who loves a good gun, and wants to know everything about it. FREE for 3 stamps postage.

TRY THIS FOR COLDS

Mix half ounce of Concentrated pine compound with two ounces of glycerine and a half pint of good whiskey; shake it well each time and use in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours.

These ingredients can be obtained from any good druggist who will prepare the mixture, or it can be mixed at home.

This is said to be the quickest cough and cold cure known to science, and at the same time it has a splendid tonic effect which benefits the whole system. The Concentrated pine is a special pine product refined for medical use and comes only in half ounce bottles, each enclosed in a round case, which is airtight, to retain all the original strength of the fluid, but be sure it is labeled "Concentrated."

The following formula is a never failing remedy for colds:

One ounce of Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla, one ounce Toris Compound and one-half pint of good whiskey, mix and shake thoroughly each time and use in doses of a tablespoonful every four hours.

This if followed up will cure an acute cold in 24 hours. The ingredients can be gotten at any drug store.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

MATTERS OF INTEREST IN THE GOPHER STATE.

Surveying the Minnesota River—Fixing Legal Age of Girls—Number of Hogs Slaughtered.

Drainage.

Crookston.—Engineers employed by the state drainage board and under the directions of George A. Ralph, state drainage engineer, will start out on a survey of the Minnesota river basis. They will continue work for some months, running it from the river's junction with the Mississippi at Mendota back to its rise in Big Stone lake.

The purpose of the survey is to arrive at the best method of preventing the annual floods which have been wiping out crops and doing other damage in the bottom lands along the river. The survey will show bench marks for low water and flood marks will give distances and make it possible to calculate the flow, the capacity of the channel, the area of the basin. Congress will eventually be as kdeot Congress will eventually be asked to provide a reservoir system to hold back water in the spring and release it when needed for navigation in the Mississippi.

Plans are also under consideration for straightening the river channel in some places. The legislature is expected to make some provision for improvements and to complete the survey.

The Minnesota River Improvement league has been organized to push this work, and members from the valley counties will do what they can in the legislature this winter to promote the work of controlling the river.

Age of Girls.

St. Paul.—Whether the laws of the state, which now fix eighteen years as the age at which girls attain their majority, should be changed so as to make the age twenty-one years, was one of the principal subjects under consideration yesterday at a meeting of the Minnesota Society for the Promotion of the Interests of Children of Public Concern at the capitol.

At present the law fixes eighteen as the age at which girls pass from the period designated by the lawyers as infancy. But for many purposes a girl is not considered a woman until she reaches the age of twenty-one years. She cannot exercise her limited franchise until she is twenty-one and she is counted a child by the law in reckoning the school appropriation fund of the state until she reaches that age.

Many Hogs.

South St. Paul.—The year 1908 was a banner one in the hog market at South St. Paul and the long looked for million mark was passed. This record is 250,000 greater than any previous year, the total number received during 1908 being 1,133,412.

While the hogs have been getting heavy the cattle have been going light, the latter having fallen off about 50,000 from 1907. The sales of cattle exceeded any other year by several thousand. The sheep receipts also showed a decrease, while the number of calves on hand during the year was the largest ever.

Taking the year as a whole it was very satisfactory to the local cattle men and they are much pleased with the results in view of the condition of business over the country in general.

Arrested.

Surrounded by every bulwark of secrecy United States Marshal H. A. Rider of Little Falls, Minn., arrived in St. Paul last evening with George T. Frankhauser, for whose capture a reward of $15,000 has been offered and who will stand before a United States commission in St. Paul today charged with holding up the Oriental Limited of the Great Northern railway at Rondo, Mont., in September, 1907, and robbing the United States mails of $50,000.

Minneapolis Assets.

According to figures received by City Comptroller Dan C. Brown from the county auditor the total assessed valuation of Minneapolis real and personal property is $175,912,389. Of this amount, $126,899,966 is in real property, while $49,012,423 is in personal property. The taxes for the coming year have been based upon these figures, the rates by wards ranging from 27.75 in the Fourth and Fifth wards to 29 in a majority of the wards.

Miscellaneous Notes.

St. Paul.—Officers of Minnesota national guard advocate home ranges for the different companies.

Minneapolis. — Election night in New York with its wild excitement is seen to advantage in one of the big scenes depicted in Owen Davis' melodramatic novelty, "The Prince of Swindlers," which comes to the Bijou, inneapolis, the week of January 10th.

Minneapolis.—If the Minneapolis contributors to the Chisholm fire relief want the earthquake sufferers in Italy to benefit by the surplus of the Chisholm fund, it will be done.

Lake City.—Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Walstrom of this city celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. They have been residents of this city upwards of forty years.

Rochester.—Olmsted county, and, in fact, this part of the state is again face to face with the serious problem of the destruction of the fox and the wolf.

WHY NOT OWN LAND?

ONE OF THE BEST WAYS TO MAKE MONEY IS TO INVEST IN WESTERN CANADA.

"Deep down in the nature of every properly constituted man is the desire to own some land." A writer in the Iowa State Register thus tersely expresses a well-known truth. The question is where is the best land to be had at the lowest prices, and this the same writer points out in the same article. The fact is not disguised that the writer has a personal interest in the statement of his case, and there is no hidden meaning when he refers to Western Canada as presenting greater possibilities than any other part of the American Continent, to the man who is inclined to till the soil for a livelihood and possible competence. What interests one are the arguments advanced by this writer, and when fairly analyzed the conclusion is reached that no matter what personal interest the writer may have had, his reasons appear to have the quality of great soundness. The climatic conditions of Western Canada are fully as good as those of Minnesota, the Dakotas or Iowa, the productiveness of the soil is as great, the social conditions are on a parity, the laws are as well established and as carefully observed. In addition to these the price of land is much less, easier to secure. So, with these advantages, why shouldn't this—the offer of Western Canada—be embraced. The hundreds of thousands of settlers now there, whose homes were originally in the United States, appear to be—are satisfied. Once in awhile complaints are heard, but the Canadians have never spoken of the country as an Eldorado no matter what they may have thought. The writer happened to have at hand a few letters, written by former residents of the United States, from which one or two extracts are submitted. These go to prove that the writer in the Register has a good basis of fact in support of his statements regarding the excellency of the grain growing area of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. On the 29th of April of this year W. R. Conley, of Lougheed, Alberta, wrote a friend in Detroit. He says: "The weather has been just fine ever since I came here in March, and I believe one could find if he wanted to some small bunches of snow around the edge of the lake. There is a frost nearly every morning: at sunrise it begins to fade away, then those blue flowers open and look as fresh as if there had been no frost for a week. . . . There is no reason why this country should not become a garden of Eden; the wealth is in the ground and only needs a little encouragement from tho government to induce capital in here. There is everything here to build with: good clay for brick; coal underneath, plenty of water in the spring lakes, and good springs coming out of the banks."

Rather Hard.

The messenger entered the palace with the dispatches.

"Brimstone and asphalt!" ejaculated Castro, as he read the yellow slip. "Holland threatens to spank us."

"Well, what of it, your excellency?" responded the secretary. "Other nations have threatened to do the same."

"Yes, but, confound it, this is a spanking that will hurt. The Dutch wear wooden shoes."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Answer This Question
When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured numerous cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?
Here are two letters which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
Red Banks, Miss.—"Words are inadequate to express what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from a female disease and weakness which the doctors said was caused by a fibroid tumor, and I commenced to think there was no help for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman after all other means had failed. My friends are all asking what has helped me so much, and I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Willie Edwards.
Hampstead, Maryland.—"Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was weak and nervous, and could not be on my feet half a day without suffering. The doctors told me I never would be well without an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors, and I hope this valuable medicine may come into the hands of many more suffering women."—Mrs. Joseph H. Dandy.
We will pay a handsome reward to any person who will prove to us that these letters are not genuine and truthful—or that either of these women were paid in any way for their testimonials, or that the letters are published without their permission, or that the original letter from each did not come to us entirely unsolicited.
What more proof can any one ask?
For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.
☛ Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

DEMOCRAT SPRINGS BILL TO ESTABLISH STATE BOARD OF TRADE.

Measure Is Designed to Abolish Several Boards Now Held by Republicans and Centralize Their Powers in One Organization.

St. Paul, Jan. 11.—Little was done in either branch of the legislature today outside the announcement of appointment of committees in the senate by Lieut. Gov. A. O. Eberhart, and in the house by Speaker A. J. Rockne. There were a large number of new bills, however, offered in each branch of the legislature.

In the senate, these included the following: by Elwell, to appropriate $100,000 for a ladies dormitory at the state university; by Durment, for a constitutional amendment providing for two additional supreme court justices; by Cashman, to re-enact the commodity rate law minus the severe penalty clause which caused it to be killed in the federal supreme court; by Gunn, to establish a normal school at Cass Lake; by Canfield, to appropriate $25,000 to aid in establishment of county agricultural schools; by Calhoun, prohibiting marriages between negroes and whites; by Moonan, to amend election law and provide for nomination of all state officers and United States senators by primary election.

In the house, bills introduced included the following; by Opsahl, to establish a normal at Bemidji; by Christensen, making county assessors elective; by L. H. Johnson, declaring state ownership of mineral lands beneath lake waters, according to recomendation of the state auditor; by Nimocks, raising salaries of state officers as follows: governor, $10,000; auditor, treasurer, and secretary of state, $5,000; attorney general, $5,500.

The senate adopted the report of its committee on rules, which included practically all the rules of two years ago. The debate was on the subject of shutting out lobyists, the rule adopted prohibiting them not only from the senate floor, but from the retiring and rest rooms, and from the adjacent corridors.

St. Paul, Jan. 13.—Dr. J. N. McCormick, of Bowling Green, Ky., national lecturer on health topics, addressed the senate and house in the house-chamber today on health preventive measures. He stated that if sputum of consumptives could be disposed of properly, consumption could be soon suppressed. Poor sanitary measures are always responsible for typhoid fever. He made a strong plea for a national health department at Washington, D. C.

The sessions of both house and senate were very brief today. In the senate some excitement was stirred up by Senator Works of Mankato, democrat, offering a resolution for a committee of 3 of the senate and 3 of the house to draft a bill for a new department of state lands. Notice of debate was given by Senator Laybourn and the resolution accordingly had to lie over a day. The resolution was blocked to check the democrats from making headway on a measure the republicans wish to father.

In the senate several important bills were introduced, namely: by Sundberg, to compel railroads to keep their drainage ditches cleared; by Pauly, to prohibit salary and wage assignments, aimed at the "ten per cent per month" loan sharks; by Sundberg, to resubmit a constitutional amendment for hail insurance to the voters of the state.

In the house, introduction of bills was about the only business. These included the following: by Ole Peterson, to re-establish the old convention system of making political nominations for all offices; by Gates, to prohibit killing of prairie chickens for two years; by Bendixen, to prohibit grain purchasers from making unfair discriminations in buying grain, the price to be the same, transportation costs allowed.

St. Paul, Jan. 14.—Politics was played to a finish in the senate today, with the Republicans coming off victors as a result of their overwhelming majority. The political ball opened with Senator Works of Mankato requesting the adoption of his resolution to appoint a joint committee of six, three from each house, to draft a bill for a state department of lands, as was suggested in the governor's report. Works is an active democrat, and the republicans resented his attempt to boost the governor's plans. Such a bill will be considered a little later, but when it is, the republicans intend it shall originate with some republican, and not with a democrat. Accordingly a resolution was adopted referring the Works resolution, with all recommendations of the governor's message, to the proper committees on the various subjects. Ole Sageng, the populistic member from Otter Tail, wanted to know what the resolution meant. Senator Thorpe of Kandiyohi, said such a resolution was customary in congress relative to the president's message. John Moonan of Waseca, raised a laugh by explaining that the rules of congress have evidently been changed, as it seems to be now customary to lay the president's message upon the table.

The senate was in session just 45 minutes in all today, including three minutes devoted to the opening prayer by the chaplain. Another supply of new bills came in. These included the following: by Pauly, for non-partisan primary nomination of district and probate judges; by Nelson, creating a ten per cent income tax on owners of iron mine properties; by Peterson, to increase pay of petit jurors from $2 to $3. Two bills to pension those who fought in Minnesota Indian massacres of 1862 were offered, one by Wright, one by Works; both calling for $12 per month pensions.

In the house today, the Elwell resolution to accept the conditions of the Carnegie fund for pensioning Minnesota university teachers, was the subject of much debate. The resolution came in from the senate, and was first adopted without debate. Then Dr. Dorsey secured a reconsideration. Lennon of Minneapolis stated that the resolution had never been presented to the Hennepin delegation of which he was chairman and he was opposed to railroading legislation through the house. The resolution was finally referred to the committee on state university.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 15.—The house and senate were both in session a little over an hour today. The senate then adjourned till Tuesday morning, the house till Monday afternoon.

In the senate today, Senator Works of Mankato introduced the pet measure of the democrats, a bill to create a state board of lands of three members. Each member is to be appointed by the governor and have a salary of $5,000 a year, and to absorb the work now accomplished by the state immigration bureau, state forestry board, state land commissioner. The board is to be assigned quarters "at the seat of government" and does not have to meet more frequently than once in two weeks. It would abolish a lot of republican offices, and place the control of the state's resources entirely in the hands of the present democratic administration. For this reason it will doubtless be assailed by the republican legislative majority. Dr. H. H. Witherstine introduced a novel bill. It provides that every voter in the state must vote at primaries and elections under penalty of a $2 fine, which, if not paid, is to be charged against property as a tax; and if it still remains unpaid, said voter cannot vote at another election until the fine is satisfied. Senator Dar Hall offered a bill to repeal the present corrupt practices act on the ground that the existing law is but a farce in its enforcement.

In the house a number of new bills appeared. Representative Frank White has one to place the office of labor commissioner in the elective list with a $3,000 salary, appointments in the department to be controlled by a civil service board consisting of the auditor, secretary of state and attorney general. Elmer E. Adams, of Fergus Falls, stirred up the prohibition-liquor interests fight by introducing a bill to extend local option from townships and incorporated villages, to which it is now limited, to all cities of 10,000 inhabitants or under. Representative Davies, chairman of the forestry committee, introduced a bill to appropriate $12,500 to pay northern Minnesota citizens who devoted much of their time to forest fire fighting last summer and fall. E. E. Lobeck came to the rescue of "Newlyweds" with a bill making it a crime to serenade "a la charivari." Representative Ferguson offered a bill for a constitutional amendment to permit the legislature to enact a law for an educational qualification requirement for county superintendent of schools.

Neither house nor senate have yet settled to hard work. Sessions each day are brief, committee meetings are few, and no bills have been considered in committee of the whole or on the calendar by either body as yet.

FIRE RAZES TOPEKA HOTEL

ONE MAN KILLED IN BURNING OF COPELAND HOUSE.

Was One of Oldest Hostelries in Kansas and Rallying Point of Politicians.

Topeka, Kan.—With walls blackened by smoke, bulging to the danger point and threatening to cave in at any time on an interior of utter ruin, all that remains of the Copeland hotel, the rallying point of the Republican party of Kansas for years, is a mere hulk of a building, the result of a fire Thursday.

The body of Isaac E. Lambert, ex-United States district attorney for Kansas, was found in the ruins Thursday night with the head, arms and legs burned off. The body was found in the northeast corner of the building. Lambert's room was on the fourth floor directly above. Fourteen of the guests were more or less seriously hurt.

The hotel is a complete loss, estimated at $120,000. Insurance was carried to the amount of $41,000. The porticos are intact and the front of the building was not burned out. But inside is complete ruin, all four of the floors have caved in. An attempt was made last night to wreck the walls with a stream of water, but it proved fruitless.

The Copeland hotel was of brick construction, four stories in height. It was situated at the corner of Ninth and Kansas avenues, one block from the state capitol, and was one of the oldest hotels in Kansas. It had a roomy lobby and wide hallways, and was plentifully supplied with fire escapes. The main stairway, however, was built around the elevator, and the flames shooting up the shaft soon shut off this means of escape. The fire started shortly after four o'clock in or near the kitchen, apparently from escaping gas. The flames had gained great headway when discovered and when the fire apparatus first arrived the rear stairway had been cut off as a means of escape.

Must Pay Fare on His Own Road.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern railway, will pay on his own road hereafter when traveling in Minnesota. He informed Gov. Johnson Thursday that he would accept appointment as a member of the state highway commission, and his name was sent to the senate Friday. The attorney general has ruled that persons holding any kind of state position are absolutely barred from accepting free transportation, even if they are railroad officials.

Noted Russian Admiral Dead.

St. Petersburg.—The death is announced of Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky, who was in command of the Russian fleet in May, 1905, when it was practically annihilated by the Japanese in the battle of the Sea of Japan. The death of Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky, which occurred in St. Petersburg Thursday, was due to neuralgia of the heart.

TEN KILLED IN COLLISION.

Terrible Accident on the Rio Grande at Dotsero, Col.

Glenwood Springs, Col.—In a collision between Denver & Rio Grande passenger train No. 5, west-bound, and east-bound freight train No. 66 at Dotsero Friday night at least ten persons were killed and a number of others injured.

As soon as word reached here that a wreck had occurred, a train was made up and all available doctors and nurses in the city were pressed into service and carried to the scene of the accident.

Meager details of the wreck are to the effect that the freight train was attempting to take a siding on orders to let the passenger train pass, but had only partially run off the main line when the passenger train came tearing along and crashed into it.

The chair car of the passenger was torn in two and one tourist car telescoped. The passenger train was well filled with passengers.

STRIKE OF HAT MAKERS BEGINS.

Quit Because Manufacturers Quit Use of the Union Label.

New York.—A general strike of hat makers, that may involve some 25,000 workers, was inaugurated in the hat manufacturing centers of the country Friday as the result of a decision of the Associated Hat Manufacturers to discontinue the use of the union label in the factories represented in the association.

Reports from various places received here Friday night indicate that the hatters in this vicinity, including those in the factories in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, have generally obeyed the order to strike. There were no signs of disorder anywhere, the hat makers peacefully retiring from the factories when the order to quit work was received.

AMERICAN GIRL WEDS A PEER.

Miss Beatrice Mills Becomes the Countess of Granard.

New York.—Miss Jane Beatrice Mills, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, and granddaughter of the well-known financier, D. O. Mills, was married to the eighth earl of Granard Thursday, thus becoming a British peeress.

The marriage took place at 3:30 in the afternoon at the city home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by Bishop Thomas J. Cusack of St. Stephen's Roman Catholic church, in the presence of 250 relatives and guests. The gifts to the bride were said to be worth about $500,000 and included a check for $100,000 from her father.

Turkey Accepts Austria's Offer.

Constantinople.—Through the suggestion of his majesty, Sultan Abdul Hamid I., the Turkish government has accepted the Austro-Hungarian offer of £2,500,000 Turkish ($10,800,000) indemnity for the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, thus removing every possibility of war.

T. J. HAINS SET FREE

FOUND NOT GUILTY OF MURDER IN KILLING OF ANNIS.

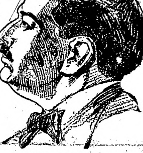
CROWD CHEERS VERDICT

Defendant, Overjoyed, Carries News to His Brother in Jail, Who Probably Never Will Be Tried.

Flushing, N. Y.—After reviewing the evidence for 22 hours and taking 15 ballots before all were agreed, the jury in the trial of Thornton Jenkins Hains, Friday afternoon found the prisoner not guilty as a principal with his brother, Capt. Peter C. Hains, Jr., in the killing of William E. Annis.

For the second time in his life Thornton Hains has been found not guilty of the charge of murder, he having been acquitted of murder in shooting a companion named Edward W. Hannigan in an open boat in Hampton roads 17 years ago.

Thornton Hains had an affecting greeting with Capt. Hains in the Long Island jail, where he hurried in a motor car after the verdict to bring his brother the news. Old Gen. Hains and his wife, who had been anxiously waiting to learn the verdict in the Hotel Astor, in Manhattan, since the jury went out at five o'clock Thursday night, heard the news from their son Thornton, who telephoned his parents as soon as he left the courtroom. Mrs. Hains nearly fainted from joy at the news.



Thornton J. Hains.

Rarely in any court of law has such a demonstration been witnessed as that which occurred when the jury made known its verdict, which came like a thunderbolt. The packed courtroom of spectators rose as one man and cheered and applauded with such mighty vigor that the gavel falls of Justice Crane on his desk could not be heard.

Officials of the district attorney's office in Queens county are quoted as saying that the verdict in this case probably means that Capt. Hains will never be brought to trial and that he will be surrendered into the care of his family or the federal government.

"Under this verdict it is perfectly safe for any person who is ingenious enough to frame up a defense to go out and kill. Private vengeance seems to have taken precedence over the people's law," was the only comment that Prosecutor Darrin had to make.

HORROR IN HUNGARIAN MINE.

Scores of Men Killed by an Explosion and Fire.

Veszprim, Hungary.—In an explosion of fire-damp in the Auka coal mine here Thursday, which was followed by a dust explosion and fire, 240 men were entombed.

Sixteen living miners and the bodies of 45 dead persons thus far have been brought out of the pit.

The fire has been held to one locality and it is hoped that the remainder of the entombed miners will be rescued alive.

The town of Veszprim lies 60 miles southeast of Buda Pest and has a population of some 15,000, composed mostly of Magyars.

Shively Is Indiana Senator.

Indianapolis, Ind.—B. F. Shively was chosen on the twentieth ballot for United States senator in the caucus of the Democratic members of the legislature after many weary hours of balloting.

John Worth Kern, recent candidate for vice-president on the Democratic ticket, made a gallant fight and led in the early balloting. Once he gave the field a scare, when on the third ballot he jumped to 32 votes.

Portuguese Mob Fights Troops.

Oporto.—The distress in the port wine growing regions arising from a crisis in the wine trade culminated Friday in rioting. At Regoa the troops that were preserving order were fired on by an infuriated mob and replied with a bayonet charge.

WENT BACK ON HIS SONG.

Exasperated Composer Glad to Prove Words Were False.

George Christie, nephew of the noted minstrel man, and himself a well known composer, says that he never was sorry but once that he helped write a song.

When Bert Fitzgibbon came to him with the lyric of a song called "You Can't Stop Your Heart from Beating" young Christie most enthusiastically set to work to put music to it, but now he's sorry. It happened this way —Christie occupied the adjoining room to a newly married couple who were very much in love.

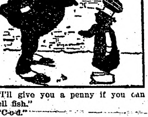
The husband had learned Christie's song and all day long he sang it to his bride. In the morning before breakfast his accordion plaited tenor voice warbled "You Can't Stop Your Heart from Beating for the Girl You Love." After lunch it was the same and as a good night solo he rendered it.

The last straw was added to the camel's back when the bride learned the song and the love-struck couple sang the song in barber shop harmony. This was too much for Christie and he left the hotel, sorry that he had ever written the song.

Passing a neighboring drug store, an idea struck him, and he entered and purchased a bottle of carbolic acid. Wrapping it up in a neat package he presented it through the bellboy to the honeymooners with a note that simply read:

"This will stop your heart from beating. Use it!"

CAUGHT.



"I'll give you a penny if you can spell fish."

"C-o-d."

"That ain't fish."

"What is it, then?"

Wagner Fooled the Critics.

Here is a story of Wagner's visit to London in 1855: After the first Philharmonic concert the critics reproached him for conducting a Beethoven symphony without the score. At the second concert, to satisfy his audience, Wagner had a "partition" on his desk, which he frequently consulted. The critics declared the improvement was marked. The score, however, was Rossini's "Barbier de Seville."

CATARRH IN HEAD.

Pe-ru-na—Pe-ru-na.

MR. WM. A. PRESSER.

MR. WILLIAM A. PRESSER, 1722 Third Ave., Moline, Ill., writes:

"I have been suffering from catarrh in the head for the past two months and tried innumerable so-called remedies without avail. No one knows how I have suffered not only from the disease itself, but from mortification when in company of friends or strangers.

"I have used two bottles of your medicine for a short time only, and it effected a complete medical cure, and what is better yet, the disease has not returned.

"I can most emphatically recommend Peruna to all sufferers from this disease."

Mr. A. Thompson, Box 65, R. R. 1, Martel, Ohio, writes: "When I began your treatment my eyes were inflamed, nose was stopped up half of the time, and was sore and scabby. I could not rest at night on account of continual hawking and spitting.

"I had tried several remedies and was about to give up, but thought I would try Peruna.

"After I had taken about one-third of a bottle I noticed a difference. I am now completely cured, after suffering with catarrh for eighteen years.

"I think if those who are afflicted with catarrh would try Peruna they would never regret it."

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. C. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County linnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per ear in advance. If not paid in dvance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30, 05, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. nder the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

There was eight inches of snow t Portland Oregon January 8th, nd the natives think that a big arthquake must have turnd the arth upside down

And now comes the news that Polk county farmer has been warded third prize for oats at he Omeha Exposition, in a con est open to the world. Another tep to the front for Northern linnesota.

Representative Opsal has in roduced a bill to locate the next State Normal School at Bemidji. Vell we expected that, and we up here in Red Lake county can have the honor of putting up the swiftest cat and dog fight that you ever saw in your life, among our selves, and while the cats and dogs are fighting the mon key runs off with the cheese.

It would not be a bad invest ment for the state of Minnesota to make an appropiation suffici nt to build a bridge across the Red Lake River in eastern Red Lake county, as the investment would be returnd to them, with big interest in a few years, in the improvement and building up of he country.

With three degrees below zero he people of Texas must have ufferd terribly with the cold if you want to hear a man from Norther Minnesota sware that be s going to freeze to death, send him far enough south to strike one of them south westers of rain and snow, with the weather at zero, and you can hear his teeth chatter for half a mile. Nice and warm down there; oh yes.

A representative in the legis atnre that does not want to do anything for certain parts of his district is always looking for an opprotunity to "hedge." If the people want him to do anything for them he always goes hunting through the swams to see if he can not find some one, that do not know what they are talking ab out to be oppossed to it. That used to be the game played by representative's Krostue of Polk and Simons of Red Lake counti e's, but they are not playing it in the legislature any more. They played out their hand and retired You bet they retired, from pub lic life, and are not "hedgeing" in the legislature any more.

GOOD FOR OUR SIDE.

Senetor A.D. Stephens, of Polk county was given the leadership of the committe on finance in the state senate, and the Crookston Times says: "The chairmanship of the committee on finance gives the holder of it practicly the leadership in the upper house of the legislature and is considered next to the lieutenant governor. Through this committee pases all the bills involving appropri ations and he is considered to a large extent the "watch dog of the treasury."

Senator Stephens will be in a position during the present session to take care of northwestern Minnesota and see that it secures its share of the appropriations made by the legislature. There is no question but that his success in landing the position should be recieved with considerable elation in Crookston and throughout the county."

Anyone liveing in northern Minnesota who has paid any at tention to the doings of the leg islature for the past three sessi ons will heartily indorse the ab ove and say, good for northern Minnesota, for he is the right man in the right place, who always looks after the best interests of his part of the state.

FUGITIVE SPAR BUOYS

Rescuing These Stray "Sticks" Is Perilous Work.

SIGNBOARDS OF CHANNELS.

How These Mariners' Guides Are Anchored and How They Sometimes Break Away and Are Hunted Down by the Lighthouse Service Tenders.

When the winter gales begin to blow, the tenders of the lighthouse service turn their stems toward northern seas to hunt stray spar buoys. Of all the work of the coast patrol this, perhaps, is the most exposed to danger. Pulling these "signboards" out of the sea or putting them over side is like "yanking" spiles with a ton derrick on a heaving platform.

Although passengers in the boats that ply the waters of New York harbor, Long Island sound and other waterways along the coast see many spar buoys, they give them little thought. With the man at the wheel it is different. Color, shape and size give him volumes of information, and he looks upon the spar buoy as an invaluable guide.

In the government inventories they are listed as "sticks," although they are sometimes sixty feet long. They are anchored in the bed of a river or harbor channel, their "up ends" painted in such a way as to indicate to the observer the formation of the bottom. On the margin of government charts explanatory notes tell one that vessels approaching a harbor from the sea should leave red buoys with even numbers on the right and black, with odd numbers on the left side of channels. Black and white striped buoys, the stripes running perpendicularly, mean an obstruction in the channel, with room to get by on either side. If balls or cages ornament the "up ends" it means a turning point, the color and number indicating the course.

These sticks are put down with heavy iron anchors and sometimes great stone weights. One would suppose that so fixed they never could get away, but they do, and it is a job to find them. Ice floes break their cables and sometimes crush the sticks; storms pull them loose, and ships in the fog or darkness foul them and tear them from their hold on the bottom. Not infrequently ships use them as moorings, although this is forbidden.

There are instances where the anchors of a spar buoy have been secure enough to hold against ice pressure and in a narrow channel cause a dangerous jam. But such cases are few, for when this happens the weight of the ice usually becomes so great as to force the buoy under, and the pack slides on.

If the ice pack gets under the buoy so as to lift it there is only one result—the parting of the cable. Then off starts the spar upon a journey maybe of thousands of miles, perhaps of only one or two. It may fetch up on the nearest shore, and it may drift to the coast of Europe or into the southern seas. On the Irish coast today is one which traveled there in six weeks from New York harbor. It was presented to the British government by the United States and now floats off the coast on which it stopped after its long Atlantic journey.

If it is a long chase to find the stray buoys it is even a more difficult task to recover the anchors left behind by the fugitive spars. Tenders that sail out of the harbor have a derrick and tackle rigged in front of the pilot house, with a donkey engine to lift and pull. The location of every buoy is marked on the charts to a degree, so it is not difficult to find the desired position. The serious business is dragging for the anchor and after grappling with it to hoist it aboard ship. Here the donkey engine comes into play. Another hazard is to pull a spar buoy aboard. If a sea happens to be running the captain of the tender has to use extreme care. Should a big roller get under him and suddenly tighten the lifting chains either they would give way or the weight would come up too fast, the crew in either case being placed in jeopardy of their lives.

But the risk these men run is all in the day's work. To them a job in a seaway on a lee shore is regarded as no more monotonous task than repainting a row of buoys on land.—New York Post.

The Brevity of Ballarat.

It was in Ballarat that Mark Twain found the local language so puzzling at first, the good people of the place deeming life too short to dawdle in their talk.

The mayor called on the American humorist and laconically said "K'm." Then when Mark Twain gave him a cigar he simply said "Q."

Subsequent inquiry revealed that these terms were Ballaratese for "Welcome" and "thank you."—London [illegible]

Writers' Cramp.

Writers' cramp is a serious matter to people whose work requires that they use a pen very much, while for the unaccustomed writer who takes an afternoon off now and then to catch up with her correspondence it is, to say the least, very discouraging. The trouble is more than muscular in this kind of cramp. Very often a low, nervous condition will cause it. Then one should take it as a warning that the system is run down and needs general toning up. Very often, however, the trouble is all in the way you hold your pen.

Children now in school are not likely to be troubled with writers' cramp because they are taught to hold the pen lightly and make all the movements from the arm instead of the hand. The old fashioned method which most of us learned of holding the pen between the thumb and forefinger is also very likely to encourage a cramp. The muscles become tense and hard, until finally they contract so much that all control over them is lost. The pen should be held between the first two fingers, well up toward the joint. The trouble may often be relieved by putting the hand and wrist into the hottest water one can stand —Boston Herald.

Wolves of the Sea.

Of all the inhabitants of the ocean few are more destructive than the sea wolf, a kind of dolphin which attains when full grown a length of fourteen feet and a weight of 3,000 pounds.

A swift swimmer, it is quick in its movements, cunning as a fox and has an insatiable appetite. It feeds on the young of seal, whale and walrus and also on the tongue of the adult whale.

When a mother walrus perceives a sea wolf, she endeavors to throw her cub on to an iceberg if one is near. Failing this, she gets it on top of her head and swims with it above water. But this is vain. Diving far below, the fish of prey comes up with tremendous force, striking the frantic mother a terrific blow and jolting the cub off her head into the water. Here it falls an easy victim to the assailant and is soon devoured.

In its work of destruction the sea wolf is frequently aided by the thrasher, a fish which can deliver a terrible blow with its tail.

Got Something For Nothing.

Mark Twain told how he got something for nothing one day in the early sixties when he needed the money. He walked into a hotel and was petting a strange dog. General Nelson A. Miles, who chanced to be present, offered him $10 for the canine.

"To be frank," said the humorist to General Miles, "I haven't really got any right to sell you this animal, but if you'll give me $3 you may take the pup away when I'm not looking, and I'll not tell who took it."

The bargain was closed, and General Miles took the dog to his room. A moment later the dog's owner inquired for his pet, and Mark Twain offered to find the animal for $3. The humorist then went to General Miles' room and explained all, had the dog returned to him, gave the army officer back his money and returned the canine to its original owner, thereby making $3.

The Bat.

Nearly all bats have the faculty of hibernating. Their hibernation, however, is not perfect—that is to say, that when the warm days occur in the middle of winter they wake up, together with the insects which are their food. Still theirs is a true hibernation trance, differing from sleep, with very low rate of pulse, heart action and respiration. Probably they would endure immersion in water for an hour or two without drowning, as other hibernators have been found to do.

Judgeing from the looks of our school register, if the attendance is not better the next tearm of school than it was this past one, there will be only five months school next year, instead of eight months. There is no one in the district that objects to haveing eight months school if the scholars will only attend, but there is no use to hire a first grade teacher at a salery of fifty dollars a month to teach to empty benches.

The Clearwater Farmers Telephone Company will soon extend their line to Malone and from thera to Sunbeam. There seems to be no use for the people liveing on the south side of the river to try to do anything in connection with Highlanding, as the men that claim to be business men up there seem to want them to stay on their own side of the river. So we may as well take the "hint" as to hang around until we are kicked.

Mr Ole Hoved, of McIntosh passed by here Tuesday on his way to Anton to visit his sister Mrs. Joseph Wikum, whoes husband Joseph Wikum is in the insane hospital at Fergus Falls. This seems to be a sad case, as Mr. Wikum seems to be of sound mind when he is in the hospital, but as soon as he gets out and begins to drink intoxicating liquor he becomes so insane that he is dangerous, and the worst part is, that when the affect of the liquor leaves him the insanity part stays It seems that he would be a good subject for the probibition party to use for an argument.

BOAD OF DIRECTORS QUALIFY.

The newly elected boar of directors of the Red Lake River Transportation Co. met at Highlanding yesterday and elected the following officers for this year: President, Joseph Duchamp, Vice president, W. G Hunt. Secretary and treasurer, Stephen Singer. The following qualified as Directors. Joseph Duchamp. Peter Hedeen. Walter McAndress, P. Parno, Stephen Singer, P Sullivan, and W. G. Hunt. The board will meet at Kratka, on Tuesday February 2nd, 1909, to fully organize and prepare for the seasons business. It was found that the neat little sum of $121.75 cents was pocketed by men employed on the boats, owing to the neglect of A. Ellingson secretary to make them turn over the money to the Company every trip, as he was instructed to do by the board of Directors.

Hotel Grafters.

The proprietor of one of the largest hotels in New York, speaking of the uses made by nonpaying customers of his house, said to a rural guest a few days ago: "We have a large number of patrons from whom we never collect a cent, although we have no such thing as a free list. They come here in the morning, pick up a castoff paper, which they read, keeping an eye open for another, which they grab as soon as it is dropped. After reading awhile they stand at the ticker, often giving long lectures to their fellows on financial conditions and stock possibilities. The overcoat becomes burdensome, and it is taken to the check room, where its owner knows it will be perfectly safe. Then, if they can tear themselves from the ticker, letters are written on our stationery. They do not use our telephones because we charge an extra 5 cents for the call, but they carry home matches, toothpicks, blank cards and blotters and use up the soap in our lavatories. They also take generous nibbles of the cheese and crackers in the cafe. The strangest part of all is this—that the majority of this class are well to do and highly respectable, and on that account we do not shut them out."—New York Tribune.

Lobster Fare.

Hungry lobsters in their natural state seldom refuse fish of any kind, whether dead or alive. The favorite bait with fishermen is fresh or stale herring, but even shark meat is used at a pinch. Lobsters also eat small crabs, sea urchins and mussels. Indeed, there are few forms of marine life suitable for food which they refuse. Lobsters sometimes capture fish alive, striking them with the smaller of their two great claws, which for this reason fishermen call the "quick" or "fish" claw, but they will live for a long time, especially when confined without taking any food. If you tether the lobster by the large claws, you will find that, like the muskrat, he will go off some fine morning, leaving only his legs in the trap, for this animal has the remarkable power of "shooting a claw," or amputating its limbs, and, what is still more wonderful, of growing new ones from the stumps left behind.—St. Nicholas.

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

The Microscope.

There is good reason to believe that the magnifying power of transparent media with convex surfaces was very early known. A convex lens of rock crystal was found by Layard among the ruins of the palace of Nimrud. And it is pretty certain that after the invention of glass hollow spheres blown of that material were commonly used as magnifiers. The perfection of gem cutting shown in ancient gems, especially in those of very minute size, could not have been attained without the use of such aids to the eye, and there can be little doubt that the artificers who could execute those wonderful works could also shape and polish the magnifiers best suited for their own or others' use.—New York American.

Rifled Firearms.

In the South Kensington museum are several wheel lock muskets with rifled barrels made during the reign of Charles I., if not earlier. Such barrels were then usually called "screwed." Zachary Grey in a note on "Hudibras," part 1, canto 3, line 533, says that Prince Rupert showed his skill as a marksman by hitting twice in succession the vane on St. Mary's Stafford at sixty yards with a "screwed" pistol.—London Notes and Queries.

SPECIAL OFFER:

Marlin

THE Marlin Model 1894 is a medium light weight repeating rifle, a well proportioned, finely balanced gun with all the advantages and comforts of the Marlin solid-top, side-ejecting construction. It is quick and easy of operation, accurate up to 300 yards and a very pleasant gun to carry and to shoot.

For settled districts and farming country where the shooting at woodchucks, badgers, foxes, 'coons, hawks, etc., is at ranges from 100 to 200 yards, the .25-20 and .32-20 rifles with the black and low-pressure smokeless loads cannot be equalled for accuracy and safety. The factory ammunition for the Model '94 rifles is cheap, and can be reloaded at very small cost.

The up-to-date sportsman needs the "Marlin Book" every day in the year. It contains 136 pages of live stuff for the man who loves a good gun, and wants to know everything about it. FREE for 3 stamps postage.

MIX FOR RHEUMATISM

The following is a never failing remedy for rheumatism, and if followed up it will effect a complete cure of the very worst cases: "Mix one-half pint of good whiskey with one ounce of Toris Compound and add one ounce Syrup Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and at bedtime." The ingredients can be procured at any drug store and easily mixed at home.

Used Dolls to Set Fashions.

Long before women's newspapers were started, and fashion plates in their modern form were thought of, women derived their knowledge of the fashions from dolls dressed in modern costumes, which were sent from one country to another, more especially from Paris, which then as now, was the leading center of the mode.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Camden, N.J.—"It is with pleasure that I add my testimonial to your already long list—hoping that it may induce others to avail themselves of this valuable medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered from terrible headaches, pain in my back and right side, was tired and nervous, and so weak I could hardly stand. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored me to health and made me feel like a new person, and it shall always have my praise."—MRS. W. P. VALENTINE, 902 Lincoln Avenue, Camden, N. J.

Gardiner, Me.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—MRS. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner Me.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

"All are loud in their praises of the great crops and that wonderful country."—Extract from correspondence National Editorial Association of August, 1908.

It is now possible to secure a homestead of 160 acres free and another 160 acres at $3.00 per acre. Hundreds have paid the cost of their farms (if purchased) and then had a balance of from $10.00 to $12.00 per acre from one crop. Wheat, barley, oats, flax—all do well. Mixed farming is a great success and dairying is highly profitable. Excellent climate, splendid schools and churches, railways bring most every district within easy reach of market. Wide Open Tax Valid.

St. Paul.—By deciding that the wide open tax amendment had been adopted the state supreme court opened the way for a number of new taxation bills, the most prominent of which is the tonnage tax, which will be strongly urged at the present session of the legislature. The decision also strengthens the position of the tax commission and removes the doubt as to the constitutionality of the mortgage registry tax.

This amendment which is now declared to have been adopted in November, 1906, was also voted on last fall and was lost. It grants to the legislature power to impose taxes of any sort so long as equality in the several classes is maintained, although the old exemptions of public institutions, church property and cemeteries are not disturbed.

Members of the legislature were pleased with the decision or otherwise, according to their nearness to the source of the iron ore supply. There was the greatest interest in the decision in the capitol. It opens the way for the special message the governor promised in his regular message.

The litigation over the amendments is peculiar and brought up questions never before determined in this state. Justice Elliott went into the subject to the extent of 17,000 words, discussing all previous cases bearing on this one.

The state canvassing board reported two years ago that the wide open tax amendment had been carried and the good roads amendment lost, but it was discovered that the numbers of the amendments on the ballots and on the tally sheets had been reversed, so that votes intended for the good roads amendment might have been credited to the tax amendment.

Accidentally Shot; Both Legs Frozen.

Barnesville.—While Henry Baxter of Baker was out hunting rabbits he saw what he supposed was a dog lying beside the railway track. He fired a shot and to his surprise a man got up where he supposed the dog lay. He could not speak a word of English and started down the track until he came to a farm house, went in and asked to stay for the night.

The farmer could not keep him, so he went to an old vacant shed and remained there for a day. During this time the cold spell raged.

Finding it too cold in the vacant house he went to another farmhouse and asked shelter, saying he was willing to stay in the barn. The farmer told him he would freeze and advised him to go to Barnesville. Instead of doing so he went back to the vacant house and remained there until neighbors found him Friday morning with both legs and other parts of his body badly frozen.

He was brought into town and there appears to be no hope for his recovery.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul.—The search for the six race horses stolen from the barns of W. G. Carling, one mile north of the state fair grounds, Thursday night, as yet has proved futile.

Minneapolis—The popular Irish singing comedian, Fiske O'Hara will be seen at the Bijou Opera House, Minneapolis, the week of January 17th, in the Irish romantic comedy drama, "Dion O'Dare," the same vehicle in which he made a pronounced hit last season.

Thief River Falls.—The city will in all probability continue its policy of municipal ownership of its public utilities by taking steps to secure immediate possession of the local telephone system now owned and operated by one of the largest telephone companies in the Northwest. It is found that this concern cannot give the long distance connection that the wholesale, banking, milling and other growing business interests demand.

St. Paul.—At a meeting of St. Paul Masons in the Auditorium $3,000 of the $125,000 still needed to complete the new Masonic Temple at Sixth street and Smith avenue, was raised by subscription. The estimated cost of the building, the foundations of which are already nearly finished, will be $109,000, exclusive of the heating, lighting plant or furnishings, and the lodges wish to get $412,000 with which to go on with the work.

St. Paul.—A Farmers' Short Course will be held at the School of Agriculture at St. Anthony Park for one month commencing Friday, Jan. 15th. The course consists of lectures, demonstrations and judging of stock and grains. The most practical subjects connected with farm life will be discussed. The course includes nearly all the farm subjects taught at the School of Agriculture. No entrance examination is given and there is no age limit. The expenses are low. It is hoped that there may be a large attendance of farmers.

St. Cloud.—The financial statement of Stearns county for the year 1909 was completed by County Auditor Crever, and shows that the county is in good condition. On January 1 there was $42,464.50 in the treasury, against $37,994.11 last year, a gain of $4,500. The total receipts during the year were $555,643.28 and the total disbursements $523,671.38.

Duluth.—Anton O. Lindens, postmaster at Big Fork, is $800 short in his accounts. The shortage was discovered by Inspector Monroe, and the postmaster will probably be removed.

Was Soon Cured of Dread Humor.

"I contracted eczema and suffered intensely for about ten months. At times I thought I would scratch myself to pieces. My face and arms were covered with large red patches, so that I was ashamed to go out. I was advised to go to a doctor who was a specialist in skin diseases, but I received very little relief. I tried every known remedy, with the same results. I thought I would never get better until a friend of mine told me to try the Cuticura Remedies. So I tried them, and after four or five applications of Cuticura Ointment I was relieved of my unbearable itching. I used two sets of the Cuticura Remedies, and I am completely cured. How to Know the Trees.

There is an auctioneer whose "gift of gab" and native wit draw many purchasers to his sales, but sometimes he is the subject rather than the cause of amusement.

The man's name is O. A. Kelley. Not long ago he had to sell, among other things, a lot of pine logs, and the day before the sale he went over them and marked the end of each log with his initials.

On the day of the auction an Irishman came along and immediately noticed the logs with the letters on them.

"O. A. K.," he read, loud enough for all round to hear. "Begorra, if 'tis not just like Kelley to deceive us into belaving thim pine logs are oak!"—Springfield Republican.

HER MOTHER-IN-LAW

Proved a Wise, Good Friend.

A young woman out in Ia. found a wise, good friend in her mother-in-law, jokes notwithstanding. She writes:

"It is two years since we began using Postum in our house. I was greatly troubled with my stomach, complexion was blotchy and yellow. After meals I often suffered sharp pains and would have to lie down. My mother often told me it was the coffee I drank at meals. But when I'd quit coffee I'd have a severe headache.

"While visiting my mother-in-law I remarked that she always made such good coffee, and asked her to tell me how. She laughed and told me it was easy to make good 'coffee' when you use Postum.

"I began to use Postum as soon as I got home, and now we have the same good 'coffee' (Postum) every day, and I have no more trouble. Indigestion is a thing of the past, and my complexion has cleared up beautifully.

"My grandmother suffered a great deal with her stomach. Her doctor told her to leave off coffee. She then took tea but that was just as bad.

"She finally was induced to try Postum which she has used for over a year. She traveled during the winter over the greater part of Iowa, visiting, something she had not been able to do for years. She says she owes her present good health to Postum."

WESTERN CANADA'S 1908 CROP

WILL GIVE TO THE FARMERS OF WEST A SPLENDID RETURN.

The following interesting bit of information appeared in a Montreal paper:

"Last December, in reviewing the year 1907, we had to record a wheat harvest considerably smaller in volume than in the previous year. Against ninety millions in 1906 the wheat crop of the West in 1907 only totaled some seventy-one million bushels, and much of this of inferior quality. But the price averaged high, and the total result to the farmers was not unprofitable. This year we have to record by far the largest wheat crop in the country's history. Estimates vary as to the exact figure, but it is certainly not less than one hundred million bushels, and in all probability it reaches one hundred and ten million bushels. The quality, moreover, is good, and the price obtained very high, so that in all respects the Western harvest of 1908 has been a memorable one. The result upon the commerce and finance of the country is already apparent. The railways are again reporting increases in traffic, the general trade of the community has become active after twelve months' quiet, and the banks are loosening their purse strings to meet the demand for money. The prospects for 1909 are excellent. The credit of the country never stood as high. The immigrants of 1907 and 1908 have now been absorbed into the industrial and agricultural community, and wise regulations are in force to prevent too great an influx next year. Large tracts of new country will be opened up by the Grand Trunk Pacific both in East and West. If the seasons are favorable the Western wheat crop should reach one hundred and twenty million bushels. The prospects for next year seem very fair." An interesting letter is received from Cardston, Alberta (Western Canada), written to an agent of the Canadian Government, any of whom will be pleased to advise correspondents of the low rates that may be allowed intending settlers.

"Cardston, December 21st, 1908.

"Dear Sir: Now that my threshing is done, and the question 'What Will the Harvest Be,' has become a certainty, I wish to report to you the results thereof, believing it will be of interest to you. You know I am only a novice in the agricultural line, and do not wish you to think I am boasting because of my success, for some of my neighbors have done much better than I have, and I expect to do much better next year myself. My winter wheat went 53 bushels per acre—and graded No. 1. My spring wheat went 48⅜ bushels per acre, and graded No. 1, My oats went 97 bushels per acre, and are fine as any oats I ever saw. My stock is all nice and fat, and are out in the field picking their own three square meals a day. The weather is nice and warm, no snow—and very little frost. This, in short, is an ideal country for farmers and stockmen. The stock requires no shelter or winter feeding, and cattle fatten on this grass and make the finest kind of beef, better than corn fed cattle in Ills. Southwestern Alberta will soon be known as the farmers' paradise; and I am only sorry I did not come here five years ago. Should a famine ever strike North America, I will be among the last to starve—and you can count on that.

"I thank you for the personal assistance you rendered me while coming in here, and I assure you I shall not soon forget your kind offices."

CURES COLDS QUICKLY

A never failing home remedy for coughs and colds is made from the following formula to be mixed at home.

"Two ounces of glycerine, one-half ounce of Concentrated pine compound, one-half pint of good whiskey; mix and shake thoroughly; use in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours."

Thus will cure any cough that is curable, or break up an acute cold in twenty-four hours. The ingredients all can be gotten at any drug store.

The Concentrated pine is a pine product refined for medical use and comes only in half ounce bottles, each enclosed in a round case, which is airtight, but be sure that it is labeled "Concentrated."

Friendly Advice.

"If I ever marry," said the bachelor who was beginning to be old, "I shall be careful to pick out a lady whom I can treat as my equal."

"Oh, say, old chap," answered the married man. "I wouldn't do that if I were you. I can tell you from experience that a woman who would submit to such treatment wouldn't be worth having around the house."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

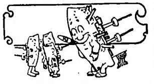
New Ships to Make Our Navy Lead All



WASHINGTON.—The navy department experts figure that the United States navy will be the first in rank in the world when the four new battleships proposed by Secretary Newberry have been completed.

The approximate time of the completion of these ships is the close of the year 1911. By that date there will have been completed these four: The Delaware and Dakota and the Florida and Utah.

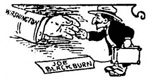
The specific points made by the experts, however, is that the four new ships which have been suggested are to be of 25,000-tons displacement each and will carry eight 14-inch guns. Such a squadron of battleships will be unlike and superior to anything in naval history, both as to displacement and to main battery.

The astounding but absolutely true statement is made by the navy experts that the 14-inch guns will be effective at ten miles. It is also stated by these experts that Great Britain, after the appropriation by congress for the four proposed battleships, will never be able to regain its lead in modern battleships over the United States. England's greatest proposed battleship, the Fondroyant, is, according to the details in the United States naval bureau of intelligence, inferior to the Florida or the Utah.

The report that Great Britain was building a 13.5 gun has been run down by the naval authorities here and they state that it is not true. It is also stated that there is no foundation whatever for the report that Germany is building, or projecting even, five battleships, each of which is to carry 12 12-inch guns.

It is admitted now that the United States stands second on the list of naval powers, and this is largely because the United States naval relative power depends on modern ships against which twenty or more of the British so-called battleships do not count and are not to be taken into count, because not one of them could approach within five miles of any of the United States battleships even of the Alabama class. Above that class in the United States are the South Carolina, Michigan and, of course, the American Dreadnaughts are all above that class. In other words, the United States has ship for ship, built and building, better and more powerful ships than Great Britain has built and is building for the next three years.

Hearty Welcome for "Joe" Blackburn



IT is pleasant to have Senator Blackburn back in our midst again, to see his great, stalwart form swinging through the streets, to meet his semi-cynical, semi-humorous smile and to feel his hearty hand clasp, but it is difficult to think of him in any environment save that of the senate chamber where he passed so many years. There has never been a member of that distinguished body more frankly, more genuinely and generally popular than "Joe" Blackburn. No matter how widely one differed with him in politics, it was impossible not to like him, for there is nothing about him to dislike. He is a prince of good fellows, a generous friend and a magnanimous foe. When the battle is on he fights with all the fight there is in him, but he is as quick to forgive and forget as he is to fight, and once the hatchet is buried, it is never resurrected.

It was with regret that Mr. Blackburn left the senate, but he has been almost as happy in his new field as on his old stamping ground and in the short year and a half of his service as one of the commissioners of the Isthmian canal he has become as popular in Panama as he was in Washington, and the style of life in the old Spanish city is especially pleasing to the silver-tongued Kentuckian. As everybody knows the United States government houses the public servants in Panama in magnificent style. The state in which they live, indeed, approaches that formerly enjoyed by the Spanish grandees in that part of the world, and the role of a Spanish grandee admirably suits the former senator from the Bluegrass state, who is so adjustable and so versatile that he is always at home no matter what his surroundings and so much at home is he in Panama that his friends both here and there hope he will be allowed to remain during "good behavior."

Mint "Makes Money" for Your Uncle Sam

THE director of the mint has "made money" for the United States in more ways than one. He is rejoicing because the government made a profit during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1908, of $10,541,371 on the coinage of silver, nickel and one-cent bronze pieces.

This represents the difference between the price paid by the government for the metals and their coinage value.

The original deposits of gold bullion in the mints and assay offices during the fiscal year amounted to $207,415,984 and uncurrent United States gold coin of the face value of $4,020,668 was received for recoinage.

Silver bullion purchased for subsidiary silver coinage during the year aggregated 18,819,279 standard ounces, and mutilated and uncurrent United States silver coin of the face value of $1,162,982 was recoined.

The coinage executed by the mints during the fiscal year 1908 amounted to $197,238,377 in gold, of which $106,182,420 were in double eagles, and $4,829,060 in eagles of the designs prepared by the American sulptor, the late Augustus Sain Gaudens.

The amount of subsidiary silver coin executed was $16,530,477.

Alcohol School Opened by Government

THE government has now opened its alcohol school in the city of Washington for the instruction of the people of the United States in proper methods of making and using the denatured product.

For this purpose a model still has been erected close by the department of agriculture which is big enough to work up 25 bushels of corn a day, converting that quantity of grain into 75 gallons of 95 per cent. alcohol—that is to say, 95 per cent. pure. The plant represents the smallest outfit that can be conducted profitably on a commercial scale.

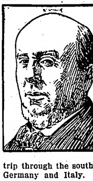
The farmers cannot very well see it for themselves, so arrangements have been made by which they may learn about it. Agricultural experts from the experiment stations in every one of the states are to go to Washington, examine the alcohol-making outfit, see how it works and listen to a course of lectures explaining its management. It will be their business when they go home to teach the farmers how to put up and how to operate plants of this character.

Inasmuch as such a plant could not be erected for less than $2,500 it is obvious that the ordinary farmer would not be able to afford to construct one of the kind. But—and here is the point—a group of farmers representing a small neighborhood might do so.

In France there are 27,000 farmer distillers who make alcohol for industrial purposes from molasses and sugar beets. It is high time that this idea was turned to profitable account in the United States. Rotten apples, frost-bitten potatoes, stale watermelons, cornstalks and cobs and every other kind of vegetable refuse are available for the purpose.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

REACHES FOUR-SCORE MARK



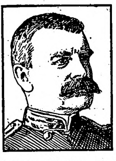
President James Burrill Angell, the grand old man of the University of Michigan, who celebrated his eightieth birthday a few days ago, has been at the head of Michigan's state school of learning for the last 37 years. Although Dr. Angell has passed the allotted time for man to live, his ruddy complexion and his youthful sprightliness belie his advanced years.

James B. Angell was born in Scituate, Rhode Island, January 7, 1829. He matriculated at Brown university in September, 1845, graduating four years later with the highest honors of his class. After graduating Dr. Angell taught for a year. Then his health began to fail, too close application to his studies began telling, and he gave up his teaching, and his studies, and lived an out of door life for a year, taking a horseback trip through the south. After the trip Dr. Angell spent two years in France, Germany and Italy. From this foreign residence he was recalled to the United States to accept the chair in modern languages in Brown university. In 1860 he resigned this professorship to become editor of the Providence Journal. After six years spent in charge of that publication, he resigned to accept the presidency of the University of Vermont, with which college he was connected till he came to the University of Michigan as its president in 1871. The presidency of Michigan was offered to Dr. Angell two years before that time and refused by him.

For the last 37 years, Dr. Angell's brilliant mind, great strength, indomitable courage, and boundless affection have been given freely to the institution of which he has been the head, the leader.

Nor is Dr. Angell known only as the head of the leading educational institution in the middle west. In 1880 he was appointed minister to China, at a time when the greatest diplomacy was needed, at a time when many annoying commercial questions arose and when the regulation of the Chinese immigration must be attempted.

REACHES AGE LIMIT

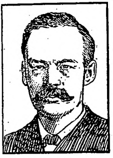


Though Rear Admiral Caspar F. Goodrich reached the age limit for active service the other day he will continue for some time as commandant of the New York navy yard, where he succeeded the late Rear Admiral Coghlan a year ago. Secretary of the Navy Newberry requested Rear Admiral Goodrich to remain at the navy yard long enough to complete the scheme of consolidation of the departments at the yard which is being worked out according to the admiral's own plans.

Rear Admiral Goodrich is one of the best known officers in the navy. He has the distinction of being the officer who directed the last naval engagement in the war with Spain, the fight at Manzanillo, Cuba. He also commanded the expedition which first drew the fire of the batteries at Santiago. On that occasion he was in charge of the work of cutting the cable connections with the besieged city.

Rear Admiral Goodrich was appointed to the naval academy from Connecticut and was graduated as the first honor man of the class of '64. From 1865 to 1867 he was attached to the steam frigate Colorado, at that time the flagship of the European squadron. During the Tel-el-Kebir expedition he was the American attache on the staff of Viscount Wolseley.

FRIEND OF LABRADOR

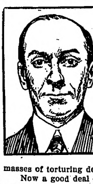


"Grenfell of Labrador," who is declared by Lord Strathcona to be "the most useful man in the North American continent," has come to the United states to deliver a series of lectures, the proceeds of which he will devote to his philanthropic work in the chilly northland. He expects to raise $100,000 through his lectures, and the sum will go into the proposed fisherman's institute in St. John's.

Dr. Wilfred Thomason Grenfell is preacher, teacher, physician, surgeon, magistrate, policeman, navigator, pilot, charity commissioner, orphans' guardian, grand almoner for the whole northern seaboard, wreck investigator, cartographer, rescuer of imperiled fishermen, salvager of stranded craft—in a word, he is a peregrinating providence to the desolate region that claims his life and works. He has raised money and built it into hospitals, co-operative stores and sawmills, launches for the rapid transportation of the sick and injured to the hospitals, and in various other excellent ways.

Coming to Labrador first in 1892, Grenfell found 3,000 permanent residents and 30,000 fisher-folk who came from Newfoundland for eight months of the year, all without religious or medical aid and in the clutches of mercenary traders who advanced them fishing outfits at enormous prices and took the season's catch in return. Men and women were in hopeless bondage to the traders, children were barefooted and naked in zero temperature, parents had to borrow each other's clothes and education was unknown. Single-handed Grenfell set out to change all this. He preaches, doctors, teaches, advises, comforts and cares for young and old. He has revolutionized the whole section. He has been honored by President Roosevelt, King Edward, Oxford university and others.

LIGHTENED CENSUS WORK



James Powell is the chief mechanical expert of the United States census bureau at Washington. And in the midst of the rush and hurry and confusion incidental to making preparations for the taking of the next census in a year or so, the bureau, from the chief down to the department bosses, is enthusiastically grateful that Mr. Powell exists and that he happens to be holding his particular job.

The taking of a nation's census is a gigantic operation at the best, particularly when the nation to be numbered is as large and many-raced as our own. It involves a maddening amount of figuring and adding, indexing and assorting, until a host of expert employes live on mathematical stunts for many months—eating figures, drinking numerals and breathing long, involved masses of torturing decimals and the like.

Now a good deal of this will be changed, for Mr. Powell has invented a new machine. Just what this machine is, or what it will do, it not given out from the bureau. On the contrary, it is most carefully concealed and guarded by armed men. But it will do a great deal, for it is to contrive more heretofore impossible jobs with figures and indexes and registers and all that sort of thing than the mind of inventive man has ever before conceived in cold steel and tightened springs until now. And Mr. Powell is being given credit for doing one of the most marvelous things yet done, and halving the burden of the census work.

Gentle Sex in Gotham Big Tax Payers

$ TAX
12,000,000

NEW YORK.—This city's tax assessment rolls for 1909, which were opened for public inspection the other day, as the charter prescribes, form a mine of ammunition for the militant suffragette.

They reveal the fact that the sex which has no vote is called on by the male oppressor in the person of the tax assessor to pay more than half the money the city expects to collect on personal taxes, and also is conspicuous among the wealthy property owners, who must pay increased taxes on their real estate.

Six of the ten members of the "Million Dollar Tax club," whose members qualify by paying taxes on $1,000,000 or more of personal property, are women. They are assessed for $12,000,000 of the $22,000,000 the club members are called upon to produce. Mrs. Margaret Olivia Sage, widow of Russell Sage, shares with Andrew Carnegie the distinction of being the highest taxed member. Each is expected to pay on $5,000,000 valuation.

Considerably more than half of the one hundred and odd new names on the personal tax rolls for more than $100,000 belong to the sex the suffragette is trying to emancipate from the thraldom of man. The list reads like the roster of a society tea party.

In the real estate roster, too, the women are well to the fore. Mrs. H. C. Potter, widow of Bishop Potter, with a $500,000 assessment on her Riverside drive home. Miss Helen M. Gould and Mrs. Sage figure in it. Mrs. Ida A. Flagler, the divorced wife of the Standard Oil millionaire, who has been under the care of Dr. Carlos F. McDonald for over fifteen years because of mental trouble, is added to the list this year for $2,000,000. Why she has not been assessed before is not explained. Mrs. Flagler lives in Westchester county at an expense of $35,000 a year.

Two other women added to the "Million Dollar club" are Mrs. Florence C. Satterwhite and Mrs. Lilla B. Gilbert, daughters of the late William V. Brokaw, who inherited a fortune from their father. Each is put down for $1,500,000.

New Cult Expounded by Exclusive Set

HOW'LL IRQUVAM DO?
HUH—IT'S BETTER THAN PERCY

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER is cited as living proof of the truth of a new cult expounded recently by Mrs. Aso-Neith Cochrane to an exclusive gathering of society and business men and women at the home of Mrs. James Dunlop Smith, 34 Gramercy park. Mrs. Cochrane is founder of the Aso-Neith cryptogram, which, by the mere changing of a person's name to accord with the date of his or birth, insures success. Mrs. Cochrane merely establishes harmonious vibrations, and they do the rest.

The figure eight is the most harmonious one of all," she said. "The success of John D. Rockefeller was due to the prominent part that the figure eight or its multiples have played in his career.

The new and strange cult numbers among its disciples widely known society folk. Among those present at the Dunlop Smith home were: Lee DeForrest, inventor of the DeForrest wireless; Paulding Farnum of Tiffany & Co.; Lady Gridley of the English court, Mrs. Elizabeth Lindsay, Miss Florence Kea and Lieut. and Mrs. John Howard.

Mrs. Cochrane explained that each number up to nine was represented by a vibration and each number corresponded to a letter in the alphabet. "We can't change our last name, but we can change our given ones. If our names are out of harmony things must be adjusted. Life and health and happiness are mathematics. Therefore we can be successful if we adjust our names."

Gives Rewards for Marriages and Births

CHECKS balancing the account of Martin, the restaurant keeper, with the firm of Cupid, Stork & Co., have been forwarded to his employes who qualified for prizes last year.

"I regret that the sum was not greater, but I rejoice in being able to distribute as much as I have," Mr. Martin said as he closed his check book. His account ran as follows:

CUPID, STORK & CO.'S BILL AGAINST MARTIN.

To 8 marriages, at $100	$ 800
To 15 babies, at $50	750
No twins, at $100, or triplets, at $150.	000
1907—
To 26 marriages, at $100	2,600
To 49 babies, at $50	2,450
To one pair twins, at $100	100
Total for two years	$6,700

"It was inevitable that this year's record should fall far below 1907," added Mr. Martin. "At that time, when I announced the competition, I was employing many new cooks, clerks and waiters who married in the year and had children born to them, thereby winning awards for marriages and births, to which all my help are eligible. The old men have kept their places, the number of newcomers is small, and the result is necessarily a decrease in the number of competitors."

Mr. Martin is enthusiastic over the success which has followed his philanthropy. It has won for him the loyalty of his employes, who express their gratitude by giving the best service of which they are capable. Mr. Martin has found, he says, that married men are more contented and remain steadily in his employ.

That benefits shall not cease at the altar or the crib, Mr. Martin instituted the custom this year of sending to each couple on the anniversary of their wedding a case of liquors with which to toast the occasion.

J. B. Duke Buys Fine Home in Fifth Ave.

MR. JAMES B. DUKE, president of the American Tobacco Company, has purchased from the H. H. Cook estate, at a price said to be in the neighborhood of $1,300,000, the residence formerly occupied by Mr. Cook, at the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and Seventy-eighth street.

The dwelling, which is one of the most attractive in the Central park section, is a five-story structure of white marble and sandstone, occupying a plot 102.2x150 feet.

Mr. Cook, in 1884, purchased the entire vacant block bounded by Fifth avenue, Seventy-eighth and Seventy-ninth streets and Madison avenue, for a price said to have been $500,000. The land value to-day is estimated to be worth considerably more than $10,000,000.

He placed very stringent restrictions upon the property, selling only to persons who would occupy their own houses, and the result has been one of the best developed residential blocks in the world.

Adjoining Mr. Duke's purchase in Seventy-eighth street is the residence of H. H. Rogers, and in Fifth avenue that of Mr. Payne Whitney. At the corner of Seventy-ninth street and Fifth avenue is the home of Mr. Isaac D. Fletcher.

The house is surrounded by a spacious lawn and it is Mr. Duke's intention to build an extension in Seventy-eighth street. The general interior and exterior of the building will be remodelled along classic lines.

Mr. Duke, who married Mrs. William H. Inman of Atlanta in July, 1907, leased the James A. Burden dwelling, at Fifth avenue and Seventy-second street, in the autumn of that year, his lease being for two years at an annual rental of $35,000.

THE SUNBEAM.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

An Important Mission.

The Seneca, the first boat ever built for the purpose of destroying derelicts, was recently commissioned by the United States revenue cutter service, and sent on its mission. The derelicts which the crew of the vessel is to destroy are ships abandoned at sea. Such wrecks are one of the greatest perils that confront the navigator. They are usually so water-logged that they float even with the surface, cannot be easily distinguished in the daylight, and are unseen at night. A steamship colliding with such a wreck is always seriously injured, sometimes so badly that it sinks with all on board. The derelicts have been blown up from time to time by private ship-owners and by the government, but hereafter, says the Youth's Companion, the Seneca will devote itself to this work in that part of the Atlantic between Portland, Me., and Charleston, S. C., and the Bermudas and Sable Island. Masters of vessels are asked to report to the Maritime Exchange in New York or Philadelphia, or to the Chamber of Commerce in Boston or Baltimore when they see any derelicts, giving the latitude and longitude and the direction of the wind and sea. The commander of the Seneca will receive these reports by wireless telegraph or otherwise, and search for the wreck. When it is found, it will be blown up with guncotton or some other explosive. Masters of vessels may also call the Seneca by the wireless telegraph and notify it directly when a derelict is seen; or if they are in distress from any cause they may also summon the vessel, which is equipped with means for giving assistance to ships in need.

The whole matter of tipping is wrong. The man who is compelled to give is mulcted and the man who is asked to receive is insulted, whether he knows it or not. It may never be possible to correct the evil of tipping by legislative enactments, but it can be curtailed by individual habit. The sentiment against it is growing, says the Washington Post. People will continue to make small presents to faithful servants as long as some men are born to serve and some to be served, but the time is coming when they will do so only through choice and not from compulsion. The porter, like the waiter and the barber and the hackman, has been led to look upon the tip as his right, and one to play or fight for. In the revulsion of feeling which has come over the public because of the growing demands for tips on the part of the serving classes, the porter must suffer with his fellows.

The fur trade, once the principal industry of the great northwest, still holds an important place. And it is also up to date. In earlier times furs were brought to market mainly by human carriers and dog teams. Now modern improvements are utilized. The story from Winnipeg that a steamer of the Hudson Bay Company has been wrecked in the bay, and that a cargo of furs worth $1,500,000 has been lost, signifies the magnitude of the business done and the extent of the disaster, and also the methods now employed. The daring adventurers of the early part of last century never dreamed of running steamboats for such purposes.

Recently the Youth's Companion published a story in which a surveyor wrote to a map-publisher that "Sugar creek has entirely disappeared and may be erased from the map." The surveyor adds: "Should it appear at any time I will let you know." A real prospector writes that this is no joke to the man who travels in the arid lands; for springs do disappear and reappear. He tells of two men who died in the Death valley region because they relied on a map that had not been corrected. "Sugar creek" had gone dry and had not been "erased from the map."

Prof. Ferrero, the Italian historian, who has been giving lectures on Rome in Boston, says that America is a truer heir to the Roman republic than any European nation; that Rome taught the world the principles of commonwealth on a large scale, which only the United States is vast enough to realize. Dr. Ferrero is not pessimistic enough to press the parallel to uncomfortable conclusions, remarks the Youth's Companion, but he sees in our imperialism, our wealth and our powerful women some resemblance to a grandeur that declined although it never died.

A woman in Chicago, three times divorced, tells her sisters not to marry, as the idea is ridiculous of tying oneself to the wretches, men being merely incidental. But this is a case in which each individual wants her own experience of the absurdity of the matter, and not that of one who, for all her energetic denunciation, was not satisfied with one experience herself.

France may yet be reduced to such straits that in self-defense it will have to adopt all the orphans in the world.

PRESIDENT SENDS STRONG MESSAGE

ACCOMPANYING REPORTS OF THE CONSERVATION CONGRESS

URGES NEEDED LEGISLATION

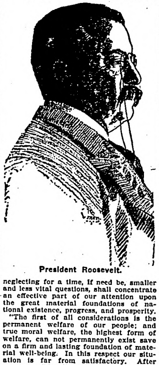
Document in a Measure Is a Defense of the Retiring Administration—Duty of the Present Generation to Its Descendants Pointed Out—Obligations of Citizenship—Urgent Need for the Development of the Country's Water Power.

Washington.—With the transmission of the report of the national conservation commission and accompanying papers, President Roosevelt also sent a message to congress. The following is a comprehensive synopsis of the document:

The president declares his entire concurrence with the statements and conclusions of the report and proceeds:

"It is one of the most fundamentally important documents ever laid before the American people. It contains the first inventory of its natural resources ever made by any nation. In condensed form it presents a statement of our available capital in material resources, which are the means of progress, and calls attention to the essential conditions upon which the perpetuity, safety and welfare of this nation now rest and must always continue to rest.

"The facts set forth in this report constitute an imperative call to action. The situation they disclose demands that we, neglecting for a time, if need be, smaller and less vital questions, shall concentrate an effective part of our attention upon the great material foundations of national existence, progress, and prosperity.



President Roosevelt.

"The first of all considerations is the permanent welfare of our people; and true moral welfare, the highest form of welfare, can not permanently exist save on a firm and lasting foundation of material well-being. In this respect our situation is far from satisfactory. After every possible allowance has been made, and when every hopeful indication has been given its full weight, the facts still give reason for grave concern. It would be unworthy of our history and our intelligence, and disastrous to our future, to shut our eyes to these facts or attempt to laugh them out of court. The people should and will rightly demand that the great fundamental questions shall be given attention by their representatives. I do not advise hasty or ill-considered action on disputed points, but I do urge, where the facts are known, where the public interest is clear, that neither indifference and inertia, nor adverse private interests, shall be allowed to stand in the way of the public good.

"The great basic facts are already well known. We know that our population is now adding about one-fifth to its numbers in ten years, and that by the middle of the present century perhaps 150,000,000 Americans, and by its end very many millions more, must be fed and clothed from the products of our soil.

"We know now that our rivers can and should be made to serve our people effectively in transportation, but that the vast expenditures for our waterways have not resulted in maintaining, much less in promoting, inland navigation. Therefore, let us take immediate steps to ascertain the reasons and to prepare and adopt a comprehensive plan for inland-waterway navigation that will result in giving the people the benefits for which they have paid but which they have not yet received. We know now that our forests are fast disappearing, that less than one-fifth of them are being conserved, and that no good purpose can be met by failing to provide the relatively small sums needed for the protection, use, and improvement of all forests still owned by the government, and to enact laws to check the wasteful destruction of the forests in private hands. There are differences of opinion as to many public questions; but the American people stand nearly as a unit for waterway development and for forest protection.

"We know now that our mineral resources once exhausted are gone forever, and that the needless waste of them costs us hundreds of human lives and nearly $300,000,000 a year. Therefore, let us undertake without delay the investigations necessary before our people will be in position, through state action or otherwise, to put an end to this huge loss and waste, and conserve both our mineral resources and the lives of the men who take them from the earth.

"This administration has achieved some things; it has sought, but has not been able, to achieve, others; it has doubtless made mistakes; but all it has done or attempted has been in the single, consistent effort to secure and enlarge the rights and opportunities of the men and women of the United States. We are trying to conserve what is good in our social system, and we are striving toward this end when we endeavor to do away with what is bad. Success may be made too hard for some if it is made too easy for others. The rewards of common industry and thrift may be too small if the rewards for others, and on the whole less valuable, qualities, are made too large, and especially if the rewards for qualities which are really, from the public standpoint, undesirable, are permitted to become too large. Our aim is so far as possible to provide such conditions that there shall be equality of opportunity where there is equality of energy, fidelity and intelligence; when there is a reasonable equality of opportunity the distribution of rewards will take care of itself.

"The unchecked existence of monopoly is incompatible with equality of opportunity. The reason for the exercise of government control over great monopolies is to equalize opportunity. We are fighting against privilege. It was made unlawful for corporations to contribute money for election expenses in order to abridge the power of special privilege at the polls. Railroad rate control is an attempt to secure an equality of opportunity for all men affected by rail transportation; and that means all of us. The great anthracite coal strike was settled, and the pressing danger of a coal famine averted, because we recognized that the control of a public necessity involves a duty to the people, and that public intervention in the affairs of a public service corporation is neither to be resented as usurpation nor permitted as a privilege by the corporations, but on the contrary to be accepted as a duty and exercised as a right by the government in the interest of all the people. The efficiency of the army and the navy has been increased so that our people may follow in peace the great work of making this country a better place for Americans to live in, and our navy was sent round the world for the same ultimate purpose. All the acts taken by the government during the last seven years, and all the policies now being pursued by the Government, fit in as parts of a consistent whole.

"The enactment of a pure food law was a recognition of the fact that the public welfare outweighs the right to private gain, and that no man may poison the people for his private profit. The employers' liability bill recognized the controlling fact that while the employer usually has at stake no more than his profit, the stake of the employe is a living for himself and his family.

"We are building the Panama canal: and this means that we are engaged in the giant engineering feat of all time. We are striving to add in all ways to the habitability and beauty of our country. We are striving to hold in the public lands the remaining supply of unappropriated coal, for the protection and benefit of all the people. We have taken the first steps toward the conservation of our natural resources, and the betterment of country life, and the improvement of our waterways. We stand for the right of every child to a childhood free from grinding toil, and to an education; for the civic responsibility and decency of every citizen; for prudent foresight in public matters, and for fair play in every relation of our national and economic life. In international matters we apply a system of diplomacy which puts the obligations of international morality on a level with those that govern the actions of an honest gentleman in dealing with his fellow-men. Within our own border we stand for truth and honesty in public and in private life; and we war sternly against wrongdoers of every grade. All these efforts are integral parts of the same attempt, the attempt to enthrone justice and righteousness, to secure freedom of opportunity to all of our citizens, now and hereafter, and to set the ultimate interest of all of us above the temporary interest of any individual, class, or group.

"The nation, its government, and its resources exist, first of all, for the American citizen, whatever his creed, race, or birthplace, whether he be rich or poor, educated or ignorant, provided only that he is a good citizen, recognizing his obligations to the nation for the rights and opportunities which he owes to the nation.

"The obligations, and not the rights, of citizenship increase in proportion to the increase of a man's wealth or power. The time is coming when a man will be judged, not by what he has succeeded in getting for himself from the common store, but by how well he has done his duty as a citizen, and by what the ordinary citizen has gained in freedom of opportunity because of his service for the common good. The highest value we know is that of the individual citizen, and the highest justice is to give him fair play in the effort to realize the best there is in him.

"The tasks this nation has to do are great tasks. They can only be done at all by our citizens acting together, and they can be done best of all by the direct and simple application of homely common sense. The application of common sense to common problems for the common good, under the guidance of the principles upon which this republic was based, and by virtue of which it exists, spells perpetuity for the nation, civil and industrial liberty for its citizens, and freedom of opportunity in the pursuit of happiness for the plain American, for whom this nation was founded, by whom it was preserved, and through whom alone it can be perpetuated. Upon this platform—larger than any party differences, higher than class prejudice, broader than any question of profit and loss—there is room for every American who realizes that the common good stands first."

Accompanying the message are explanations and recommendations of work to be done for the future good of the country. The president says: "It is especially important that the development of water power should be guarded with the utmost care both by the national government and by the states in order to protect the people against the upgrowth of monopoly and to insure to them a fair share in the benefits which will follow the development of this great asset which belongs to the people and should be controlled by them.

"I urge that provision be made for both protection and more rapid development of the national forests. Otherwise, either the increasing use of these forests by the people must be checked or their protection against fire must be dangerously weakened. If we compare the actual fire damage on similar areas on private and national forest lands during the past year, the government fire patrol saved commercial timber worth as much as the total cost of caring for all national forests at the present rate for about ten years.

"I especially commend to congress the facts presented by the commission as to the relation between forests and stream flow in its bearing upon the importance of the forest lands in national ownership. Without an understanding of this ultimate relation the conservation of both these natural resources must largely fail.

"The time has fully arrived for recognizing in the law the responsibility to the community, the state, and the nation which rests upon the private ownership of private lands. The ownership of forest land is a public trust. The man who would handle his forest as to cause erosion and to injure stream flow must be not only educated, but he must be controlled."

In conclusion the president urges upon congress the desirability of maintaining a national commission on the conservation of the resources of the country. He adds: "I would also advise that an appropriation of at least $50,000 be made to cover the expenses of the national conservation commission for necessary rent, assistance and traveling expenses. This is a very small sum. I know of no other way in which the appropriation of so small a sum would result in so large a benefit to the whole nation."

HOUSE PASSES NAVAL BUDGET

"PEACE" ADVOCATES ARE HOPELESSLY IN MINORITY.

Senate Makes February 12 a Special Holiday and Authorizes Survey of "Lincoln Way" to Gettysburg.

Washington.—Exactly as reported by committee, the naval program for the fiscal year 1910 was adopted Friday by the house of representatives, and the naval appropriation bill was passed.

The opponents of the navy increase feature of the bill found themselves in a hopeless minority. The only vital alteration made in the measure was the striking out of the provision restoring marines to naval vessels. The aggregate amount appropriated by the bill is $135,000,000.

As has been the case in the past, the increase in the naval estimate gave rise to extended and heated debate, in which members were afforded an opportunity to air their views of the Japanese question. The peace advocates were much in evidence in opposition to such increase, while the adherents of the proposition were alive at all times to every move made to cut down the number of vessels authorized.

February 12 next was decided by the senate to be a special legal holiday, and a survey and plans for a highway from Washington to Gettysburg to be known as "the Lincoln way," as a memorial to Abraham Lincoln, was provided for by a joint resolution passed after an extended debate. The resolution did not commit congress to the construction of the highway when surveyed.

Final action was also taken on the legislative, executive and judicial bill; the senate refusing by a vote of 41 to 27 to fix at $75,000 the salary of the president, previously increased by an amendment to $100,000.

Stockmen's Conspiracy Revealed.

Belle Fourche, S. D.—From confessions alleged to have been secured from the leaders, following the arrest of nine prominent stockmen in Crook county, Wyoming, a great sensation is expected to result. The men under arrest are Ike, Andy and Sam McKean, D. W. Mosbarger, George Martin, Stanley Baugh, J. C. Hulholland, Terry Zimmerschied and A. O. Squiers. It is alleged that they are members of a secret band of stockmen organized and operated solely to drive out the Guthrie Stock Company.

Must Pay Duty on Foreign Coin.

New York.—That an importer must pay a penalty in the shape of 45 per cent. duty on coin currency of a foreign country brought to the United States was the unique principle established in a decision of the board of United States general appraisers, rendered Wednesday. In its decision the board sustained the collector in assessing duty on a consignment of Japanese coin currency imported by a local firm for the New York branch of the Yokohama specie bank.

Tennessee Drys Score Again.

Nashville, Tenn.—At 5:40 o'clock Thursday afternoon the lower house of the legislature, by a vote of 60 to 36, passed, on final reading, the bill to prohibit the manufacture of intoxicants in Tennessee after January 1, 1910.

The bill has already passed the senate and now goes to the governor, who is expected to veto it.

Morgan Buys Washington's Sword.

Baltimore, Md.—J. Pierpont Morgan of New York has purchased from Miss Virginia Tayler Wise of this city the sword worn by Gen. George Washington when he resigned his commission as commander-in-chief of the American army in Annapolis in 1783. Mr. Morgan will in due time, it is understood, present the relic to the Mount Vernon association. An idea of its value may be gleaned from the fact that some years ago the United States senate passed a bill appropriating $25,000 for its purchase.

FIVE KILLED IN RAIL WRECK.

Collision on the Pennsylvania Road—Many Are Injured.

Johnstown, Pa.—Running at a speed of nearly fifty miles an hour, the second section of the St. Louis Express on the Pennsylvania railroad, which left Philadelphia at 4:30 o'clock Friday afternoon, crushed into the first section, which had met with an accident at a point between South Fork and Summer Hill, known as "Running Ground," with terrific force early Saturday morning, killing five persons and injuring many.

The second section was a double-header, with two large engines, and is said to have plowed its way through the first section. Immediately after the wreck hurry calls were issued for all available physicians at both this place and at Altoona, and in less than an hour nearly fifty physicians were on their way to the scene of the accident.

160 DIE IN FLOODED MINE.

Disaster in the Transvaal Caused by Heavy Rains.

Johannesburg.—One hundred and seventy-three persons are known to have lost their lives Friday as a result of the floods which are general throughout the Transvaal colony and northern Natal.

By the bursting of Knights dam, the Witwatersrand gold mine in the southwestern part of the Transvaal was flooded and ten white men and 150 natives were drowned. The water from this dam also flooded the lower section of the town of Elsburg, where a number of houses were swept away and 13 persons perished.

INFIRMARY INMATES BURNED.

Fifteen Aged Men Injured in Fire at Canfield, O.

Canfield, O.—Fire of unknown origin Thursday afternoon destroyed the men's building of the Mahoning county infirmary here and 15 of the aged inmates received burns more or less serious.

The men were endeavoring to check the fire at the foot of a stairway when a shift in the wind suddenly drove a sheet of flame down upon them. They crawled to safety, and were taken to the infirmary hospital. The fire loss will be $30,000.

Shortage of $13,000 Found.

Kansas City, Mo.—A shortage of $13,000 in the city auditor's office was disclosed Wednesday following the installation of a new system of accounting. Vernon H. Green, the auditor, says the shortage may be due to clerical errors, but more probably is the result of systematic stealing by clerks extending through an indefinite period of years. No formal charges have been made.

Billik Saved from Death.

Springfield, Ill.—Gov. Charles Deneen Friday night commuted to life imprisonment the sentence of death which had been pronounced on Herman Billik of Chicago, who was condemned to hang for the murder of Mary Vrzal, whom he poisoned, with other members of the family, it was charged.

Leiter Under Surgeon's Knife.

Chicago.—Joseph Leiter, millionaire mine owner, former grain king, a benedict of a few months, was operated on for appendicitis Friday at Augustana hospital.

Fixing Up Toga for Bryan.

Lincoln, Neb.—The Nebraska house Friday approved the report of the committee of the whole recommending the passage of the Humphreys bill for the election of senators by the Oregon plan. This bill will pass both houses. The bill is intended to give W. J. Bryan a chance to be elected senator, as Democratic leaders believe that a preference would be expressed for him, although the next legislature which, under the present law, would elect a senator, is expected to be Republican.

Women Struggle Hopelessly Along, Suffering Backache, Dizzy Spells, Languor, Etc.

Women have so much to go through in life that it's a pity there is so much suffering from backache and other common curable kidney ills. If you suffer so, profit by this woman's example: Mrs. Martin Douglass, 52 Cedar St., Kingston, N. Y., says: "I had a lame, aching back, dizzy spells, headaches, and a feeling of languor. Part of the time I could not attend to my work and irregularity of the kidney secretions was annoying. Doan's Kidney Pills brought me prompt relief."

SKIN ERUPTION CURED.

Was So Sore, Irritating and Painful That Little Sufferer Could Not Sleep—Scratched Constantly.

Cuticura's Efficacy Clearly Proven.

"When about two and a half years old my daughter broke out on her hips and the upper parts of her legs with a very irritating and painful eruption. It began in October; the first I noticed was a little red surface and a constant desire on her part to scratch her limbs. She could not sleep and the eruptions got sore, and yellow water came out of them. I had two doctors treat her, but she grew worse under their treatment. Then I bought the Cuticura Remedies and only used them two weeks when she was entirely well. This was in February. She has never had another rough place on her skin, and she is now fourteen years old. Mrs. R. R. Whitaker, Winchester, Tenn., Sept. 22, 1908."

A Difference in Degree.

"I just love cake," said Johnnie, feelingly. "It's awful nice."

"You should not say 'love' cake," corrected his mother. "You should say 'like.' And do not say 'awful'—say 'very.' And say 'good' instead of 'nice.' Now see if you can repeat the sentence correctly."

"I like cake," repeated Johnnie, "It's very good."

"That's better."

"I know, ma," complained Johnnie, "but it sounds just as if I was talkin' 'bout bread."—Everybody.

Delicate Scientific Instruments.

The human heat sense can not realize a difference of temperature beyond one-fifth of a degree; but the thermometer, an instrument 200,000 times as sensitive as the skin, notes a difference of a millionth of a degree. A galvanometer flexes its finger at a current generated by simply deforming a drop of mercury so as to press it out of a spherical shape into that of an egg.

JOY WORK

And the Other Kind.

Did you ever stand on a prominent corner at an early morning hour and watch the throngs of people on their way to work? Noting the number who were forcing themselves along because it meant their daily bread, and the others cheerfully and eagerly pursuing their way because of love of their work.

It is a fact that one's food has much to do with it. As an example:

If an engine has poor oil, or a boiler is fired with poor coal, a bad result is certain, isn't it?

Treating your stomach right is the keystone that sustains the arch of health's temple and you will find "Grape-Nuts" as a daily food is the most nourishing and beneficial you can use.

"We have thousands of testimonials, real genuine little heart throbs, from people who simply tried Grape-Nuts out of curiosity—as a last resort—with the result that prompted the testimonial.

If you have never tried Grape-Nuts it's worth while to give it a fair impartial trial. Remember there are millions eating Grape-Nuts every day—they know, and we know if you will use Grape-Nuts every morning your work is more likely to be joy-work, because you can keep well, and with the brain well nourished work is a joy. Read the "Road to Wellville" in every package—"There's a Reason."

EVERYTHING WAS FAVORABLE

SORRY HE DIDN'T MOVE TO WESTERN CANADA BEFORE.

Mr. Austin was a man who had never had any previous experience in farming, but Western Canada had allurements, and he profited. He got a low-rate certificate from a Canadian Government agent, and then moved. What he says is interesting:

"Ranfurly, Alberta, May 10-'08.

"J. N. Grieve, Esqr., Spokane, Washington.—Dear Sir: After a dozen or more years of unsuccessful effort in the mercantile business in Western Washington, in August, 1903, decided to come to Alberta with a gentleman who was shipping two cars live stock to Edmonton. I assisted this man with the stock over one hundred miles out in the Birch Lake Country, East of Edmonton. Indeed, how surprised, how favorably everything compared with my dream of what I wanted to see in a new country.

"Had never had any experience in farming, but I was immediately converted into a farmer. And from that moment I have prospered. Selecting a homestead near Birch Lake, I returned for wife and three small children and freighted out from Edmonton in March following year we shoveled a spot clear of snow and pitched our tent and commenced operations, at that time we had no neighbors. Four years have passed, the locality is well settled, two miles from railway station, with churches and schools, telephone and good road accommodations.

"We are enjoying the privileges granted to any rural district in Washington. The Birch Lake Country is no exception, this great transformation is rapidly going on in every district in Western Canada.

"I estimate that every quarter section in every direction is capable of producing a comfortable living for a family of ten forever. After paying for two horses and a cow, had just $10.00 to go on. Did my first ploughing in my life. I was very awkward in my work, but nature was glad and I was abundantly paid for my efforts. Our cattle has increased to about fifty head, which was very profitable on account of the abundance of forage. To farm was compelled to buy about four hundred dollars' worth of farm machinery on time, and the payments fell due last fall, and you may wonder how I expected to pay for them when we had such a bad year. 'Twas a little bad for Western Canada or for a Missourian. But is not 35 or 40 bushels oats a pretty good yield per adre in many States? Then the price of grain went out of sight, so when I had sold my crop I found I was able to make my payments nicely, besides we had lots of feed. No one has any business raising cattle without growing grain, or vice versa. As to the winters, did not feed my cattle, excepting the calves, a fork of hay until in March. Have found the winters much more pleasant than we did in Western Washington. This is strange and hard to explain, but 'tis true, nevertheless, at 40 degrees below zero we have more comfort than you would at 20 degrees above, so still and dry—with bright, sunny days. My wife says that the only regret she has is that we did not come here ten years ago, as we would now certainly have been in a position to retire from hard work. Most women soon become satisfied as neighbors begin to come round them. Have 98 acres in crop this year, besides two acres potatoes, which have always brought me a fair price. We find a ready market for everything we produce. To the Poor Man—Here is a chance to establish yourself. To the Rich Man—Here is a chance to buy land for $10.00 to $15.00 per acre which will produce more crops than a half dozen acres of your $50.00 to $75.00 per acre land. And if not very much mistaken, this year will prove an eye opener to those who are a little sceptical. The trouble with me is that I have so much to say so favorable to Alberta 'tis hard to be brief. Respectfully,

(Signed) "P. S. AUSTIN."

Editorial Verdict.

From a serious-minded jester the editor received this note, together with a consignment of humor that was heavy enough to go by freight:

"Dear Sir: I read all these jokes to my wife, and she laughed heartily. Now, I have it on good authority that when a man's wife will laugh at his jokes they are bound to be very good—or she is. Yours, etc."

The editor slipped them into the return envelope with the letter, after writing on the margin: "She is."

Professor Munyon has just issued a most beautiful, useful and complete Almanac; it contains not only all the scientific information concerning the moon's phases, in all the latitudes, but has illustrated articles on how to read character by phrenology, palmistry and birth month. It also tells all about card reading, birth stones and their meaning, and gives the interpretation of dreams. It teaches beauty culture, manicuring, gives weights and measures, and antidotes for poison. In fact, it is a Magazine Almanac, that not only gives valuable information, but will afford much amusement for every member of the family, especially for parties and evening entertainments. Farmers and people in the rural districts will find this Almanac almost invaluable.

It will be sent to anyone absolutely free on application to the MUNYON REMEDY COMPANY, PHILADELPHIA.

Commercial Club State Federation

To Ask Solons for $100,000 to Boost Minnesota.

St. Paul.—A $100,000 appropriation from the state legislature is the gist of a resolution, petitioning the representatives of the people to loosen the strings of the state's purse, which was passed Jan. 15 by the Minnesota Federation of Commercial clubs during its second annual convention, held in St. Paul, Jan. 14 and 15.

Unbounded enthusiasm over the practically unlimited resources of the state prevailed throughout the meeting. The absolute necessity of advertising, the upbuilding of the agricultural interests, the education of farmers in agricultural schools, and the building of good roads, were among the chief topics of discussion.

There were 120 delegates in attendance, representing 76 Commercial clubs of the state, with a total membership of 10,000 representative business men of Minnesota. President D. M. Neill of Red Wing, Secretary Curtis L. Mosher of St. Paul and Treasurer Frank J. Meyst of Minneapolis were all re-elected to their respective offices. Senator A. D. Stephens of Crookston was named as first vice president, and F. E. Wade of Fairmont as second vice president.

The executive committee, composed of a club member from each congressional district, were elected as follows, in numerical order: Julius Reiter, Rochester; S. B. Nelson, Luverne; W. W. Sivright, Hutchinson; J. H. Mitchell, St. Paul; Wallace G. Nye, Minneapolis; Andrew Davis, Elk River; F. W. Murphy, Wheaton; H. V. Eva, Duluth; C. J. Pryor, Bemidji.

If the $100,000 is secured from the legislature, which was promised by a large number of representatives and senators present during the convention, it will be used through the office of the immigration commissioner of the state, Mr. George Welch.

Of vital importance is the bringing of farmers to the state through the imparting of knowledge of what is being done here in the agricultural line. That a farmer is worth a thousand dollars to any community was the feature of a strong speech made by E. W. Randall, until recently dean of the Agricultural college of Minnesota, which is at the head of all agricultural colleges of the state. Mr. Randall upheld that the state was greatly handicapped as the result of the little education which ahe average farmer of the state has at present. To give him an education in cultivation and raising of cattle would mean that his annual income, which at present averages less than $1,000 would be duplicated and triplicated.

Ather speakers, such men as W. L. Harris of Minneapolis, president of the Minneapolis Publicity club, and reputed one of the best advertisers in the country, Professor John Gray of the department of economics and political sciences at the University of Minnesota, William Robertson of the state experimental farm at Crookston, and others of like calibre, who spoke during the convention, upheld Mr. Randall and advised the selection of competent teachers who would go among the farmers and give practical demonstrations of the higher art of farming. All strongly advised proper advertising, which finally resulted in the unanimous adoption of the resolution asking for $100,000.

Good roads were discussed at length by the delegates. Geo. V. Cooley, engineer of the state highway commission, read a paper on the proper construction of roads. He outlined thoroughly the various constructions of roads, and recommended properly constructed dirt roads in preference to the more expensive roads of stone material. A general discussion brought out the facts that much was being done in the line of good roads throughout the state.

Minneapolis was selected by the convention as the place of meeting in 1910.

The following is the text of the resolutions which were unanimously adopted by the convention, which promises to be thrice as large next year:

"The delegates from the Commercial clubs and business associations of Minnesota, assembled in annual convention of the Federation of Commercial clubs, after thoughtful discussion and careful consideration of some of the many problems confronting our citizens, and whose proper and early solution will materially contribute to the development of the magnificent state in which we are so vitally interested, adopt and present for the consideration of those in authority, the following resolutions expressing our sentiment upon some of these questions:

First. Recognizing the fact that the greatest asset of Minnesota is its fertile acres and that the further development of the state rests largely upon their more intelligent cultivation, we invite the earnest attention of our senators and representatives in the state legislature to tho necessity which we believe exists, for the extension of our facilities for instruction in the science of agriculture with a view to making such instruction available to a large number of school children, not only in the country, but in the city.

Second. That we emphatically urge the board of regents of the state university to greatly extend the means now employed for giving practical instruction to the farmers of our state in the cultivation of the soil, the marketing of crops, and other subjects of value in their calling.

Third. That we cordially commend the work of those in supervisory charge of our rural schools in introducing therein instruction in lines directly connected with the cultivation of the soil and urge an extension of such instruction.

Fourth. That we recognize fully the value of good roads as an aid to state development and as a profitable asset to the people of the state, and that we urge such legislation as will assist in securing the construction of permanent roads under competent supervision, and as will obtain full value received for all money expended in road work.

Fifth. That we commend the work of the state bureau of immigration and compliment our commissioner of immigration upon the result he has obtained through the expenditure of the small appropriation allotted his department.

Sixth. Resolved, That we recognize in the state fair and county fairs an institution of great usefulness in the upbuilding of the agricultural interests of the state. They have educational value, promote all legitimate industry and are especially valuable in showing resources and products to visitors from other localities and thus attract new and desirable settlers to Minnesota.

Seventh. That, recognizing the splendid advantages offered by Minnesota in its magnificent climate, in its churches and schools and other factors which make it a desirable state in which to live, in its numerous market places with transportation facilities, and above all, in the fertility of the soil, we urgently and emphatically petition the legislature of the state now in session, to appropriate a sum, not less than $100,000 per annum for the use of the state board of immigration in properly advertising the splendid advantages of Minnesota to the world at large."

Failed to Return Indictment.

Red Wing.—William Hellerud, who was accused of the murder of David Rogers, following a quarrel in a saloon at Cannon Falls, Nov. 14 last, is a free man. The grand jury failed to return an indictment against him, there being insufficient evidence to convict. Judge Williston ordered his immediate release and the return of the $500 cash bond which he furnished. He left for his home at Turtle Lake.

The grand jury completed its work and returned three indictments. William Noble, charged with grand larceny in the first degree, entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to six years at hard labor in the state prison at Stillwater. In September he broke into the farmhouse of Mrs. Josephine Schlunt at Florence and stole jewelry valued at $47, and currency to the value of $77. He at one time resided at Port Huron, Mich.

Horace McCarty, charged with grand larceny in the second degree, is accused of breaking into a dwelling house in Belle Creek and stealing $55 in cash. He entered a plea of not guilty and stated that he was ready to stand trial by jury. McCarty is out on bail.

Smallpox Victim in Court.

Rochester.—In justice court, when a civil case was on trial before Judge Theodore Schact, some little excitement was created by the discovery that the complaining witness was a victim of smallpox.

The plaintiff was on the stand and was being examined by the attorney for the complainant, when one of the attorneys in the case cried, "For heaven's sake, don't let this case proceed until the witness is examined," and upon investigation it was found that the attorney meant a medical examination. A doctor was called and at once pronounced the plaintiff in the case a smallpox victim, and steps were immediately taken to assure immunity from the disease for those present at the trial, as well as to properly care for the patient.

The victim in the case smilingly stated that he was well satisfied with the outcome.

The Sign of Power.

It is the greatest manifestation of power to be calm. It is easy to be active. Let the reins go, and the horses will drag you down. Anyone can do that; but he who can stop the plunging horses is the strong man. Which requires the greater strength—letting go, or restraining? The calm man is not the man who is dull. You must not mistake calmness for dullness or laziness. . . . Activity is the manifestation of the lower strength, calmness of the superior strength.—Swami Vivekannanda.

MINNESOTA SOLONS

PROHIBITIONISTS COUNTY OPTION MEASURE IS INTRODUCED.

Senator Stephens Would Pay Prison Inmates Twenty-five Cents a Day to Help Their Families.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 18.—The house met for a brief session at 2:30 this afternoon, considered several resolutions, introduced a handful of bills, and then adjourned till 11 a. m. tomorrow. There was no session of the senate today.

Carl Wallace of Minneapolis offered a lengthy resolution asking for appointment of a committee of three members of the house to visit Madison, Wis., to investigate the operation of the Wisconsin public utilities law, with a view to framing a measure for Minnesota, following out the recommendation in the governor's message for supervision of public utilities in Minnesota by the railroad commission. Mr. Rosenwald couldn't see any need for such a law in Minnesota. He thought that the Minnesota railroad commission didn't need any additional powers. Mr. Wallace took the floor to tell Mr. Rosenwald a few things, when argument was cut off by Mr. Brady of St. Paul giving notice of debate. Under the rules this carries the resolution over for the day.

Saugstad stirs up things political with a bill calling for a convention of party primary nominees for congressional, state and legislative offices the fourth Tuesday in July, at which time each party shall adopt a platform and elect a state committee of two members from each congressional district. Hinds has a bill for a new normal schools, and isn't very particular where it is so long as it is located within his district. The bill says it may be "in some village north of the main line of the Northern Pacific, and west of the meridian passing thru Brainerd. The normal board is empowered to select the exact site. Holmberg offers first aid to consolidated schools which will teach practical agriculture, ocering as state aid $1,000 to each of the first ten schools coming within the law during 1910, and the same offer for ten schools in 1911. The schools must serve a district of sixteen to thirty-six square miles, each must have a ten-acre site for practical agricultural work, and be located outside any village limits. Brady of St. Paul comes to the aid of street car "strap hangers." He would inflict a fine of not to exceed $100 for any street car company which compels more than fifteen people to stand within any one car. Thayer offers a bill to continue the old state board of equalization. Rosenberg of St. Paul introduces an old stand-by,—to prohibit bucketshops.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 20.—The event of the session of the legislature today, was the introduction in the senate of a bill to appropriate $1,359,950 for the Minnesota state university, a bill fathered by Senator Elwell of Minneapolis, and Senator Fosseen, also of Minneapolis. Nearly the entir[illegible]ount is wanted for new build[illegible]d completion of structures n[illegible]erway.

[illegible] Christensen of St. Paul introduced a bill today to prohibit the appointment by the governor of more than two members of any one political party to membership on the state board of control. This condition was in the original board of control bill, but was romoved in the senate before the old law passed. It is important now, as Gov. Johnson has announced his intention not to reappoint S. W. Leavett, the lone republican member of the board whose term expires next April. If the bill passes before then, it will mean that the governor will have to appoint a republican to succeed Leavett, instead of a democrat.

Mr. Alvin Rowe of White Bear, showed his enmity for the robber of hen roosts and melon patches in two bills he introduced today. One bill offers a reward of $25 for chicken thieves. The other punishes melon patch robbers with a fine of $250 or six months in jail, or both. The latter bill was introduced on request of market gardeners.

Oscar Christensen presented another imported bill today, which requires that electric car lines be under direct supervision of the state railroad and warehouse commission, the same as steam railroads.

The house was in session hardly half an hour today, and the senate no longer.

The Duluth house and senate delegations have been requested by the Duluth city council to introduce a bill for general municipal ownership of public utilities. The request will likely be granted, and in such event the bill will become a leading issue of the session. Such a bill was a bone of contention two years ago. It passed, but in such a cut-up form that it was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 21.—Prize fighting will be legalized in Minnesota if a bill introduced in the house today by Representative T. J. Greene of St. Paul, passes. The bill legalizes boxing bouts of not to exceed six rounds in cities of over 50,000 inhabitants, providing the contestants pass a physical examination and their contest is authorized by the mayor of the city. No gloves of less than six ounces are to be allowed, and no decisions are to be permitted at the end of the six rounds. The bill was referred to the committee on general legislation.

Representative J. T. Johnson got after the state fair management with a resolution calling for an investigation by a committee of five to be appointed by the speaker. The resolution passed with but one vote against it, and without any debate. It recited that no detailed financial report has yet been submitted to the lawmakers, though they were given to understand one was coming, and that the matter of granting privileges should be lookéd into. At the present time a skating rink is being conducted in the big livestock exposition building.

Representative Spooner of Morris introduced a new state prison bill today, which calls for $3,000,000 in all for the new prison. In the senate today, the prison committee recommended for passage the senate bill for a new prison, with an amendment changing the limit of cost from $2,000,000 to $2,500,000. John Goodspeed of Richland presented a bill to place the soldiers' home at Minnehaha under the state board of control. John Selb of St. Paul introduced a measure to allow a pension of $12 a month to every woman who was an Indian captive during the Sioux war of 1862.

The senate was in session but a little while today, and no business of importance was transacted beyond the introduction of a few bills. An important committee recommendation was received and approved, however; that of the prison committee recommending the manufacture of farm machinery by convict labor at the state prison, Stillwater.

J. B. Goodspeed had a bill to permit street railways to carry express from midnight till 5 a. m.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 22.—Two bills of particular interest put in appearance at today's legislative session; one in the house by A. K. Ware calling for county option, and the second in the senate by A. D. Stephens to permit of remunerating inmates of the state prison that their needy dependent families may have some little money to help make ends meet.

The Ware bill, which is already known as the "official" bill of the prohibitionists for county option, provides that in any county, on petition of 25 per cent of the voters, the question of whether liquor licenses shall thereafter be granted within the county must be submitted to the voters at the next election. The Stephens bill in the senate fixes a remuneration of 25 cents a day for state prisoners, the money to be sent to their needy families by the board of control; or, if they have no dependent relatives, the money accumulates to give them a new start in life when they are discharged. The board of control is authorized to establish rules whereby part or all of the remuneration may be forfeited for attempt to escape or other breach of discipline.

Representative Austin of Duluth got after wife deserters today with a bill declaring such desertion shall be punishable as a felony. Representative Doyle introduced a bill to establish an additional branch agricultural school at Foley.

A bill by Senator Sullivan requires all foreign corporations operating in Minnesota to report to the state tax commission when requested just what of their funds are invested in Minnesota and how. Senator Sageng introduced a duplicate of the Johnson house bill for the "initiative and referendum"—a proposition that comes up biennially in the Minnesota legislature and is always sure of getting turned down.

It is understood that some time next week the women suffragists will be given a public hearing on the Sageng bill for such suffrage. After the hearing, the slated action seems to be to bury the bill the same as has been the case with most measures introduced by the lone populist member of the legislature.

Senator McColl of St. Paul has announced his intention to introduce a bill next week for state guarantee of bank deposits, a fund for this purpose to be secured by a tax of one per cent on banks in proportion to the amount of deposits each bank holds. The bill follows out the democratic platform of the last state campaign.

The senate adjourned today till next Tuesday at 11 a. m., in order that the members might spend the mileage money which they secured today by passing the house mileage allowance bill under suspension of the rules. The house adjourned till 2 p. m. Monday—probably with the same idea in view.

Hamline.—Hamline university students are facing an ink famine as the result of the robbery of the university book store ink department, which has just been unearthed by Huser & Goertz, proprietors of the store. The entire supply of writing fluids as well as many highly expensive boxes of India drawing ink were removed by the robbers and not a drop of ink can be obtained at the institution.

THE WONDERBERRY.

Mr. Luther Burbank, the plant Wizard of California, has originated a wonderful new plant which grows anywhere, in any soil or climate, and bears great quantities of luscious berries all the season. Plants are grown from seed, and it takes only three months to get them in bearing, and they may be grown and fruited all summer in the garden, or in pots during the winter. It is unquestionably the greatest Fruit Novelty ever known, and Mr. Burbank has made Mr. John Lewis Childs, of Floral Park, N. Y., the introducer. He says that Mr. Childs is one of the largest, best-known, fairest and most reliable Seedsman in America. Mr. Childs is advertising seed of the Wonderberry all over the world, and offering great inducements to Agents for taking orders for it. This berry is so fine and valuable, and so easily grown anywhere, that everybody should get it at once.

RHEUMATISM PRESCRIPTION

The increased use of "Toris" for rheumatism is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. The following formula is effective: "To one-half pint of good whiskey add one ounce of Toris Compound and one ounce of Syrup Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring."

Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it as well as the other ingredients can be had from any good druggist.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam' Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

The present session of congress would remind one of an old hen, that was so chuck full of business that she can not get time to lay an egg.

The annual county printing scrap is on tap, wherein part of the newspapers pat the County Commissioners on the back and call them good fellows, and the other part the d— to not be continued.

That Crookston Daliy Journal is certainly a hustler for northern Minnesota. You can wrap us one and send to a friend in any other state, of any ssue, and be sure that you have given northern Minnesota a boost

The way they have over half the population of Red Lake county Commissioner Districted is, they have got one half on the north side of Red Lake River, and the other half on the south side, so we are going to try to get a bridge across the river, so we can cross this great division line, in the eastern part of the county.

There is now very little prospect that there will be anything more done with the river and harbor bill at this session of congress, as the president has made an agreement with the committies who have the bill in charge to lay it over until the next session. This will be a dissapointment to the people liveing up this way who had hoped there would be some dredgeing done on the Red Lake River this season, but if we can get a bridge across it, this year it will help some.

Representative Holton of Polk county has introduced a bill in the legislature providing for a special election to establish a county seat after a new county has been set off. This measure is probaly in the interest of estern Polk county, which has been unable to get away from the mother county because of the conflicting county seat ambitions of the numerous towns in that section.—Red Lake Falls Gazette. The above would be a very good law, but it is doubtful if it gets any farther than an introdection, but we wauld like to see it pass, as it would give the people of the proposed new county of Highlanding an opprotunity to vote on county seat location, after they are set off from Red Lake county, which will be a proposition that will be voted on at the next general election in this county, if we in the north eastern part can not get a fair representation on that board of County Commissioners, as the people are getting warmed up to that extent, that they are going to find out whether the tail wags the dog, or the dog wags the tail in this county.

Torture.

A shrewd old doctor once said: "If I wanted to torture his enemy, I would tell him he had an incurable disease. His life would be miserable, and he would be almost certain to die before his time."

The Sleeping Sickness.

The terrible sleeping sickness of tropical Africa is discussed at length in an article in Popular Mechanics. The disease, which long baffled scientists, is spread by the tsetse fly, a bloodsucking, day flying insect. On the approach of either man or animal at a river crossing in the densest forest the victim is soon scented out by the fly, if there is one in the vicinity, and then, either silently or with a peevish buzz, it makes straight for the most accessible spot and gives its stab. The usual course of the disease is from four to eight months. At the outset there are headache, a feverish condition, lassitude and a corresponding disinclination to work. The facial aspect changes, and a previously happy and intelligent looking negro becomes instead dull, heavy and apathetic. Later, tremor in the tongue develops, speech is uncertain, and mumbling, walk shuffling and progressive weakness, drowsiness and oblivion to his surroundings afflict the sufferer. The last stage is marked by extreme emaciation and a coma deepening into death.

Catching a Bride.

Among certain Siberians the bridegroom is not permitted to have a wife until he can catch her. But they do not give him a fair race in the open. The bride, surrounded by her female friends, awaits him in a big tent. As soon as she sees him she runs off He follows like Hippomenes after Atalanta. But instead of obstacles being thrown in the way of the bride they are thrown across the path of the bridegroom. The pursuing groom falls over old women, chairs, tables, stones and fishing rods or is tripped up by ropes. Only when it is feared he might give up and sulk and go away without the fleeting lady is he permitted to overtake her. Then as she falls into his outstretched arms it may be imagined she utters some equivalent of "This is so sudden!"

A Live Steak.

"It is a mistake," said the president of the New York Waiters' club, "to think that an Englishman always wants his beef excessively rare. As a matter of fact, the English like their beef better done than we do. I once saw a waiter," he continued, "serve an English duke with a cut of very, very rare sirloin. The duke looked closely at the slice of bright red meat. Then he said:

"'Waiter, just send for the butcher, will you?'

"'The butcher, sir?' the waiter stammered.

"'Yes,' said the duke. 'This beef doesn't seem to be quite dead yet.'"

Prevention Better Than Cure.

In these days, when most medical men are on the still hunt for miraculous cures, specifics in one or other form, it is easy to lose sight of, at least to fail to give sufficient attention to, the matter of the cause or causes of disease and of the means of prevention as well as of the really scientific because so often simple measures calculated so to help nature as to enable her to successfully perform a cure.

We all remember how the profession ransacked the entire earth for some medicament that should "cure" scurvy. No better illustration of what good old Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes declared to be shameful to the profession could be given than the various "treatments" for scurvy till some thoughtful layman discovered the true cause of the disease to be lack of vegetable food. A rational supply of vegetables or fruit and fruit juices and a diminished ration of salt meat sufficed to render all the armies, navies and camp dwellers of the world "immune."—Health Culture.

"He kicked me downstairs."—Paris Journal.

The Merit of Good Work.

The great thing is to produce nothing of which, if it comes into broad light, you will be ashamed, and then whether it does come into broad light or no need not much trouble you.—Matthew Arnold.

The Undertaker's Shop.

"The one thing in New York that I can't get used to," said the country visitor, "is the manifold uses to which undertakers put their shops. I used to be of the opinion that the only possible errand a person could have at an undertaker's was to purchase funeral supplies, but in this town I find that people go there for all sorts of purposes. They go to vote, to get married and to transact all the legal business that a notary public is capable of transacting. Yesterday I even saw a party eating luncheon in an undertaker's establishment. They had come into town apparently to attend a funeral and instead of patronizing a restaurant they calmly munched their midday meal in the midst of those lugubrious surroundings." — New York Globe.

Irascible Carlyle.

A lady who lived near Thomas Carlyle kept Cochin China fowls, and their crowing was such a nuisance that the philosopher sent a complaint to her. The owner was indignant upon hearing the appeal.

"Why," said she, "they crow only four times a day, and how can Mr. Carlyle be seriously annoyed at that?"

Upon hearing of her attitude upon the subject Carlyle replied, "The lady forgets the pain I suffer in waiting for them."

TURPENTINE.

Moths will leave if it is sprinkled about.

Turpentine and soap will remove ink stains from linen.

Turpentine will remove wheel grease, pitch and tar stains.

Clean gilt frames with a sponge moistened in turpentine.

It will exterminate roaches if sprinkled in their haunts.

A few drops on a woolen cloth will clean tan shoes nicely.

A few drops added to water in which clothes are boiled will whiten them.

An equal mixture of turpentine and linseed oil will remove white marks from furniture caused by water.

Ivory knife handles that have become yellow can be restored to their former whiteness by rubbing with turpentine.

Carpets can be cleaned and colors restored by going over occasionally with a broom dipped in warm water in which a little turpentine is added.

Splendors of Cafes.

The cafes and hotels of New York are rivaling each other in the almost oriental splendor with which they have fitted up small rooms for dinner and after theater parties. At one cafe near Broadway the sides of one of these rooms are composed entirely of mirrors, after the French fashion, while the ceiling is covered with green leaves and grapes, bunches of pink and purple grapes of glass, within which are electric lights. The effect is that of a beautiful arbor. Another cafe has mirrors reflecting small red lights throughout the room, while the ceiling, also of mirrors, is an exquisite imitation of moonlight, the effect of which is obtained by electrics inclosed in globes of the color and sheen of moonlight seen through a delicate tracery of faint green leaves.—Exchange.

A Sad Case.

A Chicago physician was one day called to attend a sick child in a "shabby genteel" quarter of the Windy City.

"Madam," said the doctor to the mother, "you should send this child into the country for several weeks each summer."

"I am sorry to say, doctor," responded the woman, "that we are not rich enough to do that."

"Then," suggested the physician, "have her sent by the fresh air fund."

"Oh, doctor," exclaimed the woman, "we are not poor enough!"—Harper's Weekly.

Too Selfish.

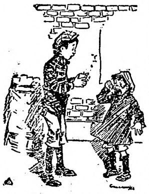
Citiman—What's the matter with all you Swamphurst fellows? You don't seem to like my friend Backlotz. Subbubs—No; he's selfish. Citiman—Oh, come now! Subbubs—That's what he is. A barn near him caught fire the other night, and he put it out without waiting for the rest of us members of the Swamphurst Hose to reach the scene.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The Comfortable Fortune.

"What is your idea of a comfortable fortune?' asked the ambitious youth.

"One," answered the man of experience, "that is big enough to buy you everything you want and not big enough to attract the attention of the grand jury."—Washington Star.

With the Kids.



The Big One—I'll give you a nice apple if you'll stop crying.

The Small One—H-how big is the a-apple, an' how l-long have I got to stop fer?—New York Herald.

What His Music Bill Meant.

An architect who had planned and superintended the building of a west side residence had turned over the completed house to its owner. The architect had been in nowise hampered in the expenditure of money, yet his customer, being a good business man, gave his personal attention to the details of the cost.

"What does this mean?" he asked on a final inspection of the bills. "Three hundred dollars to a quartet of trained musicians. How can anybody have given a concert already in my house when no one is living there?"

"They were testing the acoustics of the rooms," the architect explained. "Every room in your house has been submitted to that test. There will be plenty of music there later on, and I certainly wouldn't want to finish the house without being sure that the sounding properties were satisfactory. In these days every private house or hotel that amounts to anything is put through the acoustic test before it leaves the architect's hands."—New York Sun.

Luck.

"Do you believe there is anything in luck?" asked the young man.

"Yes," answered the home grown philosopher. "There is a lot of intelligence and perseverance in it."—Exchange.

Men, Women and Adjectives.

Certain adjectives are reserved for men and others for women. A man is never called "beautiful." Along with "pretty" and "lovely" that adjective has become the property of women and children alone. "Handsome" and the weak "good looking" are the only two adjectives of the kind common to either sex. Even "belle" has no real masculine correlative in English, since "beau" came to signify something other than personal looks. It is singular that "handsome" should have become the word for a strikingly good looking person, since its literal meaning is handy, dexterous. But "pretty" likewise comes from the Anglo-Saxon word [illegible]

Artificial Flies.

The Bat.

Nearly all bats have the faculty of hibernating. Their hibernation, however, is not perfect—that is to say, that when the warm days occur in the middle of winter they wake up, together with the insects which are their food. Still theirs is a true hibernation trance, differing from sleep, with very low rate of pulse, heart action and respiration. Probably they would endure immersion in water for an hour or two without drowning, as other hibernators have been found to do.

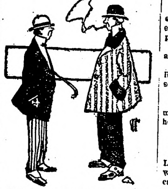
Blind Men's Dreams.

One of the most intelligent inmates of a blind asylum, who came into the world blind, says that he never dreams of the things he has read about and never dreams of any thing or person that he has not in some way come in personal contact with. He dreams of music, of the voices of persons he knows, of such incidents as might happen at the home or in some place in which he has actually been, but never of incidents in other places or in other lands. Even although he has read descriptions of localities, of natural beauties, of the appearance of a street or a city, no idea of what they look like comes to him in the fancies of his sleep. There is a class of blind people who become blind when quite young. Such blind people never dream of any scene or object except those which have remained in the memory from what they actually saw before they became blind.—Pearson's Weekly

Fish In Inclosed Waters.

Most people not without education and a general knowledge of natural history are mystified by the presence of fish in inclosed waters. For many years there was open mouthed wonder over the perch, bream and crayfish found in the newly cut dams near the Macquarie river, in New South Wales. In some cases the water had scarcely settled after the rain had filled the dam than the fish were observed, and the Australian farmers started a theory of spontaneous production. This obtained and gained wide credence until a Sydney professor chanced to pick up a wild duck and found its breast feathers and webbed feet well dotted with fertile and almost hatched fish ova, on which the "spontaneous production" theory was promptly withdrawn.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat

Admirable.



"I certainly admire that pianist who gave the recital last night."

"For his compositions or for his performances?"

"Neither. I admire him for his nerve in charging $2 a seat."—New York Herald.

GROWTH OF CARICATURE.

John Law's Wild Schemes Gave It a Tremendous Impetus.

Caricature is nowadays one of the principal methods of criticism. No movement can overreach the mark without eliciting dozens of works of art from caricaturists all over this and all other countries.

This branch of criticism and attack dates far back, but the greatest impulse it ever felt came from the age of tremendous speculation, when, in 1719 and 1730 John Law was manipulating things financial in France. Never before had the financial world been so carried off its feet as it was at that time. Members of the nobility were waiting for a chance to purchase shares in Law's schemes. Duchesses and ladies of high renown tried their most persuasive charms on Law in the attempt to get hold of shares. Men hired out their backs for writing desks, so great was the press of business in making contracts, and one hunchback is reputed to have made 100,000 francs in this way in a few weeks. The French went veritably mad over the schemes to become wealthy. Naturally the papers of the time, especially those of Holland, caricatured the state of affairs. There were pictures of all sorts caricaturing Law, the nobility, the schemes and everything connected with them.

It was this tremendous amount of pictorial work that first directed the energies of William Hogarth in London in this direction. Caricaturing began to be used more and more in the political field, and soon afterward it caused the shelving of Robert Walpole from the English ministry. Ever since then has caricaturing been one of the bitterest and most effectual methods of checking public men and their schemes.

Another Knock.

"Hotel clerks are cold hearted," sighed the shabby tragedian, who was traveling with a toothbrush and a compass.

"Speaking from experience, pal?" asked his barnstorming chum.

"Sure! I approached the clerk of the Red Dog inn and told him actors deserved special terms."

"Ah, indeed! And what did he say?"

"He said yes, they deserved six month terms in the county workhouse."—Chicago News.

If All Candidates Wore White.

The word "candidate" is from the Latin "candidatus." Literally it means white robed, and it was thus called because in Rome those who sought office wore a glittering white toga. Fancy, if you can, all our modern Americans dressed in accordance with their political ambitions. In some sections there would be no such thing as a dark suit of clothes. Washington would simply be one shining center of universal whiteness.—Saturday Evening Post.

SPECIAL OFFER:

Marlin

THE Marlin Model 1894 is a medium light weight repeating rifle, a well proportioned, finely balanced gun with all the advantages and comforts of the Marlin solid-top, side-ejecting construction. It is quick and easy of operation, accurate up to 300 yards and a very pleasant gun to carry and to shoot.

For settled districts and farming country where the shooting at woodchucks, badgers, foxes, 'coons, hawks, etc., is at ranges from 100 to 200 yards, the .25-20 and .32-20 rifles with the black and low-pressure smokeless loads cannot be equalled for accuracy and safety. The factory ammunition for the Model '94 rifles is cheap, and can be reloaded at very small cost.

The up-to-date sportsman needs the "Marlin Book" every day in the year. It contains 136 pages of live stuff for the man who loves a good gun, and wants to know everything about it. FREE for 3 stamps postage.

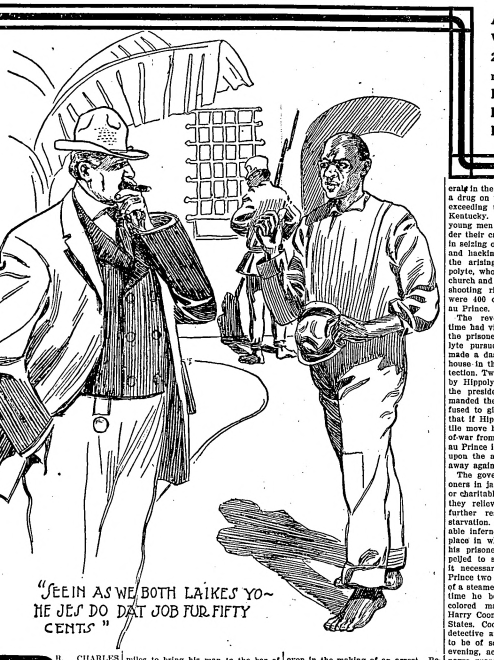
A Record of One of the Deeds of John Wilson Murray, the Master Sleuth

An Achievement of the Famous Detective Which Brought Him Glory—His Chase of 20,000 Miles to Apprehend a Pious Nurseryman, Who Turned Crook—Has Hard Work Finding Jail to House His Prisoner, But Finally Noted Sleuth Lands the Man at Halifax and Conviction Is Rapidly Secured.



"SEEIN AS WE BOTH LAIKES YO—HE JES DO DAT JOB FUR FIFTY CENTS"

MR. CHARLES HILTON DAVIDSON of Burlington, Ontario, Canada, was a nice, pious gentleman highly respected by the members of the community of which he was regarded as a bright and shining light. By profession a nurseryman of the firm of John Davidson & Sons, he had also a soul for music and filled excellently the position of organist with a church choir to which he belonged. Charles was 40 years old and immensely popular.

Ever to the front where religious exercises were concerned, in October, 1892, he had arranged for a grand song recital by the choir, when just as plans for the entertainment were in full swing he vanished mysteriously.

Then, much to the horror of his acquaintances, it transpired that the enterprising Mr. Davidson had passed a series of forged notes on the Bank of Hamilton, some of them the notes of non-existent presons, and others the alleged notes of farmers who had never signed them. The department of justice promptly detailed Wilson Murray on the case, and that sagacious hunter of wrongdoers called on James Turnbull, manager of the bank, to talk over the matter with him.

From the first the manager was insistent that Davidson be brought back and punished, no matter at what cost. It was not alone the sum of money taken from the bank in this particular instance that influenced Turnbull in his determination. Following the principle which leads a farmer to nail a dead crow to a post as a warning to other despoilers of his crops, the bank manager argued that to convict Davidson would deter other would-be forgers from exercising their talents at the expense of his treasury vaults.

"If you have to follow this fellow to the ends of the earth, do so, but get him," quoth Turnbull grimly. "It makes no difference what amount of money you have to spend so long as you succeed in making an example of Davidson."

The manager's words were prophetic for the chase proved to be one that cost thousands of dollars and caused Murray to travel over 20,000 miles to bring his man to the bar of Canadian justice. The detective first turned his attention to Davidson's wife. That lady was busily engaged in making preparations to leave Canada, when Murray intercepted a letter to her showing that the defaulter was in Mexico. Thereupon he prepared extradition papers and started following Mrs. Davidson's route. He left on November 8 and was joined in Chicago by Mr. Bartlett, an accountant of the Bank of Hamilton, who knew Davidson personally, and accompanied Murray to El Paso, Texas, on the border of Mexico.

They reached El Paso on November 16, and Murray paid a visit to his friend, Manager Davis, of the Wells-Fargo Express company. This gentleman furnished him with letters to several persons in Mexico, among them being Supt. Comfort, of the Mexicon Central railroad. Murray called upon Comfort at Ciudad Juarez. He had already located Davidson, under the name of Graham, checking cars for the railroad company. The superintendent telegraphed to Graham to come to Ciudad Juarez. He also sent for the mayor of the city, a polite, suave Mexican gentleman, to whom Murray explained his mission and desire to have Davidson taken into custody. The mayor bowed magnificently, smiled, bowed again, and said that he would be "pleasurably agitated" to have officers ready to arrest the malefactor outrageous when the latter arrived. Mr. Comfort stated that Davidson would be there in about four hours, whereupon the mayor bent double in a third sweeping bow, indulged in another expansive smile, and withdrew.

Four hours later the street outside the superintendent's office re-echoed to the steady tread of marching feet and imposing rattle of arms as the marchers came to a halt. Looking out of the window Murray perceived a body of 60 men clad in full uniform and armed with carbines. At their head the intendente and mayor stood proudly. Murray gazed upon the impressive sight in awe-stricken surprise.

"Why, I only needed one man," he said finally.

The intendente and mayor surveyed the speaker with an air of haughty scorn.

"Sir," said the mayor with a courteous bow, "I am permitted to inform you that in this our country there is dignity and ceremony to be observed even in the making of an arrest. Besides, who knows? this prisoner may of a desperate and ferocious nature be."

Clearly there was no room for argument. The detective acknowledged submission to the august official's decision by a bow modeled closely on the lines of the latter's own theatrical salutation, and the preliminary formalities were at an end. Ten minutes later Davidson made his appearance on the scene and Murray pointed him out to the mayor. The latter whispered excitedly to the intendente, who drew himself erect and barked out a stern, sharp command. Immediately the 60 soldiers whirled around, pounced heroically upon Davidson, formed a hollow square about him, with carbines levelled directly at his head, and marched him off in triumph to the calaboose.

The mayor was in transports of delight.

"Truly it is of a wonder," he exclaimed, as the valiant 60, without a tremor of fear, marched away with their lone victim. "Behold you the defenders of our Mexico, Senor Murray? Such courage! Such precision! Beautiful! Bravo, bravo!"

The detective's emotion was too great to be expressed in mere words and he bowed profoundly. Upon visiting Davidson in the calaboose the latter denied his identity.

"That won't work," said Murray crisply. "I have a man from the bank who knows you, waiting across the river."

Davidson sighed. "Oh, well," he said relunctantly, "in that case I'm willing to admit that I'm Davidson," and he signed a paper to that effect. On the following morning Bartlett identified the prisoner, and then returned to Canada by rail.

Although Murray had his man, the most serious part of the undertaking—Davidson's safe return to Canada—was the problem which now confronted him.

Captor and captured sailed on the Spanish steamer Manula and arrived in Port au Prince on January 17.

It chanced that one Sunday morning, while President Hippolyte was at church, 20 young men went to his house in the big square, a large mansion, with a high stone wall topped with iron spikes. They passed the sentry at the gate as members of the National guard and entered the house. There was a choice collection of generals in the building, for generals were a drug on the market in Hayti—even exceeding the number of colonels in Kentucky. The twenty enterprising young men had swords concealed under their capes and they lost no time in seizing one of the unlucky generals and hacking off his head. News of the arising reached President Hippolyte, who promptly hastened out of church and rallied his men, who began shooting right and left until there were 400 corpses lying around Port au Prince.

The revolutionists in the meantime had visited the jail and released the prisoners, 200 in all, and Hippolyte pursued them. Many of them made a dash for the British consul's house in the hills and demanded protection. Tweedie was then approached by Hippolyte's army, commanded by the president's son. The army demanded the refugees but Tweedie refused to give them up, and declared that if Hippolyte's army made a hostile move he would summons a man-of-war from Port Royal and blow Port au Prince into South America. Whereupon the army saluted and marched away again.

The government did not feed prisoners in jail at that time. If friends or charitable people did not feed them they relieved the authorities of all further responsibility by dying of starvation. The jail itself was a veritable inferno but there was no other place in which Murray could confine his prisoner, so Davidson was compelled to stay there. Murray found it necessary to remain in Port au Prince two weeks, pending the sailing of a steamer for Jamaica. During this time he became acquainted with a colored man named, appropriately, Harry Coon, who had worked in the States. Coon took quite a liking to the detective and was genuinely anxious to be of some service to him. One evening, accompanied by one of the negro guards from the jail, he called upon Murray, led him to one side and whispered mysteriously:

"Yo' knows dat man Davidson of youah's?" said Mr. Coon.

"Sure," responded Murray, anxiously. "What's wrong? He hasn't made his escape, has he?"

The negro shook his head. "No, sah, he ain't," he replied; "but what I wants to say is dat if dis yere prisner of youah's is much trouble an' yo' all wants to git rid of him, why dis yeah guard hyah a ma pertikler friend of mine, an' he's willin' to shoot him for two dollahs."

"Good heavens, no!" exclaimed Murray. "Why, man, you'd both be hanged."

Harry Coon repeated this objection to his friend, but the latter dismissed it with a contemptuous wave of his hand. "Dat all right," he said reassuringly. "I do de job neat and—" with a sudden burst of generosity—"I shoot him for yo' for dollah an' a half."

Murray refused to be tempted even by this bargain sale offer, and Mr. Coon and his friend held another consultation, from which the former emerged with the radiant light of a new hope shining on his sable countenance.

"Mistah Murray, suh," he announced triumphantly, "I'se talked Jim heah ovah, an' he ses, seeing' yo' a friend of mine an' we both likes yo', he jes' do dat job fur 50 cents."

"It's kind of you both," returned Murray, "but it happens that I don't want it done at all."

His manner was emphatic and the two negroes walked away mournfully. Harry Coon stopped long enough to shake his head reprovingly at the detective. "Deed, Mistah Murray," he said, "yo' won't be able to git him shot no cheaper, an' my friend, he'd bin suah to git him wit' de first bullet. Jim am de bes' shooter in dis yeah army, so he is."

On January 29, Murray and Davidson sailed for Jamaica on the Atlas liner Ardine, the prisoner, whatever the future might hold for him, was deeply grateful for his release from the dismal quarters of Port au Prince jail.

The Royal Mail steamer sailed for Southampton on February 8 with the detective and prisoner aboard. They reached Southampton February 23, and Murray took his man direct to London. He was met at Waterloo station by two Scotland Yard officers. Supt. John Schore was head of Scotland Yard at that time and Murray went to see him.

"Have you papers entitling you to hold your prisoner in England?" enquired Schore.

Murray produced the warrant of recipias signed by the governor general of Canada, and Schore perused it carefully.

"It isn't enough, Murray," he said. "They won't keep your prisoner here on that."

Rather aghast at the result of his inquiries, Murray in this extremity bethought himself of Sir Charles Tupper, the high commissioner of Canada, to whom he accordingly stated his case. Much to the worried detective's relief Sir Charles proved sympathetic. He called for his carriage and drove with Murray to the home office, where he argued the case with the home and colonial secretaries. But both of these gentlemen refused to change their verdicts. The prisoner could legally be kept in an English jail one night and not an hour longer. It appeared to Murray as though he had run his head against a stone wall in the very place, of all others, where he least expected it. And to crown all, there was no steamer due to leave for Canada within a week. Sir Charles meditated in silence for a while as the carriage rolled away from the home office. Suddenly he glanced at Murray and smiled.

"There is not a prison in England that will refuse to hold your man for one night," he said. "It would be quite possible, although not pleasant, for you to keep tramping with him from prison to prison, and there are jails enough in the country to last until the steamer sails. But a better plan would be for you to take your prisoner to Liverpool. You can say that the Liverpool jail is very dirty and you don't want to submit him to the hardship of being confined in it for a week. Then hire somebody to guard him outside the prison. Davidson will probably be thankful for the courtesy."

The problem was solved. Schore, the chief of Scotland Yard, telegraphed to Liverpool; Murray went there with his prisoner and was met at the station by Chief Inspector McConkey. All went smoothly, and on March 2 Murray and Davidson sailed from Liverpool on the Sarnia.

It seemed as though all Murray's difficulties with his charge were at an end, when on March 11 the Sarnia broke a crank shaft and the vessel drifted helplessly for days. When the needful repairs were finished the Sarnia was about 60 miles from St. Pierre. On March 16, the fifth day after the accident, the boat ran into a terrific hurricane, the wind blowing 85 miles an hour and the sea running mountains high. Fortunately the Sarnia's broken shaft had been repaired and she managed to jog slowly along in the teeth of the storm at about eight miles an hour. Two steamers, the coal tank America and the Mauranda of Picton, spoke the crippled liner, but assistance was declined and she limped doggedly on her way. During the voyage Davidson gave a number of musical entertainments which were a source of much pleasure to his fellow passengers and did much toward making him popular and lessening the monotony of the unduly extended trip.

But all things must come to an end and at last, on the night of March 19, Murray's eyes rested upon the welcome lights of Halifax, and three days later he handed his prisoner over to the authorities of Milton jail. Davidson received a speedy trial, was found guilty and sentenced to five years in Kingston penitentiary.

It had been a long and eventful pilgrimage for Murray, lasting as it did from November 8, 1892, to March 22, 1893. In the four months that elapsed he had traveled over 20,000 miles. But in the eyes of the law the result was worth the expense and trouble involved. Davidson was caught, brought back and punished, and the case of this pious organist and nurseryman who turned forger, then fugitive, in vain, was written down in the stern records of justice as a warning to others of his class who might seek to emulate his example.

Western Canada the Pennant Winner

"The Last Best West"

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The government of Canada now gives to every actual settler 160 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3,00 an acre. The 300,000 contented American settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1908 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Charge False Pretenses.

Bemidji.—Charles Schaffer, charged with securing money under false pretenses on certified checks for a total of $9,000, was taken this morning from the Beltrami county jail, which is the official jail of Koochiching county, to Brainerd by Sheriff McIntosh of International Falls, in order, it was said, that Schaffer might enter a plea of guilty before Judge McClenahan of the district court. Schaffer was in Crookston when he found a package of twelve certificates of deposits amounting to $9,000, drawn in favor of Nels Erickson, who lives near that city. Schaefer then went to Blackduck, where, it is alleged, secured small amounts of money from two saloon keepers, Joe Bray and Henry Dahlstel, by leaving certificates as collateral, and at Northome obtained $35 from Matt Jones by depositing a $1,000 certificate.

War on Freight Rates.

Owatonna.—Southern Minnesota is thoroughly aroused over the alleged discrimination in freight rates against this section and at a meeting in this city of the representative business men and farmers of the district it was unanimously decided to make an energetic protest to the state railroad and warehouse commission. "War to the last ditch" is the way Major Reidel of Rochester expressed it. Senator T. E. Cashman of Owatonna was selected to bring the matter before the legislature. It is alleged by the prominent shippers of this section that discrimination is repeatedly shown in favor of the Twin Cities and it is time to call a halt. The shippers say that they ask only to be treated with equitable fairness in the matter and will insist that their rights be granted.

Finds Maniac on Train.

Minneapolis.—Conductor Torrence of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul passenger train taht arrived in St. Paul from Hastings and the southern part of the state found himself confronting a glaring eyed maniac in the rear of one of the catches and correctly surmised that the man had escaped from the asylum at Hastings. The St. Paul police had been informed of the escape of a lunatic from the Hastings institution and were on the lookout for him. The conductor telegraphed ahead to Special Agent Dan Shanahan of the St. Paul road and when the train arrived the man was turned over to Patrolman Williams of the union depot and held here awaiting the arrival of the officers from Hastings.

Barely Alive in Snow Drift.

Stillwater.—James McGarry, a pioneer farmer living a few miles north west of this city who was thrown into a snow drift, was nearly dead from the shock and smothering when rescued and taken to a nearby farmhouse. He is the father of twenty-two children, eighteen of whom are alive, and is feeble from old age. Leaving this city in a cutter for home his horse got its foot fast between a guard and track rail of the Northern Pacific road at Massey's crossing. A passenger train coming along at the time frightened the animal which broke loose from the cutter after tumbling Mr. McGarry out in an unconscious condition and he was later able to go home.

South Shore to Extend Line.

Duluth.—It is reported here that the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic road is preparing to extend its line from Duluth to Thief River Falls, to connect there with the Soo. Two surveys were made some time ago. The proposed extension would give the Canadian Pacific, with its recently acquired Wisconsin Central line from Chicago to Duluth, an almost air line from Chicago to Winnipeg.

NEWS NOTES.

Stillwater.—This city has turned over $280 more to the state on account of the proposed state inebriate hospital. This represents 2 per cent tax on saloon licenses for six months.

New Ulm.—Louis Pierckhof of Owatonna, a fireman of a west bound special freight train on the Northwestern railway, was run over by the engine he was firing, which severed his right leg at the hip.

Minneapolis.—Following a diligent two days' search, Andreas Gombose, alias Frank McGee, the murderer of August Bayer, who was shot to death Tuesday night, was arrested Wednesday. The murderer confessed his crime to the police, saying that he intended to kill and rob Bayer. Gombose was arrested as he applied at the Jensen house in search of work, and walked voluntarily into the police trap laid for him.

Glenwood.—George Sherrer died suddenly. He partook of a hearty supper and was apparently in the best of health. He was married to Mrs. Antonie Bernain about the middle of November.

Duluth.—Ole Trulson, a laborer, 58 years old, and employed by John Runquist, contractor, met a horrible death on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern tracks, when he was run over by one of the D., M. & N. switch engines.

Brainerd.—A jury in the district court found Ralph Morey not guilty of the killing of John Bushway.

Atwater.—The stockholders of the Atwater telephone company held their annual meeting and re-elected the five directors who have served since the organization of the company.

Stillwater.—Timbers for putting new braces in the bridge over the St. Croix, and for laying 1,000 feet of new flooring are arriving and active work will be commenced on repairs at once.

Sauk Rapids.—Secretary M. W. Halloran of the Sauk Rapids Commercial club has been informed by Superintendent Wilson that a farmers' institute will be held at Sauk Rapids on Feb. 6.

Mankato.—The charter commission voted unanimously to prepare a new charter on the commission plan, similar to the Galveston and Des Moines plans, but modified to suit the local needs of Mankato.

Minneapolis.—Rev. O. J. Flagstad, pastor of the Bethany Norwegian Lutheran church, has received a call from Our Savior's Lutheran church at Chippewa Falls, Wis. He will take the matter up with the congregation, which he has served for five years, before he comes to any decision.

Atwater. — The Atwater Creamery company has re-elected the following officers: Henry Boese, president; William Johnson, secretary; O. J. Gilbertson, treasurer. Andrew Amdahl, William Behm and E. M. Erickson were re-elected directors for three years. William Johnson was again elected as the company's buttermaker.

Little Falls.—Fire which destroyed a resort just west of the city, resulted in the death of Alex Waltzka, the father of the proprietress, Pearl Miller, who was badly burned about the face and arms trying to save Waltzka. The inmates of the house barely escaped. The house was highly inflammable and burned fast. Incendiarism is suspected.

St. Cloud.—The sixteenth annual meeting of the Home and Foreign Missionary societies of the St. Cloud presbytery will convene in this city March 18 and 19. Mrs. E. Everett Clark of St. Cloud is president of the home, and Mrs. T. M. Findley of Spicer of the foreign. Delegates from Litchfield, Willmar, Greenleaf, Royalton and Maynard will attend.

Of the new melodramatic plays of this season's vintage, none have been more successful or have been more elaborately staged than "Lucky Jim," which will be seen at the Bijou opera house, Minneapolis, the week of January 31, with young Joseph Stanley in the star role. Stanley himself is part author of the play, his collaborator being William C. Beckwith.

Brainerd.—A meeting of the stockholders of the Security State bank was held and at the close D. D. Divine, state bank examiner, stated that the meeting adjourned to meet Feb. 17, by which time the assessments on the capital stock would be paid and the bank would reorganize and reopen. George Storck, of Earlham, Iowa, father of the cashier, was present and personally pledged himself to see that every dollar of the assessments is paid.

Fairmont.—Fred Goerndt, the 18 year-old son of William Goerndt, a prominent farmer residing near Granada and about six miles east of Fairmont, was the victim of an accidental shooting. The young man left home carrying a gun and some traps, which he intended setting in a slough on his father's farm. He slipped on the ice and his gun was discharged, killing him instantly. Failing to return home his father went out to look for him about four hours later and discovered the dead body.

Atwater.—The remains of Dr. L. B. Woolson, a former resident of this place, were forwarded here from Northfield for interment under the auspices of the local Masonic lodge, of which he was a charter member. Dr. Woolson died on Tuesday at the Odd Fellows' home in Northfield, at the age of 96 years. His wife died in 1888 and he leaves no relatives. The burial was beside the remains of his wife. The doctor was one of the early settlers of Atwater. He was one of the first postmasters and conducted the first drug store.

Eveleth.—An enthusiastic mass meeting was held in Eveleth at which Dr. Bracken, secretary of the state board of health, and other physicians spoke in connection with anti-tuberculosis exhibit. Resolutions were adopted urging the St. Louis county commissioners to appropriate $10,000 for the construction of a sanitarium in this county for treating tuberculosis. It was pointed out that the largest percentage of tuberculosis cases in the state are in this section among the foreign element, and the institution for treating disease should be nearer than Walker.

Duluth.—Ten women of the restricted district recently ordered closed were in municipal court charged with defying the law. They pleaded not guilty; having retained attorneys, and propose to fight the charges. The outcome of the effort to drive women out of town is attracting much attention

Bemidji.—Peter Palm of Nymore, who, it is alleged, recently stabbed John Coleman, a saloonkeeper in that village, was arraigned on a charge of assault in the first degree and pleaded not guilty. He was bound over to the next term of district court.

SPORTING GOSSIP

It is second nature for Jim McAleer to make deals. The manager of the St. Louis Browns likes to be trading all the time. In their first year in the American league when McAleer bagged a big bunch of National league stars, the Browns were runners-up for the Athletics, who won the pennant with a .610 percentage. McAleer's crowd finished five full games, or 36 points behind, winning 78 and losing 58 games. That was the best mark the Browns ever attained. If memory serves correctly McAleer gave Pitcher Red Donahue to Cleveland for big, awkward Gene Wright and $3,000. It was thought to be a great deal for McAleer, but Wright didn't amount to much. That year, 1903, found the Brown's in sixth position at the wind-up, with 65 victories and 74 defeats, a .468 percentage. In the fall of 1903 John Anderson was traded to New York for Rowdy Jack O'Connor. Hunter Hill was sent to Washington in exchange for Moran, who was played at third the following season. Pitcher Jack Powell was traded to New York for Harry Howell and $6,000. The Browns won the same number of games in 1904 as the year previous, but lost 13 more, finishing in sixth place again with a percentage of 428. Then came the trade of Jess Burkett to Boston for George Stone and $2,500. This deal did not seem to help much, for the Browns trailed the procession in 1905, winning 54 and losing 99 games, a .354 percentage. The next deal made Pitcher Jacobsen of Washington a Brown, and sent Willie Sutthoff to Washington. The Browns showed marked improvement in 1906, but were unable to get in the first division. They won 76 and lost 73 games, finishing fifth with a .510 mark. The next deals in order were those with Boston of Pitcher Cy Morgan for Bill Dineen, with New York of Catcher Branch Rickey for Infielder Joe Yeager, and with Cleveland of Infielder Pete O'Brien for Catcher Fred Buelow. The season of 1907 again found the Browns in a rut. They finished sixth with a percentage of .454, winning 69 and losing 83 games. Then came the big trade which made Jimmy Williams and Danny Hoffman of New York and Hobe Ferris of Boston Brownies, while Charley Hemphill, Harry Niles and Fred Glade went to New York. McAleer also traded Ollie Pickering to Washington for Charley Jones. Late in the season Catcher Bert Blue was swapped for Sid Smith of the Athletics. The Browns seemed to come down to earth last season and were pennant contenders for a greater part of the year. They made their best showing since their first year in the American league, winning 83 and losing 69 games, a percentage of .546, and finished fourth. There is no question but that McAleer got the best of most of his deals, but he has seldom cashed on any or all of them as far as attaining a high position in the American league race is concerned.

Foul Tip Terror of Catchers.

The foul tip is responsible for removing for varying periods from the field of action almost every big league backstop of prominence. Last year Criger, Kling, Sullivan, Clarke, Bemis, Schmidt, Schreck and Bresnahan were the harvest that it reaped. A broken finger hurt Detroit's chances in the world's series; Chicago claims Sullivan's absence on account of a damaged digit spoiled its pennant chances, while Cleveland could most probably have raked up one more game had Clarke not had his finger hurt. Some people wonder why it is that many of the catchers in the game right along bat way down next to pitcher. Freddy Payne claims that it is because the catcher is sure to be carrying one or more very sore fingers and consequently cannot grip his club.

HOME COUGH CURE.

Go to your druggist and get one-half ounce Concentrated pine compound, two ounces of glycerine, half a pint of good whiskey; mix it up, and use it in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours, shaking the bottle each time. Any druggist can supply ingredients.

The Concentrated pine is a pine product refined for medical use and comes only in half ounce bottles, each enclosed in a round case which is airtight and preserves the fluid in its full strength, but be sure it is labeled "Concentrated." A prominent local druggist says he has filled this prescription hundreds of times and has seen it work wonders.

The Use of a Fat Man.

"I don't know whether I'll like Jack or not when I see him again," said she. "He wrote me he was getting fat. I hate a fat man."

"A fat man's all right," said the boy who was playing cards on the floor, "when a burglar gets in. A fat man will scare a burglar."

"But," she demurred, "I'm not marrying a man just because he's good to scare burglars with, am I?"

WONDERBERRY PLANT,
THREE MONTHS FROM SEED.

THE WONDERBERRY

Luther Burbank's Greatest Creation. A Luscious Berry Ripening in Three Months from Seed. Seed 20 Cts. Per Pkt., 3 Pkts. for 50 Cts., Postpaid

Fruit blue-black like an enormous rich blueberry in looks and taste. Unsurpassed for eating raw, cooked, canned or preserved in any form. The greatest garden fruit ever introduced and equally valuable in hot, dry, cold or wet climates. Easiest plant in the world to grow, succeeding anywhere and yielding great masses of rich fruit all summer and fall—and all winter in pots—(As a pot plant it is both ornamental and useful). The greatest boon to the family garden ever known. Everybody can and will grow it.

Luther Burbank, of California, the world famous hybridizer, originated this new fruit and turned it over to me to introduce. He says of it: "This absolutely new berry plant is of great interest and value as it bears the most delicious, wholesome and healthful berries in utmost profusion and always comes true from seed."

I AM THE SOLE INTRODUCER AND GENUINE SEED CAN BE HAD NOWHERE ELSE.

FOR 20 CTS. (Silver or Stamps) I will send 1 pkt. Wonderberry seed, (3 pkts. for 50 cts.) and my GREAT CATALOGUE which tells all about it and my BIG CASH PRIZES to agents. AGENTS WANTED.

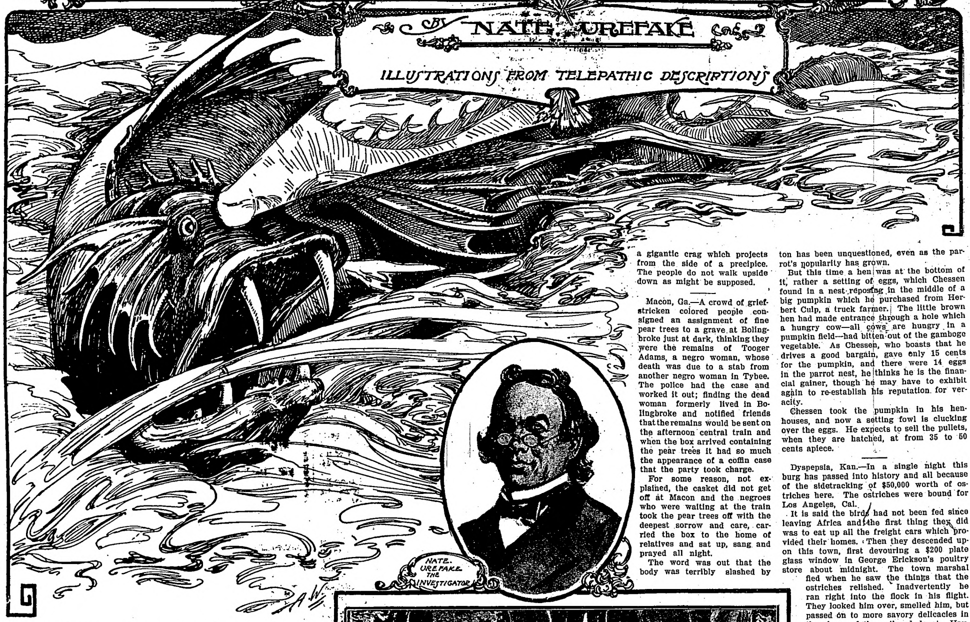
DOUBLE CROSSING NATURE

BY NATE UREFAKE

ILLUSTRATIONS FROM TELEPATHIC DESCRIPTIONS



UNUSUAL OCCURRENCES in the animal and other kingdoms are always the most interesting to the American people. The editor realizes that of late there have not been enough "queer" happenings, which seemingly violate nature's laws, and though usually law-abiding he has endeavored to supply the want. In pursuance with this policy Nate Urefake, the renowned and much-traveled naturalist, who declined President Roosevelt's offer to accompany the executive on his East African hunting trip, was employed to scout up hundreds of unusual, yet interesting occurrences. The tour took several months and from time to time the author mailed the following accounts of the strange things which were reported to him. Only this week Mr. Urefake's dreams came to an end, and he delicately confided that he had sworn off "for good."—Editor's Note.

PARIS CREEK, N. M.—This town was deeply stirred up and Paris Creek society circles were unusually agog upon the arrival of your correspondent. The whereof of this was the birth of an ossified chicken from out of a hard boiled egg. This strange occurrence took place on the farm of H. J. Seaman, a wealthy countryman.

Mr. Seaman avers that he placed the hard boiled egg in the mother hen's nest simply to coax her to lay and she, being deceived into the belief that she had laid the egg, proceeded to hatch it out, the process taking four months.

The wee chick has no feathers and much resembles a pottery creation. It walks mechanically, its small legs working in sockets, while its neck does not wag like that of the ordinary fowl in search of food. The youngster appears in good health and will probably live. So hard is the chick's body that Mr. Seaman will paint the stars and stripes where the feathers should be and when the paint is dry he will present the wee fowl to the Smithsonian institution at Washington, which has been seeking just such a phenomenon for the past 80 years.

Tuscalooloo, Nev.—One of the quaintest exhibitions of mother love which ever drew tears to the eyes of a matinee girl was that which this small bustling city witnessed today when a number of town officials off on a junket, returned to tell of the manner in which a mountain lion protected its young.

The officials had come to a point in a mountain pass and were surprised to see a little distance ahead of them a male and female mountain lion rolling a gigantic boulder down the side of a hillock. Deftly the pair placed the big rock against a hole in the face of the mountain and then departed in search of food. It was marvelous in the eyes of the city officials and they proceeded to investigate. In the cavern they found seven lion cubs, playing peek-a-boo, secure from attack.

The watchers hid a short distance away and a few minutes later were greeted by the soft footfalls of the returning lions. The male, loosening a small rock beneath the boulder, allowed it to slip a few feet to the right and both animals passed into the cavern and out of sight.

This is not a local option town. Some of the city officials missed the rare sight, being too tired.

Morning After, Ark.—In a part of this county which is seldom frequented was found to-day a tree growing downward into the ground. It is the only case of its kind in the world. Your correspondent saw the rare sight. The roots of the tree project several feet above the ground and are of the palest green, while the leaves, some of which the writer dug up, are white and taste not unlike celery.

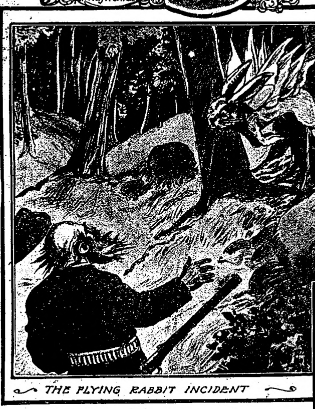
The only explanation of the strange occurrence was given by an old Indian who is said to have lived in this section 200 years. He is known as Big Chief Kick-a-Hole-in-the-Sky, and he declares that long ago the chief of the happy hunting ground vented his wrath upon Big Chief Kick-a-Hole-in-the-Sky's great-grandfather, who had planted many trees. He caused the seeds to be planted upside down, thus accounting for nature's reversal. There was once a whole grove of this inverted timber.

"Heap much too plenty bunk," sighed the aged redskin, as he turned to re-enter his cabin.

Firewater, Minn.—Josh Stillings arrived in this city to-day from a hunting trip and told a wonderful story, which, upon investigation of the quality of the liquor which Mr. Stillings carries, your correspondent found to be an absolutely true tale. Mr. Stillings said:

"I was hunting b'ars up north and had traced a big one into a clump of trees when, to my surprise, I saw fly towards me a full-grown jack rabbit, equipped with eight pairs of wings. The rabbit flew faster than the fastest train I ever rode upon. When my astonishment had somewhat subsided I aimed my rifle at a point about a mile ahead of the queer animal and so fast did it fly that it ran right into the shot. After half an hour's walk I came upon the carcass, which had frozen stiff. The wings were of fluffy down and curiously shaped. I was anxious to bring the flying rabbit home, but that night it was mysteriously stolen and so I have no proof for my story other than what little licker I have left in my flask. Have another drink, friend?"

Your correspondent then saw a whole flock of flying rabbits. The phenomenon is wholly unaccountable.



THE FLYING RABBIT INCIDENT

Gwan, N. J.—The most wonderful sea fish ever seen appeared off this town twice during the past few days—once by night and once by day. The reptile is shaped like a serpent and planted between its eyes is a gigantic headlight, which is only visible at night and which marks the reptile's progress through the waves. The constant sputter of electricity in the form of dots and dashes led summer residents here to believe that the serpent uses its tail for a wireless instrument and thus conveys messages to others of its species who are in deeper water. The serpent seemed to like this little summer village until its appearance at night when it is supposed that the loving couples on the sands either made it envious or gave rise to nausea. Then it disappeared, its tail ticking off the telegrapher's "30," which means "good night," and sometimes "never again." For several days the young women bathers deserted their favorite haunts on the sands and the young men wittily said that at that time there was some excuse for not getting their pretty bathing suits wet.

Delingpath, Cal.—Probably the most wonderful mistake which nature ever made is that which was unearthed here in the birth of a cow with its horns on its rear hoofs. It has no horns on its head. It was several months before the horns on its hoofs began to sprout. It is a very savage animal and none dare go near it, for it fights just as does a game rooster and is more vicious. The owner, Mr. A. J. Hirshfield, is planning to breed the species and hopes to develop a new sport to take the place of both chicken fighting and bull fights. He held a contest last week between a bull dog and his "devil cow," the name which residents of this section have applied to the animal and the cow reduced the canine to mincemeat, giving rise to a new industry—that of the manufacture of bull-dog sausage.

Ding a Ling, China.—The belief of five-year-old American boys that if they dig through the earth they will slide out in Chinese territory was illustrated in a jocular vein to-day when your correspondent arrived in a little suburb outside of Ding a Ling, in which all the houses are inverted and hang thus from a gigantic crag which projects from the side of a precipice. The people do not walk upside down as might be supposed.

Macon, Ga.—A crowd of grief-stricken colored people consigned an assignment of fine pear trees to a grave at Bolingbroke just at dark, thinking they were the remains of Tooger Adams, a negro woman, whose death was due to a stab from another negro woman in Tybee. The police had the case and worked it out; finding the dead woman formerly lived in Bolingbroke and notified friends that the remains would be sent on the afternoon central train and when the box arrived containing the pear trees it had so much the appearance of a coffin case that the party took charge.

For some reason, not explained, the casket did not get off at Macon and the negroes who were waiting at the train took the pear trees off with the deepest sorrow and care, carried the box to the home of relatives and sat up, sang and prayed all night.

The word was out that the body was terribly slashed by the woman's assailant and for that reason, together with the long delay after death, the box was not opened. At the hour for the funeral the colored pastor had his text: "By their fruits ye shall know them." Pallbearers, mourners and attendants, after the usual custom, actually buried the pear trees.

When the next northbound Central passenger train came bearing the corpse of the dead woman and the funeral attendants were notified, there was amazement and surprise. Winship Cabaniss, one of the most prominent farmers of the community, found the mistake when he made a search for the pear trees.

Alton, Ill.—Nature, in an Altonian mood, brought another wonder to the door of James Chessen of East Alton, noted as the owner of the famous swearing parrot. When Chessan first proclaimed the versatility of his parrot's powers in profanity the bird was dubbed a nature fake. So Chessen invited a number of persons, among them a divinity student, to hear the bird rehearse. Since then Chessen's reputation for truthfulness in East Alton has been unquestioned, even as the parrot's popularity has grown.

But this time a hen was at the bottom of it, rather a setting of eggs, which Chessen found in a nest reposing in the middle of a big pumpkin which he purchased from Herbert Culp, a truck farmer. The little brown hen had made entrance through a hole which a hungry cow—all cows are hungry in a pumpkin field—had bitten out of the gamboge vegetable. As Chessen, who boasts that he drives a good bargain, gave only 15 cents for the pumpkin, and there were 14 eggs in the parrot nest, he thinks he is the financial gainer, though he may have to exhibit again to re-establish his reputation for veracity.

Chessen took the pumpkin in his henhouses, and now a setting fowl is clucking over the eggs. He expects to sell the pullets, when they are hatched, at from 35 to 50 cents apiece.

Dyspepsia, Kan.—In a single night this burg has passed into history and all because of the sidetracking of $50,000 worth of ostriches here. The ostriches were bound for Los Angeles, Cal.

It is said the birds had not been fed since leaving Africa and the first thing they did was to eat up all the freight cars which provided their homes. Then they descended upon this town, first devouring a $200 plate glass window in George Erickson's poultry store about midnight. The town marshal fled when he saw the things that the ostriches relished. Inadvertently he ran right into the flock in his flight. They looked him over, smelled him, but passed on to more savory delicacies in the shape of the railroad depot. Having eaten this they started in on the homes of the residents and when dawn came there was only a crumpled mass of ostrich language and some human cuss words, where the town once stood. Most of the residents fled in their night clothing to Hawkeye, a near-by village, and have formed the Society for the Prevention of Wearing Ostrich Plumes. The birds are now roaming the country devouring everything in their way. The militia company at Hawkinsville may be called out.

Later—It wasn't. The ostriches died.

Atmosphere, N. C.—Physicians who were performing an operation for appendicitis upon Herman Graustark in this city to-day were astounded when they extracted four $5 gold-pieces from the appendix of the patient.

The currency was piled in the appendix when extracted and one report has it that the money was labeled "issue of 1904." Mr. Graustark is cashier in the First State Trust Company of this city and consequently was immediately placed under arrest on charges of misapplying the funds of the bank. He pleads innocence, declaring that he must have accidentally swallowed the coins while biting them to see if they were genuine.

Civil Service Commission Wants Home

U.S
CIVIL SERVICE

WASHINGTON.—Buffeted from pillar to post for a quarter of a century, the United States civil service commission is crying at the doorstep of the committee on appropriations of the house of representatives.

"Give me a home of my own," is the plaintive appeal of this national waif. Although established permanently in the affairs of the government, the civil service commission is a homeless wanderer without a place to lay its weary head. Five times since its establishment in 1883 it has been turned out of doors and forced to seek new living quarters. Now it is asking congress for $300,000 with which to build a modest dwelling place where it may be secure from eviction and where its work may be carried on in a proper and dignified manner. In asking congress for a home the commission has not been content to follow the conventional practice of pointing out how much money will be saved in rentals. The moral element in the proposition is important, also, according to the official communication addressed to the president by the commission and by him transmitted to congress.

It is nearly twenty-six years since the commission was organized. The early meetings in 1883 were held in the apartment of Dorman B. Eaton in the celebrated but dilapidated Wormley's hotel. Later the commission rented two rooms in a residence in Fourteenth street. From there it moved to the seed building of the department of agriculture. In 1885 it moved to a wing of the city hall building. In 1898 it moved to the Concordia building, and in 1900 it moved to its present wholly inadequate building.

The commission wants quarters that are permanent, that will be a creditable monument to the work it has done and an honor to the public service that it is performing. An appropriation of $300,000 will provide a proper site and building and this appropriation is recommended. In transmitting to congress the commission's letter and the draft of a bill for the appropriation, President Roosevelt says he approves the commission's recommendation.

Leaders in Congress Come from Cities

FROM CITIES FROM COUNTRY

MORE than half the membership of the United States senate and not quite half of the membership of the house of representatives in the present house come from cities and towns with more than 10,000 population. Of the 236 members of both houses who come from cities and towns 51 are in the senate and 185 in the house of representatives. Of the senators 38 are from the northern states and only 13 from the southern states, while among the representatives 145 are from the north and only 40 from the south. The leadership of both the house and senate on the Republican side is largely confined to men from the cities, while the Democratic leadership, in the house especially, is divided among men from the smaller communities. Sectionally the states of Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri have been included among the southern states, else the representation of that region among the members from the cities would be still further materially reduced.

It is noteworthy that of the city membership sent to congress 168 are lawyers and only 68 belong to other professions and avocations.

Two of the best all-around legislators in congress—Theodore E. Burton of Cleveland and John W. Weeks of Newton, Mass.—come from the cities. They are equally posted on currency, the tariff, the navy, agriculture and rivers and harbors. Representative Mann of Chicago is a recognized authority on the pure food and drugs act. F. P. Gillet of Massachusetts is the best-informed man on the civil service; Charles E. Townsend of Michigan on the interstate commerce laws, it being generally known that he practically drew the Hepburn railroad-rate act; James A. Tawney of Minnesota is the authority on appropriations, and Sereno E. Payne of New York on the raising of revenues to pay them; John Dalzell of Pennsylvania is the apostle of protection; W. S. Bennet of New York the strong man on the immigration laws, and Charles N. Fowler of New Jersey on currency.

Carriage for "Uncle Joe" in the Future

"UNCLE JOE" CANNON, plain farmer and unfrilled speaker of the house, will soon blossom out and put on more airs that a humming bird with two sets of wings. He is going to have a carriage with two prancing horses and a colored coachman.

He will dash along Pennsylvania avenue like a real plutocrat and throw dust in the eyes of the common toiler plodding along on his weary way. For all these years "Uncle Joe" has occupied the rear seat of a trailer and smoked his Porto Rican cigar in peace and content.

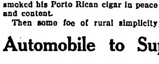
Then some foe of rural simplicity slipped over to the senate and whispered that Speaker Cannon should have a carriage. To make consistency a jewel it was suggested that the government ought to keep a vehicle for the vice-president.

The bait was swallowed in connection with the line and pole and the legislative executive and judicial appropriation bill provides that the vice-president and speaker shall each have a carriage.

It was figured that two prancing horses for each, with an appropriate conveyance having four wheels and a varnished body, would cost the government $5,000, and that lump sum was allowed for the innovation.

The item, which is incorporated for the first time, does not specify whether either of the officials shall have one or two horses, a rockaway, victoria, trap or phateon. It simply specifies horses and carriages.

Automobile to Supersede the Horse



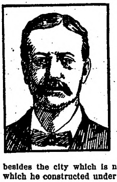
AUTOMOBILES will become a part of the White House equipment in the administration of William H. Taft, taking the place in a measure of the horses and carriages now used as a means of locomotion in and around Washington by the members of the Roosevelt family. One of President Roosevelt's pet aversions is the automobile. He has declined to purchase a car and only in two or three instances has he ever consented to be a passenger in one. On the other hand, Mr. Taft is very fond of the automobile. In the late political campaign he made many tours in high power cars, notably on his visit to New York, where he was compelled to make long jumps in accordance with arrangements made for him by the national and state committees.

The urgent deficiency bill recently reported, authorizes an appropriation of $12,000 for the purchase, care and maintenance of automobiles at the White House. This appropriation becomes available immediately. It will cover the initial cost of the machines which Mr. Taft will doubtless purchase and also provide for the care of the machines for the remainder of the current fiscal year, which will end on June 30. In the new fiscal year, beginning July 1, the White House automobiles will be provided for by an appropriation becoming available on that date, carried in the executive, legislative and judicial appropriation bill

According to statements made at the Capitol Mr. Taft intends to use the automobile exclusively in his movements in and about Washington. The provision in the urgent deficiency bill authorizing the use of automobiles at the White House was inserted in that measure at the request of President Elect Taft.

PROMINENT PEOPLE

NEW HARVARD PRESIDENT

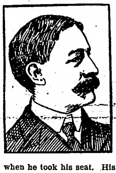


Abbott Lawrence Lowell, author, lawyer, Eaton professor of the science of government and distinguished scholar, who will succeed Charles W. Eliot as president of Harvard university when Dr. Eliot's resignation takes effect in May, is a son of one of the first families of Massachusetts. The city of Lowell was named after his paternal grandfather, the city of Lawrence after his maternal grandfather, Abbott Lawrence. He was born in this city on December 13, 1856, a son of Augustus Lowell and Katherine Bigelow Lawrence. Augustus Lowell was one of Boston's foremost financiers in his time. He founded Lowell institute, which has been managed so ably by the man who is to succeed to the helm of the great Cambridge university. Augustus Lowell's father left as a monument, besides the city which is named after him, the Boston and Lowell canal, which he constructed under great difficulties.

Upon graduation, Prof. Lowell entered Harvard Law school, and before he took off his mortar board there saw a year's active practice in the law offices of Putnam & Russell. He was graduated from the law school with honors, and in a partnership with Judge F. C. Lowell, a cousin, entered active practice in this city. In 1891, this partnership was enlarged to include Frederick J. Stimson. Six years later, Prof. Lowell resigned from the firm to become a lecturer on government at Cambridge. For the next three years he enjoyed a good sized chamber practice, but he found time to write "The Transfer of Stock in Corporations," a treatise which is a standard text book in law schools. His books on government and politics have earned for him an international reputation.

It was in 1900 that Dorman B. Eaton died, leaving $100,000 to found a chair of the science of government. Harvard selected Prof. Lowell for the position, which he has occupied ever since.

NEXT INDIANA SENATOR



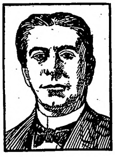
Benjamin F. Shively, who will succeed James A. Hemenway as senator from Indiana, is the first Democrat sent to the upper house of congress by the Hoosier state in 12 years.

Born on a farm in St. Joseph county, Indiana, March 20, 1857, he was the fourth in a family of eight children. His early experiences were those of the average farm boy until as a youth he entered the Indiana Normal school at Valparaiso. After being graduated from that institution he taught school from 1875 to 1880. Then he settled in South Bend, where he conducted a greenback newspaper and took an active interest in politics.

At the age of 27 he was elected congressman by the Democrats of the Thirteenth district, and was the youngest member of the house when he took his seat. His personal appearance as well as his mental ability contributed to his election. Over six feet tall and finely built, with a handsome face, he hade a favorable impression with his audience from the start, and his oratorical ability won further favor. As a member of congress he served one term that expired March 4, 1885, and then took up the study of law at South Bend. In the autumn of 1885 he entered the University of Michigan law school, and was graduated with the class of 1886.

In 1896 Mr. Shively was the Democratic candidate for governor, but the state was overwhelmingly Republican, and he was defeated, although he made a hard fight.

PLANNED FARMERS' INSTITUTE



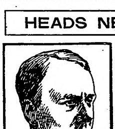
David Lubin, a San Francisco merchant, self-made and wealthy, is the man who devoted years and dollars to the work which reached its first tangible results when the king of Italy opened the session of the remarkable institution which went into history a few weeks ago as the first international institute of agriculture the world has ever known.

The major part of Lubin's fortune, made in his business, had come from the farmers, and it was long study in their interest which convinced him that an international gathering which would be a world's clearing house for the study, the experience, the information and statistics of the farm.

Once the plan had been worked oue in his own mind, the Californian set out to put it in effect. It would need the initiative and backing of a great power. At Washington he was rebuffed. He went to France, where he was not even given a hearing. Then he went to England, with a like result. In Italy he told his idea to the royal minister of finance, who called him either a madman or a genius and arranged a brief interview with the king.

In the palace, Lubin was embarrassed at the idea of a face-to-face talk with the king, and forgot practically all his detailed instructions in the etiquette of the court. The king, however, greeted him kindly, talked to him in English, made him feel at ease, heard his plea, promised to co-operate, showed him to the door in person, and then—kept his word. The institute was called, opened by the king, proved to be of decided value and the merchant of San Francisco had won his ambition.

HEADS NEW YORK CENTRAL



William C. Brown who was recently elected president of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company to succeed W. H. Newman formerly was first vice-president of that road.

W. C. Brown began his career in Sioux City, Ia., 35 years ago, cording wood.

"I don't believe I want a soft snap, for if I am to stay in the railroad business I should know something about wooding engines. I would never know it by selling tickets at a window, assuring people that the clock is right and informing them how far it is to Bechuanaland."

This was the remark made by Mr. Brown to James Hamilton, Sioux City agent of the Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad in 1869, as he was busily engaged in piling wood on an engine, for which he was receiving $1.15 a day. Agent Hamilton had offered him a place in the station as an assistant, supposing that it would be a welcome change from piling wood on the engine in the yards while the mercury kept under the zero mark. Then it was that Mr. Brown said he wanted no snap.

Mr. Brown's disposition to avoid snaps evidently had much to do with his rise in the railroad world, for all his positions have demanded the most arduous work, and he has never avoided it.

He has been general manager of the Hannibal & St. Joseph at St Joseph Mo., and has occupied the same positions on the Burlington system and the Lake Shore.

Millions Lost Yearly on City's Payroll

$20,000,000
WASTE

NEW YORK.—Short hours and easy bosses cause New York city to throw away $20,000,000 a year on its pay roll, according to a statement which has been made up for the board of estimate by Henry Bruere, director, and Dr. Frederick A. Cleveland, technical director, of the bureau of municipal research.

The main object of the statement is to induce the city departments generally to follow the example of Comptroller Metz, already copied by Street Cleaning Commissioner Edwards, Borough President Cromwell and one or two other municipal heads, in having their employes work from nine a. m. to five p. m.

The present short hours obtaining in city departments alone, the research men estimate, is to the city $5,000,000 of dead loss. At least $15,000,000 more loss, they figure, is caused by the waste of time by laborers employed on city work.

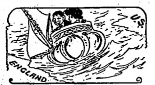
If the standards of work which obtain in private establishments were enforced by the city the yearly pay roll of $80,000,000 for salaries and wages would be cut to $60,000,000, the saving would be $20,000,000 a year—"enough to build a new subway each year—enough in 30 years to pay the present net debt," as the research men state.

"The regular office day in the municipal service is from nine a. m. to four p. m., with an hour allowed for luncheon—during the summer months from nine a. m. to three p. m.," the statement says.

"This leaves only six hours, at the most, for work, while the usual office day in private business other than banking and broking is from eight a. m. to five p. m.—a loss in time of 25 per cent. The amount paid for office work by the city is approximately $10,000,000. The direct loss due to shorter hours of service is approximately $2,500,000 per annum."

The indirect loss, due to the fact that the city employe never gets to work on time, added to inefficiency, brings the total loss to the city up to $5,000,000 a year. The result is a six-hour working day. The research men figure the loss in pay roll from other employes of the city at $15,000,000 a year.

British Earl Weds American Heiress



THE marriage the other day of the earl of Granard and Beatrice Mills, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, and niece of Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, was one of the social events of the season in Gotham.

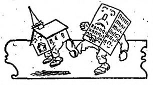
The earl of Granard is an Englishman, and because of this fact the regrets that he has carried away with him a pretty American girl as a bride are less than if he had been, instead of a blood cousin, some foreigner from continental Europe.

The bride is a grand-daughter of D. O. Mills, the financier and philanthropist. The earl of Granard is master of horse to King Edward of Great Britain, and the head of the royal equerries, which confers upon him the right to a seat in the king's carriage on state occasions.

A temporary altar was erected in the Louis XV. room of the Mills residence in West Sixty-ninth street for the marriage ceremony, which was performed by Bishop Thomas J. Cusack of St. Stephen's Roman Catholic church. The bride wore a white satin empire gown with a veil fastened with orange blossoms, and carried a prayer book instead of a bouquet. She was attended by Miss Alice Astor, daughter of Col. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor; Miss Grace Vanderbilt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt; Miss Edith Taylor and Miss Beatrice Bishop. She was given away by her father; Lord Granard's brother, Hon. Donald Forbes, was best man.

The gifts to the bride included a check from her father for $100,000, to be supplemented later on, it is said, by a London town house from her grandfather, D. O. Mills. Her mother gave her a tiara of pearls and diamonds with tips of pear-shaped pearls and diamonds. The bridegroom's gifts to her were a collar, tiara and corsage ornaments of diamonds, but of these she has only the photographs, the originals remaining in London to greet her when she arrives there to take up her residence there.

Warehouse to Take Place of Old Chapel



A SEVEN-STORY warehouse will replace St. John's chapel on Varick street, one of the oldest church edifices in New York city. This, at least, is the announcement made by the Record and Guide, the official organ of the real estate interests of New York. The announcement of the alleged plans has served to intensify the feeling aroused by the determination of the vestry of Trinity parish to close the historic church.

The reason advanced by the vestrymen for closing St. John's is that the chapel has outlived its usefulness and that by reason of the constant moving of the resident population to districts further uptown the congregation of St. John has dwindled until few worshipers remain. These few the vestry of Trinity proposes to accommodate at St. Luke's chapel, which is comparatively near at hand.

The action of the vestrymen when it was first made public brought forth a protest from the members of St. John's parish, and a petition signed by some of the most prominent men in the nation, among them President Roosevelt, urging the maintenance of the chapel, if only for sentimental reasons and as one of the historical land marks of the city.

Feeling has reached such a stage of bitterness over the matter that there is talk of an appeal to the courts and, if necessary, to the legislature.

Slot Machine Mirrors Impede Traffic

THAT slot machines with mirror fronts are breeders of trouble and impediments to traffic in the Gotham subway are the conclusions of the public service commission on detailed information gathered by John Rorko, an inspector.

Inspector Rorko produced a diary of his observations, his general conclusion being that while slot machines cause a good deal of trouble they serve the purpose of providing mirrors for the women and for an occasional man whose vanity overcomes him. Here are some of the inspector's observations for three days recently in the subway south of Brooklyn bridge and at Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn:

"Monday, Wall Street Station, 4:35 p. m.—Man stops in front of mirror fixes tie; delay. 4:50 p. m.—Two girls stop to look in mirror; more delay; people have to walk around them. 5 p. m.—Man, two boys and a girl stop for gum; some delay. 5:15 p. m.—Woman in hurry to catch train bumps edge of slot machine squarely; hurts her hip.

"Tuesday, Atlantic Avenue Station—7:30 a. m.—Girl hurries into subway, fixes hat before mirror, buys gum. 7:30 to 9 a. m.—Procession of girls and men, mostly girls; all stop in front of mirror; hinder traffic.

"Wednesday, Atlantic Avenue Station—7:35 a. m.—Man hurries downstairs, drops heavy suitcase while getting gum from machine; second man falls over suitcase. 8:05 a. m.—Woman stops and arranges her collar before glass.

"Wednesday, Wall Street Station—4:40 p. m.—Woman fixes waist, adjusts coat; passengers have to walk around her through narrow passage. 5:05 p. m.—Five women in succession fix hair."

SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

Twin Troubles.

The other woman's burden always looks lighter than her own to Mrs. Trouble-in-Hand and to Mrs. Ditto. They occupy different social positions, but their woes are similar. Mrs. Trouble has one maid, and can never "entertain" or give her husband his favorite pie, because "one pair of hands can't do everything." Mrs. Ditto has six servants, and declares herself distracted by their quarrels and wastefulness, and ashamed to invite a guest to one of her helter-skelter meals. Mrs. Trouble thinks herself a martyr because she must stay at home. Mrs. Ditto fretfully complains that her husband's health compels her to travel. Mrs. Ditto finds her church work far too heavy for her strength, and Mrs. Trouble is sure that her minister looks down on her, because he never asks her to do anything. Finally, even in the shadow of death, Mrs. Trouble has no time to indulge her grief, and Mrs. Ditto has no other interests to distract her mind from hers. So, says the Youth's Companion, if we observe this queer, varied world in which we live, we learn to appreciate Milton's profound truth:

The mind is its own place, and in itself
Can make a heaven of hell, a hell of heaven.

Perhaps we can go a step further, and wonder if we are not pretty well off, after all.

Incidentally, it is interesting to note that the skill which enables one to detect a counterfeit comes not from a study of counterfeits, but from a thorough and conscientious familiarity with the genuine. If a man were pointed out to you and you were told that some day another who much resembled him would try to impose upon you, you would be pretty apt to fix his features in your mind; you would not spend any time looking at other people who looked something like him, would you? And the moment the impostor appeared you would note that in this, that or the other particular he failed to meet the details of the other man's face and figure. Just so it is in the detection of counterfeits, says the National Magazine. A skillful teller in a bank, counting money rapidly, will involuntarily throw out a note which in the slightest degree departs from the well-known pattern which is so strongly impressed on his mental vision. That involuntary act will nearly always prove to have been justified, for the bill in 19 cases out of 20 will prove to be counterfeit. It is because of this fact that when a request is received from some one to loan him a collection of counterfeits for the instruction of his cashiers, he is advised to have the young men study the genuine carefully, and there will be no trouble in detecting the bad notes.

Dr. James B. Angell, president of the University of Michigan, may regard himself as a standing refutation of Oslerism. President Angell, who has held his present position for 38 years, subject only to such absences as have been necessary by temporary assumption of other duties, is still a very active man, though he is 80 years old. He celebrated his birthday by attending and taking part in the annual convention of the Association of American Universities at Ithaca, where he was the guest of Hon. Andrew D. White, another splendid veteran. Dr. Angell says of himself that he was never in better shape physically and is feeling in tip-top condition, and he has every appearance of ruddy health. To-day he leaves for the west and in a few days will be back at his desk ready for energetic work. Constant usefulness and a high order of living seem to be the best recipes for health and longevity.

Some day not very far distant, it is hoped, exporters and importers in the United States will awaken to the realization that South America offers them exceptional business opportunities, and then probably a systematic and determined effort will be made to wrest from Europe the trade which, geographically speaking, belongs to us. Why this rich field has not been cultivated is one of the mysteries which for a decade has puzzled citizens who visited the continent to the south. Perhaps the explanation is that we have been too busy extending our trade to Europe and Asia, but whatever the cause, the time has passed when American merchants can any longer afford to ignore the possibilities apparent to the well informed.

The young king of Portugal has been warned of a deep-laid plot to depose him, which, after the terrible circumstances of his accession, he can take as no idle threat. Scarcely more than a boy, he is beginning soon to realize how uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

"Why not make your own music?" asks the Washington Times. Because our neighbors prefer us to have our music made by some one who knows how. Silly question, that.

CUBANS TAKE REINS

GEN. GOMEZ IS INAUGURATED AS ISLAND'S PRESIDENT.

GOV. MAGOON STEPS OUT

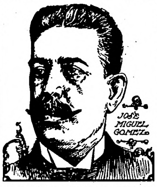
Ceremonies Preceded by Brilliant Illumination and Farewell Ball for American Officials — Tars Decorate Old Maine.

Havana.—Cuba formally passed back into the hands of the Cubans at noon Thursday, when the new government, headed by President Gomez and Vice-President Zayas, was inaugurated.

The ceremonies were simple. Gen. Gomez took the oath from the chief justice of the supreme court and made a brief address to the populace from the balcony of the palace. Afterward in the reception room of the palace Gov. Magoon read the order of President Roosevelt restoring the island and its affairs to the newly elected government.

City Is Carnival Scene.

The coming of this new day of Cuban liberty was signaled by a general display of fireworks, the velvet blackness of the tropical midnight being set aflame by screeching rockets and bombs which sent down showers of golden rain and gleaming, vari-colored lights. The streets of the city, which were brilliantly illuminated and garlanded with chains of incandescent bulbs, were thronged and a carnival spirit everywhere prevailed. Thousands of people gathered around the Clerks' club throughout the night, where inaugural and farewell balls were held jointly in honor of President Gomez and Vice-President Zayas and Gov. Magoon, all three of whom were quickly recognized on entering the building and leaving it, and loudly applauded. The balls constituted one of the most brilliant functions held here since the days of the Spanish occupation.



Illumination and Ball.

The festivities really opened Wednesday night with a brilliant illumination of the city and a farewell ball tendered by the mayor and council of Havana in honor of Gov. Magoon, President-elect Gomez, Vice-President-elect Zayas and the American officers who served as provisional authorities.

The illuminations probably were the most elaborate ever seen here. The money provided for the purpose was subscribed unstintedly, and the parks and the principal thoroughfares of the city were transformed into a veritable fairyland. In Central park, stretching down the Prado to the sea, thousands of vari-colored bulbs gleamed among cocoanut palms and laurel trees.

Ball a Brilliant Affair.

The ball was a brilliant function. It was attended by the American officials, the new island authorities, members of the diplomatic corps, special ambassadors and leaders of society. It was held in the large and beautiful ballroom of the Circle Dependientes, or Clerks' club, which is a unique organization with the enormous membership of 34,000. The club building, which faces an entire block, is a palace. The ball was held last night rather than this evening, after the inauguration, because of the determination of the American officials to leave for home immediately following President Gomez's induction into office.

President Sees Success.

Washington. — A message expressing hope for Cuba's success was sent by President Roosevelt to the president and congress of the republic of Cuba Thursday. It follows:

"Gov. Magoon will, by direction, turn over to you, on the 28th of this month, the control and government of the island of Cuba, and he will thereupon declare the provisional administration of the affairs of the island by the United States to be at an end. Upon the occasion of this final act, I desire to reiterate to you the sincere friendship and good wishes of the United States, and our most earnest hopes for the stability and success of your gvernment. Our fondest hope is that you may enjoy the blessings of peace, justice, prosperity and orderly liberty, and that the friendship which has existed between the republic of the United States and the republic of Cuba may continue for all time to come."

JUDGE TAFT ON ISTHMUS

MAKES HIS EIGHTH TRIP ACROSS THE CANAL ROUTE.

Lands at Colon, Spends Night at Culebra and Then Pays Visit to the Site of Gatun Dam.

Panama.—President-elect Taft Friday made his eighth trip across the isthmus and everywhere was greeted with marked demonstrations of good will.

With his party Mr. Taft landed in the morning at Colon and proceeded by special train to Culebra, where at night he was quartered at the residence of Lieut. Col. Goethals, chairman of the Panama canal commission. His reception by the Panama officials both at Colan and Culebra was most cordial. Saturday Mr. Taft visited the site of Gatun dam.

The United States cruiser North Carolina, on which Mr. Taft sailed from Charleston, and the convoy cruiser Montana arrived at Colon at ten o'clock Friday morning after a voyage that was marked by splendid weather conditions. All the members of the party were in good health.

Col. Goethals, Joseph Blackburn, governor of the canal zone; Col. William C. Gorgas, chief sanitary officer of the zone, and other prominent persons, immediately boarded the North Carolina from the tug Cristobal and welcomed the president-elect, who landed at dock No. 2, adjoining the Panama railroad office.

The first person to shake the hand of Mr. and Mrs. Taft when they landed was Gov. Porfiro Melendez of Colon, who introduced to them Mayor Benigno Andrion, Chief of Police Arango and other Panama officials.

Mr. Taft and his party immediately boarded a train which was waiting and left at noon for Culebra. Arriving there the president-elect was received ceremoniously by the members of President Obaldia's cabinet. During the afternoon Mr. Taft had a conference with the engineers engaged in the construction of the canal and his visit to the Gatun dam was planned.

The president-elect and his party will sail from Colon for New Orleans Friday, February 5.

BODIES OF THE CHENEYS ARRIVE

American Victims of Quake Brought Home for Burial.

New York.—The bodies of the two American victims of the convulsion of nature at Messina, Italy, a month ago, United States Consul Arthur S. Cheney and Mrs. Cheney, arrived in the harbor Thursday night. They were on board the Fabre liner, Venezia, which arrived after dark and remained anchored at the quarantine station until morning.

When the Venezia docked Friday the bodies were escorted by regular troops to the Grand Central station and there embarked for New Haven, Conn., the home of the Cheneys, where interment will take place.

Count Messiglia, the Italian consul general at New York, was one of those to receive the bodies at the steamer's dock. He laid wreaths on the coffins, a graceful tribute paid at the request of Signor Mayor des Planches, the Italian ambassador at Washington.

JEROME IN CANAL LIBEL CASE.

Ready to Act If Robinson Will Make Complaint.

New York.—The possibility of the federal authorities having to stand aside to permit the state and county of New York to proceed against the publishers of the New York World for the alleged libel in connection with the Panama purchase, was made apparent Tuesday in a letter written by District Attorney Jerome to United States District Attorney Henry L. Stimson.

Provided Douglas Robinson, brother-in-law of the president, is willing to appear as a complainant witness, Mr. Jerome is ready, the letter states, to begin action at once in the state courts. It would be useless for him to do so, however, he explains, if his inquiry is not given precedence over that begun before the federal grand jury, as acquittal or conviction in one court would act as sufficient defense in the other.

Delay Anti-Jap Measure.

Sacramento, Cal.—The question of anti-Japanese legislation was temporarily put aside by the legislature Wednesday as a result of an agreement between President Roosevelt, Gov. Gillett and the leaders of both houses. Assemblyman A. M. Drew agreed, after a conference with the governor, to amend his anti-alien bill. Grove L. Johnson was not willing to postpone action upon his anti-Japanese bills, but a motion to put all the measures over for a week prevailed with little opposition.

OWNERS OF THE REPUBLIC AND FLORIDA FILE SUITS.

Former Claim $2,000,000—Bids Are Opened for a Wireless Tower at Washington.

New York.—Just which ship was responsible for the Nantucket collision in which the White Star liner Republic and the Italian liner Florida figured, and which company shall pay the damages will be decided by the court of admiralty.

Both companies filed suits Thursday. That of the owners of the Republic claimed damages of $2,000,000 and recited in legal form the story of the marvelous sea disaster. The blame for the collision was placed on the Florida and the claim made that the last-named ship was going ahead at "an immoderate rate of speed" when the crash came.

The owners of the Florida also filed a libel suit and a petition for a limitation of liability against the Florida. The petitioners asked that their liability, in case the suits are decided against them, be placed at $224,000, the damage value of the Florida.

C. B. Richards & Co., agents for the Lloyd-Italian line, to which the Florida belongs, believe that Capt. Ruspini, his officers and crew should come in for some of the praise that has been bestowed upon the officers of the Republic. In a statement issued Thursday night they point out the heroism and the act of humanity displayed by Capt. Ruspini, who despite the fact that his ship was sorely damaged, stood by the Republic for more than 24 hours rescuing the passengers from the Republic and later transferring them to the Baltic when that ship reached the scene. The statement is made that had the Baltic not arrived, Capt. Ruspini would successfully have brought his overcrowded vessel into this port.

Washington.—Following the achievements of the wireless telegraph in the recent collision between the steamers Republic and Florida, the navy department Thursday opened bids for locating a wireless tower at Washington for communicating with ships at sea, to the distance of 3,000 miles.

F. P. GLAZIER IS FOUND GUILTY.

Ex-Treasurer of Michigan Convicted of Misappropriating State Funds.

Lansing, Mich.—Ex-State Treasurer Frank P. Glazier of Chelsea, whose failure in December, 1907, resulted in the closing of the Chelsea Savings bank, of which he was the head, and which had on deposit about $685,000 of state funds, was found guilty late Wednesday by a jury in the Ingham county circuit court of misappropriating state funds.

Mr. Glazier's attorneys immediately gave notice of an appeal to the supreme court, and he was released on $10,000 bail and given until March 8 to file a bill of exceptions and a motion for a new trial. He received the verdict without emotion.

Washington.—The secretary of agriculture will be enabled to conduct experiments to determine the practicability of making paper material from cornstalks, if a bill favorably acted upon by the house committee of agriculture Thursday becomes a law. The bill, which was introduced by Mr. Stanley, Kentucky, appropriates $30,000 to be used by the secretary of agriculture to conduct the experiments, and purchase a site near Henderson, Ky., erect buildings and purchase the necessary apparatus.

GET $5,600 WITH REVOLVER?

Man and Wife Arrested on Charge of Robbery.

Mobile, Ala.—Fleetwood Lester, traveling salesman for the Southern Supply Company, and his wife are in jail charged with holding up Hardaway Young, president of the company, at the point of a revolver at the former's home Friday afternoon and robbing him of $5,600.25.

It is charged that Lester telephoned to Young to come to his home to discuss the sale of Lester's stock in the company. When Young entered the Lester home, it is alleged, Lester forced him at the point of a revolver, to write an order to his cashier directing him to pay Mrs. Lester $5,600.25, the alleged amount of Lester's stock. Mrs. Lester took the order to the cashier, who wrote out a check for the amount and identified her at the bank. Mrs. Lester cashed the check and then returned to her home, where Young was held practically a prisoner, and gave the money to her husband.

FIRE RAGES IN ST. PAUL.

Large Part of Business District Threatened by Flames.

St. Paul, Minn.—Fire which started in the White House department store on East Seventh street shortly after seven o'clock Friday night assumed alarming proportions and a large part of the business district of the city was threatened. The flames jumped across the street and Huber's cafe and an adjoining building caught fire, while flaming cinders were being driven across the city by a strong north wind, threatening the down town district.

Half a dozen buildings were destroyed, the total loss being about $600,000.

Montgomery, Ala.—With the wind blowing 35 miles an hour, a fire broke out in the manufacturing district and a general alarm was sent all fire companies, including the reserve corps.

GREAT FRENCH ACTOR DEAD.

Benoit-Constant Coquelin Passes Away on Eve of Masterpiece.

Paris.—Benoit-Constant Coquelin, the great French actor whose culminating triumph had been awaited in Edmund Rostand's "The Chanticleer," which is now being rehearsed, died at Pont-Aux-Dames, Seine-et-Marne.

The death of M. Coquelin is an incalculable loss to the French stage. Only a few days ago M. Rostand, who recently has been giving the finishing touches to "The Chanticleer," arrived in Paris from Cambo, and he was ready to begin the rehearsals of the play in which M. Coquelin, who had the leading role, was expected to duplicate his famous success obtained in M. Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac."

Cold and La Grippe

Mr. C. Happy, Hardin, Ray Co., Mo., writes: "I can safely recommend Peruna as a remedy that will cure all catarrhal troubles.

"It was of great benefit to me, as it cured me of catarrh of the throat, and I took a very bad cold and had la grippe last February. It settled in my throat and lungs. I took three bottles of Peruna and it cured me.

"I highly recommend it to all who are sick, and I am glad to add my endorsement to that of others."

Pe-ru-na for Colds

Mr. L. Clifford Figg, Jr., 2929 East Marshall St., Richmond, Va., writes that when he gets a cold he takes Peruna, and it soon drives it out of his system. For several years he was not entirely well, but Peruna completely cured him.

People who object to liquid medicines can now secure Peruna tablets.

EXTRAORDINARY INCREASE IN FARM LANDS.

"SOUTHERN ALBERTA IS A MIGHTY GOOD COUNTRY."

No stronger or better evidence can be given of the merits of a country than that which comes from the testimony of the settler who has determined to succeed. This is why we reproduce the following letter, which speaks for itself. These people were induced to go to Western Canada through the solicitation of a Canadian Government agent, who secured for them the low railway rates.

"Carmangay, Alta., Canada, 12-15-'08.

"Mr. C. J. Broughton, Canadian Government Agency, 135 Adams Street, Chicago: We had audacity enough to tackle the proposition of buying four sections of land in Southern Alberta, thirty miles east of Clairsholm and heading up on the Little Bow, and our two boys each got a homestead adjoining. We fenced three sections and the two homesteads, and built a house, barn, corrals and granary, and have since enlarged some of these buildings. We have broken 200 acres of land, which has been sowed to oats and wheat. During the severe winter of two years ago the winter wheat killed out somewhat, and our crop yielded only ten bushels to the acre, but the spring wheat went 24 bushels to the acre. In this country we must be prepared for storms and cold, at times 20 to 30 below zero, yet on the whole the winters are mild; and while there are exceptional crops, it is fair to say that the average farmer can depend on having a yield in average years of from 20 to 25 bushels to the acre for spring wheat; and winter wheat in our immediate neighborhood yields from 25 to 30 bushels to the acre on the average.

We have now quite a bunch of horses, over 50 in all, about 350 sheep, after having sold 140 for mutton this fall. We have 20 head of pure bred registered Shropshire, which are worth $20 each. The average price received for mutton sheep was $5.00 and a little over. Pork brings 5 and 6 cents a pound. We have about 30 head of cattle on our ranch now, and last winter they picked their entire living from our pasture, running to the straw stacks for shelter at night.

"The increase of land values has been extraordinary. Our land four years ago cost us a little less than $6.00 an acre. We have sold one section for $15.00, but we would not sell any more for less than $25.00 per acre, as we expect the railroad within four miles of our ranch within the next 18 months. Southern Alberta of Western Canada is a mighty good country for any man or woman who loves outdoor life, and who wants to get good returns for their labor and investment.

"We have been pleased with our treatment from the Canadian Government, and can heartily commend Southern Alberta as a splendid country in which to locate.

"Yours very truly,
(Signed)

Club is confident of landing the national tournament in 1910, having already received the promise of nearly the required number of votes.

Gymnasium for Carleton.

Northfield.—Carleton college is to have a new men's gymnasium. The trustees announced at the chapel service that Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Hill of Northfield have made a gift of $35,000 for that purpose, provided $20,000 would be secured for its maintenance. This obligation the trustees have already assumed, one of their number, Myron Skinner of Northfield, himself pledging $1,000 for this purpose.

For the securing of the endowment a committee was appointed, consisting of Messrs. Scriver and Jepson of Minneapolis, Dr. Ogden and Mr. Nason of St. Paul and Mayor Goodhue of Northfield. Mr. Hill is to act on the building committee, with Messrs. Jones of Minneapolis, Mr. Olson, dean of the school of agriculture, and Messrs. Page and Nutting of Northfield.

Work is to begin on the new building just as soon as weather conditions permit, and it is expected that it will be ready for occupation early next fall. Plans will be ready in a short time, and it is understood that the building will be situated between Willis and Williams hall on the campus.

Think Danger Signal Joke.

Austin.—Miss Lizzie Kelly, who was injured by the Chicago Great Western train while walking the track to town Sunday, died at St. Olaf's hospital Friday. Her companion, Mamie O'Leary, died soon after being taken to the hosiptal Sunday.

The girls live a little distance out of town and they were coming to the hospital to see the father of Lizzie Kelly, who has been under treatment at the hospital for some time. Their attention was directed to the crew of a Milwaukee train, the waving of whom they took to be in the spirit of jest and they were returning it as such. The Chicago Great Western engineer took the waving of the girls to mean that they heard his continuous signaling and that they would get off.

The girls belong to two families, formerly consisting of eight people, who are related, and who have been living in two rooms in the vicinity of the old brick yards.

Creamery Man Ends Life.

Caledonia.—John H. Gaare, a well-known creamery man of Spring Grove, committed suicide on Wednesday by hanging himself in the haymow of his barn. His only child, a girl of 7 years old, discovered him first and called a neighbor, but he then was dead and evidently had been dead several hours.

His motive for committing this tragic act is a mystery, as he was in good health, sober, good financial circumstances and family surroundings apparently happy. He had been prominent in the creamery business in this county for a number of years until two months ago, when he disposed of his interests.

Fire and Panic at Show.

Spring Valley.—Fire last night at the Auditorium, starting in the moving picture apparatus of Verne Caswell, damaged his outfit about $400, and the building owned by Burdette Thayer, a member of the legislature about $75. In the scramble by the audience to escape from the building, Mrs. Louie Alberts was thrown to the floor and suffered serious injuries, as did also one or two small children.

Case of the Governor's Wife.

Rochester.—Mrs. John A. Johnson, wife of the governor, consulted with physicians here yesterday as to a possible surgical operation at St. Mary's hospital. She is staying at the home of John Sullivan, the guest of Miss Margaret Sullivan. No decision has yet been reached by the doctors as to Mrs. Johnson's case.

NEWS NOTES.

Duluth.—Rain fell here Friday evening and at 9:30 the rain was accompanied by lightning and thunder. The wind is strong from the northwest and a heavy sea was rolling on Lake Superior.

Minneapolis.—Not in ten years has there been a condition in the grain trade quite like that existing in Minneapolis and Chicago, where James A. Patten, operating in both markets, has bought anywhere from 10,000,00 to 20,000,000 bushels, and presumably is out to run a corner in May wheat.

Minneapolis.—One of the oldest residents of Minneapolis died Saturday when Isaac Skoll passed away from an attack of acute bronchitis. The aged man would have been 100 years of age had he lived until next October.

Red Wing.—The annual meeting of the Minnesota Scandinavian Relief association was held at the hall of the Scandinavian Benevolent association. Peter Nelson was re-elected president of the association and C. Lallethun, vice president.

Minneapolis.—Lottie Williams, who for a number of years, has been idenfied with plays depicting city life, notably "My Tomboy Girl" and "Josie, the Little Madcap," will be seen at the Bijou Opera House the week of February 2nd in a new melodrama, "Tennessee Tess."

St. Paul.—The freshmen and sophomore classes of Macalester college mixed in one of the fiercest class fights in the history of the institution Wednesday night. The first year students had all the better of the argument when the list of maimed, wounded and captured for both sides were made out.

St. Paul.—Esther Lundell, 17 years old, saved her parents and two brothers from death by suffocation in a fire at their home. The girl awoke at 4 a. m., and when she discovered that the house was afire, she made her way through the thick smoke of the rooms of the other members of the family and awakened them.

Anoka.—Two weeks ago A. H. Brown, aged nearly 80, an inmate of the poor farm, two miles east of Anoka, left the institution during the absence of the overseer and made his way to Anoka. He was seen about 3 o'clock, and after that time all trace of him was lost. His body was found in a field near the depot Wednesday night. He had wandered about in the cold, snow and darkness, and finally laid down to die.

Minneapolis.—Fifteen little children were saved from possible death or injury in a panic-stricken rush through smoke-filled corridors to safety by the coolness of Miss Eva Burnham, resident nurse, and Moses Norman, janitor, at the Unity Settlement house, when fire broke out in that building yesterday afternoon.

Virginia.—The city of Virginia is without police or fire protection, the members of both departments having resigned. Higher wages are demanded by both. Under its charter Virginia cannot raise wages, but can hire the men back at higher wages, and this will be done. A special meeting of the council well be held.

Bemidji.—Sheriff Hazen of this city went to Blackduck Saturday and arrested Tony Weber on a charge of stealing a horse, harness and rig belonging to a farmer named Jacob Weiss, who lives three and one-half miles west of Bemidji, about Nov. 20 last. Weiss had left the horse in front of Schmidt & Hazen's meat market.

Walker.—Chief of Police Campbell of Walker, by the use of the telephone and assistance of the local police at Akeley succeeded in quieting the wrath of an irate father and causing two young hearts that wished to beat as one to continue to beat as two. Thomas Holden rushed into Clerk of Court Palmer's office and took out a license to marry Martha Eldrid of Deerfield township and engaging the services of a livery team started for Akeley at a lively pace. However, the girl's father, who claimed she was under age, reached Walker on an early train and enlisted the services of the local police, as a result of which the nuptials are called off for an indefinite period.

Eveleth.—At the Adams mine Louis Cassino, a miner, was entombed by a couple of cave-ins. He succeeded in getting under a timber, where he crouched from 3 o'clock in the morning till 8 o'clock at night, when he was rescued. Fifty men worked with shovels to rescue Cassino. It was ten hours before it was learned that the man was still alive.

Minneapolis.—Telephone talk, once "free, gratis and for nothing" over the drug store telephones in Minneapolis, is going to cost money just as soon as pay station booths can be installed.

PUBLIC EXAMINER BILL PASSED BY THE HOUSE.

This Official Will Hereafter be Elected by the People and Not Appointed by the Governor.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 26.—In spite of over 400 bills now pending in the legislature, both house and senate are holding but short sessions daily, and hardly half a dozen bills have yet been actually passed. The hard grind of the sessions has not yet started, and it seems certain that the lawmakers, now under a salary of $500 a year, will remain in session the full constitutional limit, the same as in past years, when they received $5 a day.

There was little of importance in the legislature today. In the house, there was a long fight as to whether one more janitor shall be employed, the momentous question finally being answered in the affirmative. In the senate, Albert Schaller of Hastings broke forth into one of his humorous speeches in which he took exception to a newspaper story to the effect that he was unmarried. He said he had noticed the young ladies making eyes at him of late, and he did not want them to do so under a misapprehension of the facts.

Kerry Conley of Rochester introduced a resolution in the house, commending the course pursued by President Roosevelt in office, especially in regard to his use of the secret service. John D. O'Brien of St. Paul got the resolution tabled until tomorrow by giving notice of debate.

In the senate, Senator Works of Mankato today introduced a resolution asking for an investigation of mineral right privileges, grants, and reserves. It recites that much land in northern Minnesota is sold with the mineral rights reserved, and that this retards development by settlers. The resolution asks the tax commission to investigate with a view to ascertaining how these reserved mineral rights may be taxed. The resolution went over for the day on notice of debate by George R. Laybourn of Duluth.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 27.—A leading card in the game of politics was played in the lower house of the legislature today when F. B. Wright of Minneapolis introduced an employers' liability act. It provides that the employers of the state may form an association, which shall have the state treasurer for its treasurer. The association at its inception must make a state deposit of $10,000; and thereafter, one dollar for each employee of the members of the association. The governor is authorized to appoint a commission of three, two physicians and a lawyer. This commission shall receive all claims for damages of employes of the association, and allow them such sums as the commission deems right, without permitting the question of contributory negligence to be considered. The governor announced a few days ago he intended to send a special message to the legislature suggesting a new employers' liability bill, and the Wright measure coming in ahead (Wright is a republican) is without doubt aimed to secure the credit for the republicans and cut out the democratic administration.

W. A. Nolan introduced a bill in the house today to increase the gross earnings tax of express companies from 6 to 8 per cent. George Rodenberg of St. Paul got after the "salary loan sharks" of the large cities with a bill requiring a $50 a year license fee, and placing them under supervision of the public examiner.

In the senate, W. A. Campbell introduced a bill to create a woman's labor department, appropriating $7,500 therefor. Senator Hardy of St. Paul introduced several bills to increase the state aid for militia, and raising the salary of the adjutant general to $3,600, and the remuneration of his assistants proportionately.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 28.—Gov. J. A. Johnson today sent his predicted special message to the legislature—both house and senate—recommending legislative enactment to provide for a commission of three, an attorney, an employe, and an employer of labor, to make a full investigation during the coming two years with a view to reporting an ideal employers' liability act to the next legislature. The message is accompanied by a petition signed by representatives of a number of labor organizations, of the State Bar association, and of the Minnesota Employers' association. It asks for the commission which the governor recommends. In the house, the message was referred to the labor committee; the senate started to debate the subject, but was interrupted by the arrival of the time for a memorial in memory of the late Senator P. Fitzpatrick of Winona. The senate will dispose of the message tomorrow.

Senator McColl of St. Paul today introduced a measure which carries out the democratic state platform of state guarantee of bank deposits. It provides for a tax of one-half of 1 per cent on the amount of bank deposits to thereby create a state guarantee fund. A bill for an appropriation of $25,000 to aid high schools, graded and consolidated public schools, in establishing agricultural courses, was introduced by Senator H. S. Putnam. It provides that the state pay two-thirds of the expenses of such new departments for a year.

In the house today there was a merry political tilt on the subject of the W. A. Nolan bill to make the office of state public examiner elective. The democrats decried the bill, on the ground that the examiner should remain appointive so as to be responsible to some one, and so the governor might pick out a man of special training for the place. The republicans replied through Burdette Thayer that it is wrong to have the examiner a dependent of the governor, and one of his official family; that this is demonstrated by the fact that there is today being wrongfully suppressed a report made by the examiner of another department of the governor's official family (referring to the board of control).

Lynn Haynes, secretary and lobbyist for the Citizens' League, came in for a roast today at the hands of John Lennon of Minneapolis, who was the man a few days ago to introduce a resolution asking for Haynes' recognition on the floor of the house. Lennon spoke of Haynes as unreliable, and giving garbled and false reports of legislative conditions and doings. He also took opportunity to roast a former supreme court justice for lobbying for the Citizens' League, and insinuating that things were not as they should be with the lawmakers—the reference being to former Judge W. B. Douglas.

The special commission, consisting of Carl Wallace, J. H. Dorsey and W. H. Putnam, which visited Madison, Wis., to investigate the operation of the Wisconsin public utilities law, reported in its favor and introduced a bill which is practically a copy of the Wisconsin law.

Some 200 women gathered in the senate chamber this afternoon and for over an hour fired "hot shot" at the senate election committee in the shape of reasons why the Ole Sageng bill for woman suffrage should pass.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 29.—The first "big" bill of the session passed the house today—the W. A. Nolan bill to make the office of public examiner elective. The bill was hotly contested by the democrats up to the very last, but on the final roll call, eight of the democrats broke from their party and voted with the republicans, making the vote 78 in favor of the measure to only 27 against.

Representative Saugstad today introduced a resolution limiting the session to March 31, and March 10 as the last day for introducing bills. John Lennon of Hennepin gave notice of debate, so that the resolution will not be acted upon until tomorrow. It is doubtful if it will pass, as the legislature now has nearly two hundred more bills before it than it had the same legislative session day two years ago.

Kerry Conley today called for action on the resolution commending Roosevelt and especially his use of the secret service. The resolution was side-tracked on motion of F. E. Gartside of Winona, who asked that it be referred to the special committee which was named some time ago to draw up resolutions commending Roosevelt. The secret service portion of the resolution in question is looked upon among the lawmakers as an effort to get legislative indorsement of Roosevelt's side of the controversy with Congressman Tawney of Winona.

The session in the senate today was uneventful except for a surprising report presented by Senator Swanson of Fridley, as chairman of the special committee which had been named to investigate the efficiency of the tuberculine test for cattle and horses. The report severely criticised the state live stock sanitary board, which board, according to the report, absolutely refused the committee's request for the aid of a veterinarian, or to co-operate in any way in helping the committee. The committee played a clever trick, however, which seems to demonstrate that the tuberculine test for cattle is little to be depended upon. Nineteen cows which had passed the test were purchased and sent to South St. Paul for slaughter with a lot of other cattle. Federal inspectors in post mortem examinations condemned the meat of all nineteen, declaring the animals to have been infected with tuberculosis in spite of their having passed the tuberculine test. The committee also reported finding a number of horses which had been condemned by the test some years ago, which are at present still in apparent excellent health. The report was referred to the senate committee on live stock and dairying.

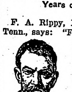
AWFUL GRAVEL ATTACKS

Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills After Years of Suffering.



F. A. Rippy, Depot Ave., Gallatin, Tenn., says: "Fifteen years ago kidney disease attacked me. The pain in my back was so agonizing I finally had to give up work. Then came terrible attacks of gravel with acute pain and passages of blood. In all I passed 25 stones, some as large as a bean. Nine years of this ran me down to a state of continual weakness, and I thought I never would be better until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The improvement was rapid, and since using four boxes I am cured and have never had any return of the trouble."

THE RETRACTION WAS WORSE.

Second Statement "Piled Up the Agony" on Rival Editor.

District Attorney Heney of San Francisco, a short time after his wounding, discussed with a reporter at his bedside one of his statements about the San Francisco boodlers.

"They expect me to retract that statement, do they?" he said, grimly. "Well, if I did retract it, my retraction would be like the Tombstone editor's.

"He, you know, printed a story to the effect that a rival editor's father had served 37 years in jail. Pressure was brought to bear on him, and finally he agreed to retract that statement. In his retraction he said:

"'We find that we were mistaken when we said in last week's issue that the Clarion editor's papa had passed 37 summers in the penitentiary. All efforts of friends to have his sentence commuted to life imprisonment failed, and the old man, as a matter of fact, was hung.'"

Woman to Conduct Large Estate.

Mrs. Jennie L. Doane of Brockton, Mass., has been appointed to administer the half million dollar estate of the late R. N. Packard and also to have complete control of his large shoe factory. Mr. Packard died suddenly without making a will. His heirs were a brother and two sisters, none of whom knew anything about his business. Mrs. Doane had been in the employ of Mr. Packard for a number of years and he had often spoken of her ability to his relatives, declaring that she had more brains than any two men of his acquaintance. For that reason his heirs asked to have her appointed and put in full charge of his business.

Cause for Complaint.

Jones, the dairyman, loved his little bouts occasionally, and at such times celebrated riotously. He was prevailed upon to sign the pledge, and this piece of news was given wide publicity. But in a few weeks Jones turned upon his temperance friends and again sought old-time friends and acquaintances.

"The idea!" grieved Jones, as he told the waiter to duplicate an order. "Me driving a milk wagon, and those fellows advertising that I am on the water wagon!"—Judge.

DIDN'T KNOW

Coffee Was the Cause.

Many daily habits, particularly of eating and drinking, are formed by following our elders.

In this way ill health is often fastened upon children. A Ga. lady says:

"I had been allowed to drink coffee ever since I could remember, but even as a child I had a weak stomach, which frequently refused to retain food.

"The taste of coffee was in my mouth all the time and was, as I found out later, the cause of the stomach rebelling against food.

"I now see that it was only from following the example of my elders that I formed and continued the miserable habit of drinking coffee. My digestion remained poor, nerves unstrung, frequent headache, and yet I did not suspect the true cause.

"Another trouble was a bad, muddy complexion for which I spent time and money for creams, massaging, etc., without any results.

"After I was married I was asked to try Postum, and would you believe it, I, an old coffee toper, took to Postum from the very first. We made it right—according to directions on the pkg., and it had a most delicate flavor, and I at once quit coffee, with the happiest results.

"I now have a perfectly clear, smooth skin, fine digestion and haven't had a headache in over two years."

"There's a Reason."

There has been a bill introduced in the legislature provide ing for the changeing the conuty seat of counties at the general elecetion in stead of callin a spec al election The election is to be called on proclamation s ued by the governor.

The Cripple and His Father.

Not even the wide flapping trousers of his sailor suit could wholly hide the slender form wasting away from lack of use. Smoldering brown eyes illuminated the little face, made wizen by hours of pain, as he smiled up at the tall man at his side, who, broad of shoulder and strong of face, smiled back encouragingly.

A troop of small boys noisily invaded the car at the next station. Reckless in their good spirits, one of their number was roughly pushed against a crutch, causing it to fall to the floor. The man's eyes blazed more with anguish than with anger as he exclaimed harshly, "Be careful!"

The sturdy urchins, awed at what had occurred, subsided in seats opposite. The man looked over their heads into space. The child looked first at the boys, then with questioning eyes back at the man.

"Fawther," he whispered as he lightly touched his sleeve, "would you love me better if I was like those boys?"

The man gave a startled glance across the aisle at "those boys," insolent in their perfect health and boyhood vigor, then tightly grasping the hand nearest to him said: "No, son. I love you better than all the world—just as you are."—New York Times.

Risky Speculation.

In the days "befo' de wah" a handy negro named Jack was saving money earned at odd times with which to buy his freedom. His master encouraged him and kept his money for him. In time Jack had saved $900 and needed only another hundred to make him free. His master told him that it wouldn't be long now until he could get another hundred. Jack went out with another slave to celebrate some local festival. Returning along the railroad track they were frightened by an approaching train. Both got off the track, but Jack's companion fell and striking his head against a rock, was killed. Jack hurried as rapidly as he could to his master's house. It was a late hour, but the master must hear him. He said, "Gimme mah money right now." The astonished master remonstrated, saying, "But, Jack, you need only another hundred dollars to get free." "I knows it, Mars' Henry, I knows it, but niggers is too onsartin. Bill jes' killed hisself by bustin' his head agin a rock, an' I ain' gwine invest much money in nothin' as onsartin as niggers."—Washington Herald.

Trivial Cause of a Bloody War.

In the year 1654 a Polish nobleman became obnoxious to the laws of his country by reason of his having committed a crime. He fled to Sweden, whereupon John Casimir, king of Poland, wrote to Charles Gustavus, king of Sweden, demanding the surrender of the criminal. The king of Sweden on reading the dispatch noticed that his own name and titles were followed by two "et ceteras," while the name of the king of Poland was followed by three. The missing "et cetera" so enraged the king of Sweden that he at once declared war against Poland. The war was carried on with great bitterness until 1660, when a peace was signed at Oliva, near Danzig. A contemporary writer (Kochowsky) poured out his lamentations on the war in these terms: "How dear has this 'et cetera' been to us! With how many lives have these two potentates paid for these missing eight letters! With what streams of blood has the failure of a few drops of ink been avenged!"

A Horse's Toe Nails.

Few persons realize that a horse's hoof is really the same thing as the toe nails of human beings or of animals having toes. The horn of a hoof grows just as a toe nail does. The hoof grows more rapidly in unshod horses than in those wearing shoes and it grows faster in horses which are well groomed and well fed. But on an average the horn grows about a third of an inch a month. Hind hoofs grow faster than fore hoofs. The toe of the hoof being the longest part, it takes longer for the horn to grow down there than at the heel. For instance, the toe will grow entirely down in from eleven to thirteen months while the heel will grow down in from three to five months. As the new horn grows out any cracks or defects in the old gradually work down to where they can be cut off, just as with human finger nails you can watch the progress of a bruise from the root to the tip.—New York Sun.

A TENDERFOOT'S REVENGE.

Bully of New Mexico Town Had the Tables Turned on Him.

The average tenderfoot is not a coward. He simply lacks ranch experience. An illustration of this fact occurred down in New Mexico several years ago. One day a pale looking, thin and sickly young man alighted from the train and put up at the little adobe hotel at Bernal Springs. The tenderfoot walked up to the bar and called for a bottle of soda pop. "'Tain't allowed to drink that sort o' stuff out here," said a toughy. "What you want is a stiff drink o' red liquor. Mr. Barkeeper, set out the pison for this young feller." "You have the best of me," replied the tenderfoot, "and I'll have to drink the stuff, but I hope the time may come when I can make you drink my choice of liquid."

The tenderfoot raised the glass and gulped down the whisky. Sandy had had his way about it, and he made no effort to comprehend the vague remark of the stranger. The tenderfoot left for a ranch down the Pecos the next day after the incident in the saloon, and he was forgotten until one afternoon more than a year afterward a strong, healthy looking young man rode up to the hotel on a broncho, dropped the bridle reins upon the ground and dismounted. He had the appearance of a typical young man of the range. His face was bronzed and his eyes clear and penetrating. "I owe a fellow a debt which I believe I will pay right now," the stranger said.

No sooner had he made the remark than he walked off in the direction of Sandy, who had his gun in his right hand and was firing it into the air every few steps. The stranger approached Sandy, pulled his gun and unceremoniously dragged the bully up to the saloon and led him in that fashion up to the bar. "Get me a pan of water and set it upon the floor," he said to the barkeeper.

The order was complied with, Sandy standing there meekly, wondering what was going to happen to him. "Now, get down on the floor and drink water out of that pan like a dog," the former tenderfoot ordered. Sandy at first refused, but when the stranger began twirling his gun around on his forefinger and said the order must be obeyed the cowed fellow unlimbered and lay down upon the floor and began drinking water out of the pan.—Denver Field and Farm.

WATERLOO.

The Immutability of the Famous Old Battlefield.

One of the most striking features of a visit to the battlefield of Waterloo today is the immutability of the entire scene in which one of the greatest battles of history took place. Notwithstanding the many years that have passed since the memorable day of June 18, 1815, the entire scene of the battle remains practically unchanged and untouched, and the very buildings around which the tide of battle surged the fiercest, save for the necessary restorations of the damage they sustained in the conflict, remain exactly as they were, nor has any encroachment of building or progress marred the historic field.

The battlefield of Waterloo is an open, undulating stretch of good farming land. On the day of the battle the greater part of it was covered with crops of rye, wheat, barley and oats, and the same crops are still grown there each season. The field is intersected by two highroads branching at Mont St. Jean, the one on the right leading to Nivelles, while that on the left, which lay in the center of both armies, led south to Genappe, Charleroi and Namur. Upon the crest of the ridge which formed the first of the allied positions a crossroad runs east and west. This road, on approaching the spot where the "Lion of Waterloo" now stands, ran through a cut in the crest some twelve to fourteen feet deep, and it was this point that was known after the battle as the Hollow Road. Some 600 yards to the southeast of the "Lion" is the farm of La Haye Sainte, while about 900 yards to the southwest stands Hougoumont, the old chateau, farmhouse, outbuildings, walled garden and orchard, which played such an important part in the fate of the day. These buildings are nearly 300 years old and were built with a view to their defense, as many old stone loopholes still to be found testify. — Robert Howard Russell in Metropolitan Magazine.

Dictionary Users Modest.

"Men are never so modest as when they go to use a dictionary," remarked an attendant at the public library. "As a rule, when you see a man go to a public dictionary or one in any place where other people are around you'll see him look about furtively as if in fear somebody might see him. Men who make no pretensions at having any great amount of knowledge nevertheless seem to be embarrassed to have any one think that they do not know the pronunciation or meaning of some English word. The next time you see a man looking up a word in the dictionary just ask him what it is he is looking up and see if he will tell you. You'll find in at least nine cases out of ten that he won't tell you. He's afraid you'll know it and have the fun of enlightening him."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not Grasping.

"What a grasping fellow you are, Hawkins! You've bothered me about this bill fifty times in ten days."

"You wrong me, Jarley. I'm not grasping. I've bothered you about the bill, I admit, but I haven't been able to grasp anything yet."

TURPENTINE.

Moths will leave if it is sprinkled about.

Turpentine and soap will remove ink stains from linen.

Turpentine will remove wheel grease, pitch and tar stains.

Clean gilt frames with a sponge moistened in turpentine.

It will exterminate roaches if sprinkled in their haunts.

A few drops on a woolen cloth will clean tan shoes nicely.

A few drops added to water in which clothes are boiled will whiten them.

An equal mixture of turpentine and linseed oil will remove white marks from furniture caused by water.

Ivory knife handles that have become yellow can be restored to their former whiteness by rubbing with turpentine.

Carpets can be cleaned and colors restored by going over occasionally with a broom dipped in warm water in which a little turpentine is added.

Splendors of Cafes.

The cafes and hotels of New York are rivaling each other in the almost oriental splendor with which they have fitted up small rooms for dinner and after theater parties. At one cafe near Broadway the sides of one of these rooms are composed entirely of mirrors, after the French fashion, while the ceiling is covered with green leaves and grapes, bunches of pink and purple grapes of glass, within which are electric lights. The effect is that of a beautiful arbor. Another cafe has mirrors reflecting small red lights throughout the room, while the ceiling, also of mirrors, is an exquisite imitation of moonlight, the effect of which is obtained by electrics inclosed in globes of the color and sheen of moonlight seen through a delicate tracery of faint green leaves.—Exchange.

A Sad Case.

A Chicago physician was one day called to attend a sick child in a "shabby genteel" quarter of the Windy City.

"Madam," said the doctor to the mother, "you should send this child into the country for several weeks each summer."

"I am sorry to say, doctor," responded the woman, "that we are not rich enough to do that."

"Then," suggested the physician, "have her sent by the fresh air fund."

"Oh, doctor," exclaimed the woman, "we are not poor enough!"—Harper's Weekly.

The Comfortable Fortune.

"What is your idea of a comfortable fortune?" asked the ambitious youth.

"One," answered the man of experience, "that is big enough to buy you everything you want and not big enough to attract the attention of the grand jury."—Washington Star.

A Lemon Instead.

"Do you know," a pretty bride of three months said to a friend the other day, "I think all these jokes about young wives having so much trouble with butchers and grocers and being cheated and all that is just too foolish."

"Then I presume you are getting on all right with yours, dear?" her friend inquired.

"Why, of course I am! Anybody would if they would just deal at a reliable place," the young wife declared. "Now, there is my grocer," she continued; "he is just as obliging and thoughtful as can be. The other day I ordered a dozen oranges, and when they came I found there were but eleven in the bag, so when I went to the store again I told him so.

"'Why, yes, ma'am,' he said, 'I know there were. I had put in a dozen, but I noticed that one of them was spoiled, and of course I wouldn't send you any but the best goods, so I took it out.'

"Now, don't you think that was nice in him to be so thoughtful and honest?" she concluded.—Harper's Weekly.

Marriages In Bible Times.

From the Bible accounts of the marriages of Jacob with Leah and Rebecca and from other narratives of marriages in Jewish history it seems that marriage was not held to be a sacrament or religious rite in the times of the patriarchs. In those days the head of the family, the father, was priest and ruler of the family and the only priest or ruler whose authority it recognized. As far as we learn from the Bible narrative in the case of Jacob's marriages, the simple giving of his daughters by Isaac constituted the marriage, there

Lobster Fare.

Hungry lobsters in their natural state seldom refuse fish of any kind, whether dead or alive. The favorite bait with fishermen is fresh or stale herring, but even shark meat is used at a pinch. Lobsters also eat small crabs, sea urchins and mussels. Indeed, there are few forms of marine life suitable for food which they refuse. Lobsters sometimes capture fish alive, striking them with the smaller of their two great claws, which for this reason fishermen call the "quick" or "fish" claw, but they will live for a long time, especially when confined without taking any food. If you tether the lobster by the large claws, you will find that, like the muskrat, he will go off some fine morning, leaving only his legs in the trap, for this animal has the remarkable power of "shooting a claw," or amputating its limbs, and, what is still more wonderful, of growing new ones from the stumps left behind.—St. Nicholas.

Catching a Bride.

Among certain Siberians the bridegroom is not permitted to have a wife until he can catch her. But they do not give him a fair race in the open. The bride, surrounded by her female friends, awaits him in a big tent. As soon as she sees him she runs off. He follows like Hippomenes after Atalanta. But instead of obstacles being thrown in the way of the bride they are thrown across the path of the bridegroom. The pursuing groom falls over old women, chairs, tables, stones and fishing rods or is tripped up by ropes. Only when it is feared he might give up and sulk and go away without the fleeting lady is he permitted to overtake her. Then as she falls into his outstretched arms it may be imagined she utters some equivalent of "This is so sudden!"

A Live Steak.

"It is a mistake," said the president of the New York Waiters' club, "to think that an Englishman always wants his beef excessively rare. As a matter of fact, the English like their beef better done than we do. I once saw a waiter," he continued, "serve an English duke with a cut of very, very rare sirloin. The duke looked closely at the slice of bright red meat. Then he said:

"'Waiter, just send for the butcher, will you?'

"'The butcher, sir?' the waiter stammered.

"'Yes,' said the duke. 'This beef doesn't seem to be quite dead yet.'"

Ye editor and type setter has has been at St. Paul the past week looking up the prospects of getting a little assistance from the state to build a bridge across the Red Lake River in Highlanding Township, and as we can not be in St. Paul and set type at Sunbeam at the same time we ask our readers for their indulgence this week.

Joseph Duchamp was up this way on Wednesday talking up telephone matters for the Trio State Telephone Co so we can get a line to Thief River Falls. We have been to busy to give the matter much attention this week but it seems to us that Mr. Duchamp is giveing the people of this locality a pretty fair proposition to get in touch with the outside world by telephone. This is the same company that owns the Thief River Falls telephone system, and if a deal can be compleated with them the line will be built early this spring.

THE HIGHLANDING BRIDGE.

There seems to be an effort being made by a few men at Highlanding to try to defeat the building of a bridge across the Red Lake River at its present location one mile west of the Highlending store and have it moved to the section line by the store. We are not trying to represent the interests of any country store keepr in this matter, but the people living on the Eleven townships. There is country stores located at Rhoda, Kratka, Brunkeber and Antone, and one is to be put in at the Clearwater creamery this spring. All of the proprietors and patrons of these places are petitoning the legislature for an appropiation to build this bridge at its present location Then we have the store at Malone and the post offices of Kuehnel and Sunbeam, and their patrons solid in line for the present location While two or three men at Highlandin are opposing it and trying to fool people to sign a petition for a bridge at that place, when they have no premission from the government to build one at that point, and may not get one in the next generation. We regret that the necessity has arose that we got to spend time to explain these matters to the people at home, but we will do it, so they can see who is right and who is wrong.

Blind Men's Dreams.

One of the most intelligent inmates of a blind asylum, who came into the world blind, says that he never dreams of the things he has read about and never dreams of any thing or person that he has not in some way come in personal contact with. He dreams of music, of the voices of persons he knows, of such incidents as might happen at the home or in some place in which he has actually been, but never of incidents in other places or in other lands. Even although he has read descriptions of localities, of natural beauties, of the appearance of a street or a city, no idea of what they look like comes to him in the fancies of his sleep. There is a class of blind people who become blind when quite young. Such blind people never dream of any scene or object except those which have remained in the memory from what they actually saw before they became blind.—Pearson's Weekly.

Fish In Inclosed Waters.

Most people not without education and a general knowledge of natural history are mystified by the presence of fish in inclosed waters. For many years there was open mouthed wonder over the perch, bream and crayfish found in the newly cut dams near the Macquarie river, in New South Wales. In some cases the water had scarcely settled after the rain had filled the dam than the fish were observed, and the Australian farmers started a theory of spontaneous production. This obtained and gained wide credence until a Sydney professor chanced to pick up a wild duck and found its breast feathers and webbed feet well dotted with fertile and almost hatched fish ova, on which the "spontaneous production" theory was promptly withdrawn.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

GROWTH OF CARICATURE.

John Law's Wild Schemes Gave It a Tremendous Impetus.

Caricature is nowadays one of the principal methods of criticism. No movement can overreach the mark without eliciting dozens of works of art from caricaturists all over this and all other countries.

This branch of criticism and attack dates far back, but the greatest impulse it ever felt came from the age of tremendous speculation, when, in 1719 and 1730, John Law was manipulating things financial in France. Never before had the financial world been so carried off its feet as it was at that time. Members of the nobility were waiting for a chance to purchase shares in Law's schemes. Duchesses and ladies of high renown tried their most persuasive charms on Law in the attempt to get hold of shares. Men hired out their backs for writing desks, so great was the press of business in making contracts, and one hunchback is reputed to have made 100,000 francs in this way in a few weeks. The French went veritably mad over the schemes to become wealthy. Naturally the papers of the time, especially those of Holland, caricatured the state of affairs. There were pictures of all sorts caricaturing Law, the nobility, the schemes and everything connected with them.

It was this tremendous amount of pictorial work that first directed the energies of William Hogarth in London in this direction. Caricaturing began to be used more and more in the political field, and soon afterward it caused the shelving of Robert Walpole from the English ministry. Ever since then has caricaturing been one of the bitterest and most effectual methods of checking public men and their schemes.

Another Knock.

"Hotel clerks are cold hearted," sighed the shabby tragedian, who was traveling with a toothbrush and a compass.

"Speaking from experience, pal?" asked his barnstorming chum.

"Sure! I approached the clerk of the Red Dog inn and told him actors deserved special terms."

"Ah, indeed! And what did he say?"

"He said yes, they deserved six month terms in the county workhouse."—Chicago News.

If All Candidates Wore White.

The word "candidate" is from the Latin "candidatus." Literally it means white robed, and it was thus called because in Rome those who sought office wore a glittering white toga. Fancy, if you can, all our modern Americans dressed in accordance with their political ambitions. In some sections there would be no such thing as a dark suit of clothes. Washington would simply be one shining center of universal whiteness.—Saturday Evening Post.

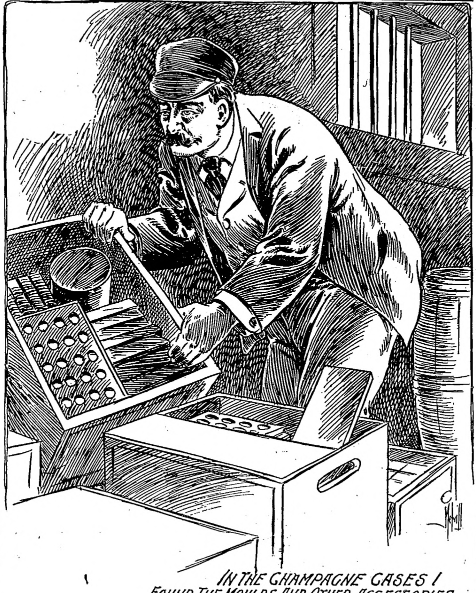
COUNTERFEITERS OPERATE IN A NATIONAL BANK

By an Ex-Operative of the Secret Service

Here Is a True Story of the Uncovering of the Country's Worst Gang of "Shovers of the Queer."

Champagne Cases Furnish Secret of Odd Plot, Unearthed by Captain Dickson—Becomes an Assistant Gardener and Expose of Workings of System Quickly Follows—Cashier Is Placed Under Arrest.



IN THE CHAMPAGNE CASES I FOUND THE MOULDS AND OTHER ACCESSORIES OF THE COUNTERFEITERS.

CAPT. DICKSON and I were again foregathering in front of the cheery log fire at his home. He launched into a capital story of counterfeiting in high places.

"I was once stationed in the city of a great international exposition, to watch for culprits that were expected to put out the customary counterfeit. For the first month or to of the fair there was nothing to do but lounge about the office and, like Mr. Micawber, wait for something to turn up. The four of us who were assigned to this monotonous duty soon grew weary of the inactivity and were on the point of asking for a transfer, when an excellent imitation of the ten dollar gold-piece made its appearance in large numbers. After that, none of the four of us had any cause for complaint on the score of stagnation.

"Saunders and McGrath, two of my companions, by means of a miserably scrawled, anonymous note to the chief of police, secured information of mysterious boxes coming by night to a bank, and it required but a small flight of the imagination to evolve a plot in which the great financial magnate, the president of the bank, was the central figure, regardless of his high social standing, his reputed fabulous wealth, and his irreproachable character.

"I selected the cashier at the factory as my man, and Murphy took the teller of the bank, the man who made up the pay-roll each week. For ten days we shadowed them with dogged persistency. They were both men of the town and both were members of the better class of clubs and moved in the most exclusive circles of society. These matters rather strengthened than weakened our suspicions, for neither of the men was wealthy, and playing society is an expensive game at best.

"But in all our pursuit and in all the lavish expenditures of these young spendthrifts not once did either of them pass or attempt to pass one of the counterfeit coins, so far as we could gather. I don't think they could have done so without its being discovered, so thoroughly did we track them in every turn and move they made during the period we had them under observation. They lived together in a handsomely furnished flat, with a small army of servants, and they entertained lavishly. Their table was of the best and their wines of the rarest vintages.

"We decided that nothing was to be gained by shadowing them further, so we left them to their frivolous social duties. About this time Saunders and McGrath came tagging home, convoying the bank president, tuckered out and disgusted with their fruitless journey.

"The night of their return Murphy and I held a conference with them, at which it was practically agreed that the bank president was innocent, and that there was nothing else to do but take him into our confidence and make the bank itself our point of operation.

"I watched the teller very carefully that week, and especially on the day when he made up the payroll for the factory, which was called for by Saunders. The sack contained both gold and silver, but there was not a single coin in the lot which had not been given birth legitimately at some one of the government's mints. Saunders made sure of this before the sack reached the factory.

"The cashier, a man named Powell, and the teller both kept close watch upon me while I worked in the big vault, as was their duty, and this gave me scant opportunity to investigate the sacks of gold piled away in a pretentious row on a low shelf. In moving them, I thought that some seemed lighter in weight than others, and as this would be valuable information if true, I hit upon what I thought was a rather ingenious way of determining if my surmise was correct.

"Concealing my pen-knife in the hollow of my hand, with the blade open, I selected one of the sacks of ten-dollar coins which seemed to be lighter than some of its mates, and, as I moved it from the shelf, I cut the cord which fastened the mouth of it while the attention of the inquisitive cashier and teller was directed elsewhere.

"Having shaken the mouth of the sack open and frayed the ends of the cord so that my ruse would not be detected. I purposely stumbled and fell as I crossed the vault. The coins poured out upon the steel floor of the big vault in a bright yellow stream, rolling hither and yon, while I sat dejectedly in the midst of the golden flood and rubbed my knee and cursed.

"The two bank officials showed lively concern at my stupid accident, and both set about gathering up the coins. I assisted them as much as possible, but my pulse was beating too fast for my help to amount to much. My ruse had fully served my purpose. The ring of the coins upon the steel floor of the vault had not been true. They had rung dull and heavy, and I knew them at once for their real false character. The verification of this fact came when I fingered them deftly, as I restored them to the sack whence they had come. There was no mistaking the feeling of them. They were greasy and slick; that slimy touch which discloses the spurious coin in the dark as well as in the light. Every one I touched had that slippery, soapstone surface which counterfeiters cannot overcome except by the use of metal of the same fineness as that of the genuine coin.

"As I replaced the sacks, after cleaning the shelf, I was careful to weigh each of them in my hand. There were 15 sacks, each containing a thousand dollars in half eagles, which were light in weight.

"I now felt sure of my ground, but it was still necessary that we secure proof against the teller. I had not suspected the cashier, until his evident trepidation when I spilled the sack of gold.

"The mystery was now more complex and interesting than ever. While I had discovered the big reserve of the counterfeiters I had no evidence against any one, and was still afraid to make arrests. I wanted the makers of the coin and their machinery, and wanted them badly, for this was the biggest case that I had thus far in my career been engaged upon.

"That night I did some tall thinking, and also made a secret trip to the banker's residence, which I carefully examined from the outside, going over the extensive grounds about the house and the outbuildings at the imminent peril of being shot for a burglar. Here I discovered only one thing of importance. In the stable I stumbled on an empty champagne case, which was of the same brand as one I had noticed in the vault of the bank. It might mean something or nothing, but I had long ago learned to take particular notice of small things, and many is the valuable clew that this habit has given me.

"Since the return of Saunders and McGrath, they had been working on the clew of the anonymous letter, and the information it contained about the mysterious boxes which had been seen to arrive at the bank at night. They had located the author, a discharged messenger, who bore a grudge against the teller to whose instance he attributed his discharge. From the messenger they learned that the boxes had been delivered at the back entrance of the bank late at night. They had been brought to it in a one horse express wagon, but the wagon had not displayed a license number and the driver, although muffled in a great coat, had evidently not been a regular expressman, so the messenger informed them. He gave a fairly accurate description of the wagon, which had been of peculiar construction.

"I had seen just such a vehicle at the banker's residence, a sort of delivery wagon which seemed to be employed in hauling feed for the extensive stable of the banker, as it had been filled with sacks of oats and bales of hay when I saw it.

"The next morning I reported sick at the bank, but my service with the banker was not at an end. I had shifted my position from janitor at the bank to assistant gardener and general factotum at the president's residence. Armed with a note from the banker to the gardener, I put in my appearance at his residence. The gardener didn't seem to like my appearance. He regarded me with cold suspicion, while he read the note from his employer, and, it seemed to me, he rather reluctantly accepted me as his assistant. I verily believe he would have driven me away on some pretext, if it had not been for the explicit terms of the note the banker had written at my dictation.

"The gardener was a tough looking customer. There was an atmosphere of suspicion about him which put me on my guard and caused me to watch him with caution. He was a smooth individual, however, and I had served in my new capacity for three days without discovering anything worth mentioning, when he set me at the task of wheeling out the ashes from the big bin in the cellar. The bin was situated at the rear of the furnace, near the entrance of the basement, and in passing to and fro at my task, I noticed several wine-cases piled in a dark corner of the basement. I took advantage of the first opportunity to examine them and, while the lids were securely nailed down, I found, by lifting them, that they were as heavy as chunks of lead.

"That night I burglarized the banker's basement, while two of my companions kept watch outside to see that I was not disturbed. In the champagne-cases I found the molds and other accessories of the counterfeiters, and a large quantity of metal and newly manufactured coins.

"Before we left the banker's residence, the gardener was a prisoner, and before the night was over we had nabbed Mason and Tarley and Cashier Powell. The gardener turned state's evidence and gave the whole thing away. The three society men held out firmly to the last. They were convicted only after considerable difficulty. Except for the assistance of the gardener in securing evidence, we should never have been able to have made out, against them, anything more than a strong circumstantial case. We recovered about $10,000 from the culprits, and in the bank's vault was more than $18,000 of the counterfeit money. The night watchman at the bank was also implicated and convicted.

"The gardener, who had many aliases, was an old offender. He had worked at one time in the 'Frisco mint, and was regarded as a skillful workman. After leaving the mint, he had put out a gold coin of the twenty-dollar denomination, but had been caught and had served a prison term for it. He had drifted east, after serving his term, and had figured out the plan which he had there put in operation. He had manufactured the coins, using the big furnace at the banker's residence for that purpose, and had secured the three society men, all of whom were heavily in debt and therefore ready victims, to palm off the money. Their method was to take good money from the bank vault and replace it with the bad, which they worked off at the factory in the weekly pay roll. The cashier at the bank had secured the place for the counterfeiter at the banker's residence, but this had not been with any particular design further than it was a place that was especially suited to the necessities of the counterfeiter."

FINE RECIPE FOR COLDS

Mix half ounce of Concentrated pine compound with two ounces of glycerine and a half pint of good whiskey.

This simple mixture is to be used in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful four times a day. The bottle should be well shaken each time.

Any druggist can supply the ingredients and it can be mixed at home.

The Concentrated pine is a pine product refined for medical use. It comes only in half ounce bottles, each enclosed in a round case, which is airtight and retains all the original strength in the fluid, but be sure it is labeled "Concentrated" in order to get the genuine article.

Laughter in the Court.

An old plasterer is called upon to give evidence for the plaintiff. Counsel for the defense tries to bully him. "Have you ever been in prison?" "Yes, twice." "Ah! how long the first time?" "One whole afternoon." "What! And the second time?" "Only one hour." "And pray what offense had you committed to deserve so small a punishment?" "I was sent to prison to whitewash a cell to accommodate a lawyer who had cheated one of his clients."

Those Tired, Aching Feet of Yours need Allen's Foot-Ease. 25c at your Druggist's. Write A. S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y., for sample.

Eleanor Stevens' Will

By Isabel Scott Stone

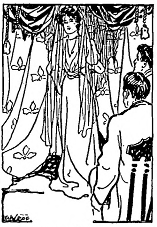
(Copyright, by Shortstory Pub. Co.)

When the following notice appeared in the columns of the daily newspapers, society experienced an absolutely new sensation. People who hadn't known the late Eleanor Stevens immediately began to inquire into the history of the woman whose name was coupled with so singular an announcement. And people who had known Eleanor Stevens forthwith revived long lists of her curious fads and fancies, concluding always with the declaration: "Well, it's just what you might expect from Eleanor Stevens."

PERSONAL.—THE REJECTED SUITORS of the late Miss Eleanor Stevens may hear something to their advantage by communicating with Willard Pratt, Counsellor at Law, International Trust building.

Now, Eleanor Stevens had been by no means either the crotchety old maid or the rattle-brained young one that these remarks might imply. On the contrary, she had been a rarely charming and gifted young woman, well born, well bred, the heiress to an enormous fortune, in fact, the possessor of beauty, brains, and money, sufficient to equip half a dozen so-called society belles. But in spite of these endowments, or, perhaps, because of them, Eleanor Stevens had been an eccentric, and with every year since her debut her eccentricity had become more marked. At times, for example, she would dance and golf, pour at teas, and talk small talk to eligible young men with a persistency and success that made her for the time the sun of society's solar system. As to her suitors, the most remarkable reports had existed concerning Miss Stevens' treatment of those gentlemen. It had been said by some that each in turn underwent a period of suspense hung, like Mahomet's coffin, between earth and heaven, at the end of which time he was always lowered to the former element by Miss Stevens' unqualified refusal. There were those who had declared that her drawing-room was always as crowded with suitors as a fashionable doctor's waiting-room with patients.

In the end, society had concluded to accept the girl's vagaries as simply "Eleanor Stevens' way." And this formula had been made to cover a multitude of oddities, ranging from the wearing of high crowns when low ones were the fashion, to Miss Stevens' sudden and mysterious departure for Europe exactly two days after she had taken apartments for the summer with a party of friends at a watering-place hotel. Indeed, when, six months after her abrupt departure, the notice came of the young heiress' sudden death—unattended except by her maid and companion—in some obscure village in the Black Forest, even her friends could find no phrase that so well expressed their shocked surprise as: "Well, that was just like Eleanor Stevens. She couldn't even die like other people."



A Tall, Heavily Veiled Figure Advanced Into the Room.

And now, following upon the news of her strange death, had appeared this still stranger notice.

Eleanor Stevens' rejected suitors! Who were they? Would they present themselves according to directions? What were the advantages they would gain by so doing?

To the last of these questions the public had not long to wait for an answer. Three days after the extraordinary "personal" had made its appearance, the announcement was made that Eleanor Stevens had left a will, and that this will had been probated. Before this news was 12 hours old, the sensation caused by the advertisement was completely overshadowed by that produced by the following clause with which it was discovered the will ended:

To each of my rejected suitors I give and bequeath $25,000, to be paid subject to certain sealed conditions, exactly one year from my death, in the library of my residence in Beechwood street, Philadelphia.

One man only knew the facts in the case, and that was Eleanor Stevens' lawyer, Willard Pratt; but from him neither hints, nor bribes, nor open question could drag a syllable. People accepted, grudgingly, the necessity of awaiting the slow coming and going of 365 days before they could find out who those suitors had been.

Meantime, Willard Pratt, counsellor-at-law, was deriving from the administration of Miss Stevens' will the keenest enjoyment of his long and varied legal career. But his enjoyment reached its culminating point when, just one week before the day appointed for the settlement of the will, society was again startled by this notice in the daily papers:

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.—THE rejected suitors of Miss Eleanor Stevens are requested to meet at her late residence on Beechwood street, Philadelphia, on Monday, the 21st instant, at ten o'clock a. m., with reference to the legacies due them under her will.—Willard Pratt, Executor.

"I think that will reawaken popular interest," said the old lawyer dryly.

And so it did. Seven days later, when the hour appointed for the reception of Miss Stevens' rejected suitors drew near, the street in the vicinity of her late residence was lined with an eager multitude of men and women. From behind the curtains of every window within a block, unseen spectators awaited the morning's developments; while people who would not acknowledge their curiosity by joining the crowd of confessed sightseers made convenient errands which took them through Beechwood street at the time appointed for the "show." The only drawback to the anticipated enjoyment was the fear that, after all, the suitors might at the last moment fail to appear.

But no such catastrophe occurred. It is true that as the hour drew near in which they were to stand confessed as members of Miss Eleanor's "army of martyrs" several of the intended claimants had found themselves weakening in their resolve. Those, for instance, who had justified their claim solely on the ground of an admiration felt but never expressed, felt their courage oozing as the ordeal approached. Others, who were burning incense at new shrines, seriously considered renouncing a claim that would decidedly complicate their present prospects. Still others, who were now happily married, hesitated at opening the old wound and endangering their domestic bliss, even for $25,000; while hardly one but felt some qualms at the thought of openly profiting by an experience that most men hide in the deepest recesses of the heart.

It was a question whether pride or profit would win the day. In the end, however, the almighty dollar had proved its right to that title.

When Mr. Pratt entered the library of Miss Stevens' late residence, at ten o'clock on this eventful morning, he found the room crowded with a body of men clad in mourning garb and solemnly waiting in various stages of uneasiness for the approach of the long-expected moment.

"Gentlemen," began the old lawyer, "I must trouble each of you to give me in writing a concise statement of the time, place and circumstances attending your several offers and rejections, in order that I may have documentary proof that you are entitled to the legacies left you by the terms of Miss Stevens' will.

"Documentary proof!" At those unpected words the emotion that marked the faces of the strange assembly changed to unmistakable concern. Was this some disagreeable joke? No, the old lawyer waited with unmoved face for the fulfilment of his demand. There was a momentary hesitation. Then, filing up in due order, the applicants, one by one, seated themselves at the table before the old attorney and wrote the account demanded.

As the last statement was signed, the portieres of the library were suddenly drawn back, and a tall, heavily-veiled figure advanced slowly into the middle of the room. Then, as she raised her hand and drew back the thick gauze that masked her face, a cry of terror echoed through the house.

The woman was Eleanor Stevens!

"Wait," she commanded. "Don't be alarmed; I am no ghost. The Miss Stevens who died a year ago in the Black Forest was not the Miss Stevens whose loss you are so deeply mourning.

"By a stupid blunder of the peasants with whom I was staying, an exchange of names occurred between myself and an invalid girl whom I had befriended; so that when she died, her death certificate was issued under the name of Eleanor Stevens.

"Some weeks earlier I had been influenced by daily contact with one whose life was fading rapidly away to draw up my will in legal form and to send it home to my lawyer.

"When I left so suddenly for Europe a year and a half ago it was because of a conversation overheard between several of my seeming admirers which changed all my ideas of manly chivalry in affairs of the heart, and which drove me abroad, as I supposed, forever.

"It was that blundering exchange of names that has given me the opportunity of meeting you under these interesting circumstances.

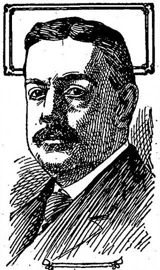
"Now, gentlemen, my will, in which you have shown so deep an interest, stipulates that each of my rejected suitors shall receive $25,000 after my death. That bequest will be carried out to the letter when I am really dead.

"In the meantime I would gladly read your documentary proofs; but, as I have never in all my life rejected but two suitors, and as one of these died six months ago and the other is not here to-day, I shall be obliged to refer you to my lawyer."

And with a sweeping courtesy Miss Stevens withdrew from the room.

Sporting Gossip

Charles F. Thompson, who has been elected president of the Western Golf association, is a man who has been connected with the Scottish game for years in the Chicago district. His rise to the executive chair has been a gradual one, and he is a man who will doubtless bring the association to an even higher plane than it now occupies. Mr. Thompson, who is a member of the Homewood and Midlothian Country clubs, first served as an officer in the Western Golf association two years ago, when he was elected to the secretaryship. The following season he was raised to the important position of treasurer. In addition to these positions Mr. Thompson is at the present time a member of the executive committee of the United States Golf association. He has for years taken a prominent part in clubdom, belonging to the South Shore Country, Kenwood, Press, Diana Shooting (Horicon, Wis.) and the Iskigamiusigan clubs. He is also a member of the Chicago Athletic association. Mr. Thompson is a fair golf player, and finds relaxation on the links the year around. For the past six years he has been an officer of the Flossmoor organization. In addition to golf Mr. Thompson finds time in the spring and winter to fish and hunt. He is an expert angler and has bagged many a fine hamper of game. The woods and streams of Wisconsin are well known to him. He is engaged in the lumber and railroad industries.



CHARLES F. THOMPSON

Baseball managers and football coaches are always dead sore when their team loses, and they can scarcely be blamed. Of course the manager of a beaten team, whether it be in baseball or football, gives out an interview in which he "doffs his cap to the victorious manager and congratulates him on having one of the best teams ever," That's nothing more than sublime bunk. That's all part of the game. He says it because he knows the public likes to hear just that sort of "walla, walla." When he's not speaking for publication he can advance no less than 40,000 reasons why his team lost and why they should have won. That's human nature. It's almost as difficult to "fix" a ball game in the major leagues as it is to make a 30-cent alarm clock keep good time. The millions that have been made in baseball in recent years can be traced to the fact that baseball has been conducted along business lines—conducted honestly. Out on the field when the players are in action it is the same. Every man is out to win. While in the game the great stars never think of baseball as a business. The cheers of the multitude, the glory of winning makes them forget for the time all about the salary envelope. The player that is not constituted that way never becomes a star. They refer to him as a mechanical player. He plays ball as he would saw and hammer if he were a carpenter. But, nevertheless, the star's conception of sportsmanship is far removed from that of the amateur. The really great players always want to win. They will use tricks to accomplish their ends, but none of the stars can ever be accused of dirty work. As for being sore when they lose, all that is necessary to satisfy the doubtful ones is to be about the hotel where the team is stopping after a particularly hard-luck defeat. Manager and players are about as cordial and pleasant as a rat terrier is giving battle to a half dozen rodents.

Herman Schaefer, second baseman of the Detroit Tigers' American league championship team, has been selected field captain of the 1909 team, to succeed the peerless Bill Coughlin, who returns to the minors. Germany Schaefer has earned his new honors, as he is acknowledged a brainy ball player and a natural leader that never knows he is beaten. He is popular with the players on the Tiger team, and President Navin's announcement gives entire satisfaction to the fans. Last season at times of trouble he did more than any other man to aid Hughie Jennings in inspiring the jaded players to renewed efforts.

Ask Her This Question

"Do you know of any woman who ever received any benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

If any woman who is suffering with any ailment peculiar to her sex will ask her neighbors this question, she will be surprised at the result. There is hardly a community in this country where women cannot be found who have been restored to health by this famous old remedy, made exclusively from a simple formula of roots and herbs.

During the past 30 years we have published thousands of letters from these grateful women who have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and never in all that time have we published a testimonial without the writer's special permission. Never have we knowingly published a testimonial that was not truthful and genuine. Here is one just received a few days ago. If anyone doubts that this is a true and honest statement of a woman's experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound write and ask her.

Houston, Texas.—"When I first began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a total wreck. I had been sick for three years with female troubles, chronic dyspepsia, and a liver trouble. I had tried several doctor's medicines, but nothing did me any good.

"For three years I lived on medicines and thought I would never get well, when I read an advertisment of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and was advised to try it.

"My husband got me one bottle of the Compound, and it did me so much good I continued its use. I am now a well woman and enjoy the best of health.

"I advise all women suffering from such troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. They won't regret it, for it will surely cure you."—Mrs. Bessie L. Hicks, 819 Cleveland St., Houston.

Any woman who is sick and suffering is foolish surely not to give such a medicine as this a trial. Why should it not do her as much good as it did Mrs. Hicks.

Messengers, servants, etc.

The period is 1886. The place is a country house near Oxford in England. Scene—The library at Alwyn Hall.

ALGERNON (outside): On no account, Fraser, let me be disturbed—(entering—stands by table)—I must realize my position,—letters—accounts!—Since father died, I have been in a dream, a bad dream—everything has gone to the dogs—bills unpaid—steward postponed—even Harry—my little brother Harry—at Oxford—neglected. First dinner since poor dad died. (Aloud) Yes—There's Lady Banjo—confound it—I mean Lady Newman—our worthy pastor, Dr. Penryck—Maj. the Hon. Marengo Marjoribanks—my gallant uncle—Cousin Bobbie—good chap, Bobbie—Robert Doolittle Marjoribanks, best fellow in the world,—yes, yes, Fraser, in a minute!

(Going to window)—"All mine as far as eye can see! All this is mine! He said to Egypt's king,"—Tush, I'm quoting—Polycrates, bad luck! Poor dad died and I in my turn became Sir Algernon Marjoribanks Alwyn, seventh baronet, of Alwyn on Alwyn—with an income derived from railroad stocks—principally American—according to Fudge and McPherson, our family lawyers, of nearly £10,000 a year.—Fudge says, to be exact, nine thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight pounds, nine shillings and six pence, after deducting commissions—who draws the commissions? Fudge, I suppose, and McPherson?

Let me see, what did he explain? In the first place he demonstrated, quite unnecessarily, that I was sole heir to the title and estate. Estate consists of 1,500 acres of park land. Dad had a row with his tenants some 20 years ago and evicted the lot—turned every inch of ground into park and garden and paddock—ornamental lakes, and so on. Result very charming, but without pecuniary advantages. Moreover, Alwyn hall and park, etc., etc., entailed and can't be sold or rented, and, according to terms of dad's will, there are to be no farms and no tenants. The chap that happens to be baronet must live on his income of £10,000 derived from railroad stock, bonds, etc.—he must keep up the hounds, the chapel, the conservatories, the nursery, etc., etc. So if it were not for the railroads Sir Algernon Alwyn, Bart., would be Sir Algernon Alwyn, Beggar. However, the bonds are there, safe enough in a tin box, at the law office of Messrs. Fudge and McPherson.

There are Harry's letters—drat the boy—he never writes unless he wants something (sitting down and taking up letters).—Immediate! urgent!—very urgent! deliver immediately!—forward at once!—well, he's certainly in a hurry—I'd better open the last one—no use reading the lot.—The devil!—what's this?

"Algie—This is simply to say that if the money is not here by nine o'clock on Tuesday, I shall blow out my worthless brains—"

Tues—why, to-day's Tuesday!—and it's five o'clock!—let's see the first letter (opens and reads):

"Played with Lord Rook, Sir Winslow Sharper—oh, of course—got up—£650 in debt to Rook and Sharper—honor!—family honor!—will repay all from small income—you must send at once, etc."

Of course—of course, and I'll send for Master Harry to keep out of the clutches of my Lord Rook in future,—college life!—nice place for innocent boys—brandies and sodas—cigars—cards—phew!—Well, here goes—telegraph blank—

"Will honor your draft Fudge and McPherson—£600.
Algernon Alwyn."

What? Oh, a note? Just come? All right. Be off with the telegram. Oh—Fudge and McPherson? Business, I suppose? A woman's hand? Fudge and McPherson always typewrite. (Opens letter.) What's this?

"My Dear Sir Algernon—I am addressing myself to you in the hope that dreadful as this communication must necessarily be—and—believe me, no less dreadful for you to receive than for me to write,—it will come less harshly from one whom you have known so long and who was once your dear mother's devoted companion and friend.—My poor husband is so stricken by the blow which has suddenly blasted our happiness, that he has fallen into a stupor from which, I fear, nothing but a miracle can rouse him. Dear Sir Algernon, I will not keep you in suspense but tell you briefly—and perhaps you will say brutally, that our senior partner, Mr. Fudge, to whom my husband looked up with such childlike confidence and pride, left suddenly last week for Australia—yesterday my husband found it necessary to go to your box for some papers, the interest being due on several of your investments, when he discovered that the box was empty!—every security of yours which had been in the hands of Fudge and McPherson had disappeared! Hoping against hope my husband searched everywhere but no trace of your papers could be found,—he came home in the evening—pale, distraught, confessed his trouble to me and then sank into the stupor from which nothing can rouse him. My heart is bleeding for my husband—my heart is bleeding for you—I am hoping, hoping still that there may be some mistake. But Mr. Fudge's sudden departure—the disappearance of all your securities, so easily converted into cash, and the fact that Mr. Fudge drew nearly every penny standing to our credit in the bank, can, I fear, point at but one conclusion: Mr. Fudge, whom we so honored and revered in this community, is a thief!—With tears of sorrow and shame, I am your most distressed servant,
Harriet McPrehson."

(Rises.) Ruined! gone! everything gone!—not a penny left!—cleaned out! Impossible!—I can't realize it! How do I feel—a beggar! A few moments ago I was rich—or thought I was—now I'm a beggar—with a mansion and a park—here goes—(writes):

"Dear Old Nunkey—Can you let me have a cheque for a 'thou' by bearer—Looking forward to seeing you all at dinner this evening! "Your affectionate nephew,
Algie."

There. Fraser!—Tell Tom to run across to Uncle Marjoribanks with this note and hurry back!—If he stops to talk to Matilda Ann, I'll take his scalp.

But Lucy!—Lucy?—Lucy won't want to be married to a pauper with a mansion and a park—but I know what it will be:—Nothing will change me—Rich or poor, I am yours, Lucy.—Dear old girl (writes).

"My darling Lucy—I have just had an awful shock—Mrs. McPherson writes to say that old Fudge has left for Australia and taken my little 'all' with him,—I love you and shall never love anyone but you in all my life, but of course you won't marry a beggar (even with a mansion and a park), and so, dear, you are free, unless it is your choice to wait until I shall have recovered by hard work my lost fortune. As for me, I am yours until death, only I thought it right to let you know, and even if you give me up, I am, your devoted slave. Algernon."

But she won't give me up,—I know she won't—my little Lucy—(folds letter and addresses envelope, rising) Fraser—(rings bell)—Fraser—(goes to door)—

Here's a letter from auntie and a long letter from uncle:

"Algernon—I am, I may say, fatally wounded—(Good heavens—has he shot himself?)—treacherously shot, mortally injured by a member of my family.—The gun that fired the shot is no other than the letter I have just received from you,—no Martini-Henry could have done its work better. This morning while on a reconnoitering expedition in the village I ran across Mrs. McPherson. As she was flying signals of distress, I halted on my march to question her and I drew from her the information that her husband's partner, Fudge, had absconded with your funds.—The blow was so severe that I was obliged to abandon my position and retire upon the nearest public house, which happened to be the Alwyn Arms. Here I fortified and entrenched myself and it was not until the afternoon that I felt sufficiently strengthened to continue the advance on Marengo House. You can imagine my horror on opening your dispatch to discover the treachery of one, upon whose loyalty I would have staked the campaign. Had it not been for the reconnoisance this morning I should have been under the impression, that, still amply endowed with the fortune your father bequeathed to you, and which you have so recklessly squandered.—(squandered?—recklessly!)—you required a momentary loan of £1,000 and with the motto of my house "noblesse oblige" ever before my eyes, I should have instantly complied—I, an old soldier, would have marched unsuspectingly into the ambush your cunning had prepared for my destruction. I enclose a few lines from your heart-broken aunt.
Marengo Majoribanks.
Late Major Her Majesty's Dragoon Guards."

"N. B.—I need not say that it will be out of the question for me or any member of my family to accept your invitation to dinner this evening."

The old—the old—no, I won't—I won't abuse him behind his back, but when I see him I'll let him know! (Sighs), (writes):

"My Dear Doctor, and My Dear Old Friend—A calamity has overtaken me—to be brief—Fudge has disappeared with all my money—I am, of course, temporarily embarrassed. Remembering your many expressions of good will and your oft repeated request that I should apply to you when in trouble, I do not hesitate now to ask you to aid me by giving bearer your cheque for £1,000, for which I enclose my I. O. U.—I hope that in spite of my misfortune you will not fail to come to dinner this evening and we'll uncork a bottle of '74 to drown our sorrow.
Always your affectionate friend,
Algernon Alwyn."

Ah, let's see what Auntie Munch has to say (opens letter, reads):

"My Dear Algernon—Your uncle has just, with the greatest delicacy and with all possible consideration for my feeble condition, broken to me the fearful crash that has enveloped our house in its awful pall!—To think that only a few moments ago I was a happy woman watering my beloved roses in a sunlit garden, when out of a clear sky the bolt fell and ravaged in an instant, like a pack of cards, the beautiful placid sea on which we were sailing so peacefully. To think, Algernon, that you, in whom I have always had such mistaken faith, should have been the serpent to gnaw away with one blow the foundations of our confidence in humanity!—Your poor uncle says that by your act you have placed yourself within the power of the police and without the pale of society. You will know, of course, why it would have been impossible for us to comply with your attempt to rob us, by yielding up a thousand pounds: We have your cousin Robert to consider! and it is, as you are aware, compounding a felony to rob Peter to pay Paul. I am with every expression of sorrow and horror, your completely collapsed aunt, Marjory Marjoribanks,"

"P. S.—And oh, Algernon, I was looking forward with so much pleasure to our first dinner this evening, that is another sad blow!—P. S. P. S.—you will have to discharge that expensive cook!"

This is getting worse and worse!—Why, oh, why doesn't Tom come back with a word from Lucy—then I wouldn't mind that abusive nonsense!—Six to dinner—three friends gone—No, that's not fair to Bobbie—(writes):

"Dear Old Bobbie—I suppose you've heard by now of my smash?—all gone—nothing left but the house and the park.—Have you any dollars to spare? If so, bring them around at dinner time, if you can get out without a row—We'll have one more good dinner and laugh and chaff and drink brown sherry!—never mind about the dollars if you're hard up, but come! From your old fag, Algie."

(Tears letter open):

"My Dear Sir Algernon"—Oh—formal—I think I'll sit down (sits)—"My Dear Sir Algernon—Lucy being particularly engaged,—Mr. Robert Marjoribanks is visiting us this afternoon,"—damn Robert Marjoribanks!—"I am taking it upon myself to answer your letter. As soon as the dear child read what you had to say she was greatly distressed, and came to confide in me. My Dear Sir Algernon, I am forced to admire your honesty in at once apprising my poor girl of your changed position and the correct and sensible view you take of the situation. To marry upon nothing a year would be absurd and it would take you years to retrieve your fortune. My daughter quite agrees with me in believing that when poverty walks in at the door love flies out at the window. You must not imagine from this that Lucy is not deeply moved and dreadfully upset. She extends to you all her heartfelt sympathy! She would write to you herself but she is on the very verge of a break-down and the necessity to entertain her guests forces her to present a brave front to the world!—and since the engagement has to be broken off it is better to do it now and at once, rather than to prolong the suffering by senseless shilly-shallying. Judging by your own most sensible letter, I have every reason to believe that you will coincide with me in this. With sincere regard from us both and every expression of good will and sympathy, believe me to be, dear Sir Algernon,
Yours faithfully,
Anita Turnival Newman."

"P. S.—I think it would be better for us not to come to your dinner this evening, so will you please accept our thanks and regrets?"

I don't believe it—I can't believe it—Lucy—to throw me over like that! Lucy, a heartless woman of the world! Lucy to love,—to pretend to love me for my income! No, I'll not believe it! If my faith in her is lost there is indeed nothing left.

Oh, one from Bobbie—(opens letter):

"Awfully sorry, old chappie, it's a damned shame! Wish I could help you! Was just coming over to ask you for a pony. I'm stony broke. Can't come to dinner—Wish I could!—Governor stormy! Swore like a trooper!—Says he disowns you. The Newmans have corralled me for dinner. If you want to get rid of your nags I think I can make a trade. Keep your hair on—you're not the first codger that has come to grief. Speculation's the devil, but I never thought you were a plunger?—Here's how!
Bobbie."

Speculation! Plunger! Very soon they'll accuse me of robbing a bank! And shortly they'll have me arrested for murder! What was that game we used to play? You place a lot of people in a line and you say something innocent to the party at one end, and by the time it's been passed to the other end it isn't fit for publication. So that's what they've told Lucy. Plunger! No wonder she doesn't want to marry an idiot. (Sits down. Writes):

"My Dear Mr. Poynter—Bad news travels fast and therefore no doubt you have heard by now of the serious financial loss I have sustained. I am in immediate need of (I won't ask for a thou' this time, only enough to save Harry), of £600, and I venture to ask you if you will assist me? If yes, will you please send me your cheque by bearer? I should not write if I had not known you all my life as an old and valued friend of my father and of, yours very truly, and with many thinks in advance,
Algernon Alwyn."

Reply from Dr. Penryck? (Reads):

"The Rectory, Tuesday.

"This is no time, my poor boy, to preach a homily or to point a lesson. By now, I imagine, your spirit is sufficiently chastened not to need from my lips any word of reproof, reproach, criticism or condemnation. Your money was your own, but I must say that if my beloved friend's fortune was to be scattered to the four winds in so brief a space of time, I would have prayed heaven to direct its flow into a course more worthy of his hallowed memory! Think, too, what suffering you entail on him who has known and loved you since you were an infant; who held you in these old arms and whose now palsied fingers first guided your baby eyes across the animal alphabet!—I can not feel that I am to blame. Had you listened to my precepts early in life and later benefited by my counsel, had you taken full advantage of my still more recent after-dinner talks, when, with a light and playful touch I none the less earnestly endeavored to sow in your mind the seeds of wisdom, you would not now be seated upon the stool of repentance, contemplating the crumbling ruins of an erstwhile regal fortune!—Alas, your life at Oxford was but the prelude to your present fall:—Let him that is without sin cast the first stone, but still I must decline to become particeps criminis by lending you money. No, it may be that what appears to be now a great affliction may become the cornerstone of your salvation! Perhaps, my dear Algernon, the loss of your wealth may make a man of you. Take your knapsack and your wander-staff and sail for America!—Would I were young enough to accompany you! Heaven forbid that I should deny you consolation or advice, and I will come at eight and take a parting glass with you and wish you godspeed and a better life!
"Your true friend,
Parsifal Penryck."

(A knock at the door. He goes to door—comes down with letter):

Wait a minute, Fraser (opens the letter). To be sure:

"Dear Sir: I am in receipt of your favor of this date. I shall be happy to advance the amount named providing the collateral or security you propose to offer is first-class. I regret to say an important business engagement will prevent me from accepting your invitation to dinner this evening. Yours faithfully, Guillaume Perseverance Poynter."

Wait a minute, Fraser,—(writes rapidly):

"Dear Hal—I'm sending William with the dog cart for you. Leave a note for Messrs. Rook and Sharper to come on here after dinner and I'll satisfy them. I enclose a line for them. Don't fail to be here by eight o'clock for dinner.
"Your Algie."

So! And

"Sir Algernon Alwyn presents his compliments to Lord Rook and Sir Winslow Sharper, and he will be glad to see them at Alwyn Hall this evening when he will satisfy any claims against his brother to the full extent of his, Sir Algernon's, fortune."

Things are about as black as they can be—and I don't see a streak of light—if only, Lucy hadn't thrown me over—I'm glad I didn't go to her!—

(A tap at the window)—what's that?—(tap is repeated)—somebody at the window,—burglar,—well, he's welcome!—policeman perhaps!—(tap repeated—goes to window, leans out)—

Lucy!

S'sh!

Lucy! Lucy, don't go!—Lucy! She's gone—but oh—oh—oh—(comes down with a note in his hand)—Reads:

"My Dear, Dear, Old Darling—I wonder if you believe what the mater wrote you? How could you? She's just told me.—My poor, poor darling—I'm going to rush across as soon as I'm dressed, when everybody will be in their rooms, and give you one kiss—and, dearest, that is to tell you that rich or poor, I am yours to death.
Lucy."

Now, fall walls!—come earthquake! torture me!—hang me!—what do I care?—Lucy loves me!—Lucy's true to me.—All the world may go against me, but my Lucy's's my Lucy and she's my Lucy still.

(Knock at the door—goes to door)—Letter?

(Whistles a tune—opens letter)—

"Dear Sir—Not hearing from you up to closing time, I venture to remind you that I sent you a most important communication yesterday. Thinking that the letter may have escaped your notice I venture now to call your attention to it and request the honor of your commands. I am, dear sir, Your obedient servant,
"George Henry Honeymoon."

Well, just wait a minute, Fraser, and I'll see what it is—(looks over letters on table)—Oh, yes, here's a letter to be sure,—County Bank—(opens letter).

"Dear Sir—I have the honor to inform you that before leaving for Australia, Mr. Fudge, of the firm of Messrs. Fudge & McPherson, deposited with us, for safekeeping, securities, etc., standing in your name and of which Messrs. Fudge & McPherson had charge."—What! What!—"Mr. Fudge desires us to inform you of this and to say that Mr. McPherson being in very delicate health, he thought it wiser, subject to your consent, to put your affairs for the present in our hands. Mr. Fudge was obliged to leave in great haste for Sidney by yesterday's steamer, to attend to your uncle, Mr. Mortimer Alwyn, the great brewer"—(h'm, I've never seen him)—"whom we understand to be suffering from an incurable disease and whose heir we believe you are. We are sending you cheque book under separate cover, and awaiting your instructions, we have the honor to be, dear sir,
"Your obedient servants,
"London & County Bank, Ltd.,
"Per G. H. Honeyman."

Good Lord, Fraser, bring me a whisky and soda—This has been too much—and Fraser, tell the messenger I'll call at the bank to-morrow morning and see Mr. Honeyman—bring me a whisky and soda if you want to save my life?

Ah, here's one from old Ryan,—old sawbones Ryan,—(opens letter)—

"Dear Sir—Mr. Fudge wishes me to inform you before leaving to wind up the affairs of your uncle in Australia that I have been called in by him in consultation with Drs. Clark & Sorrywait, and that we have come to the conclusion that Mr. McPherson will not be able to attend to business for some time, his memory being so severely affected that it is almost certain that he is suffering from a serious disease of the brain,"—h'm, h'm—etc., etc.

(Sits down)—Lucy first (writes):

"Dearest, Dearest, Dearest Lucy—It's all right—we've found all the money and more. My apologies to your mother—tell her to leave everything—I mean, leave dinner and come and dine with me and to bring all her guests—and not to forget YOU—more anon. "Your Algie."

(Takes another sheet of paper):

"Dear Old Nunkey—It was a false alarm—the money is all here—every penny and more in sight—bring Aunty here to dinner at once or never speak again to your affectionate nephew, Algie."

(Now for the American!)

"Dear Mr. Poynter—I'm sorry to have troubled you—it was all a mistake—I am still in possession of my fortune and I hear that it is to be shortly much increased. Put off that important business engagement and join,
"Yours very truly, with many apologies,
Algernon Alwyn."

(An hour later)—H'm—So here we all are again! as we were, only a little wiser. No, we won't be cynical—we'll take the world as we find it and we'll thank God for Lucy—(pours out whisky and soda)—Here's to Lucy! (Drinks.) Ah, there they come—(great noise heard on staircase—goes to door—opens it wide)—Come up!—Come up, every one of you and welcome! Lucy!

(Quick curtain.)

In Gypsy Land.

Roumania is par excellence the land of the gypsy, for the Tsigani, as these wandering folk are called, contribute some 250,000 of the total population of 6,000,000. A hundred years ago they were kept in a state of regular slavery, being freely bought and sold, the Roumanian government owning 80,000 of them. It was not till 1854 that they were granted their freedom, and since that time most of them have accordingly been either rogues or vagabonds, or both, wandering hither and thither, a nuisance to honest people.

In their native Roumania, it is said that the gypsy race is rapidly dwindling away, owing to intermarriage with the Roumanians. Throughout the other countries of the world, however, which they haunt, little diminution has been noticed in their ranks. Indeed, in France they have become such a pest that radical measures have been taken to oust them from the country.

LENNON WANTS LABOR DEPARTMENT INVESTIGATED

And Thereby Stirs Up a Warm Discussion Along Political Lines.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 3.—The pyrotechnics of sharp debate were the feature of today's legislative session. John Lennon of Minneapolis called up his resolution in the house demanding an investigation of the labor department by a special committee of five to be appointed by the speaker. Lennon demanded that the serious charges made against the labor bureau in the special report of retiring Labor Commissioner W. H. Williams be investigated.

Lennon called attention to the allegations of Williams; that the labor bureau had been turned into a political machine; that men had been appointed to its positions by the administration without his consent; that politicians were placed on the pay roll whom he could not compel to do any work. "The laboring man has but one representative department in the state government," concluded Mr. Lennon. "Let's see that he gets a square deal there." Mr. O'Brien, democrat, of St. Paul, asked that the resolution go to the standing labor committee. This was voted down. James Handlan, democrat, of St. Paul, wanted the resolution to include investigations of the departments of secretary of state, treasurer and auditor. The house refused to accept the suggestion. J. H. Dorsey, democrat, of Glencoe, said he "had too much confidence in the house to believe it would play such 'peanut' politics"—and moved a call of the house. The resolution was then put to vote and carried, 80 to 28. Brady, of St. Paul, took occasion to explain his vote by remarking he was "sorry a body of 119 men would stoop to wash the linen of a politician; I for one vote no."

New bills introduced today in the house included the following: By Murphy, increasing taxation of fire insurance company premiums from 2 to 4 per cent; by White, for a constitutional amendment to vest all the powers fo the governor in the lieutenant governor when the governor is absent from the state; by McKenzie, to appropriate $100,000 for the general drainage fund.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 4.—County option went down and out in the lower house of the legislature today, to the tune of 44 votes in its favor, to 73 against. The county option bill, A. K. Ware of Northfield, its author, came up on report of the temperance committee. The majority report was in favor of indefinite postponement of the bill. The minority report of five out of the 15 committee members, presented by Mr. Saugstad, was to advance the bill with a favorable recommendation. The final vote was on the minority report. It was supposed there would be a lengthy and heated debate, when R. J. Wells of Breckenridge did the unexpected by moving the previous question, with the explanation that he believed every member had already made up his mind how he would vote on the measure. Elmer E. Adams demanded a roll call on this motion. This was complied with, and the motion carried. The bill then went to a direct vote on adoption of the minority report of the temperance committee; that the measure be recommended to pass. There were but 44 ayes, to 73 nays—the Democrats with some of the Republicans voting against the bill.

The house saw another hot fight this afternoon, the difference being that the debate of the afternoon was allowed to continue for four hours. The bill debated was that of L. H. Johnson of Minneapolis to establish six county agricultural schools under state aid. The bill finally passed by a vote of 78 ayes, 37 nays. Johnson made a speech for nearly two hours, presenting many petitions and letters asking for the bill. The debate which followed was mainly on minor changes in the detail of the measure. As passed it provides that the first six counties which by a majority vote, declare for a county agricultural school, may be granted each state aid up to $15,000, according to the amount each county raises by local taxation. Thereafter the state will pay two-thirds the cost of maintenance, which maintenance shall not exceed an expenditure of $6,000 a year. The school is to be run by a county board of five members, four appointed by the county commissioners, to serve with the county superintendent of schools; with a course of study approved by the dean of the state agricultural college and the superintendent of public instruction.

The bill of Senator Works of Mankato came out of the public lands committee in the senate today without recommendation. This measure is accredited with being the Democratic bill to follow out the suggestion of the governor for a state board of lands of three members to receive $5,000 a year each and expenses in addition. Senator Works made a gallant battle to get his bill advanced to general orders, but on motion of Senator Seward of Marshall, it was referred to the judiciary committee to investigate its constitutionality, and also with a view of permitting the committee to grant a public hearing on the matter.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 5.—Sharp party lines seem to be drawn at the present legislative session. This was demonstrated in the senate today, the incident starting with the democrats stealing a march on the republican majority. Senator Cashman, democrat, innocently asked for a vote approving the list of appointments submitted by the governor. The request was granted without debate, and with little attention given it. Hardly was the approval given, however, before Senator C. J. Swanson awoke to the fact that in the list approved were several reappointments on the state livestock board. This board but a few days ago had flatly refused to co-operate with or in any way aid Swanson's special committee appointed to investigate the reliability of the tuberculine tests for cattle and horses. Senator Swanson on realizing that the offending democrats had been reinstated for another term, presented a resolution asking that the entire board be temporarily shorn of all its powers pending further investigation toward substantiating the special committee's belief that the tuberculine tests are not reliable, and result in the unnecessary slaughtering of many healthy cattle. The resolution received notice of debate by Senator Hardy, democrat, and necessarily lies over until next week. Senator Swanson also introduced a bill amending the livestock board law, and authorizing local boards of health to make health and sanitary examinations of cattle at their discretion.

The house this morning passed the senate resolution of Senator Sundberg of Kittson, condemning the McCumber congressional bill for national grain inspection, on the ground that it would injure the Minnesota inspection system, which has a world-wide reputation. The resolution, which will now be forwarded to Washington, calls on the Minnesota representatives in congress to oppose the measure of the North Dakotan. The resolution received 74 aye votes to but 18 opposed.

This afternoon the special house committee, E. E. Adams of Fergus Falls, chairman, began its sessions to investigate the alleged school book trust. The opening session indicates that the work of the committee may disclose a sensation. It was demonstrated that book agents are now busy at Winona, Minn., trying to dictate who shall be elected superintendent of schools there to succeed Mr. Frazier, who recently resigned to become assistant superintendent of public instruction. It was also intimated at the meeting that a resolution introduced in the state high school board calling for a reprimand to be administered to High School Inspector G. B. Aiton was instigated by the so-called book trust. Aiton had recommended certain algebras to a town, on request. The agent of one of these algebras had happened along the next day and sold the books. Aiton denied to the committee any knowledge of the agent being in the vicinity. It was intimated that the school book trust was much put out that it did not get a chance to sell the books, and hence saw to it that Aiton got a reprimand.

A number of important bills were introduced today, following which both houses adjourned till Monday. In the senate, Calhoun introduced a bill to entirely repeal the primary election law. Cooke introduced a somewhat similar measure, that repeals the same law except so far as St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth are concerned. Thorpe presented a bill to establish a separate state department of bank examiner, at $5,000 salary a year, the occupant to be a banker of five years' experience. Cashman had a bill to make telephone companies common carriers. McColl asked for an additional district judge for St. Paul. Glotzbach wanted an appropriation of $71,600 for a new auditorium building for the Faribault school for deaf.

In the house, Sawyer declared war on "common law" marriages with a bill declaring that they shall not be recognized as legal from this date on. Dorsey had a bill demanding that merchants in reporting their taxation assessments be also compelled to report the amount of insurance they carry on the assessed property. McKenzie offered a bill for a new building at the Soldiers' Home at Minnehaha Falls, to cost $100,000.

Both senate and house adjourned over till Monday.

Rochester—Governor Johnson is here to see his wife, but there is nothing to indicate that she is any worse. She suffers a great deal of pain as the result of the operation, but otherwise everything is satisfactory.

NEEDS OF FARMER

SHOWN BY COUNTRY LIFE COMMISSION REPORT.

Obstacles to Be Overcome Are Pointed Out, Together with Suggestions for Guidance of the National Government.

Washington.—Report of the commission on country life, of especial interest to the farmers, was read in both houses of congress. A summary follows:

To the President: The commission on country life herewith presents its report. The commission finds that agriculture in the United States, taken together, is prosperous commercially, when measured by the conditions that have obtained in previous years, although there are some regions in which this is only partially true. The country people are producing vast quantities of supplies for food, shelter, clothing, and for use in the arts. The country homes are improving in comfort, attractiveness and healthfulness. Not only in the material wealth that they produce, but in the supply of independent and strong citizenship, the agricultural people constitute the very foundation of our national efficiency. As agriculture is the immediate basis of country life, so it follows that the general affairs of the open country, speaking broadly, are in a condition of improvement.

Most Prominent Deficiencies.

Yet it is true, notwithstanding all this progress as measured by historical standards, that agriculture is not commercially as profitable as it is entitled to be for the labor and energy that the farmer expends and the risks that he assumes, and that the social conditions in the open country are far short of their possibilities.

The reasons for the lack of a highly organized rural society are very many, as the full report explains. The leading specific causes are:

Lack of good training for country life in the schools;

Lack of good highway facilities;

The widespread continuing depletion of soils, with the injurious effect on rural life;

A general need of new and active leadership.

Other causes contributing to the general result are: Lack of any adequate system of agricultural credit, whereby the farmer may readily secure loans on fair terms; the shortage of labor, a condition that is often complicated by intemperance among workmen; lack of institutions and incentives that tie the laboring man to the soil; the burdens and the narrow life of farm women; lack of adequate supervision of public health.

Nature of the Remedies.

Congress can remove some of the handicaps of the farmer, and it can also set some kinds of work in motion such as:

The encouragement of a system of thorough-going surveys of all agricultural regions in order to take stock and to develop a scientifically and economically sound country life;

The establishing of a nationalized system of extension work in rural communities through all the land-grant colleges with the people at their homes and on their farms;

A thorough-going investigation by experts of the middleman system of handling farm products, coupled with a general inquiry into the farmer's disadvantages in respect to taxation, transportation rates, co-operation organizations and credit, and the general business system;

An inquiry into the control and use of the streams of the United States with the object of protecting the people in their ownership and of saving to agricultural uses such benefits as should be reserved for these purposes;

The establishing of a system of parcels post and postal savings banks;

And providing some means or agency for the guidance of public opinion toward the development of a real rural society that shall rest directly on the land.

Other remedies recommended for consideration by congress are:

The enlargement of the United States bureau of education, to enable it to stimulate and co-ordinate the educational work of the nation;

Careful attention to the farmers' interests in legislation on the tariff, on regulation of railroads, control or regulation of corporations and of speculation, legislation in respect of rivers, forests, and the utilization of swamp lands;

Increasing the powers of the federal government in respect to the supervision and control of the public health;

Providing such regulations as will enable the states that do not permit the sale of liquors to protect themselves from traffic from adjoining states.

In setting all these forces in motion, the co-operation of the states will be necessary; and in many cases definite state laws may greatly aid the work.

Remedies of a more general nature are: A broad campaign of publicity, that must be undertaken until all the people are informed on the whole subject of rural life, and until there is an awakened appreciation of the necessity of giving this phase of our national development as much attention as has been given to other phases or interests; a quickened sense of responsibility, in all the country people, to the community and the state in the conserving of soil fertility, and in the necessity for diversifying farming in order to conserve this fertility and to develop a better rural society, and also in the better safe-guarding of the strength and happiness of the farm women; a more widespread conviction of the necessity of organization, not only for economic but for social purposes, this organization to be more or less co-operative, so that all the people may share equally in the benefits and have voice in the essential affairs of the community; a realization on the part of the farmer that he has a distinct natural responsibility toward the laborer in providing him with good living facilities, and in helping him in every way to be a man among men; and a realization on the part of all the people of the obligation to protect and develop the natural scenery and attractiveness of the open country.

ON COUNTRY LIFE

SPECIAL MESSAGE FROM WHITE HOUSE TO CONGRESS.

President Suggests Social and Business Improvements for the Benefits of the Dweller in Agricultural Communities.

Washington.—Accompanying the report of the country life commission the president sent a special message to congress, substantially as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives: I transmit herewith the report of the commission on country life. At the outset I desire to point out that not a dollar of the public money has been paid to any commissioner for his work on the commission.

The report shows the general condition of farming life in the open country, and points out its larger problems; it indicates ways in which the government, national and state, may show the people how to solve some of these problems; and it suggests a continuance of the work which the commission began.

Those engaged in all other industrial and commercial callings have found it necessary, under modern economic conditions, to organize themselves for mutual advantage and for the protection of their own particular interests in relation to other interests.

Now, whatever the state may do toward improving the practice of agriculture, it is not within the sphere of any government to reorganize the farmers' business or reconstruct the social life of farming communities. It is, however, quite within its power to use its influence and the machinery of publicity which it can control for calling public attention to the needs of the facts. For example, it is the obvious duty of the government to call the attention of farmers to the growing monopolization of water power. The farmers, above all, should have that power, on reasonable terms, for cheap transportation, for lighting their homes, and for innumerable uses in the daily tasks of the farm.

Necessity for Co-Operation.

The co-operative plan is the best plan of organization wherever men have the right spirit to carry it out. Under this plan any business undertaking is managed by a committee; every man has one vote, and only one vote; and every one gets profits according to what he sells or buys or supplies. It develops individual responsibility and has a moral as well as a financial value over any other plan.

I desire only to take counsel with the farmers as fellow-citizens. It is not the problem of the farmers alone that I am discussing with them, but a problem which affects every city as well as every farm in the country.

From all that has been done and learned three great general and immediate needs of country life stand out:

First, effective co-operation among farmers, to put them on a level with the organized interests with which they do business.

Second, a new kind of schools in the country, which shall teach the children as much outdoors as indoors and perhaps more, so that they will prepare for country life, and not as at present, mainly for life in town.

Third, better means of communication, including good roads and a parcels post, which the country people are everywhere, and rightly, unanimous in demanding.

To these may well be added better sanitation; for easily preventable diseases hold several million country people in the slavery of continuous ill health.

To Develop Country Community.

To improve our system of agriculture seems to me the most urgent of the tasks which lie before us. But it cannot, in my judgment, be effected by measures which touch only the material and technical side of the subject; the whole business and life of the farmer must also be taken into account. Such considerations led me to appoint the commission on country life. Our object should be to help develop in the country community the great ideals of the community life as well as of personal character. One of the most important adjuncts to this end must be the country church, and I invite your attention to what the commission says of the country church and of the need of an extension of such work as that of the Young Men's Christian association in country communities. Let me lay special emphasis upon what the commission says at the very end of its report on personal ideas and local leadership. Everything resolves itself in the end into the question of personality. Neither society nor government can do much for country life unless there is voluntary response in the personal ideals of the men and women who live in the country. In the development of character, the home should be more important than the school, or than society at large. When once the basic material needs have been met, high ideals may be quite independent of income; but they cannot be realized without sufficient income to provide adequate foundation; and where the community at large is not financially prosperous it is impossible to develop a high average personal and community ideal. In short, the fundamental facts of human nature apply to men and women who live in the country just as they apply to men and women who live in the towns. Given a sufficient foundation of material well being, the influence of the farmers' wives on their children becomes the factor of first importance in determining the attitude of the next generation toward farm life. The farmer should realize that the person who most needs consideration on the farm is his wife. I do not in the least mean that she should purchase ease at the expense of duty. Neither man nor woman is really happy or really useful save on condition of doing his or her duty. If the woman shirks her duty as housewife, as home keeper, as the mother whose prime function is to bear and rear a sufficient number of healthy children, then she is not entitled to our regard. But if she does her duty she is more entitled to our regard even than the man who does his duty; and the man should show special consideration for her needs.

Welfare of Nation at Stake.

I warn my countrymen that the great recent progress made in city life is not a full measure of our civilization; for our civilization rests on the wholesomeness, the attractiveness, and the completeness, as well as the prosperity, of life in the country. The men and women on the farms stand for what is fundamentally best and most needed in our American life.

DEATH IN TORNADO

STATES IN DIXIE LAND SWEPT BY FIERCE WINDS.

LOSS REACHES MILLIONS

Arkansas, Tennessee, Texas and Alabama in Path of Cyclone—Telegraph Communication Is Cut Off.

Louisville, Ky.—Death for nearly a score of people, losses of hundreds of thousands of dollars in property and the crippling of many telegraph wires resulted between noon and dusk Friday from a series of small cyclones and tornadoes which swept Dixie from the Tennessee line to the Texas panhandle. The storms were accompanied in most cases by hail, darkness and terrific lightning flashes and sheets of rain.

Most of the towns where the losses of life occurred are off the beaten track, so that news from them has been coming in but slowly. Known deaths thus far, however, are:

Stuttgart, Ark.—Mrs. Garfield and a child of Will Story, while Mrs. Story is reported fatally injured.

Sulphur Springs, Tex.—Mrs. James Ardis and Mrs. C. Caldwell.

Booth, Miss.—Six unidentified persons.

Rolling Fork, Miss.—Four unidentified persons.

Cullman, Ala.—Seven unidentified persons.

Vicinity of Montgomery, Ala.—Two unidentified persons.

From other towns, such as Ennis and Waxahachie, Tex., and Boscoe, La., many dwellings were said to have been demolished by the force of the wind.

Rice Fields Destroyed.

Arkansas and upper Louisiana rice fields were injured to the extent of many thousands of dollars, while the larger cities had rains and darkness illuminated by lightning bolts that made the atmosphere quiver.

About dusk Chattanooga was lost on the wire running south from Louisville via Nashville and has to be picked up from Memphis. The local operators heard the faint words: "Terrific storm here—black as night—hail falling," and then the sounders ceased to record. Knoxville was lost similarly shortly after that, but later both towns were looped in when conditions there ceased in violence.

In Louisville the entire day was dark and rainy, but there was no intimation of cyclone or of heavy wind.

More Deaths Reported.

Birmingham, Ala.—Reports received Friday night state that several persons were killed by a cyclone at Cullman, Ala., in the afternoon.

Texas Feels Storm.

Fort Worth, Tex.—A heavy rain and wind storm of tornado proportions, which swept over north Texas and southern Oklahoma Friday, resulted in considerable damage in several localities. At Ennis, Tex., a dozen residences were blown down. No loss of life has been reported. Waxahachie was also damaged by the tornado.

At Sulphur Springs the storm wrecked eight dwellings, and Mrs. James Ardis was seriously injured by flying glass. The total damage from the storm in northern Texas will be about $100,000.

Wrecks Many Buildings.

Monroe, La.—A small cyclone at Boscoe, 16 miles south of Monroe, wrecked the public school building, blew down a house and wrecked heavy damage in other ways. At Monroe the rain was torrential and the wind violent.

DRAWN TO SCENE OF CRIME.

Georgian Who Killed Man in 1899 Surrenders to Sheriff.

Dublin, Ga.—Drawn by some irresistible impulse to return to the scene where he killed a man when he was 15 years of age, Manly B. Tripp, after roaming a good portion of the world for ten years, Thursday surrendered to the sheriff of Laurens county. For some days he has been here and was an interested spectator in the courthouse during a trial. He was not recognized until he voluntarily surrendered. He shot James Hood down on the street in 1899. He escaped and efforts to capture him failed.

Accuse Discharged Official.

St. Louis.—Clarence N. Jones, president of the Commonwealth Feed Company and a brother of Police Commissioner George P. Jones, was shot and killed in a quarrel in his mill at Second and De Soto streets here Wednesday. Herman A. Kretschmar, a discharged official of the company, was arrested and charged with the shooting. He asserts that he shot in self-defense. Jones died in the city hospital a few minutes after the shooting.

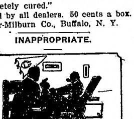
ONE KIDNEY GONE

But Cured After Doctors Said There Was No Hope.

Sylvanus O. Verrill, Milford, Me., says: "Five years ago a bad injury paralyzed me and affected my kidneys. My back hurt me terribly, and the urine was badly disordered. Doctors said my right kidney was practically dead. They said I could never walk again. I read of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. One box made me stronger and freer from pain. I kept on using them and in three months was able to get out on crutches, and the kidneys were acting better. I improved rapidly, discarded the crutches and to the wonder of my friends was soon completely cured."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

INAPPROPRIATE.



"I am glad that Washington's birthday is a holiday; it gives me chance to lie in bed in the morning."

"George wouldn't like to have you celebrate his birthday by lying."

Prof. Munyon has generously placed his Cold Cure with druggists throughout the United States and has authorized them to sell it for the small sum of 25 cts. a bottle. He says these pellets contain no opium, morphine, cocaine or other harmful drugs, and he guarantees that they will relieve the head, throat and lungs almost immediately. He gives this guarantee with each bottle of his medicine: "If you buy my Cold Cure and it does not give perfect satisfaction, I will refund your money." Prof. Munyon has just issued a Magazine-Almanac, which will be sent free to any person who addresses The Munyon Company, Philadelphia.

Come Get Your Medicine.

If that little bit of three-cornered, half-jointed, pin-headed squirt with a big automobile and a size three head on his miserable, slanting shoulders, who turned the corner of Ferry and Main streets on two wheels the other afternoon, and nearly sent three pedestrians into Kingdom Come, will call at this office we'll tear his scrawny soul to pieces and lick him to a "frazzle" after the most approved Rooseveltian methods. He knows who we mean.—Buffalo News.

Enforced Economy.

A friend of Pat's was caught in a shower near his cottage and asked shelter from the elements. Pat opened the door. One of the first things the friend saw was rain coming steadily through a hole in the roof.

"Pat, boy," said he, "for why don't ye fix th' hole in th' roof?"

"The hole in the roof, is it?" asked Pat, spearing for an excuse. "Oh, yis. I would, ye know, but whin th' rain is comin' in I can't fix it, an' whin it don't rain it don't need fixin'."

NO MEDICINE

But a Change of Food Gave Relief.

Many persons are learning that drugs are not the thing to rebuild worn out nerves, but proper food is required.

There is a certain element in the cereals, wheat, barley, etc., which is grown there by nature for food to brain and nerve tissue. This is the phosphate of potash, of which Grape-Nuts food contains a large proportion.

In making this food all the food elements in the two cereals, wheat and barley, are retained. That is why so many heretofore nervous and run down people find in Grape-Nuts a true nerve and brain food.

"I can say that Grape-Nuts food has done much for me as a nerve renewer," writes a Wis. bride.

"A few years ago, before my marriage, I was a bookkeeper in a large firm. I became so nervous toward the end of each week that it seemed I must give up my position, which I could not afford to do.

"Mother purchased some Grape-Nuts and we found it not only delicious but I noticed from day to day that I was improving until I finally realized I was not nervous any more.

"I have recommended it to friends as a brain and nerve food, never having found its equal. I owe much to Grape-Nuts as it saved me from a nervous collapse, and enabled me to retain my position."

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. C. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30, 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam, Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

There is a bill before the legislature to repeal the anti pass law, and as the law has accomplished the purpose that brought it to life it may as well be repealed.

J. J. Opsahl has introduced a bill to appropriate one hundred thousand dollars for the farmers of northern Minnesota to buy dinimite to blast out stumps on the cutover pine lands. A good idea; but how much bennefit would us farmers of eastern Red Lake county get out of that deal? What we want is a bridge across Red Lake River, so we can cross with our ditchers and threshing machines

Hon. A. L. Hanson, our Senator from this District is of the opinion that the $100,000 which it is proposed that the state shall spend for advertising would be used to better advantage, if used to make improvements, in the northern part of the state, so as to incourage the residents that we now have instead of using it to incourage emigration. Make your own people satisfied to remain and make their home in northern Minnesota and the problem of emigration is solved. We do not claim to quote the Senator but in substance his idea, which we think is a very good one, for if the people that are here are satisfied they will buy a 2 cent postage stamp and invite their friends to come from the east to a good country.

There is a man living in Deer Park township that has not got any more brains than to think that getting an act through congress to get permission to build a bridge across Red Lake River at a certain place, according to certain plans approved by the war department, then going to the legislature and trying to get money enough from the state to build the bridge according to the plans, and at the place approved by the government Engineers of the war department of the United Stats, is the same as locating the site for a local creamery, where a few farmers get togeather and pick out their site, then build their creamery. But be it said to the credit of the town of Deer Park, they have only two or three citizins of this kind in the township, and the rest of them have either signed, or signified their willingness to sign a petition to the legislature to appropiate the money to build this bridge, at its preasent location, as it is not intended to be a bridge built to accomidate a few farmers liveing in the towns of Deer Park, or Highlanding, but the Eleven townships, and the bridge is located at the best possiable place that it could be located for this purpose.

How He Got a Drink.

An Indiana traveling man told a story the other day of an incident on the road. He was in the smoking car of an express train reading his paper when a man rushed in from the car behind the smoker, evidently in great agitation and said: "Has anybody in this car any whisky? A woman in the car behind has fainted!" Instantly dozens of flasks were produced. The man who had asked for it picked out the largest one, drew the cork and put the bottle to his lips. With a long, satisfied sigh, he handed the flask back and remarked, "That did me a lot of good, and I needed it, for it always makes me feel queer to see a woman faint away!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer

Family Secrets.

A father complains that his little six-year-old girl is too talkative. He says: The worst of it is when we have visitors she is continually making mistakes of the worst sort, mistakes that tend to rattle the dry bones of the family skeleton in the cupboard. Recently she allowed her tongue to run away with her, as usual, the result of which was that she very much embarrassed both her father and mother, although the guests seemed delighted.

I had a very serious talk with her and impressed upon her, or tried to, that she must not tell any family secret. The next time we had company she was permitted to come to the table only by promising that she wouldn't utter a word.

She behaved beautifully and had nothing to say until the dessert was about to be taken away. Then her lips began to quiver, and finally she burst into tears.

"Why, what's the matter, darling?" her mother asked.

"I—I want some more ice cream, if that isn't a family secret," she wailed between sobs.—London Telegraph.

All's Fair In War.

"A tenderfoot once visited Tin Can," said a westerner, "and watched with interest the poker play. From saloon to saloon he passed. Everything was wide open and very gay and lively.

"But as he looked on at a poker game that had no limit the tenderfoot suddenly frowned. He had seen the dealer slip himself four aces from the bottom of the pack.

"Gracious powers," whispered the tenderfoot, excitedly clutching the sleeve of the man next him. "did you notice that?"

"Notice what?" said the other.

"Why, that scoundrel in the red shirt just dealt himself four aces."

"The other looked at the tenderfoot calmly.

"'Well, wasn't it his deal?' he said."—Washington Star.

The Sundowner.

A "swagman" or "swaggie"—so called from the "swag" or personal luggage wrapped up in a blanket strapped to his back—is a genuine Australian traveler in search of work, but a "sundowner" is the antipodean professional tramp. The sundowner strolls from one squatter's station to another, always taking care to arrive at sunset, for it is the traditional practice of Australian squatters to give food and shelter to all comers for the night.—Kansas City Independent.

Respecting Her Oath.

"Judge, will you do me a great favor?" asked the lady who was about to be put upon the stand as a witness.

"Certainly, miss. What is it?"

"Will you please ask me my age before I take the oath?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Yes, money talks; but its favorite remark is goodby.—Indianapolis Star.

Much Law, Poor Case.

Among lawyers there is a saying that in the trial of a case an attorney if light on facts must be heavy on law. The other day an attorney was preparing to leave his office in one of the big office buildings to go to the courthouse to try a case. From the shelves of his library he had taken many large law books containing decisions and opinions of higher courts. At intervals a boy went in and out of the door, and each time he bore in his arms a stack of the books, which he carried to an express wagon that stood in the street below. The attorney was to use the books in the courtroom. Another lawyer, who is of southern birth and who always addresses his friends with some army title, watched the boy as he went in and out carrying the law books. Then he dug his hands deep into his trousers pockets and said to the lawyer:

"Well, Ah'll sweah, kunnel, you must have no case at all."—Kansas City Times.

His Bachelor's Degree.

"I'm so happy," said Mrs. Oldcastle. "My son is to get his bachelor's degree this year."

"Is he?" replied her hostess. "Well, I can't blame you for feelin' as you do about it. I never thought much of that snippy Wilson girl he's been goin' with. How did you get the match broke off?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Smoothing the Way.

"My lawyer told me he thought I would have a hard time establishing my claims under the will."

"What did you say?"

"I asked him how much more money he wanted."

According to Law.

In one of the states an act was passed last year requiring heads of families to notify the health officer at once in case there was any contagious disease in the house. The following letter was recently received by a certain officer:

Dear Sir—This is to notify you that my boy Ephraim is down with the measles, as required by the new law.

A Wash Twice a Year.

A charming Hungarian countess once said to me, "What is so nice about the men from England is that they look so clean, as if they had just come from a swim." Of course we pride ourselves on our morning tubs, splash and splutter and shiver and polish up with rough towels. "What dirty people those English are," remarked an Italian, "when they find it necessary to wash all over every day! Why, I only wash twice a year!" I have met Chinese who regard washing all over as a proceeding decidedly improper. A Chinese is washed when he is born, and he has no other altogether wash till he is dead. But we British people have adopted cleanliness only of recent years. Small houses have their bathrooms, but very few houses built over half a century ago were provided with bathrooms. I suppose those must have been the days of the Saturday night wash in the kitchen. Certainly our gay cavalier ancestors in silks and ruffles must have been a dirty gang. Handkerchiefs were not invented, and the velvet cloaks must often have been greasy. The rollicking old times were very dirty old times.—"Baths, Pleasant and Otherwise."

The Don't Worry Theory.

The usual advice given to the worrier is, "Don't worry." This advice is foolish because impractical. No one can stop thinking one type of thought except by substituting for it another. Besides, it is dangerous advice, for, even supposing one could mechanically put an end to a worrying state of mind, he would simply be like an engineer who should plant himself on the safety valve of his engine. The energy expended in worry, turned inward on itself, would tear the mental mechanism to pieces. No! What the worried man or woman needs evidently is to be taught how to find a healthful outlet for his or her nervous power thus going to waste. If we say "Don't worry," let us also be careful to add, "But work," and let us also point out what kind of work should be undertaken and the spirit in which it ought to be done. In other words, what the worrier needs is re-education.—Rev. S. S. McComb in Harper's Bazar.

Jefferson Davis' Ambition.

Jefferson Davis was a man of most sincere conviction and courageous action, and when the Southern Confederacy was about to be organized his single ambition was the command of the Confederate army. This I had from his own lips at his residence at Beauvoir, Miss., some fifteen years after the war. He told me that when he started for Montgomery, Ala., when the movement began for the organization of the Confederacy he hoped to be called to the command of the army, but before he reached Montgomery he was advised of his election as provisionary president. When he reached the new capital of the Confederacy he found it impossible to change conditions, and he was compelled to accept the presidency, and he entered upon that duty as conscientiously as any public man ever entered upon an official career.—Colonel A. K. McClure in "Confederate Veterans."

The Garrote.

The garrote is a thing that no man of nervous temperament should look at. Once seen it never can be forgotten. Just to think of it months afterward brings up a choking sensation which makes one long to tear away his collar and breathe the free air as deeply as he can. It rests upon a raised platform, an ordinary straight backed chair, with thin iron clasps on the elbows and legs of the chair. These are for the arms and ankles of the condemned criminal. At the top of the back of the chair is a band of iron, one end of which swings out so as to admit of a neck being inserted. This band snaps around in place, and all is ready. A twirl of a crank in back and as the band crushes the neck back a pin pierces the medulla oblongata.—New York Sun.

To Cure Hay Fever.

Take one pound of ragweed leaves (with stems, flower and seeds indiscriminately or without them), boil in two quarts of water down to one quart and strain. Divide this one quart into three parts—viz, one pint and two half pints. On the first day take one-twelfth of the one pint every hour—twelve doses. The second day take one-twelfth of one half pint every hour, and on the third day take the same quantity—viz, one-twelfth of one-half pint.—Detroit Free Press.

Fish and Salt.

And the mystery still lingers—why is it necessary to salt a fish caught in the salt ocean? A sea bass caught off Seabright requires just as much salt in the seasoning as a black bass caught in the saltless waters of Lake Erie.—New York Press.

The Widow's Might.

She—So your friend Singleton has voluntarily joined the ranks of the benedicts, has he? He—Not exactly; he was drafted. A widow married him.—Chicago News.

Diamond Colors.

Diamonds may be black as well as white, and some are blue, red, brown, yellow, green, pink and orange, but there is no violet diamond, although, in addition to amethysts, there are sapphires, rubies and garnets of that color.

The Smooth Handle.

Everything has two handles—one by which it may be borne, another by which it cannot. If your brother acts unjustly, do not lay hold on the affair by the handle of his injustice, for by that it cannot be borne, but rather by the opposite, that he is your brother, that he was brought up with you, and thus you will lay hold on it as it is to be borne.—Epictetus.

Wm. Parno returned from Holt today, and will hustle wood to warm up THE SUNBEAM for a few days.

There will be a basket social at the Kratka hall on Saturday evening Feb. 20th, for the benefit of school District No. 41. All are invited.

If you get hungry going down to Thief River Falls, stop at The Soo Cafe. near the Soo depot, and get a lunch, or a square meal at a reasonable price.

George Jarman, Proprietor

There was a large crowd attended the basket social at Radney on Saturday evening last, and a little over thirty dollars was taken in and turned over to the family of Knute Sannes. A fine time was had by all who attended.

There will be social dance at the residance of Peat Gustafson in Deer Park tomorrow evening. Mr. Gustafson has one of the largest and best built farm residancee in eastern Red Lake county and all who attend may be sure of spending a pleasant evening.

There was a grand ball at the Kolski hall in Deer Park town ship on Saturday evening last, which drew a big crowd from all directions The best of music was in attendance and the dance was kept up until morning. As a place of holding entertainments.

Leanord McAndress was taken with quite a searious attact of feaver on Tuesday morning last and seemed to grow worse so rapidly that his parents decided to take him to the Thief River Falls hospital for treatment yesterday. It is to be hoped that his recovery will be rapid, as Mr. McAndresses have had their full share of sickness and death in their family in the last few years.

Henery B. Costello, of eastern Deer Park township was here on Monday, as a witness in the John Borek case. When asked to sign a petition to the legislature to appropiate money to build a bridge across Red Lake River Mr Costello said." Yes I would sign a petition to the legislature to appropiate money to buld a bridge any place on the Eleven Townships, or make any other public improvement. This is our home, and any public improvement is a bennefit to us all." This is the true speirit and makes us feel like taking a new holt.

We received a letter from Even J. Sund yesterday, inclosing $5 to help pay the expenses of the bridge fight. Mr. Sund is now at [illegible] He expects to return in the spring and make his home here. He thinks it would be nice to have this bridge so we could cross the river and have a good road to the creomery, but the poor fellow don't know that there are a few people liveing around that creamery that are trying to show to the people of the outside world that they don't want the people liveing on the south side of the river to come to Highlanding, unless they will consent to come through John Polonia's pasture

There will be a grand masquerade ball at the Kratka hall tomorrow night.

Mrs. Sam McMahn returned home Tuesday from a weeks visit with friends at Thief River Falls.

Constable Edward Singer and Henery Peterson drove down to Thief River Falls Tuesday, and from there to Red Lake Falls, where they safely landed John Borek in the Red Lake county jail.

AUCTION SALE.

George Leimers will hold a big Auction Sale at his residance one mile north east of Radney, on Saturday March 27th, at whicch a large amount of stock and farm machinery will be disposed of a list of which will be published next week.

A Dangerous Man.

John Borek, of Radney was arrested on the complaint of John Radnecki on Saturday. last for breaking the peace and was brought before W. G. Hunt Justice of the peace for examination on Monday morning. They are a Polish family that moved here from Chicago last spring and the story told by the oldest boy a lad 12 years of age, of a brute of a husband and father, would make ones blood turn cold. The woman has been sick for some time and when taken in charge by the authorities last week was in such a weakend condition that her recovery is doubtfull. She has been sick for some time without proper food and if the children wanted to go to the neighbors to get a little milk for her they were told, by their father that if they went he would kill them. One of his special acts, as shown by the evidence was to point a loaded shot gun at his wife and threaten to shoot her until she fainted from fright. The family are now being cared for by the town of Deer Park and the man is safe in jail.

NOTICE: There is money in the treasurey of the Town of Kratka for the payment of Town orders No. 9, 19, 21, 28, & 24 and that all interest on the above orders will stop after this date.

Dated at Kratka this 12th, day of February A. D. 1909.

Blind Men's Dreams.

One of the most intelligent inmates of a blind asylum, who came into the world blind, says that he never dreams of the things he has read about and never dreams of any thing or person that he has not in some way come in personal contact with. He dreams of music, of the voices of persons he knows, of such incidents as might happen at the home or in some place in which he has actually been, but never of incidents in other places or in other lands. Even although he has read descriptions of localities, of natural beauties, of the appearance of a street or a city, no idea of what they look like comes to him in the fancies of his sleep. There is a class of blind people who become blind when quite young. Such blind people never dream of any scene or object except those which have remained in the memory from what they actually saw before they became blind.—Pearson's Weekly.

Fish In Inclosed Waters.

Most people not without education and a general knowledge of natural history are mystified by the presence of fish in inclosed waters. For many years there was open mouthed wonder over the perch, bream and crayfish found in the newly cut dams near the Macquarie river, in New South Wales. In some cases the water had scarcely settled after the rain had filled the dam than the fish were observed, and the Australian farmers started a theory of spontaneous production. This obtained and gained wide credence until a Sydney professor chanced to pick up a wild duck and found its breast feathers and webbed feet well dotted with fertile and almost hatched fish ova, on which the "spontaneous production" theory was promptly withdrawn.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

GROWTH OF CARICATURE.

John Law's Wild Schemes Gave It a Tremendous Impetus.

Caricature is nowadays one of the principal methods of criticism. No movement can overreach the mark without eliciting dozens of works of art from caricaturists all over this and all other countries.

This branch of criticism and attack dates far back, but the greatest impulse it ever felt came from the age of tremendous speculation, when, in 1719 and 1730, John Law was manipulating things financial in France. Never before had the financial world been so carried off its feet as it was at that time. Members of the nobility were waiting for a chance to purchase shares in Law's schemes. Duchesses and ladies of high renown tried their most persuasive charms on Law in the attempt to get hold of shares. Men hired out their backs for writing desks, so great was the press of business in making contracts, and one hunchback is reputed to have made 100,000 francs in this way in a few weeks. The French went veritably mad over the schemes to become wealthy. Naturally the papers of the time, especially those of Holland, caricatured the state of affairs. There were pictures of all sorts caricaturing Law, the nobility, the schemes and everything connected with them.

It was this tremendous amount of pictorial work that first directed the energies of William Hogarth in London in this direction. Caricaturing began to be used more and more in the political field, and soon afterward it caused the shelving of Robert Walpole from the English ministry Ever since then has caricaturing been one of the bitterest and most effectual methods of checking public men and their schemes.

Another Knock.

"Hotel clerks are cold hearted," sighed the shabby tragedian, who was traveling with a toothbrush and a compass.

"Speaking from experience, pal?" asked his barnstorming chum.

"Sure! I approached the clerk of the Red Dog inn and told him actors deserved special terms."

"Ah, indeed! And what did he say?"

"He said yes, they deserved six month terms in the county workhouse."—Chicago News.

If All Candidates Wore White.

The word "candidate" is from the Latin "candidatus." Literally it means white robed, and it was thus called because in Rome those who sought office wore a glittering white toga. Fancy, if you can, all our modern Americans dressed in accordance with their political ambitions. In some sections there would be no such thing as a dark suit of clothes. Washington would simply be one shining center of universal whiteness.—Saturday Evening Post.

Marlin

THE Marlin Model 1894 is a medium light weight repeating rifle, a well proportioned, finely balanced gun with all the advantages and comforts of the Marlin solid-top, side-ejecting construction. It is quick and easy of operation, accurate up to 300 yards and a very pleasant gun to carry and to shoot.

For settled districts and farming country where the shooting at woodchucks, badgers, foxes, 'coons, hawks, etc., is at ranges from 100 to 200 yards; the .25-20 and .32-20 rifles with the black and low-pressure smokeless loads cannot be equalled for accuracy and safety. The factory ammunition for the Model '94 rifles is cheap, and can be reloaded at very small cost.

The up-to-date sportsman needs the "Marlin Book" every day in the year. It contains [illegible] pages of live stuff for the man who loves a good gun, and wants to know everything about it. FREE for 3 stamps postage.

Troubles Cured by Cuticura.

"When my little Vivian was about six months old her head broke out in boils. She had about sixty in all and I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment which cured her entirely. Some time later a humor broke out behind her ears and spread up on to her head until it was nearly half covered. The humor looked like a scald, very red with a sticky, clear fluid coming from it. This occurred every spring. I always used Cuticura Soap and Ointment which never failed to heal it up. The last time it broke out it became so bad that I was discouraged. But I continued the use of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent until she was well and has never been troubled in the last two years. Mrs. M. A. SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Louisville, Ky.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has certainly done me a world of good and I cannot praise it enough. I suffered from irregularities, dizziness, nervousness, and a severe female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored me to perfect health and kept me from the operating table. I will never be without this medicine in the house."—Mrs. SAM'L LEE, 3523 Fourth St., Louisville, Ky.

Another Operation Avoided.

Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from female troubles, and my doctor said an operation was my only chance, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me without an operation."—LENA V. HENRY, R. F. D. 3.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Protecting Minnesota Game.

Rainy Lake.—There is a special interest for western people who spend their holidays among northern lakes and woods, in the action that was taken at Toronto at the annual meeting of the North American Fish and Game Protective Association, which is composed of well-known sportsmen and many high officials from various states and provinces of Canada. The association considered the question of preserving the great district in northern Minnesota and northwestern Ontario which provides unequaled fishing and moose and deer hunting, and appointed a committee to take up the matter with a view to securing co-operation between the authorities of Minnesota and Ontario.

Along the three hundred miles of wild-wooded and water-dotted international boundary, from Lake Superior to Lake of the Woods, moose are so plentiful that one day's paddling has often given to travelers the sight of from twenty to thirty moose in the water. But there is a reckless slaughter of these animals on both sides of the line, in season and out of season, which it is hoped to stop.

W. A. Preston, member of the Ontario legislature for the Rainy River district, told the association of an ineffectual chase last summer for a man who was known to be killing moose for the purpose of obtaining their horns while still in the velvet. The carcases of nine big bulls were found, five of them having been sunk with stones in lakes; and other instances of the destruction of game have been recorded. But the depredator eluded the searchers.

It was pointed out that, by the proper preservation of game in the Minnesota-Ontario country, a great commercial asset would be created, and by placing trout in waters, which at present are devoid of the fish, an even greater attraction to the summer sportsman would be provided, with benefit to business generally, similar to that experienced by the state of Maine, which, by judicious game laws, rigidly enforced, has multiplied the number of deer and fish in that locality, and has attracted thousands of sportsmen, who bring millions of dollars into the state.

As an indication of the attraction of the Rainy River valley it was announced that during 1908, since the advent of the Minnesota & International railway to International Falls on Rainy river, four hundred and eighty islands in Rainy lake were sold to Americans—10 per cent of the islands in the lake.

Rainy Lake is now also reached from Duluth by the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and the Minnesota section of the Canadian Northern railway. At Fort Frances and International Falls a great water power is being developed in preparation for the establishment of several factories, and it was confidently predicted that sufficient cooperation between the Minnesota and Ontario people would result in a profitable development of an international preserve.

NEWS NOTES.

Bemidji—Deputy Sheriff Joe Markham returned to the city with two prisoners in custody from Funkley, where he arested Charles Wood and Tom Kennedy. Wood is charged with assaulting his wife with a loaded rifle with the intent to kill, and also with non-support. Kennedy is charged with a number of crimes, and faces six complaints.

St. Cloud—Elva Robertson, the daughter of A. F. Robertson, a retired jeweler of this city, was the victim of an accident this morning in which she suffered injuries which may cost her life. The girl had lighted a fire in the kitchen range and as soon as she applied the match an explosion followed. The doors were blown from the stove, one piece of iron hitting the girl in the side, injuring her internally.

Barnesville—Timber wolves and foxes are reported to be very numerous in the western part of this county this winter, and are doing much damage to live stock in that locality. Old settlers living in the country claim that the presence of so many wild animals is due to the forest fires, which raged in the northern part of the state last fall. Several farmers have succeeded in killing them and have received big bounties from the county.

Frazee.—When Otto Hurtuhum reached the home of his neighbor, Elmer Bangle, yesterday afternoon, he was startled to find the dead body of Elmer Bangle lying in the yard with a shot wound through his head. Mr. Bangle was one of the best known and highly respected young men of the town of Hebert, Ottertail county, and as he had no cares of any kind his death was undoubtedly accidental. When Deputy Coroner Berthold of Perham was notified he decided an inquest was unnecessary. The gun was a 12-gauge hammerless and was very easily touched off.

Winthrop—Gustaf Olson met yesterday with a painful accident, while working in Lindquist's carpenter shop. His arm was suddenly caught between a pulley and a belt, with the result of a fractured limb.

St. Cloud—John Martin, a well-known Holding farmer, choked to death on a piece of meat yesterday morning. A 15-year-old son was the only witness and was unable to aid his father.

Aitkin—Fire destroyed the stock of Noork & Young, general merchandise. The building was also destroyed.

THEY KNEW HOW TO WORK

BUT DON'T NEED TO WORK NOW SO HARD.

The experience of the Bisser Bros. in Western Canada is similar to that reported to every agent of the Canadian Government, whose advertisement appears elsewhere:

"Wheatwyn, Sask., Nov. 6th, 1908.

"To the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, Manitoba.—Dear Sir: I, in company with my brother and other relations, arrived in this country in the spring of 1893. At the time we got off the train at Wolseley, Sask., we had only a few dollars, not enough to start farming on our own account, so we were compelled to work out for a considerable time in order to make sufficient money to enable us to establish ourselves. When we thought we had enough money to start with, I and my brother took up one quarter-section (160 acres) land each in the Loon Creek district. In 1900 we moved on our homesteads with one team of horses and one walking plow. While I was engaged with the work in the field, my brother built a shack and barn of logs, which we have hauled during the time we were not able to work in the field. We were certainly working very hard, but I am glad to say that we made our fortune in this country. To-day we do not need to work so hard as we used to, as we have three men hired steady for whom we pay $30.00 to $40.00 a month, besides board and lodging during the summer time! I am also glad to tell you that to-day we are owners of a section and three-quarters of the best land, with first class buildings thereon, besides having all the necessary machinery. We always do our own threshing, for we have a 22 horse-power threshing outfit.

"Our success in farming in this country also enabled us to get rid of a number of horses of less value, and instead we bought 10 pure-bred mares, representing a value in the neighborhood of $5,000.

"Regarding raising grain, which is the main factor in our district, I am proud to say that we have always had good success. We have raised wheat as high as 35 bushels to the acre; and this year, although we suffered from lack of sufficient rain, our wheat went 27 bushels to the acre, and we had 900 acres in crop. We have broken this year about 100 acres new land, and by next year we will have about 1,110 acres in crop. For one carload of wheat which we have shipped a few weeks ago we got a price of 97 cents per bushel, and it graded as No. 2 Northern, although we have a quantity of wheat which will surely go as No. 1 Northern. During the six years we have been farming for ourselves we have never had one frost around here, so that we always had a good crop.

"I, for myself, feel compelled to say that our Great West is the land where a person who is willing to work and trun his hands to anything, can make a fortune, and a comfortable living. Our country is a thoroughly free country, and we have a good Government; and, as long as we have good crops, and a good Government, we are satisfied, and I think that is all we want.

"Yours very truly,
"LORENS BISSER,
"P. O. Wheatwyn, Sask."

Criminality of Waste.

If I wanted to train a child to be thrifty I should teach him to abhor waste. I do not mean waste of money; that cures itself, because very soon there is no money to waste—but waste of material, waste of something that is useful but that you cannot represent in money value to the waster. There is waste of water, waste of gas and things of that kind. If you would wish your children to be thrifty I would beg to impress upon them the criminality of waste.—Lord Rosebery, in an Edinburgh Address.

A Black Eye for Home.

It is a coming fashion to hire a hall to entertain your friends, to give dinner parties in a hotel, to be married in a church, to be taken to a hospital when you are sick and to an undertaker's as soon as you die, and left there until the funeral. The tendency is to conduct all public occasions away from home. The home is getting a black eye.—Atchison (Kan.) Globe.

NOT AFFECTED BY DEPRESSION

One Big Industry That Makes Its Business Grow and Expand During Year of Business Depression.

When a manufacturing establishment reaches out in a year of depression and increases and expands its business, while others in the same line diminish their outputs or stand still, it is because there must be some unusually good reason for it. In this instance a splendid reputation and a more-than-ordinary meritorious product were responsible for the showing made.

The Mayer Boot & Shoe Company, Milwaukee, the largest shoe establishment in the Northwest, has just closed its fiscal year, and reports an increase in sales over the corresponding period of last year. This exceptional showing speaks volumes for the genuine merit of Mayer shoes, and is directly attributed to their high standard, and because of the fact that Mayer shoes have become universally and popularly known as "shoes of quality."

The leading brands are "Honorbilt" fine shoes for men. "Leading Lady" fine shoes for women. "Yerma" Cushion shoes for both men and women (these are exceptionally fine shoes for people troubled with tender feet); the popular "Martha Washington" Comfort shoes, which have the largest sale of any shoes of this kind in the world, and the "Special Merit" School shoes (a strong and sturdy line of seamless school shoes that wear like iron).

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever: nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

As further inducement to settlement of the wheat-raising lands of Western Canada, the Canadian Government has increased the area that may be taken by a homesteader to 320 acres—160 free and 160 to be purchased at $3.00 per acre. These lands are in the grain-raising area, where mixed farming is also carried on with unqualified success. A railway will shortly be built to Hudson Bay, bringing the world's markets a thousand miles nearer these wheat-fields, where schools and churches are convenient, climate excellent, railways close to all settlements, and local markets good.

Gossip of Washington

What Is Going On at the National Capital.

Bright Scenes When President Entertains

WASHINGTON.—That the fascination of life at the American capital tion of life at the American capital depends much upon the beauty and gorgeousness of the court costumes of the foreign diplomats and the officers of our army and navy, who are regularly called into service for social duty, is not to be controverted, and when these attractions are combined with the imposing form and ceremony attendant upon the city surrounding a president of the United States and his cabinet, and the direct representatives of foreign powers to this government, you have a brilliant and interesting phase of life scarcely known in the western hemisphere outside of Washington.

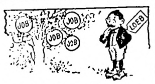
Two great occasions on which the White House is resplendent with the gorgeous uniforms of the diplomats and our own military and naval men are the reception of the president on January 1, when every member of the corps, with his wife and daughters, calls to wish the president a happy New Year, and about ten days later at the diplomatic reception prescribed by precedent, which is the first of a series of formal evening receptions the president gives during the winter.

Upon numerous occasions, and always at the White House, both the head of the navy and of the army appear in their conspicuous full dress uniforms, which are quite as rich as those of many of the foreign ambassadors and ministers. Scarcely second in brilliancy to the reception given by the president to the diplomats is that at which he is host for the army and navy, when hundreds of the higher officers of both branches of the service attend in their gala uniforms.

The senior aids to the president, who make all of the presentations to him at all entertainments and attend him upon all occasions, practically live in their official regalia, while the younger aids are almost daily called upon to wear their best uniforms.

In fact, there is a splendor about the official social life of the American capital which is scarcely second to that of any court of Europe.

Loeb's Next Berth a Cause of Worry



SECRETARY WILLIAM LOEB, JR., who has been serving the president and the country at the White House offices for several years, is causing his immediate friends more political anxiety than any other prominent Republican of the hour. There is a time-honored tradition that a retiring president of the United States must take good care of his secretary, nad it has therefore been incumbent upon President Roosevelt to see Mr. Loeb well placed before he starts for the dark continent.

But plans for placing Loeb have a habit of falling through, just why no one seems able to tell. For, while he has not gained the fame as secretary to the president that Mr. Cortelyou, his predecessor, gained, there is no denying that he has been very efficient.

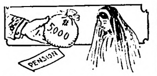
A few years ago there was a scheme afoot to elect Mr. Loeb as president of a Washington street railroad company. He became greatly interested in the matter, enlisted some financial friends in New York and bought into the stock of the road quite heavily. Ambitious arguments were advanced regarding what Mr. Loeb could do for the road. It has to go before congress, session after session, for tid-bits of legislation, which are very essential none the less.

But senators, who have little liking for the president, intimated that the man who had served as the president's secretary would have a fine old time persuading them to vote for his bills. Therefore the owners of the street railroad began quietly to lay plans for side-tracking the Loeb presidential idea, and about a year ago another was chosen to head the street railway.

Since then Secretary Loeb's name has been mentioned in connection with a number of good posts by purveyors of capitol gossip, but each story has been in turn denied.

The latest report is that he will become collector of the port of New York after March 4.

Plan to Pension Cleveland's Widow



A SUGGESTION that the widow and children of former President Grover Cleveland be given a pension is being discussed informally by congressmen. Many have declared themselves in favor of granting her one.

If Mrs. Cleveland is willing to accept, there is no question but that congress would be ready to vote it to her.

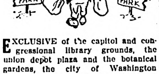
Although there is now no surviving ex-president of the United States, three widows of former presidents still live—Mrs. James A. Garfield, Mrs. Benjamin Harrison and Mrs. Cleveland.

The first-named has now survived her husband more than twenty-seven years. During all that time she has drawn a pension of $5,000 a year from the government, and no money that comes from the treasury is more cheerfully paid. The first time a pension was ever suggested for the widow of an ex-president was in the case of William Henry Harrison, who died one month after his inauguration.

The death of Harrison appealed peculiarly to the nation, and the sum of $25,000 outright was voted her. She lived to enjoy its proceeds for a period of 23 years. The second, Mrs. Tyler, drew a pension of $5,000 per annum for 27 years. Mrs. Abraham Lincoln was given $25,000 and an additional pension of $5,000 per annum. Grant's widow also received $5,000 a year, as did the widow of President McKinley.

Most of the ex-presidents of the United States died in advance of their wives, although there are notable exceptions. Thomas Jefferson outlived his wife 44 years, Martin Van Buren 43 years.

Nation's Capital Is a City of Parks



EXCLUSIVE of the capitol and congressional library grounds, the union depot plaza and the botanical gardens, the city of Washington boasts more than 6,000 acres in parks, excluding nearly 150 triangles and circles at street intersections and miles upon miles of shaded asphalt streets equal to the boulevards of many other cities. The largest of all these parks is Rock Creek park. This beauty spot covers 1,605 acres immediately adjoining the Zoological park, which contains 171 acres, and its natural combinations of rocks and streams, hills and dales, trees and meadows go to make perhaps the finest groundwork of a public park in any city in the country.

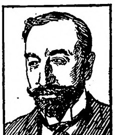
It will be probably a hundred years before the possibilities of this park are realized to the full, including the building of a boulevard down Rock creek into the city of Washington, connecting with the Riverside driveway, now known as Potomac driveway. The River park, which reaches from the capitol to the islands of the Potomac, contains in the aggregate 1,800 acres, but does not represent an amalgamated whole as does the Rock Creek park.

In the northern portion of the city, about a mile eastward from Rock Creek park and connected therewith by the old military road over which union armies marched in the defense of Washington.

Other amusement places are the Henry and Seaton parks of 32 acres; Garfield park, 24 acres; Judiciary square, where is the pension office, 19 acres, and Howard University park of 12 acres. Lafayette square, in front of the White House on the north, in which no trees or bush is duplicated contains six acres.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

FIRST TURKISH AMBASSADOR



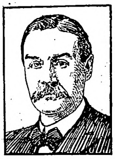
Hessein Kiazim Bey, who recently arrived at Washington, is the first ambassador from Turkey to the United States, and his advent indicates that a new regime is in control of the domain of the "Sick Man of Europe."

Hussein Kiazim Bey, for three months figured in international news as the "lost diplomat," because he apparently disappeared from the face of the earth after leaving Turkey for America. He formally presented his credentials to President Roosevelt the other day, and as soon as he concludes his "house hunting," he will settle down as a fixture in the diplomatic circle of Washington, in which he will be one of the most picturesque and notable figures.

The new ambassador is small in stature, and his orientalism is heightened by a black pointed beard, which gives him the appearance somewhat of the present sultan when he was younger. He is regarded as one of the ablest men in the Turkish diplomatic service. For 13 years he was minister from his country at Bucharest. During the time he was supposed to be lost he was resting in Belgrade and in Paris.

John G. A. Leishman, the American ambassador at Constantinople, presented his credentials as ambassador in 1906, but Kiazim Bey is the first ambassador from Turkey to present his credentials in Washington. He succeeds Mehmed Ali Bey, who was recalled at the beginning of the Young Turks' outbreak in Turkey, and whose departing experiences furnished some interesting newspaper articles at the time. The ambassador represents the reform element in Turkey.

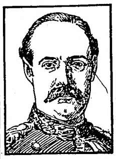
SOUTH DAKOTA'S NEW SENATOR



Coe I. Crawford, who has been elected to the United States senate by the legislature of South Dakota, is a puzzle in politics. He has just completed a term as governor of his state, to which position he was elected after a complete revolution in state affairs in which every state officer but one was turned out and the head of many a big boss dropped into the waste basket.

To begin with, Crawford wasn't really a politician. He was a railroad lawyer. But the work of a corporation lawyer did not appeal to him, and he did not look at things the way the railroads did. So he gave up the attorneyship for the Chicago & Northwestern railroad and set out to tackle the modest little job of separating the railroads from politics in South Dakota. It was a Caesarian operation, but he did it. When he first ran for governor, four years ago, he finished so far behind the procession that he couldn't hear the band. But he tightened up his belt a little and kept running. Two years ago he went into the convention with such strength that he dominated the nomination of every man on the ticket. He was elected, and the senatorship now comes to him as a reward that he has really earned. He succeeds Senator A. B. Kittredge.

DANES HONOR THEIR KING



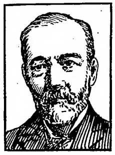
The third anniversary of the accession of King Frederick VIII. was celebrated as a public holiday throughout Denmark a few days ago. Flags fluttered from public and private buildings and many pictures of the king and queen were displayed. During the day deputations from societies throughout the kingdom called upon his majesty and presented addresses of congratulation.

King Frederick has enjoyed a successful rule during the three years that have elapsed since he came to the throne. The love and respect that he has ever enjoyed among his subjects has increased and to-day he stands in the foremost rank among European rulers in point of popularity.

The splendid mental and moral qualities of the king were well known and universally admired before he came to the throne. Since he was called upon to succeed his lamented father, the beloved King Christian, Frederick has displayed a remarkable versatility and a knack of interesting himself in all that concerns his kingdom and his people that has surprised even those who know him best.

No one in all Denmark puts in busier days than does his majesty. While he wisely refrains from taking an active part in politics he follows closely all public movements. He makes it an unvarying rule to follow all important debates in both houses of the Rigsdag. He is deeply interested in educational matters and since he ascended the throne he has continued to act as chancellor of the university which he attended as a student. His interest in the army is keen and he has introduced several reforms which have improved the lot of the private soldiers, as the result of which he is extremely popular with the troops. He is also head of the Free Masons in Denmark, and takes an active part in a great variety of philanthropic organizations and movements.

WILL PROBE WALL STREET



Horace White, one of the little handful of representative journalists of the old American school who are still actively in the harness, is the head of the special commission named by Gov. Hughes of New York to investigate the methods and morals, so to speak, of Wall street. It has been intimated before now that the street is very long on methods and accordingly short on morals. The truth of the conditions may be gleaned, possibly, from the report of Deacon White's commission.

Mr. White was editor-in-chief of the New York Evening Post up to his retirement a few years ago. He still retains his connection with the company, however, and displays a deep interest in the editorial policies and ideals of the paper. For ten years, shortly after the civil war, he was editor of the Chicago Tribune and one of its principal owners.

He has written, translated and edited various volumes that are handsomely bound and look well on the shelves of a number of libraries. Born in New Hampshire 74 years ago, he was educated in Beloit college and took up journalism shortly after his graduation.

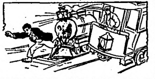
Many Victims of Railroads Last Year



NEW YORK.—With figures for one month missing, the total casualties for the year on all railroads in Greater New York—steam, elevated, subway and surface—are 52,599. Of this number 414 victims were killed outright or died afterward; 156 suffered fractured skulls; 62, amputation of limbs; 391, broken limbs, and 1,375, other serious injuries. It is estimated that the year's record of fatalities are around 500.

These figures represent a careful canvass of the territory mentioned by agents of the public service commission. For purposes of comparison with the preceding year, 1907, a report on the last six months only is available, the work of the commission having been begun in July.

Owing to the organization, practice and experience of the force making the count, it is probable that the report for 1908 is much more thorough than any other ever made in the city, even for the six months of 1907, and yet the total number of fatalities in this year do not reach the figures for the year preceeding.

By comparison with the table for the last six months of 1907, it appears that the number of street and track accidents have decreased since the public service commission ordered the overhauling of rolling stock and the repairing of tracks, which would indicate that with the operating apparatus in better order the railroad employes have been better able to avert accidents.

In October, 1908, there were 77 car collisions, against 221 for 1907, and 882 persons and vehicles struck by cars, against 1,145. In November, 1908, there were 81 car collisions, and 929 persons and vehicles struck by cars, against 160 and 977, respectively, for the year preceding.

In the summer months of 1908, both these totals were increased, but the rolling stock, tracks and controlling apparatus was in repair, and the number of accidents was kept below the figures for the year when the public service commission was not in control.

Before these repairs were started by the commission, the "run in" books of one surface line in Manhattan alone showed that 300 cars a day were brought into the barns crippled in some way. After the overhauling was completed this number of "dead" cars had dropped to 71.

Coming Out Party for Elephant Latest

THE Sunday night dance which the Jackson Gorauds gave at Martin's a couple of weeks ago was entirely outdone early the other morning by a "society circus" that Harry Perry Disbecker gave in honor of his pachydermic lady friend, Rosa, the elephant at the hippodrome.

Harry's affection for Rosa is well known. Christmas he presented her with a ten-pound box of candy and a magnum of champagne. His latest evidence of affection was to present her formally to society with Mrs. Jackson Gouraud and Mme. Verona Jarbeau as her chaperons.

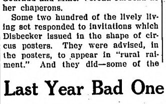
Some two hundred of the lively living set responded to invitations which Disbecker issued in the shape of circus posters. They were advised, in the posters, to appear in "rural raiment." And they did—some of the women as genuine Westchester county dairy maids, others in silk Watteau shepherdess gowns with skirts of Parisian cut and delectable brevity, and most all of the men went as "Rubes."

The stage of the Hippodrome was set under a "big top." At 12:30 o'clock the "grand parade" began. Wells Hawkes, as ringmaster, led. Then came Harry Disbecker, driving a trained pig; Jackson Gouraud and an assistant United States district attorney, D. Frank Lloyd, on horses; and then a barred cage in which two fake lions fought a wild battle with two imitation trainers. The lions were Melville Ellis and Addison Mizner, former brother-in-law to Mrs. Yerkes; the trainers were Joseph Herbert and Eugene Waugh.

Others in line of performers and spectators included Anna Held, Ethel Barrymore, Blanche Ring, Attorney John F. McIntyre; Jessie Lewisohn, Edna McCauley and all the most widely known press agents, wine agents, show girls and folks about town and the elephant.

The "society circus" at dawn had totally eclipsed the Gourauds' affair.

Last Year Bad One for Cupid in State

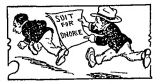


CUPID had a bad year in New York state in 1908. The number of marriages decreased more than 20,000, as compared with 1907. And for this condition—this bridling of the little god of love—the marriage license law which went into effect about a year ago is blamed. Figures given out by the state department of health show that the total number of marriages in 1908 was only about 74,000, while in 1907 it was 96,216.

The largest falling off is noted in counties situated near the border line, where, before enactment of the new law, couples from other states having a marriage license law found it convenient to be married.

Deaths in the state last year totaled a few more than 138,000, the lowest since 1903, while the death rate for the year was 16.2, the smallest in 20 years. The average rate for the last five years was 17.2. The decrease in the number of deaths is attributed to some extent to use of antitoxin in cases of diphtheria and to better sanitary rules which limit epidemics of typhoid fever. Cancer, however, is increasing rapidly as a cause of death.

Wife of Society Man Sues for Divorce



MARY BLAIR BROKAW, through her lawyers, has obtained an order from Justice Maddox of the supreme court at Mineola permitting her to serve her husband, W. Gould Brokaw, the well-known society man, with notice of a suit for separation and maintenance.

According to the complaint submitted, Mrs. Brokaw had her lawyers prepare papers to be served on her husband early last October. When the process server arrived at the Hotel Netherlands, Brokaw, who seemed to have sensed the coming squall, went out, he said, "to see a man." He put on false whiskers and boarded an automobile around the corner.

His wife has seen him only once since. That was a few days later, when he telephoned her to meet him at the Laurel house at Lakewood, N. J. She went there and took a process server with her. Brokaw, she swears, came out on the porch, saw her with the process server, ran back into the hotel, climbed out of the back window and down a fire escape. He made his way to the Country club and thence to his estate in North Carolina—High Point, where the defendant has a hunting preserve.

Mrs. Brokaw alleges that her husband has been there ever since. She says that process servers have been trying to reach him, but that he has a habit of evading subpoenas.

Mrs. Brokaw estimates her husband's fortune at $4,000,000 and his income at $200,000 a year.

Within a few weeks after the wedding the Poillon sisters got after W. Gould Brokaw. Katherine Poillon sued him for $250,000 for breach of promise to marry and the suit was settled out of court.

Solemn Ministers.

Many people regard the minister as a solemn man. Young people often do, and are afraid to be themselves in his presence, writes N. McGee Waters, D. D., in the Homiletic Review. Never seeing him except in the pulpit, which is a place for seriousness and dignity, they imagine he always looks like a funeral and acts like a prayer meeting. I'll never forget the awful Sunday the minister used to stay at father's house. I know now that it bored the minister as much as it did us children. None of us acted naturally, and we would not let him. It was an awful, solemn, and holy time. One hot Sunday afternon my eyes were opened. The minister, left to himself for a moment, came out to us children, where we sat like martyrs on the lawn, and, grabbing up a blade of grass, put it between his thumbs and blew on it a blast louder than a locomotive's whistle. We had been dying to do something desperate all afternoon, but did not dare. Mother heard it and came around the house with the day of judgment in her eye. When she saw it was the minister she vanished like a dream. My soul went out in that screech, and to me it was sweeter than the sacred song. After that I knew the minister was human, and I loved him. Of all the men I know, ministers are about the most human and fun-loving.

It is a little surprising to find Judge Barron of the Canadian judiciary arguing in the public prints of his country against Canadian contributions to England's naval expenditures, and upholding the abandoned principle of harbor defense by means of a few inexpensive submarines and torpedoes. It is even more surprising to find him quoting Premier Laurier in support of his contention. The accepted theory of naval strategy now is one of offense, not defense, says the Detroit Free Press. A nation best repulses its enemies by seeking them out and destroying them, according to the tacticians. This rule of warfare is at the root of Great Britain's present naval policy. She keeps her fleets near home, mobilized to strike forcefully and speedily at any antagonistic combination. Judge Barron's plan contemplates the building of a Canadian destroyer and a submarine every year for five years, making a total outlay of say $2,500,00. The sum is trifling in these days of huge naval spending, and, small as it is, seems to be worse than wasted, if used in the manner proposed.

Some there are who feel called upon to jest and banter when Mr. Taft trips what country editors call the light fantastic. This is error. If Mr. Taft were not a good dancer his case would be an exception. Stout men are splendid dancers, when they dance at all. Thin men, declares the New York World, are often a sorry spectacle on the ballroom floor. Their feet flop awkwardly, they step on their partners' toes and skirts, bump into people and otherwise conduct themselves like half-grown boys. Men of more contour do better. But the out-and-out fat man, whom nobody is supposed to love, is the real hero of the waxed floor. With too much weight to hop far from the bounds, he glides. He cannot project his body forward in ungainly bounds. He undulates gracefully, easily, gently. So, when the ladies with whom Mr. Taft has danced publicly compliment him they speak truly, from the standpoint of persons who appreciate.

A Washington court has before it the question of how far a man has the right to snore and to talk in his sleep, and how far another man whom he keeps awake by doing these things has the right to shoot him up. The question is a delicate one, involving, as it does, the conflicting claims of both to the constitutional right to the pursuit of happiness. Solomon would find plenty of occupation for his abnormal wisdom in settling the cases which come up in the civilized tribunals of to-day.

A London paper gloomily foresees the future absorption of Canada by the United States and "the end of all noble aspirations in which the largest minds of the British race have indulged." This fear of losing Canada by its absorption in its larger neighbor seems to be never entirely absent from the anxious British mind, although neither the United States nor Canada itself appears at all either eager or perturbed over the prospect.

Minnesota is just 50 years old and its development during this period has been marvelous. During the half century the population of the state has grown from 150,000 to 2,000,000. The wealth of its people was approximately $30,000,000 50 years ago, and the assessed valuation of their property now is $1,000,000,000, or $500 per capita instead of $200.

LIFE AND WORKS ACCORDED PRAISE

NATION'S MEN OF WORTH IN TRIBUTE TO ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

PRESIDENT MAKES ADDRESS

Qualities and Deeds of the Great President Set Forth by the Chief Executive in Impressive Speech—Immense Concourse Gathered to Witness Exercises in Connection with Laying of Corner Stone of Memorial Hall.

Hodgenville, Ky.—The corner stone of the splendid memorial to be erected to the memory of Abraham Lincoln was laid by President Roosevelt. The exercises were participated in by many of the nation's leading men, Cardinal Gibbons and ex-Gov. Folk of Missouri being among those who made addresses.

From all points, by train and over roads not particularly smooth at this season of the year, the people gathered to the exercises. A building four times the size of the tent provided could not have accommodated the crowd.

The corner stone of the Memorial hall was laid by President Roosevelt. In an impressive address the chief executive eulogized the life and work of the great statesman. He spoke as follows:

"We have met here to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of one of the two greatest Americans; of one of the two or three greatest men of the nineteenth century; of one of the greatest men in the world's history. This rail splitter, this boy who passed his ungainly youth in the dire poverty of the poorest of the frontier folk, whose rise was by weary and painful labor, lived to lead his people through the burning flames of a struggle from which the nation emerged, purified as by fire, born anew to a loftier life. After long years of iron effort, and of failure that came more often than victory, he at last rose to the leadership of the republic at the moment when that leadership had become the stupendous world-task of the time. He grew to know greatness, but never ease. Success came to him, but never happiness, save that which springs from doing well a painful and a vital task. Power was his, but not pleasure. The furrows deepened on his brow, but his eyes were undimmed by either hate or fear. His gaunt shoulders were bowed, but his steel thews never faltered as he bore for a burden the destinies of his people. His great and tender heart shrank from giving pain; and the task allotted him was to pour out like water the life-blood of the young men, and to feel in his every fiber the sorrow of the women. Disaster saddened but never dismayed him. As the red years of war went by they found him ever doing his duty in the present, ever facing the future with fearless front, high of heart, and dauntless of soul. Unbroken by hatred, unshaken by scorn, he worked and suffered for the people. Triumph was his at the last; and barely had he tasted it before murder found him, and the kindly, patient, fearless eyes were closed forever.

Washington and Lincoln.

"As a people we are indeed beyond measure fortunate in the characters of the two greatest of our public men, Washington and Lincoln. Widely though they differed in externals, the Virginia landed gentleman and the Kentucky backwoodsman, they were alike in essentials, they were alike in the great qualities which rendered each able to render service to his nation and to all mankind such as no other man of his generation could or did render. Each had lofty ideals, but each in striving to attain these lofty ideals was guided by the soundest common sense. Each possessed inflexible courage in adversity, and a soul wholly unspoiled by prosperity. Each possessed all the gentler virtues commonly exhibited by good men who lack rugged strength of character. Each possessed also all the strong qualities commonly exhibited by those towering masters of mankind who have too often shown themselves devoid of so much as the understanding of the words by which we signify the qualities of duty, of mercy, of devotion to the right, of lofty disinterestedness in battling for the good of others. There have been other men as great and other men as good; but in all the history of mankind there are no other two great men as good as these, no other two good men as great. Widely though the problems of to-day differ from the problems set for solution to Washington when he founded this nation, to Lincoln when he saved it and freed the slave, yet the qualities they showed in meeting these problems are exactly the same as those we should show in doing our work to-day.

Lincoln's Deep Foresight.

"Lincoln saw into the future with the prophetic imagination usually vouchsafed only to the poet and the seer. He had in him all the lift toward greatness of the visionary, without any of the visionary's fanaticism or egotism, without any of the visionary's narrow jealousy of the practical man and inability to strive in practical fashion for the realization of an ideal. He had the practical man's hard common sense and willingness to adapt means to ends; but there was in him none of that morbid growth of mind and soul which blinds so many practical men to the higher things of life. No more practical man ever lived than this homely backwoods idealist; but he had nothing in common with those practical men whose consciences are warped until they fail to distinguish between good and evil, fail to understand that strength, ability, shrewdness, whether in the world of business or of politics, only serve to make their possessor a more noxious, a more evil member of the community, if they are not guided and controlled by a fine and high moral sense.

Lessons from Lincoln's Life.

"We of this day must try to solve many social and industrial problems, requiring to an especial degree the combination of indomitable resolution with cool-headed sanity. We can profit by the way in which Lincoln used both these traits as he strove for reform. We can learn much of value from the very attacks which following that course brought upon his head, attacks alike by the extremists of revolution and by the extremists of reaction. He never wavered in devotion to his principles, in his love for the union, and in his abhorrence of slavery. Timid and lukewarm people were always denouncing him because he was extreme; but as a matter of fact he never went to extremes, he worked step by step; and because of this the extremists hated and denounced him with a fervor which now seems to us fantastic in its deification of the unreal and the impossible. At the very time when one side was holding him up as the apostle of social revolution because he was against slavery, the leading abolitionist denounced him as the "slave hound of Illinois." When he was the second time candidate for president, the majority of his opponents attacked him because of what they termed his extreme radicalism, while a minority threatened to bolt his nomination because he was not radical enough. He had continually to check those who wished to go forward too fast, at the very time that he overrode the opposition of those who wished not to go forward at all. The goal was never dim before his vision; but he picked his way cautiously, without either halt or hurry, as he strode toward it, through such a morass of difficulty that no man of less courage would have attempted it, while it would surely have overwhelmed any man of judgment less serene.

Man of Great Toleration.

"Yet, perhaps the most wonderful thing of all, and, from the standpoint of the American of to-day and of the future, the most vitally important, was the extraordinary way in which Lincoln could fight valiantly against what he deemed wrong, and yet preserve undiminished his love and respect for the brother from whom he differed.

Strong Sense of Justice.

"He lived in days that were great and terrible, when brother fought against brother for what each sincerely deemed to be the right. In a contest so grim the strong men who alone can carry it through are rarely able to do justice to the deep convictions of those with whom they grapple in mortal strife. At such times men see through a glass darkly; to only the rarest and loftiest spirits is vouchsafed that clear vision which gradually comes to all, even to the lesser, as the struggle fades into distance, and wounds are forgotten, and peace creeps back to the hearts that were hurt. But Lincoln was given this supreme vision. He did not hate the man from whom he differed. Weakness was as foreign as wicked to his strong, gentle nature; but his courage was of a quality so high that it needed no bolstering of dark passion. He saw clearly that the same high qualities, the same courage, and willingness for self-sacrifice, and devotion to the right as it was given them to see the right, belonged both to the men of the north and to the men of the south. As the years roll by, and as all of us, wherever we dwell, grow to feel an equal pride in the valor and self-devotion, alike of the men who wore the blue and the men who wore the gray, so this whole nation will grow to feel a peculiar sense of pride in the mightiest of the mighty men who mastered the mighty days; the lover of his country and of all mankind; the man whose blood was shed for the union of his people, and for the freedom of a race, Abraham Lincoln."

SILENT ON CABINET

TAFT DECLINES TO DISCUSS HIS APPOINTMENTS.

TALKS WITH HITCHCOCK

Wants Congress to Remove the Bar Against Senator Knox Being Secretary of State—Leaves New Orleans for Cincinnati.

New Orleans.—President-elect Taft left New Orleans Saturday after two days of entertainment here. He goes to Cincinnati and then to Washington, returning to Cincinnati next week.

Friday night Mr. Taft and members of the party which accompanied him to Panama were guests of honor at a Creole banquet. He talked of his desire as the chief executive to represent the whole nation, of his intention to make the representatives of the administration in the south represent the best element of the communities in which they lived, of his recent visit to the isthmus of Panama, with a repetition of his hope for the completion of the canal within his administration.

Although conferences during the day were had between Mr. Taft and Mr. Hitchcock, his postmaster general, and Treasurer Upham of the national committee, nothing definite was obtainable regarding the undecided places in the cabinet. Mr. Hitchcock furnished certain information desired by Mr. Taft.

Mr. Taft has telegraphed to Senator Hale urging congress to remove all doubt of Senator Knox's eligibility to the office of secretary of state, and saying that the loss of Mr. Knox from the cabinet premiership would be a public misfortune.

The telegram follows:

"New Orleans.—Hon. Eugene Hale, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.—I sincerely hope that congress will pass a bill to remove any doubt of Knox's eligibility. I have no doubt that a bill to repeal the bill increasing the salary of the secretary of state will effect this purpose, and I sincerely hope that it will pass. I should regard the loss of Senator Knox from the first place in my cabinet as a public misfortune. (Signed)

"WILLIAM H. TAFT."

Senator Knox wired Judge Taft as follows:

"A bill has been introduced in the senate to remove the constitutional bar to my eligibility to the cabinet by repealing the act providing for an increase in salary for the secretary of state. I am in no way promoting or having anything to do with the measure.

"It is a matter for you as the appointive power to first determine whether the proposed action is desirable or would be effective. Our minds should be free from all doubt concerning the legality and propriety of the proposed plan before acquiescing in it. If you have any reason for not approving what is being done, it should be announced, otherwise an injustice may be done, whoever may be appointed.

(Signed) "P. C. KNOX."

In his speech to the negroes who greeted him by thousands at the ball park Friday, Mr. Taft reiterated his heretofore well-defined principles regarding the development of the negro race and the settlement of the race question.

In his speech on the steps of the city hall here Thursday Mr. Taft made what he said was his summing of his recent trip.

"I am here on my way from a great constructive work," he said, after paying his compliments to his audience. "The greatest entered upon by any nation during the present two centuries, and I am glad to say to you, who perhaps are more interested in that work than any other part of the people of the United States, that the work is going on as you would have it go.

"That on the first of January, 1915, at least, if not before—and I am very much interested in having it within the next four years—that canal will be completed. And when that time comes you will see loading down this river your great commerce bound through those straits to the west coast of America, to the west coast of South America, to the Orient and to Australia."

TWO NEW BISHOPS ELECTED.

Episcopal Convention Fails to Act on "Open Pulpit" Canon.

New York.—The house of bishops of the Protestant Episcopal general convention, in session here Thursday, elected Rev. Dr. Nathaniel Seymour Thomas of Philadelphia bishop of Wyoming and Rev. Benjamin Brewster of Salt Lake City bishop of western Colorado.

The amendment of the "open pulpit" canon was neither repealed nor interpreted and will stand in its present form until the general convention of the house of bishops and the house of lay and clerical delegates meet in October, 1910.

Wants $100,000 for Trust War.

Washington.—In a letter submitted to congress Friday through the secretary of the treasury, Attorney General Bonaparte asks that an appropriation of $100,000 be made for the fiscal year 1910 for the enforcement of the anti-trust laws.

Chicago Alderman a Suicide.

Chicago.—Joseph F. Kohout, senior alderman from the Thirty-fourth ward and under Mayor Dunne a leader on the council floor, committed suicide by shooting himself Friday.

KILL ANTI-JAPANESE BILLS

PRESIDENT WINS FIGHT AGAINST CALIFORNIA LAWS.

Gov. Gillett and Speaker Stanton Praised by Roosevelt for Defeat of "Obnoxious Measures."

Sacramento, Cal.—Yielding to the pressure brought to bear by President Roosevelt and Gov. Gillett, the California assembly retired from its previous position on the anti-Japanese matters Wednesday by reconsidering the former vote on the segregation of Japanese students in the public schools and finally rejecting the measure by a vote of 41 to 37.

An effort by the supporters of the bill further to reconsider was lost by a tie vote and the assembly is now clear of any anti-Japanese measure objected to by the national administration.

The fight for the suppression of the bill was won only after many hours of heated debate on the floor. The struggle started at 10:30 o'clock in the morning, on the presentation of a resolution by Assemblyman J. P. Transue of Los Angeles affirming the right of the state to govern its schools, but withdrawing the Japanese segregation measure because of the president's objection to it and lasted until four o'clock in the afternoon, when Grove L. Johnson's motion further to reconsider was defeated on a tie vote, 38 to 38.

Gov. Gillett received the following message from President Roosevelt:

"Accept my heartiest congratulations. All good Americans appreciate what you have done. Pray extend congratulations individually to all who have aided you. I feel that the way in which California has done what was right for the nation makes it more than ever obligatory on the nation in every way to safeguard the interests of California. All that I personally can do toward this end, whether in public or private life shall most certainly be done."

To Speaker Stanton the president sent this telegram:

"Accept my heartiest thanks and congratulations for the great service you have rendered. On behalf of the people of the United States I thank the people of California and their representatives in the legislature."

ELECTORAL VOTE COUNTED.

Taft and Sherman Are Declared Elected by Congress.

Washington.—With simple but impressive ceremonies the counting of the electoral vote for president and vice-president took place Wednesday at a joint session of the senate and house of representatives, William H. Taft of Ohio and James S. Sherman of New York were officially declared to be the choice of the people for the term of four years beginning March 4 next. The count consumed exactly 40 minutes' time.

Vice-President-elect Sherman in his capacity as a representative from New York occupied his accustomed place on the floor and took great interest in the proceedings.

When Mr. Bailey of Texas, one of the tellers, called attention to the fact, that the certificate of Wisconsin read that the vote of that state was for "William H. Taft of New York and James S. Sherman of New York," Mr. Bailey said that "of course under the constitution it is not permissible for a state to vote for a candidate for president and vice-president from the same state, but your tellers perfectly understand that this is a clerical error."

TWO DIE IN FREIGHT HOUSE FIRE

One of Bodies That of Thomas Malone, Night Watchman.

Chicago. — Flames destroyed the incoming freight house of the Wabash railroad yesterday, the loss being $500,000, and two persons were burned to death. A body, supposed to be that of Thomas Malone, the night watchman, was taken from the ruins yesterday and another a few minutes later. The head, arms and part of the limbs of Malone were burned off and the body was charred almost beyond recognition.

The body was found under a pile of smoldering debris in the office of the freight house about 50 feet south of Twelfth street. It was taken to McNally & Duffy's undertaking rooms by the Harrison street police. Part of the man's clothing had not been reached by the flames, and the police hope to establish the victim's identity by means of the unburned garments.

Thaw Visited by Mother.

Matteawan, N. Y.—The rule prohibiting the visiting of prisoners confined in the Matteawan state hospital on holidays was suspended Friday to permit Mrs. William Thaw to visit her son, Harry K. Thaw, this being the occasion of his thirty-seventh birthday anniversary. Thaw has now been confined something over a year in the state hospital. He has gained 25 pounds and now weighs 178 pounds.

No Cussin' Over Telephone.

Austin, Tex.—The bill introduced by Representative Vaughan making it a criminal offense to swear over a telephone was reported favorably Friday by the house committee on criminal jurisprudence.

Dies of Hydrophobia in Jail.

M'Calester, Okla.—James Bell, who was confined in the county jail on a charge of selling beer, died Friday of acute hydrophobia. He was bitten on the lip by a mad foxhound three months ago.

HEADING OFF THE CALLER.

Plan for Getting Rid of Life Insurance Agents Not Patented.

The bell rang three times, and the man at the desk hastily reached for a flannel bandage. This he put round his neck. Then he arranged a sling, in which he put one arm, disarranged his hair, drew down the corners of his mouth, got out of his chair, and painfully limped toward the door.

"Mr. Jones?" inquired the well-dressed caller, who opened it at that moment.

The man with the bandage half suppressed a groan.

"Yes, that's my name. What can I do for you?"

"You appear to be suffering," said the intelligent caller.

"Suffering!" returned the other. "Do you think I'm doing this for fun? But what is your business, sir?"

"Er—pardon me," stammered the caller, "I think I'll drop in some other time—eh?"

"It's some trouble," soliloquized the man with the bandage, as he removed the paraphernalia and returned to his desk. "But it is really the quickest way to get rid of these life insurance agents. That man will never trouble me again."—London Tit-Bits.

YOUTHFUL MIND AT WORK.

Deduction Mother Must Have Found Somewhat Hard to Combat.

Miss Marjorie, aged five years, is one of those bright children who make the lives of their parents and teachers a burden. Quite recently she paid her first visit to a kindergarten. Upon her return home she grew enthusiastic, begging her mother to allow her to attend the school regularly.

"It was so very nice!" she declared sweetly. "And the teacher, Miss Lee, is so very nice, too! She told me if I was a good little girl I would grow up into a pretty lady, but if I was naughty I would grow up an ugly one!"

"That is quite true, dear," her mother answered with a smile.

Silently Miss Marjorie regarded the fire of pine logs. Presently she burst out: "Then what a naughty, naughty little girl Miss Lee must have been."—The Bohemian.

The Secret of Poverty.

Dr. Woods Hutchinson of New York unlocked the secret of general poverty in an address at the American Museum of Natural History in New York early this month, when he said: "What is killing the people of this city may be stated as overwork, underfeeding and overcrowding; and two of these may be included under the one word 'underpaid.' The message of the church and of medicine to-day to the community is not 'Give to the poor,' but 'Don't take so much away from them.'—The Public.

Tax On Autos Too High.

Mankato.—The Mankato Automobile club held a special meeting to consider automobile legislation. The club is in favor of the bill before the legislature recommended by the state automobile association, but it believes that the tax of $1 a horsepower is too high. It voted to ask the legislature to reduce this by half, and the Blue Earth county delegation will be asked to do what it can to have this amendment passed.

Communications were received from the Rochester and Austin associations opposing the high tax. The Austin association favors a tax proportioned to the weight of the machines, $10 for all machines under 1,500 pounds weight and $5 for each 500 pounds additional weight.

The Mankato club did not favor this plan as well as the tax based on horsepower. The club voted to donate $200 toward improving two of the roads to lake resorts, provided the farmers will assist. It also took up the matter of forming a mutual automobile fire insurance company.

Killed by Fall in Well.

Lansing.—James Strong was killed as the result of a horrible accident in a well. The iron piping had been uncoupled, leaving several feet standing upright in the bottom of the well. Mr. Strong secured a ladder and took the precaution to tie a rope around his body and had his wife to hold the rope. He worked his way down on the rock until he reached the ladder and was in the act of descending when one of the rungs broke. As he fell the knot holding the rope around his body loosened and he struck the iron piping with such force that it penetrated his body. Neighbors were notified and it was necessary for several to descend to lift the body from the iron piping. The injured man lived for several hours, suffering great agony.

Rainy Lake Directors Meet.

Duluth.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg road was held at the company's offices and the Canadian Northern is now in formal control of that company, through the election of the new board of directors. The new directors are as follows: D. B. Hanna of Toronto, L. W. Mitchell and J. D. Norton of Winnipeg and Wire H. Cook and W. D. Bailey of Duluth. Mr. Hanna is the first vice president of the Canadian Northern and Messrs. Norton and Mitchell are also Canadian Northern people.

Married in Jury Room.

Mankato.—The grand jury yesterday returned three indictments and is still at work. Two persons were indicted and arraigned, Carl Bender being charged in two indictments with forgery in the second degree, and Claude Osgood with assault in the third degree.

No indictment was returned against Fred W. Knoss, Jr., who was charged with aiding and encouraging Gladys S. Pearson in attempting to commit suicide. As a result of pressure brought by the grand jury, Knoss and the girl, who is but 17 years of age, were married in the jury room in the presence of the jurors, by one of their number, Justice M. J. Ryan of Smith's Mill.

The girl and her father were opposed to the marriage but finally gave consent.

NEWS NOTES.

Crookston—Judge Daniel Fish of Minneapolis, a recognized authority on Lincoln, will be the principal speaker of the anniversary celebration here. He will deliver his address on Friday afternoon.

Red Wing—By a vote of 60 to 28 the Commercial club adopted a resolution urging the state legislature to pass a law exempting social and commercial clubs under certain provisions from the general liquor laws.

Minneapolis—Meeting the popular demand for western plays, Joseph Byron Totten has written a play entitled "The Cowboy and the Squaw," which will be presented at the Bijou Opera House in the Flour City the week of February 21st. The story depicts the life of the rough and hearty cowboys and cattle rangers.

Winona—The Bay State Mining company of this city, which operates the fifth largest flour mill in the United States, has just awarded contracts for an addition, which will increase its daily capacity 400 barrels. In addition to spring wheat flour, it will also turn out rye flour, graham and corn meal. The company is the first flour mill in the United States to be operated by electrically transmitted power.

Winona—The La Crosse Waterpower company, which has just developed a waterpower at Hatfield, Wis., on the Black river, has begun work on another dam seven miles back on the same river, where additional horsepower almost as great will be developed without in the least interfering with the original power development.

Brainerd—Brainerd enjoyed a mad dog scare when a collie dog afflicted with rabies ran around town for several hours before being caught and bit many other dogs.

Albert Lea.—Farmers to the number of several hundred gathered here today to consider how best to combat the central creamery plant soon to be put in operation here.

Stillwater—A Lincoln day banquet will be held at the Sawyer house tomorrow evening. The address will be made by C. D. O'Brien of St. Paul. The Memorial day committee will also elect officers.

Willmar.—The few outsiders who were privileged to be present at the high school are loud in their praises of the delightful entertainment furnished by teachers and pupils on Mendelssohn day.

Elk River.—Elk River is the banner high license town of Minnesota, the new council having raised the liquor license to $1,800, $300 higher than ever before. Only one license has been issued at that figure.

Crookston—Record breaking time is being made by the Minneapolis Bridge & Iron company in erecting the Sampson's addition steel bridge. The work of putting in the concrete abutments has started and will continue with day and night crews until finished.

Winona—The Winona park board has renamed the four parks of a block in size in the different wards of the city. The old First ward park is hereafter to be known as Windom square, after Wm. Windom, and Central park will hereafter be known as Central square. The Third ward park is to be called Sinclair square in honor of D. Sinclair, and the Fourth ward park is to be called Sobieski square in response to a request from Polish residents.

Brainerd—W. Moir, mechanical superintendent, and G. H. Climan, master carbuilder, of the Northern Pacific, were in the city, accompanied by George Howard of the Commonwealth Steel company, and Gebhard Vaughn, of the Vaughn Refrigerator company. They were here making arrangements for the placing of the Commonwealth transom draft rigging on 100 Lidgerwood cars and the fitting of 25 refrigerator cars with the Vaughn system of refrigeration.

Browns Valley—Steps to incorporate the new local telephone company were taken last night when the following named officers were elected and an attorney was employed to draft articles: S. Y. Gordon, president; J. L. Paul, vice president; N. J. Brown, secretary; J. Kieserling, treasurer. Other directors are D. J. Leary, James Malloy, A. Ironside, E. L. Larson, A. B. Gillette. The new company will be incorporated for $50,000. Enough stock is already sold to install the plant.

Moorhead—The warehouse and grain commission of the state held a meeting in this city for the purpose of hearing arguments on the question of moving the towns of Winnipeg Junction and Stockwood from their present sites, to a new one about two miles east of Winnipeg Junction. The Northern Pacific is building a grade at the point where Winnipeg Junction is located, and this makes it almost necessary for the road to change the location of the town. A vigorous fight is being made by citizens and business people of Winnipeg Junction to retain the location at the present site.

Northfield—Commencement honors have been announced at Carleton college for the exercises to be held at the close of the school year, June 1. Miss Rhoda Dinwiddie of Grand Rapids, Minn., will be valedictorian. Miss Dinwiddie has an average of 95.4 per cent, the highest in the class. Miss Irene Ehrsman, who will be salutatorian, is a close second with an average of 94.6 per cent. Miss Ehrsman is from Blue Earth, Minn. On the honor roll as speakers on the commencement program, the faculty has chosen Miss May Hall of Spring Valley; Ned Dickenson, Osage, Iowa; and Ralph Towne of Waupun, Wis.

Stillwater—A stranger entered the First National bank here today and presented a check payable to bearer for $360, purported to be signed by J. J. Eichten, a wholesale liquor dealer of Stillwater. From the fact that the check was a different number from the series now being used by Mr. Eichten, the teller of the bank became suspicious and started to call up Mr. Eichten over the telephone. Seeing his game was up, the stranger darted from the building, but was overtaken as he was entering a car for St. Paul. He was put in jail, where he said his name was John Conley and that he was an ironworker and 22 years of age. His pockets were bulging with cash, some $930 being found upon him. Regular charges of forgery and endeavoring to obtain money under false pretenses have been preferred against him.

Winona—Miss Christine Boysen, who received the $100 reward for the prize essay on Robert E. Lee, concerning which award criticism is being made by the Daughters of the Confederacy, was for several years a teacher in the Winona normal school, and left here to do post-graduate work in Columbia college.

Stillwater—Judge Stolberg sustained the action of Justice Christiansen of Afton in imposing a straight sentence of 60 days in the county jail for H. C. Meyer, a former saloonkeeper, for operating a slot machine.

MINNESOTA SOLONS

TWO MEMBERS TO GO TO WASHINGTON CITY.

To Get Uncle Sam to Shell Out Liberally for Improvement of Rivers.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 9.—The senate today passed the Senator Swanson resolution which temporarily suspends the powers of the sanitary live-stock incurring any further expenses for the board, and prohibits the board from incurring any further expenses for the time being. Senator Hardy wanted the resolution to go to the finance committee, but was turned down. Senator J. M. Hackney of Hamline made a strenuous and eloquent appeal for the board's side of the case.

"We should sustain the live-stock board in its efforts to stamp out tuberculosis," he said. "I believe that back of this there is an attempt to do away with the tuberculine test for cattle and horses, by certain unscrupulous dairymen." He moved that the resolution be referred to the live-stock committee, but was refused the request. On motion of Senator Swanson, the resolution then prevailed.

Among several bills passed by the senate today, were two of considerable importance. One by Stephens, permits the board of control to allow not to exceed 25 cents a day wages for prisoners at Stillwater. Another, by Sundberg, provides for a constitutional amendment to be submitted to the voters, for state hail insurance.

Bills introduced in the senate today included the following: By Peterson, establishing a scale of damages that may be collected by employes for injuries sustained while at work, grading up to a few dollars for minor hurts, to $2,000 for death. By Gunn, for the state to accept the gift of Cooper Island in Cass Lake from congress, to establish Star Island State Park thereon, and put it in charge of a caretaker at $900 a year, to be appointed by the governor, and to allow the caretaker a $2,000 house. By E. E. Smith, to appropriate $60,000 for a homeopathic college building at the state university.

In the house today, the Ferguson bill to create a third district judge in the 15th judicial district, passed by a vote of 67 to 31. A memorial to congress by Spooner of Morris also passed, asking for canalizing of the upper Minnesota and Red rivers.

Bills introduced in the house today included: By Christiansen, placing all street car systems under the state railroad commission. By Spooner, to prohibit charging in excess of 25 cents for any Minnesota telegram, and not to exceed 2 cents a word in addition for messages over ten words. By Rosenwald, to place oil inspection under the dairy and food commission, and establish both the flash and gravity tests.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 10.—Employers' liability bills are becoming all the rage this legislative session. In addition to the several already introduced, two more made an appearance today; one in the senate and one in the house; and a bill of this nature is yet to be introduced by Senator E. S. Durment of St. Paul.

The bill which appeared in the senate today was introduced by Senator J. F. McGowan of Hennepin. It provides first, that an employer may enter into a contract with his employees, that he shall be relieved of employers' liability in event of their taking out accident insurance. Any employer of not less than 1,500 hands may carry a special insurance fund, the employer to make up deficits in said fund. In event of death of employee, the heirs are entitled to a sum equal to four years' wages of deceased, this amount to be not less than $2,000. In event of disability, the amount allowed shall be 50 per cent of the injured man's wages. In the payment of insurance premiums, the employer shall stand half the expense, the employees the other half. Tomorrow Senator McGowan will follow this bill with another measure proposing compulsory insurance of this character, following the German law.

The employers' liability bill in the house today was presented by Kerry Conley of Rochester. It provides that each employer of labor shall create a relief association board of five members, two named by the employer, three by the employees. Employees are divided into five classes; first class, those receiving up to $35 a month; second class, those receiving $35 to $55 a month; third class, those receiving $55 to $75; fourth class, those receiving $75 to $95 a month; fifth class, those receiving over $95. The insurance fund shall be made up by contributions of employees as follows: First class, 75 cents a month; second class, $1.50 a month; third class, $2.25 a month; fourth class, $3 a month; fifth class, $3.75 a month. For partial disability indemnity shall be paid as follows: For men of the first class, 60 cents a day; second class, $1.25 a day; third class, $1.60 a day; fourth class, $2.25; fifth class, $2.75. In event of death, if the deceased was under 45 years of age the heirs shall receive $3,500; if over 45 years, $2,500.

Senator J. M. Hackney of St. Paul introduced a bill today for instruction by mail in agriculture, a correspondence course to be established at the State Agricultural college. Senator E. H. Canfield introduced a bill to provide for three more deputy state auditors, to be appointed by the auditor, who shall have sole charge of the state's properties—one to be known as the mineral land deputy, a state timber deputy, and an agricultural land and immigration deputy.

In the house today the memorial resolution was passed asking for a special session of congress as soon as possible to revise the tariff. Henry Rine introduced a bill which if passed will materially diminish the income of Frank A. Day, governor's secretary. It provides that every attorney shall be a notary public on filing a $2,000 bond with the county commissioners, and his certificate of admission to the bar with the clerk of the district court and payment of a fee of $1. At present Mr. Day gets $3 for each notarial commission issued.

The farmers of the house held a meeting today and organized by electing Representative Saugstad as chairman. They will ask recognition as a house committee, but do not desire any bills referred to them. They will discuss such bills as interest them and decide on united action on such measures.

The Elmer E. Adams committee met today and secured further evidence on the school book trust. Today's witnesses testified that book agents at Winona were conducting a strenuous campaign to dictate who shall be the new superintendent of city schools to succeed Mr. Frazier, who resigned to become assistant superintendent of public instruction.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 11.—The Ray Farrington senate resolution passed the house today by a vote of 61 to 31, and thus becomes effective. It provides that a delegation of two from each house visit Washington with a view to persuading Washington to make a liberal appropriation for the improvement of the upper Minnesota river and the Red River of the North, and thus prevent their annual overflowing and devastation of much farm property. C. A. Johnson and Ray Farrington will make the trip for the senate, and probably C. A. Spooner and L. C. Johnson will be appointed by the speaker.

The house today passed a resolution calling for adjournment of the legislature April 6, about two weeks earlier than the constitutional limit, and that the last bills be introduced March 16. The resolution will be taken up in the senate early next week. It is doubtful if it passes, as the legislature has an immense amount of legislation pending.

Geo. W. Rodenberg of St. Paul today called up his resolution in the house for a committee of five to investigate as to the probability of Duluth getting the steel plant that the steel manufacturing interests promised two years ago. C. A. Congdon, a Duluth iron mine owner, who is a member of the present house, took the floor and said that Duluth would welcome a complete investigation and that he would lend every assistance; that the plant would be established at Duluth as promised and that he was ready to demonstrate this to any committee. The house took him at his word, and turned down the Rodenberg resolution by a vote of 85 nays to 21 yeas.

In the senate today S. A. Nelson of Fillmore introduced Auditor S. G. Iverson's bill to create a new department of state lands, minerals and forestry. It provides for one man to have charge of the department, to be elected every four years, and to receive $5,000 a year, with an assistant to receive $3,000.

It was privately announced in the senate today that James J. Hill has taken a particular interest in the bill of Senator J. M. Hackney of Hamline for a correspondence course in agriculture to be established at the state agricultural college, and has written from New York for an interview with Mr. Hackney on the subject the end of this week, when he returns to St. Paul.

This afternoon the senate had a hot debate on the Peterson bill to compel locomotives to carry headlights of 1,500 electric candle power, finally passing the bill on the calendar.

The farmers committee of the house, which organized yesterday, met today and appointed a steering committee of eighteen, two from each congressional district, with Representative Saugstad as chairman.

Following adjournment, the Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis county delegations met, and voted to recommend for passage the T. J. Greene bill to permit prize fighting in the three large cities of the state, for six rounds, with no decision, and six-ounce gloves necessary.

A Back That Aches All Day Disturbs Sleep at Night.

Thomas N. McCullough, 321 So. The urine was much disordered, containing sediment, and my rest was broken at night. Relief from these troubles came soon after I started taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and continued treatment entirely freed me from kidney trouble. The cure has been permanent."

IN AGONY WITH ECZEMA.

Whole Body a Mass of Raw, Bleeding, Torturing Humor—Hoped Death Would End Fearful Suffering.

In Despair; Cured by Cuticura.

"Words cannot describe the terrible eczema I suffered with. It broke out on my head and kept spreading until it covered my whole body. I was almost a solid mass of sores from head to foot. I looked more like a piece of raw beef than a human being. The pain and agony endured seemed more than I could bear. Blood and pus oozed from the great sore on my scalp, from under my finger nails, and nearly all over my body. My ears were so crusted and swollen I was afraid they would break off. Every hair in my head fell out. I could not sit down, for my clothes would stick to the raw and bleeding flesh, making me cry out from the pain. My family doctor did all he could, but I got worse and worse. My condition was awful. I did not think I could live, and wanted death to come and end my frightful sufferings.

"In this condition my mother-in-law begged me to try the Cuticura Remedies. I said I would, but had no hope of recovery. But oh, what blessed relief I experienced after applying Cuticura Ointment. It cooled the bleeding and itching flesh and brought me the first real sleep I had had in weeks. It was as grateful as ice to a burning tongue. I would bathe with warm water and Cuticura Soap, then apply the Ointment freely. I also took Cuticura Resolvent for the blood. In a short time the sores stopped running, the flesh began to heal, and I knew I was to get well again. Then the hair on my head began to grow, and in a short time I was completely cured. I wish I could tell everybody who has eczema to use Cuticura. Mrs. Wm. Hunt, 135 Thomas St., Newark, N. J., Sept. 28, 1908."

Senator A.D. Stephens, of the Finance Committee in the Senate, and Representative Putnam, of the Appropriations Committee in the House, are entitled to the thanks of the Newspaper boys for rushing the appropriation for publishing the constitutional amendmendants.

Co-operation to build up the country in wh ch you live in is not to the likeing of a few people liveing at Highlanding, who look only to self, self, without consideration to the rights of others. Had the people liveing in the the south western corner of the township been built that way, there would have been no creamery at Highlanding today.

We desire to say to the farmers of the eleven townships, pay your taxes. We are fighting as hard as we can to give the people of this part of the county a fair representation on that board of county Commissioners, but refuseing to pay your taxes will not help matters any, and you will be the ones that will have to pay the expenses.

The story sprung by a few interested parties at Highlanding, to the affect that congressman Steenerson was going to change the government location of the proposed Highlanding bridge to the section line between sections 28 and 29, one mile east of its present location, is without foundation in fact. In the first place a bridge could not be built on this section line, without building it quite a long distance LENGTHWISE, of the river. In the second place there has been only one premission to build a bridge across the Red Lake River east of Thief River Falls been given, and the present location is satisfactor to about 95 percent of the farmers of the Eleven Townships, which are the ones that the state legislature will consider, if they grant the appropriation to build the bridge. In third place it would be an impossibility to get any special state aid for more than one bridge in eastern Red Lake county, if we can get any aid at all. In view of these facts it is not likely that Congresman Steenerson will attempt to change the location of this bridge on the statements of a few parties at Highlanding, who are only looking after their own selfish interests, backed up by a petition siged by people who do not understand the true situation. As a matter of fact this bridge is rather far east now for our first bridge in the eastern part of the county, and any attempt to move it one mile farther east would cause all the people liveing west of the present location to withdraw their names from the petition and devoting their energy to getting a bridge located farther west, and we would have no petition to the legislature at all, as the people liveing east from Highlanding are not united and would not sign a petition for a bridge at that place, as they want it farther east, or built at its present location. Mr Steenerson has only heard one side of the question up to this time; but when he hears the other side, and the wishes of the great majority of the people of eastern Red Lake county he will hesitate to take any action to change the location of the site of this bridge.

No Fiction.

It was a clerk in a Detroit bookstore of whom a prim matron demanded a book for her son. "No fiction, please," she explained, "but absolute, literal truth, without unnecessary verbiage or absurdly fanciful pictures."

"Well, madam"— The bookseller paused, his eye running over his shelves; then, with a flash of inspiration he took down a volume. "I should think this might meet your requirements," he said, and he handed her a popular geometry.

Feminine Fortitude.

Comparisons of the relative fortitude of men and women are idle as odious. Parallel lines never meet, as we all know. The Words That Won.

In London one of the weekly papers offered a prize for the best list of strong words to number ten. The announcement specified that but ten words would be considered from any one person and a committee of literary men would select from the number offered the ten strongest words in the English language.

Made a Gorilla King.

The craze among society women for queer pets is an old story. It usually ends through being carried too far. There is the case of Andromeda, for instance, and there is that other affair of the decadent Roman emperor's daughter, who had a pet gorilla, procured for her at great cost by an Arabian trader who supplied strange beasts for the amphitheater. One day the Praetorian guard arose and murdered the caesar. The gorilla, who happened to be present, strangled the ringleader, who was to have assumed the imperial purple himself, with its bare hands. This so delighted the Praetorians that they unanimously elected the gorilla, whom they took for a barbarian from North Britain, to the vacant throne. On the mistake being explained by a zoologically minded patrician, the divus caesar had to be killed and another one chosen.—London News.

ABOVE THE LAW.

Courts Have No Jurisdiction Over Foreign Ambassadors.

The chief of an embassy is an august being and one who boasts some remarkable privileges. It may be mentioned to begin with that in the land in which he is officiating an ambassador ranks immediately after the princes of the blood royal.

The ground on which an embassy stands is in theory as well as in practice the territory of the nation to which its principal occupant belongs. Even if a criminal were harbored in an embassy the police could not enter the premises without permission.

An ambassador is above the law of the country to which he is accredited. The courts have no jurisdiction over him, and, strangely enough, his subordinates and even his domestic servants are also inviolate. The humblest employee in the embassy if he committed a punishable offense could not be arrested without the consent of his master, nor can an embassy official be imprisoned for debt.

Ambassadors are to be envied most of all perhaps for their freedom from the burden of taxation. They disburse not one penny in taxes, either directly or indirectly, and, as for the custom house, it is nonexistent so far as they are concerned. No duty whatever is charged in respect of wines, cigars, cigarettes, etc., that are consigned to them.

Again, their excellencies need not bother about taxes unless they please. That they do so is purely an act of grace on their part. They are not legally exempt from these tantalizing demands on the purse, but if they decline to meet them there would be no means of enforcing payment.—Cassell's Journal.

The Truth Anyway.

A teacher in a tenement district hurried from the school to find the mother of a pupil who had been taken quite ill.

"Can you show me where Mrs. Angelo Scandale lives?" she inquired of a cherub transplanted from the sunny south to a dark, sunless alley.

"Yes, teach', I show you," and a willing, sticky hand dragged her on with such speed as to make her stumble over an Italian dame seated on the threshold.

After the teacher's breathless flight toward the clouds the little hand stopped tugging.

"There where Mees Scandale live," indicated the horizontal arm and finger, "but she downstair sitting on the step," finished the smiling lips.—Harper's Magazine.

Firstborns Will Agree.

They were discussing the law of entail—the English law bequeathing the bulk of the family property to the eldest son.

"There is 50 per cent of logic in that law," said a physician, "and if the family property went to the firstborn, whether son or daughter, the law would contain 100 per cent of logic. For the firstborn child is practically always the best—best in brain, in build, in beauty, in everything."—Atlanta Constitution.

Mrs. Millsap's new girl, who never had gone out to service before and had had scarcely any experience as a cook, appeared to be willing and industrious and was quick to learn. In view of her inexperience she had readily agreed to work for $3.50 a week. Mrs. Millsap, who was an expert cook, had taken much pains with her education in that line, and at the end of five or six weeks Jemima was equal to any demands upon her in the line of kitchen work. The mistress was greatly surprised, therefore, when the maid one morning gave her a week's notice.

"What does this mean, Jemima?" she asked. "Haven't I treated you fairly?"

"Yes, ma'am," answered the girl, "but I've learned how to cook now, and I've found a place where I can get $5 a week right at the start."

"You didn't ask me to raise your wages. Do you think you are acting fairly with me?"

"Oh, I'm going to do the square thing with you, Mrs. Millsap," said Jemima. "I've got a sister about a year younger than I am, and she's perfectly willing to come here and work for $3.50 a week—till she learns cooking, anyhow."—Youth's Companion.

The farmers telephone Company met at Kratka on Monday last and organized to build a telephone line from Thief River Falls to Grygla, by way of Kratka, Highlanding, and Erie. The enterprise ought to be a non-success from the start, judgeing by the men at the head of it.

We want to say to the farmers, that when a petition is presented to you to sign for a bridge across Red Lake River at any other point than between sectons 20 and 30 in this township, you are signing a remonstance against any bridge being built in this township at all, for a number of years.

There seems to be one draw back to the farmers patronizeing the creamery, instead of making their own butter, and that is they get more store goods out of their butter. By looking the matter up we find that the trouble is that the farmers that pay their cash for what they buy are paying about two priceses for it, and we are going to try to provide a remedy by putting the farmers in a way to get their goods at wholesale price direct from Chicago and Minneapolis. We have always advocated dealing with home merchants, but there is no use to feed a man to sit in a store on the hill and "buck" every enterprise to build up the country and get outside money into it, instead of hustling to get bonds on the Township to put the new settlers of the township in the hole worse than they are now.

Ole Overum is getting out the lumber for a large stock barn, which he will build this spring.

There was quita a large number from this township attended the masqurade ball at Kratka, on Saturday evening last, and all raport a fine time.

There will be a grand ball at the Mike Kolski hall, in Deer Park township on Saturday evening Feb. 27,. All are invited to come and have as good a time as usal.

We will be prepared to begin taking orders from the farmers for their summer goods at wholesale prices about April 1st, so our Highlanding merchant can have more time to draw up and circulate remonstances against the state of Minnesota appropriating money to build a bridg across Red Lake River, or maybe he might get time to circulate it himself, instead of hiring Mr. John Poloni and paying him two dollars in store pay to do it.

To talk through a human body or a row of human bodies, for the matter of that, is one of the weirdest of the electrician's feats. GROWTH OF CARICATURE.

John Law's Wild Schemes Gave It a Tremendous Impetus.

Caricature is nowadays one of the principal methods of criticism. No movement can overreach the mark without eliciting dozens of works of art from caricaturists all over this and all other countries.

This branch of criticism and attack dates far back, but the greatest impulse it ever felt came from the age of tremendous speculation, when, in 1719 and 1730, John Law was manipulating things financial in France. Never before had the financial world been so carried off its feet as it was at that time. Members of the nobility were waiting for a chance to purchase shares in Law's schemes. Duchesses and ladies of high renown tried their most persuasive charms on Law in the attempt to get hold of shares. Men hired out their backs for writing desks, so great was the press of business in making contracts, and one hunchback is reputed to have made 100,000 francs in this way in a few weeks. The French went veritably mad over the schemes to become wealthy. Naturally the papers of the time, especially those of Holland, caricatured the state of affairs. There were pictures of all sorts caricaturing Law, the nobility, the schemes and everything connected with them.

It was this tremendous amount of pictorial work that first directed the energies of William Hogarth in London in this direction. Caricaturing began to be used more and more in the political field, and soon afterward it caused the shelving of Robert Walpole from the English ministry. Ever since then has caricaturing been one of the bitterest and most effectual methods of checking public men and their schemes.

Another Knock.

"Hotel clerks are cold hearted," sighed the shabby tragedian, who was traveling with a toothbrush and a compass.

"Speaking from experience, pal?" asked his barnstorming chum.

"Sure! I approached the clerk of the Red Dog inn and told him actors deserved special terms."

"Ah, indeed! And what did he say?"

"He said yes, they deserved six month terms in the county workhouse."—Chicago News.

If All Candidates Were White.

The word "candidate" is from the Latin "candidatus." Literally it means white robed, and it was thus called because in Rome those who sought office wore a glittering white toga. Fancy, if you can, all our modern Americans dressed in accordance with their political ambitions. In some sections there would be no such thing as a dark suit of clothes. Washington would simply be one shining center of universal whiteness.—Saturday Evening Post.

MONEY MADE IN LIVE STOCK IN CENTRAL CANADA.

W. J. Henderson, visiting Seattle, writes the Canadian Government Agent at Spokane, Wash., and says:

"I have neighbors in Central Canada raising wheat, barley and oats for the past 20 years, and are now getting from the same land 20 to 30 bushels of wheat per acre, 40 to 60 bushels of oats.

"It was the first week of May when I got my tent pitched, but the farmers all around had finished putting in their crops, so I only got fifteen acres broke and seeded. They advised me as it was late not to put in much wheat, so I put in five acres of wheat and ten acres oats, one-half acre potatoes and vegetables. All kinds of vegetables grow well up there, sweet corn, tomatoes, onions, carrots, peas, beans, cabbage. My wheat yielded about 20 bushels per acre, for which I got 76 cents, others got 80 cents; oats threshed 35 bushels per acre, for which I got 35 cents per bushel. You see I was three weeks late in getting them in, still I was satisfied.

"From my observation, there is more money made in stock, such as cattle, horses and sheep, as prices are high for such, and it costs nothing to raise them, as horses live the year around out on the grass. In fact, farmers turn their work horses out for the winter, and they come in fresh and fat in the spring. Cattle live out seven or eight months. They mow the prairie grass and stack it for winter and give oat straw. My neighbors sold steers at $40 each, and any kind of a horse that can plow, from $150.00 up. I raised 50 chickens and 5 pigs, as pork, chickens, butter and eggs pay well and always a good market for anything a man raises, so I have every reason to be thankful, besides, at the end of three years I get my patent for homestead. I heard of no homestead selling for less than $2,000, so where under the sun could an old man or young man do better?"

Placing Him.

"Papa," inquired little May, after Sunday school, "was George Washington an Israelite?"

Before her father could answer this somewhat unexpected question May's six-year-old brother broke in.

"Why, May, I'm 'shamed of your ig-n'ance! George Washington is in the New Testament, not the Old."—Woman's Home Companion.

The Prince of Grumblers.

When Mr. Beeton asked if he did not find many unreasonable people among his summer boarders, Farmer Joy quickly assented.

"Lots an' lots are never satisfied anyway," he said. "No matter what's done for 'em, there'll always be something wrong somewheres.

"Now last summer," he went on, with a gleaming eye, "we had a man here that was so fond of grumblin' that one day he actually called for a toothpick after he'd had a glass of milk."—Youth's Companion.

Overdoing It.

A young Englishman, after he had been in Devil's valley for a couple of months, began to grow thin. Wyoming cooking did not appeal to him. Besides his squeamish appetite there was another thing that the natives held against him—his outlandish custom of taking a bath every morning. One day his landlady was discussing him with a friend.

"I tell yo what, Sal," said the visitor, "he's jest a-wastin' away a-grievin' for some gal back east thar."

"Nothin' o' the kind," said the landlady, contemptuously. "You mark my words, now—that young feller he's jest a washin' hisself away."—Everybody's Magazine.

GOOD CHANGE

Coffee to Postum.

The large army of persons who have found relief from many chronic ailments by changing from coffee to Postum as a daily beverage, is growing each day.

It is only a simple question of trying it for oneself in order to know the joy of returning health as realized by an Ills. young lady. She writes:

"I had been a coffee drinker nearly all my life and it affected my stomach —caused insomnia and I was seldom without a headache. I had heard about Postum and how beneficial it was, so concluded to quit coffee and try it.

"I was delighted with the change. I can now sleep well and seldom ever have headache. My stomach has gotten strong and I can eat without suffering afterwards. I think my whole system greatly benefited by Postum.

"My brother also suffered from stomach trouble while he drank coffee, but now, since using Postum he feels so much better he would not go back to coffee for anything."

STAGE SEEMS TO BE SET FOR EUROPEAN WAR IN THE SPRING

LONDON, Eng.—If Europe is to be saved from a general international convulsion in the coming spring, her chief statesmen will deserve the praise of history and the thanks of the whole world. It is in the spring that things happen in the Balkan region—that present center of the continent wherein may be struck the vital spark of European flame. The Balkans are extremely mountainous, and the country, difficult of communication in most parts at any time, is impassable in the winter, when snow and drift and glacier block the rugged way, writes A. Francis Walker in the New York Press.

It is a country of unrest, of strife and turmoil. Year after year the world has been told each winter "There will be war in the Balkans in the spring." The world has been fooled so many times by this rumor that it has become skeptical, but the time for skepticism is past. If ever the rumor is going to find development in actual fact, it surely will find it in the spring of 1909. According to Sir Edward Grey, the British minister for foreign affairs, the present Balkan troubles have caused "the greatest diplomatic complications of modern history." Never were so many international interests involved, nor did so many territorial complications ever arise at one juncture. The Serb states seem bent upon fight; Bulgaria, in her ambitions toward Macedonia, no longer feels her interests bound up with Austria; Russia cannot afford to disregard Slav feeling, however much she may cry peace; and whichever way the pendulum swings, if an outbreak should occur, Austria and Turkey must find themselves involved. Germany has promised to stand by Austria and France and England are busy safeguarding their status quo.

All Signs Point to War.

The announcement that Austria had decided to pay the sum of $10,000,000 or thereabouts to Turkey as compensation for the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina cleared the air for a time, but already difficulties have arisen concerning the actual amount to be paid in cash, the terms of payment and the refusal of Turkey to stop the boycott of Austrian trade until the final signatures to the financial settlement have been written down. That is only part of the trouble anyway. Servia and Montenegro are more defiant than ever. The recent speech of the Servian minister for foreign affairs in his own parliament was a flat defiance of Austrian demands.

M. Milovanovitch, the Servian foreign minister, practically said "Hands off!" to Austria. He bluntly declared that the balance of power and the liberties of the Balkan peoples could be safeguarded only by Austria ceasing to be a Balkan power. Further, he formulated a demand for the autonomy of Bosnia and Herzgovina under European control and for the recognition of the Save and the Danube rivers as the frontier between the dual monarchy and the Balkans.

A great power like Austria-Hungary could afford to remain passive under provocation from a minor state, and might well tolerate from a Servian tongue what she could not possibly tolerate from Russia, France or Germany, for instance a little more consideration for the exingencies of the Servian minister's surroundings might have led the government of Vienna to regard the Servian minister's speech as intended less for foreign than for home consumption. But Austria is not inclined to be lenient. As a matter of fact, consideration for the weaker nation in general never has been a characteristic of the policy of Vienna. The whole trend of events during the past few weeks points to this fact—that the ties which maintain certain of the European powers in a state of peace are of the very slenderest nature and that the slightest indiscretion of word or deed may precipitate a struggle the end of which no living man can forsee.

INTERESTED PERSONAGES.

Is Contest of Races.

The fundamental, basic fact back of all the negotiations between the various powers, principally Austria and Turkey, Russia and the Balkan provinces proper, is the collision of two opposing forces, whose natural trend, respectively, is east and west, north and south. Kinglake in his masterly analysis of the Crimean war has noted the inevitable tendency of the northern peoples to the south and the warm water. At the present moment two great races are obeying that instinct—the Teuton and the Slav. From west to east, or southeast, the Teuton, represented by Austria, with the driving power of Germany behind her, is heading for Salonika. From north to south, or southwest, the Slav is equally bent upon linking up the dismembered fragments of his race and making his way down to the Adriatic. And the geographical and political point at which the lines of these movements intersect lies in the two provinces which form the present bone of contention.

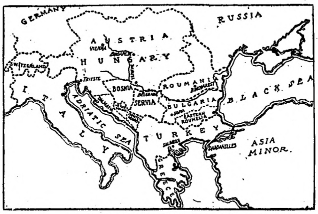
Through Bosnia and Herzegovina, also through Servia herself, Austria hopes to force her way southward. Through that same territory, inhabited by the men of his own race and tongue, and largely of his own religion, the Slav intends to find his way to the sea, and thereby to unite those kindred racial elements which are animated by the most intense hatred and jealousy of Teutonic ambitions.

It would seem as if, in the presence of these two tremendous opposing forces, the petty details of international politics from day to day have only that importance which belongs to them in their relation to those forces. Yet it is in the petty details of political strife that the kindling wood is found.

Disagree as to Motives.

There seems to be no doubt that the personal influence of the Emperor Francis Joseph had a great deal to do with the avoidance of rupture a few months ago. The emperor, sometimes called the "father-in-law of Europe," is the oldest of European sovereigns. He is 78 years old, and he has reigned for 61 years. And it is fairly certain that the emperor's desire for peace and his anxiety to see a quiet sunset of a reign that had such a cyclonic sunrise in 1848 has had much to do with Austria's recent concession to Turkey.

There are critics who trace the origin of the present European trouble mainly to the aspirations of Francis Joseph's heir, the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, whose aim is believed to be partly Federalist—the change of the dual monarchy into a federal system, of which a Slav state will form an important constituent—partly Clerical at home and abroad. This would mean pushing Austrian rule forward into the Balkans in the spirit and with the aim of a twentieth century Catholic crusade. Other critics conclude that while the act of Bulgaria in putting her foot through the treaty of Berlin when she declared her independence in October last and Austria's formal incorporation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, may have been dramatic, nobody in Europe considered Bulgaria or Bosnia and Herzegovina parts of the Turkish empire except in name. Austria created order in the two provinces and administered and civilized them for 30 years and probably no historian ever will say that Europe contemplated their being handed back to Turkey without protest. For all practical purposes, whatever they were in theory, Bosnia and Herzegovina were provinces of Austria-Hungary, and Bulgaria was an independent principality. Undoubtedly the irresistible racial ambitions of the peoples, referred to in a previous paragraph, are the most potent influences that have been at work. These instincts are finding frank and open expression at this juncture.



THE PROBABLE SCENE OF ACTION.

Bulgaria has been a powerful empire in the past, possessing something of a glorious history. Many of the greatest victories and conquests of Turkey were due to the devotions and reckless courage of her Bulgarian soldiers, worthy descendants of the men who, fighting in the phalanx of Alexander the Great, conquered the world. The revolt of the Bulgarians and the Bulgarian massacres following them, brought on the last Russo-Turkish war, which was closed provisionally by the treaty of San Stefano. That treaty created Greater Bulgaria, to include Rumelia and Macedonia, those parts of Turkey in which Bulgarians formed the majority of the inhabitants. The treaty of San Stefano was revised by the powers at the congress of Berlin and Bulgaria had the two sub-territories taken away from her. She regained Rumelia, but not Macedonia. The Bulgarians are the strongest element among the inhabitants of Macedonia, and Bulgaria has been intent upon regaining the province. The recent Turkish revolution, and especially the intention of the Young Turk party to immediately reform and strengthen the neglected army, appeared to stimulate Bulgaria to action.

Great Powers Involved.

Bulgaria has two mighty neighbors, and to conquer and hold Macedonia she had to have the backing of a first-class power. For that support she turned to Austria-Hungary, having lost the support of Russia when she rejected Russia's tutelage, refused to Russianize her army and to convert Bulgaria into a Russian protectorate. There are those who believe that a Turko-Bulgarian quarrel would be only one act in a great European struggle for the control of Constantinople. It is for Constantinople that Russia has fought nearly all her greatest wars since the time of Peter the Great and Catherine II., and some critics foresee a combination of Russia and Turkey, supported by Great Britain, against Bulgarian aggression, which they say, would be supported by Austria and Germany. Great Britain is concerned for her control of the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles, and France has her border interests as well as her entente with Great Britain to consider.

The sovereign houses of the Balkan states have furnished the melodrama, if not the tragedy, of present-day history. The most powerful and most universally respected of the Balkan rulers to-day is King Charles of Rumania. He is nearly 70 years old, and in poor health. In his 40 years' reign he has developed the country into the most prosperous and powerful of the Balkan states. His wife is "Carmen Sylva." The melodrama of this royal house was furnished by Prince Couza the present king's predecessor, whose profligacies shocked his people so much that they compelled him to abdicate. King Charles was a German prince and did not take the title of king until after the Russo-Turkish war of 1877, when he aided the Muscovite forces.

Three Monarchs Interested.

Greece comes into the present mixup on account of her Macedonian interests, and also because the declaration of Cretan independence gave annoyance to Turkey at a very critical moment. King George is one of the most interesting figures of Southern Europe. His government has been wise and sober, and he and Queen Olga are immensely popular.

King Peter of Servia has been called "the boycotted monarch," because, with the exception of Emperor Francis Joseph, all the rulers of Europe have refused to visit him or to accept visits from him. This because King Peter has refused to dissociate himself from the assassin of King Alexander and Queen Draga. The assassins, indeed, in spite of the protests of foreign powers, are among those who still hold high office in the kingdom, a fact that lends some color to the rumor that the present king was privy to the horrible crime of the palace. Nevertheless, Servia has had the support of the western powers in her claims for compensation from Austria. The Crown Prince George is a wild, harum-scarum youth, whose chief faculty is that of getting into scrapes which distress the Servian authorities.

Prince Nicholas of Montenegro succeeded to the throne in 1860, after the murder of Danilo I. His court is poverty-stricken, partly owing to the prince's own extravagances and mania for gambling. One of his daughters is the present queen of Italy.

War Would Mean Change.

Of Abdul Hamid II. of Turkey little need be said. During his reign of 32 years he has lost most of his dominions in Europe, and as the regenerated Turkey, under constitutional rule, has shorn him of most of his governmental power, he becomes a much less dominant figure than before in the ruling of the Ottoman empire.

If there should be war there surely will be some radical changes in the map of Europe. Truly, in the event of general hostilities, some historic battlefields would be trampled again. The entire area of central Europe is a memory of wars of the past; one can scarcely tread a square mile of ground without putting one's foot upon some battlefield of a bygone time.

The total war strength of the European nations at present concerned in the diplomatic negotiations over the Balkans is represented by a total of 8,399,000 troops, which includes enlisted men and reserves. But reckoning the number of men actually available for duty, though unorganized, a European war could mean the employment in the work of killing of 13,560,000 men, or a grand total of 21,959,000 men in land forces alone. The employment of the navies of the same nations could mean the engagement of a total of 122 modern battleships, 1,802 other vessels of war and 362,561 men.

The total wealth of these same nations is represented in gigantic figures, no less than $215,000,000,000. Of all the European powers, France is best able financially to face a war. The individual wealth of France is greater than that of any of her rivals, and her internal financial responsibilities are less. Germany is not in a healthy financial state. Turkey has been financially corrupt for ages, but, somehow, she always can get the money to fight.

Always Prepared for War.

There has been no serious European outbreak since the Russo-Turkish war of 1877-8, though for several years before that Europe had known little peace. The Franco-German war of 1870, the Crimean war of 1856 and the Austro-Prussian war of 1866 are all near memories. In the Balkans themselves there has been no real peace for years past. The Bulgars, the Turks and the Greeks have lived in a state of turmoil.

For all The Haugue peace conferences and talks of treaties and arbitrations, Europe looks out upon the spring with quivering eye and nerves a-tingle. The jealousies of races and nations scatter treaties and paper bonds to the four winds. How long before the clash? The Turk in his mad fanaticism, guarding religion and race in the manner in which he enjoys, the greatest fighting unit in the world, perhaps, though always lacking leadership and discipline; the Bulgar no less warlike and capable of a guerrilla campaign second to none, the Greek and all the mixed bloods of the Orient combined; the Teuton and the Slav, the Norman and the Anglo-Saxon, with little chance for the Latin to escape, if Italy sees fit to keep faith with her allies—all likely to be involved in setting the Old World ablaze! A continent of peoples clashing and struggling for that pride of place which diplomats choose to term "the balance of power!" How long? The spring may tell.

AFTER FOURYEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. Ford, 1938 Lansdowne St., Baltimore, Md.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and to-day is more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge.

WITH THE HELP OF THE NEIGHBORS

BY OLIVE HYDE FOSTER

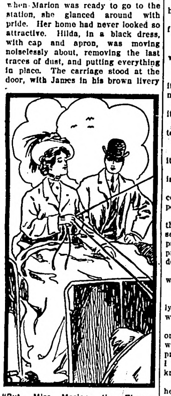
(Copyright, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

Murray Hill was, in its way, quite exclusive. The dozen families living in the neighborhood had resided there for years, and were close friends. None were rich, yet all owned their own homes, and were happy in the small pleasures of every-day living, and doing what they could for each other.

If Mrs. Bender was to entertain the Afternoon Card club, Mrs. Gray, next door, would bring in all her silver, while Mrs. Douglas, around the corner, would ask to be allowed to send her maid to assist in serving the refreshments, and Mrs. Thompson would run over herself to help decorate the house.

So it was not surprising that when the news spread that Marion Day, but lately returned from college, expected a young man from the city to come up Friday and stay over Sunday, the neighbors took a vital interest in the affair. He was known to be the son of wealthy people, and all Murray Hill took a personal interest in the success of his visit. They felt great pride in their pretty locality, and wanted every guest to its hospitable homes to enjoy himself to the fullest extent. Consequently, when preparations for Johnston Willis were under way, each vied with the other in doing everything possible.

At four o'clock Friday afternoon, when Marion was ready to go to the station, she glanced around with pride. Her home had never looked so attractive. Hilda, in a black dress, with cap and apron, was moving noiselessly about, removing the last traces of dust, and putting everything in place. The carriage stood at the door, with James in his brown livery—the one touch of style the Hill boasted.



"But, Miss Marion, the Flowers Were—"

At supper that night Marion caught herself in time to check the question that arose to her lips. She had been disappointed over the chocolate cake she had baked the last thing before going out, and had been dreading to see it come to the table, but now appeared a delicious white mountain cake, a credit to any cook.

"I knew at once that Mrs. Gray had sent it," she said to her mother, afterward. "No one makes that as well as she does, and she knows how much I like it. Did you notice Mr. Willis was helped twice? He probably thought I made it, for I once told him I baked all the cakes."

With two maids, of course, everything went like clock-work. Hilda was competent, and could go ahead without instructions, so Marion was relieved of all responsibility, and could give her whole time to her guest. Katie was a good cook, but she always grew excited when there was company and could never be counted on for help outside the kitchen. Now she could work undisturbed, and every meal was a culinary success.

Mr. Willis had a delightful time those three days. He thought he had never been in a house where everything moved so smoothly, and he could not help admiring Marion's ease and grace in her own home. He had been attracted before, but now he saw her in a new light. The touch of daintiness everywhere showed true artistic taste, and he wondered how it would be if she had plenty of means to gratify all her desires. As the time grew near for him to depart he began to realize how interested he really was. If a few well-chosen plants could add so much, what decorative possibilities might not be developed with a good conservatory to draw on? If one carefully selected rug could give character to a whole room, what might not be expected in an establishment to be furnished from the best stores in the city? And if two maids and one man could be made to serve a family so comfortably, how perfectly managed would a well-equipped household be, with plenty of servants at command!

The problem grew more and more interesting as he thought about it, and he finally decided that he must settle it before he left. One of her friends had given a party in his honor Saturday night, at which she plainly was the general favorite; and he was very much afraid of one young man in particular, whose attentions had been most favorably received. He therefore decided to speak at the first opportunity. This, however, did not arrive until Monday noon, on the way to the station. The cart had come a little early, in order to take them for a certain short, pretty drive together before train time. As they started out, he spoke.

"Miss Marion, this is one of the most enjoyable visits I ever made, and I hope I am going to be able to remember it as one of the most important in my life."

Marion looked at him a little surprised. The truth was that she had been wondering if she could get the horse and cart back before Mrs. Douglas needed them, and she did not grasp the significance of his words.

"Oh, yes!" She nodded her head thoughtfully. Then she quickly remembered what he had said and continued somewhat out of breath. "I mean—I want you to remember it, of course,,but it isn't so very important, you know."

"It is to me—I have been having such a real good time, such pleasant—"

"Oh, yes! It is a lovely neighborhood."

"I have enjoyed knowing your friends—"

"They are so cordial to strangers."

"Indeed they are, but then that wasn't all I enjoyed."

"No? They are—"

"I know how delightful they are, but it is your own well-managed home that made the deepest impression on me."

"It isn't half—bad—that is, I mean it is nice."

"Nice! Indeed it is, and it is easy to see what makes it so."

She gulped: "Yes!"

"You are the moving spirit behind it all."

"But you do not know how much is due the neighbors."

"Environment and association counts, sure enough; but you are a perfect mistress of household affairs."

"But—now, I can't let you go away thinking I baked that cake. Mrs. Gray sent it in because she knows I am particularly fond of that kind, in appreciation of some fancied favor I had done her."

"But, Miss Marion, the flowers were—"

"Yes, they were—"

"They were arranged so artistically, and the selections pleased me a whole lot."

"But they are not mine. We are only keeping them for Mrs. James, who is away for a few days. She appreciated so much a few cut flowers I had sent her from our garden, and knew I would take good care of hers."

Her face was burning, and the inherited rectitude from Puritan forefathers was fast becoming uncomfortable.

"That was kind of her, I am sure, and she made a wise choice in the caretaker. One could see at a glance almost at the servants how much care and training—"

Marion buried her face in her hands.

"Oh, oh, you don't know—" She hesitated, and for a moment or two there was absolute silence.

"Of course, I don't mean," he began again, apologetically, "that you had to school them, they simply—"

Something in her manner made him pause abruptly.

Her pretty castles were tumbling about her, but above all else Marion Day was honorable. She had not meant to be deceitful, and she could not let him go believing—Oh, what could he believe? With a spasmodic gasp, she turned, and, looking him full in the face, with quivering lips she said:

"Oh, Mr. Willis! Even those are not our own. Hilda came over with the plants, and Mrs. Douglas sent James, with the horses, because she was sick and could not use them herself."

Johnston Willis was a man never turned aside by trifles. He spoke again.

"I can only say, Miss Marion, that a girl capable of attracting such devoted friends is the kind of a girl I want for my wife. May I have her?"

An Eccentric Russian Doctor.

The famous Russian, Dr. Zaharin, who has died in Moscow and left over £200,000, was noted for his eccentric methods. When summoned to attend Czar Alexander III. in his last illness, Dr. Zaharin required the same preparation for his visit to the palace as to any of his patients' houses. That is to say, all dogs had to be kept out of the way, all clocks stopped and every door thrown wide open. He left his furs in the hall, his overcoat in the next room, his goloshes in the third, and continuing, arrived at the bedside in ordinary indoor costume. He sat down after walking every few yards, and every eight steps in going upstairs. From the patient's relatives and every one else in the house he required absolute silence until he spoke to them, when his questions had to be answered by "Yes" or "No," and nothing more.

COLLEGE STARS FAIL TO SHINE WITH THE GLOVES

Something Besides Weight and Strength Needed to Be a Champion in the Ring.

Just because you are a big husky athlete don't get it into your head that you are destined to be the heavyweight champion of the world.

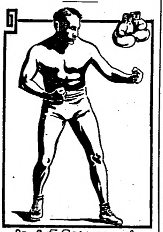
Of late there has been much discussion over what many of the famous football stars could do if pitted against a fighter of equal weight in a ring battle.

Every now and then some fellow who has gained great prominence in some branch of sport announces a desire to become a fighter. Frank Gotch, the wrestler, tried the boxing game with poor success, and the great Sandow quit in disgust after a couple of rounds. Ralph Rose, the giant weight thrower, thinks he has a chance, but he would likely be a joke. Frank Smith, the Chicago White Sox pitcher in the summer and piano mover in the winter, recently issued a challenge to meet Johnson, but no one paid any attention to him. There is one other ballplayer who never issued a challenge to fight anybody, but who can step some as a ring general. The player in question is George Moriarty, recently traded by New York to Detroit.

When playing with Toledo, in the American association, several years ago, Moriarty got into an argument with some of the Indianapolis players. As soon as the game was over he went to the Hoosier bench and offered to whip the entire team. He was accommodated, for in a jiffy six of the players were pummeling Moriarty, while Ed Barrows, their manager, was coaching them. Moriarty beat the six, and then just to show that he still was full of fight walloped Ed Barrows, who was himself a scrapper of note.

A week later Moriarty called on Barrows at a hotel in Toledo one night and asked him to step outside, as he wanted to whip him. Barrows refused the invitation, but has always admired Moriarty for his grit. Moriarty was then but 19 years old, and he is said to have improved materially since then, but even he is not a professional fighter and would not stand much of a chance were he backed up with a man of ring experience.

DOCTOR SEEKS RING LAURELS



DR. B. F. ROLLER

If Dr. B. F. Roller of Seattle, Wash., who has his eye on the title that is held by Jack Johnson, should realize his vaulting ambition, it would be the first time in the history of pugilism that the heavyweight championship had been captured by a bona fide college graduate, a man of intelligence and a practicing physician.

The Seattle doctor has made a standing offer of $25 to any fighter in the northwest who would stay with him four rounds, and offers $50 to the man that knocks him out.

"SQUEEZE" PLAY INVENTED YEARS AGO, SAYS IRWIN

Veteran Baseball Player Claims Providence Champions of 1884 Had It in Their Repertory.

Arthur Irwin, the silver-haired scout of the New York Americans, wishes a commission would be appointed to ascertain when and where the play now known as the "squeeze" was invented. Irwin has a great memory, but he cannot remember what person evolved the idea, or when the play first was used.

"We had the squeeze play in baseball years ago," said Irwin recently, "but we didn't call it by that name. We not only had the squeeze play that brings the runner in from third, but on the Boston Brotherhood team in 1890 we used the scheme of having the man on second start to steal just as the batter bunted."

Irwin, who is a scrap-book fiend, has the documents to prove his assertion that the squeeze play was much used in the Players' league, and thinks he can dig up some literature that will show the Providence champions had the squeeze in their repertory in 1884. One of the first traces of the squeeze play in the Players' league in 1890 was in the game played on the Congress street grounds, Boston, on April 24, between John Ward's Brooklyns and Mike Kelly's Beaneaters.

A clipping in Irwin's possession relates that with Harry Stovey on third, Joe Quinn tried to bunt the ball so that Stovey could score. Dave Orr, who was playing in close, took the ball on the fly and shot it to "Scrappy Bill" Joyce for a dual slaughter. This incident happened in the fourth inning.

In the eighth round Dan Brouthers was "squeezed" home by Irwin. The clipping reads as follows:

"Big Dan went around to third, Irwin bunted and Brouthers made for the plate. Connie Murphy got the ball, but the big first baseman got in his run by a good slide."

Altogether Irwin has about fifty clippings to show that the Brotherhood teams worked the squeeze and worked it just as the teams of to-day have been doing.

WINTER DIAMOND GOSSIP

Bill Bergen has signed up with Brooklyn.

The Polo grounds will have stands this season that will seat 35,000 people.

Walter Wilmot will coach the University of Minnesota nine.

Mike Donlin says New York has offered him $5,500 salary and a $600 bonus for captaining—$6,100 in all. He wants $8,000.

Charley Comiskey says the only pleasing feature of training a ball team is going to some new place each season.

When the Philadelphia Nationals play an exhibition game at Lancaster April 8, Harry Covaleski, the giant-killer, will be opposed by his brother, Stanley.

Josh De Vore of the New York Giants is one of the smallest and at the same time one of the fastest men playing ball.

Johnny Evers must be slipping in his determination not to join the Cubs early. He has changed the date for joining from June 15 to June 1.

Fred Snodgrass, who was a star at baseball and football while at Lafayette college, will be given a chance to show his worth behind the bat by McGraw this year.

Tommy Leach says Wilson will be the best outfielder in the National league this season. He wasn't far from it last season.

A report has it that the New York Americans have made an offer to Buck Rementer, the Tri-State league catcher. Rementer caught 107 games for Lancaster last year

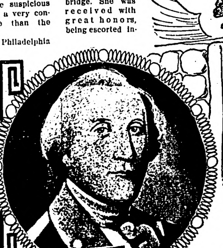
HOW WASHINGTON "MADE" PHILADELPHIA

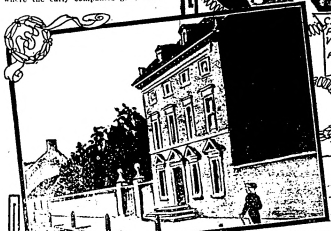
BY SAMUEL H. PIERCE

WASHINGTON was more closely identified with Philadelphia than any other American city, and although more than a century has elapsed since his death, there are in existence there more buildings held memorable on account of the great American's visit than may be found elsewhere. It is true that the word tradition is often very loosely applied to some of the tales of Washington's visit to this or that house, but, after eliminating all the suspicious memorials, there still remain a very considerable number—far more than the average person appreciates.

When he first came to Philadelphia Washington was a young man of 25. He had traveled a good deal, considering with what expense and difficulty travel was accomplished in those days. He had been to the Barbados, and had been on military duty at Boston. It was a military assignment which took him to Philadelphia to confer with Lord Loudon before setting out to the frontier, for the French and Indian war was in progress. While there, it is said, he visited the playhouse, for there is to be found in his journal an entry reading: "March 17, by Mr. Palmas, tickets-52-6," meaning 52 shillings and sixpence. If he did visit the theater he must have gone to that old warehouse of William Plumstead, then on Water street near Pine, but no longer standing, for that is where the early companies gave their performances while in Philadelphia.



C.W. PEALE'S PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON PAINTED IN 1787



HOUSE OCCUPIED BY WASHINGTON WHILE PRESIDENT

Aside from those national relics, Independence hall, Carpenters' hall, Christ church and St. Peter's church, it is a strange commentary on the vicissitudes of buildings to note that the majority of the places standing which have gained immortality by sheltering the first president are nearly all of them old inns, or taverns. In the majority of cases Washington's connection with the old houses is limited to having taken a meal in the old posthouses, and, indeed, the only other buildings identified with his Philadelphia visits are those where he was entertained, either publicly or socially.

Between 1757 and 1773 it does not appear that Washington visited the city, but in the latter year he passed through Philadelphia on his way to New York, where he placed his stepson in King's college. Thereafter he was more frequently seen there, and after he left New York, in 1790, when the capital was removed to Philadelphia, he never again visited New York, and the last years of his life were passed very largely in Philadelphia.

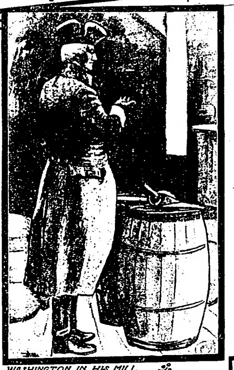
It appears that Philadelphia very nearly had Washington for a permanent resident at one time. When congress decided to move the national capital from New York to Philadelphia Washington, of course, had "inside information" that the project was in view. At that time he is said to have attempted to purchase a farm near the Quaker city, being keen enough as a large landowner to see that there would be a large rise in the values of property here. Where this farm was located does not appear, but Washington was unable to bring about the transfer. Some time later he was successful in purchasing some town lots in the new city of Washington, which was being laid out as the federal capital.

The year after Washington had taken his stepson to King's college he found himself in Philadelphia again as a delegate to the congress which assembled in Carpenters' hall. While there he, with the other delegates, was present at a reception given by the Assembly of Pennsylvania, which was given in what then was called the New Tavern, on Second street above Walnut, opposite to the Slate Roof house.

The Virginia delegate had, however, returned to his plantation in the meantime, for he was in Philadelphia again as a delegate in May, 1775. Marshall, in his diary, mentions, under the date May 9, 1775, that the delegates "were met about six miles from town by the officers of all the companies and by many other gentlemen on horseback to the amount of 500. Within two miles the company of riflemen and infantry, with a band of music, met them and conducted them through the city with great applause." This did not apply to an individual reception of Washington, but to a party of southern delegates of which he was one who entered the city by way of the old Chester road. Randolph, who was elected president of the congress, was mentioned first, and the name of Washington followed. It was a really distinguished company, for in the party were Patrick Henry, Richard Henry Lee, Benjamin Harrison, Caesar Rodney and Samuel Chase.

It was not long before the congress appointed him as commander-in-chief, and he was plunged into that military duty which kept him engaged for the next six years.

On June 20 Washington reviewed the city militia, then exercising on the commons, and shortly thereafter the general was on his way to take command of the little army at Cambridge. In November, according to Marshall, "Lady Washington arrived in the city, on her way to join her distinguished husband at Cambridge. She was received with great honors, being escorted into the city from Schuylkill ferry by the colonel and other officers and light infantry of the Second battalion and the company of light horse, etc."



WASHINGTON IN HIS MILL

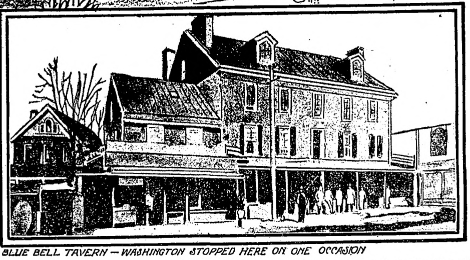
Perhaps no woman ever had been so ceremoniously received in this country before. Mrs. Washington remained in the city for several days, and a ball had been arranged for her at the New tavern. But it was pointed out that congress had expressly forbidden such festivities during stirring times, and the distinguished visitor, when the matter was brought to her attention, graciously recalled her acceptance, and the dance was not given.

Under the date November 27, Marshall notes: "About ten, Lady Washington, attended by the troop of horse, two companies of light infantry, etc., left this city, on her journey to the camp at Cambridge."

In May of the following year Washington was in Philadelphia again on the 27th of that month. The diarist remarks: "Past two took a walk to see the review of sundry battalions of militia and the recruits, which were drawn up regularly with the troop of horse and train of artillery. The generals were Washington, (chief), Gates and Mifflin, with the congress, members of assembly, a number of clergymen, officers, etc., and a vast concourse of people, between 20 and 30 of the Indians of the Six Nations." On June 5 the generals and their aides left for New York.

During the next two years a great deal of the campaign had its scenes near the city. Part of the time Philadelphia was in the hands of the British, and in October, 1777, the battle of Germantown was fought. While Washington and his army were in the neighborhood, the old inns on the outskirts of the town were visited by him at times. In this way we have the tradition of his visit to Valley Green on the Wissahickon, Carlton, to Germantown, and to the old Abbey hotel on Wissahickon avenue.

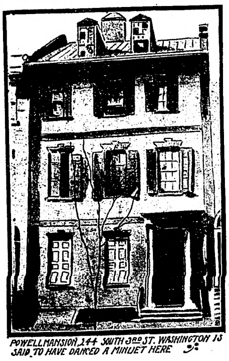
The next year Washington is found in the southwestern part of Philadelphia, and here he is pictured doing a very gallant act at the old Blue Bell inn, at Darby road and Darby creek. According to the story told by one of the witnesses of the incident, when she was a very old woman, it appears that one day during Washington's residence in that city as president he and a few others took a walk down the Darby road. Arriving at the Blue Bell, then kept by the Lloyds, who were known to the president, they engaged to stay for the night. After the evening meal the party gathered around the Dutch fireplace in the dining room and recounted their adventures during the war. The other members of the party retired early, leaving Washington musing before the fire. About midnight the three Misses Lloyd, who had been to a dance, returned home and went to the kitchen for refreshments. The door between the rooms was ajar, and Washington heard the young girls chattering about their evening's experiences. Suddenly he heard his name mentioned, and naturally listened.



BLUE BELL TAVERN — WASHINGTON STOPPED HERE ON ONE OCCASION

One of the young girls remarked that she would like to see if a kiss would remove the sober look on the face of the general. Washington arose and presented himself at the door. The young women were confused, and as none of them would acknowledge she was the culprit, Washington said: "Then I shall have to kiss you all." And he did.

In 1779 the commander-in-chief of the army is in Philadelphia again. This time he sat to Charles Wilson Peale, at the invitation of the supreme executive council. Peale's studio was at Third and Pine streets, and it is believed that it was there that Washington gave the artist the necessary sittings for the picture which subsequently was defaced by the British, although it has frequently been said that the portrait was destroyed. This, as Charles Henry Hart has pointed out, was not the case, and the portrait is still in existence. It was during this time that Washington was a guest at a ball given by the Powels at their mansion, 244 South Third street.



POWELL MANSION, 244 SOUTH 3RD ST. WASHINGTON IS SAID TO HAVE DANCED A MINUET HERE

The war was drawing to an end, and Washington was giving it the finishing touches in the south. He did not appear in Philadelphia again until after the surrender of Cornwallis, when he visited the city that he might consult with congress concerning the future operations of the army. During this visit he was the guest of honor at an entertainment given by the French minister. This was a concert, very likely given at the City tavern, and in January following he was a guest at the Southwark theater, where a special program had been prepared, the plays being the French comedy "Eugenie," by Beaumarchais, and "The Lying Valet," an English farce. The playhouse was decorated for the occasion, and Washington's name in large letters was displayed in a conspicuous manner in an ingenious illumination.

When Washington returned to the Quaker city in July of the same year there were more entertainments in his honor. One of these was given in a specially erected apartment to the house of the French minister, and the occasion was the birthday of the dauphin of France. There was a concert, followed by fireworks, a ball and a supper.

Like the celebrated Cincinnatus, Washington, having finished his public work, returned to his plow. He did visit the city in May, 1784, when he attended a meeting of the Society of the Cincinnati. On May day he dined with Robert Morris at the Hills, now Lemon hill, and while there the Sons of St. Tammany, who were banqueting at Mr. Pole's country seat, went to Morris' and saluted the general on their way home.

In 1787 Washington was called from his retirement to attend the federal convention, and once more Philadelphia entertained him.

Washington's next appearance in that city was in the early part of the year 1789, when he was on his way to New York to be inaugurated first president of the United States. On this occasion, as might be expected, he was received as only a conqueror and hero could be. He was met at Gray's Ferry, where he crossed the river on the old floating bridge, by a vast procession. Children sang patriotic songs, the bridge was festooned, and there was a very modest triumphal arch erected at the Philadelphia side of the river. Under this the president-elect passed. He was escorted through the city, and the troops and the other escort did not leave him until they had set him down at the Jolly Post, in Frankford. The Jolly Post, being on the road to New York, was frequently the stopping place of Washington during his many journeys to and from the east.

The state of Pennsylvania erected a large and handsome building on Ninth street, where the postoffice now stands, which it was intended should be the residence of the president. It was not finished when Washington came to Philadelphia to continue his first term, and he very wisely rented the house of Robert Morris, then on Market street between Fifth and Sixth streets. For the next seven years, excepting during the yellow fever epidemic, Washington occupied this mansion, which, during the British occupation of the city, had been the residence of Lord Howe.

In 1793 the yellow fever struck terror to the heart of every resident of the city, and the government offices were removed to Germantown, which was regarded as safe from the ravages of the epidemic. There Washington rented from Major Franks the house on Germantown road now numbered 5442 and known as the Morris house.

While president and a resident of the Quaker city Washington visited practically every prominent citizen. He was frequently a guest at one or other of their houses. He was fond of the theater, and after the ban had been removed he is found once in a while at the old South Street house, where he was particularly pleased with the acting of Thomas Wignell, a cousin of Hallam and a fine comedian.

He arrived in Philadelphia on November 10, 1798, being escorted by the Macpherson Blues, and went to lodgings at Mrs. White's. This house was numbered 9 North Eighth street, and was on the east side of the street between Market and Filbert streets, the site now occupied by a store. The month he spent there at that time was largely taken up with dinners and other entertainments. He dined with the cabinet officers, with Bishop White, with Samuel Meredith, with Mr. Bingham, and was at Belmont with Judge Peters. He also was entertained by Gov. Mifflin and Mr. Rawle.

This was Washington's last visit to the city. He left there on December 14, and Philadelphia never saw him again. The following year, late in December, the sad news of his death was received, and the new nation immediately was wrapped in mourning.

Roosevelt Is Ready for Moving Day

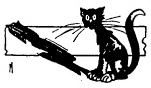
WASHINGTON.—The Roosevelt day in the White House is fast nearing its end. On Pennsylvania avenue directly in front of the president's home the carpenters are at work building the stand from which in a few days the next president of the United States will view the parade marching in his honor. Within the White House the packing of the household belongings is practically completed. The presidential books, pictures, rifles and shotguns, rods and whips, and odds and ends of everything known to a man of diversified tastes and pursuits are ready for shipment to Oyster Bay.

The cartoons, and there must be 25 or 30 of them that have had places of prominence on the tops of the low bookshelves in the library, doubtless will have places of equal prominence in the big "den" in the Oyster Bay home. These cartoons are prized by Mr. Roosevelt above many of his more costly belongings. They are among the few presents he has consented to receive.

The cartoon which has held the special place of honor is one showing an old farmer, representing the American common people, seated before his open fire reading the president's message. The cartoon is called "His Favorite Author." It was to this farmer Mr. Roosevelt once pointed when he said in effect that he could not stand for a "second elective term" as president because "that man wouldn't like it."

The president has declined to receive any gifts of great intrinsic value since he has come into high office. He has had things given him which money cannot buy, at least from him. Authors have sent their books with their autographs inscribed upon the blank page. These almost invariably have been taken gratefully and in most cases there has been a return gift of a copy of one of the Roosevelt books, generally "The Wilderness Hunter."

Tom Cat Is Devoted to His Old Home



AN EXAMPLE of devotion seldom witnessed in a dumb animal is enacted every day by an old white cat that strays about the corner of New Jersey avenue and C street.

Born in the old Baltimore & Ohio railroad station, that occupied that site for years, Tom, the untamed feline, has never left the corner, and even while the old structure was being razed he managed to make his bed in the building until the last wall had been pulled down.

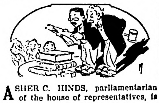
Now that the site has been completely filled up and graded, leaving no vestige of the once famous depot, this old cat still remains and makes his home beneath the chair of the switchman at this crossing.

At night Tom quietly leaves his friend when the last car has passed and wanders off down C street to a near-by lumber yard, where he has made his bed since the destruction of his birthplace.

At five o'clock every morning back he comes and takes his accustomed place beneath the chair, where his saucer of milk awaits him. No matter how inclement the weather, Tom always manages to find his way to the switchman's stand, and there remains all day.

Tom was the only member of a family of six kittens who refused to depart from the depot when workmen began to demolish it, and despite the fact that nothing remains to mark the once famous structure, this feline creature is so strongly attached to the surroundings that he cannot be induced to forego an uncomfortable home for luxurious quarters up-town.

House Parliamentarian No Longer Shy



ASHER C. HINDS, parliamentarian of the house of representatives, is by nature one of those modest and retiring men who can tell a speaker how to bring consternation to his political and parliamentary antagonists when the speaker does not know how to do it himself, and the next moment meet those confounded face to face, to hear some such an expression as this:

"Well, Hinds, if we had had you on our side we would have won a mile."

Somehow or other the things Hinds does to members of the house through the mouth of the speaker in carrying out his official duties, which are to help the speaker control the parliamentary procedure of the house at all times, never start a riot, and never create animosities, resentment or antagonism to himself.

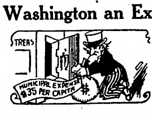
But Mr. Hinds is rapidly getting over his modesty. Recently he received from the presses eight large volumes labeled "Hinds' Precedents," each of which is as large as the standard doctor's book, usually found in all well-regulated homes. These volumes are full of the lore of parliamentary procedure in the house of representatives, and out of them Mr. Hinds has already demonstrated to the satisfaction of Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, at any rate, that "a preponderance of the testimony" in favor of any ruling by the chair can always be found to rest on Hinds' side in any controversy. Recently Mr. Hinds wrote what he declares was a 10,000-word explanation of the rules of the house, and one well-known newspaper boiled the manuscript down to two lines.

A newspaper man has paraphrased the old song, "Jane of Maine," so that it runs as follows:

Hinds of Maine, he never looked the same;
When he went down to Washington he was shy, shy, shy.
But alas and alack, when Hinds came back,
He had a naughty little twinkle in his eye.

Mr. Hinds declares he now has the publicity germ as certainly as have most congressmen.

Washington an Expensive Municipality



THE pending appropriation bill for the cost of running the District of Columbia one year carries $11,974,033, being at the rate of $35.21 for each inhabitant. This does not include the cost of new buildings for the government itself or the maintenance of such as now exist, excepting the appropriation of $120,000 for new buildings for the district.

The 1908 population of Washington was 337,000. The latest figures obtainable from the census bureau show the cities nearest Washington in size to be Buffalo, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Detroit, Milwaukee, New Orleans, Newark and Minneapolis. In none of these does the per capita cost of maintenance equal that of Washington.

Milwaukee, with a population of 317,-908, has a corporate expenditure of $5,548,143, the rate per capita being $17.45.

Minneapolis, with 273,825 inhabitants, spent, according to last reports, only $5,021,530, a per capita of $18.34.

Buffalo has a population of over 400,-000. In 1906 she had 381,819. She spent in 1906 only $7,609,061—$19.93 per capita.

Detroit spends $7,846,305 a year for a population of 353,535. Per capita, $22.20.

New Orleans spent $6,575,945 for a year of city government for a population of 314,146. Per capita, $20.93.

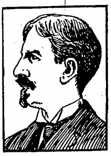
Newark, N. J., with a population of 289,634, had a budget of $6,833,198 for 1906; per capita, $23.50.

Pittsburg, with a population of 375,-082, spent $10,935,738; per capita, $29.16.

Cincinnati has 345,230 inhabitants, and her total corporate payments were $10,676,482. The per capita of $30.93 is the highest of any city in the Washington group except Washington itself.

Prominent People

MAY GET KNOX'S SEAT

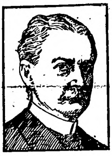


The name of the Hon. J. Benjamin Dimmick, mayor of the city of Scranton, Pa., has been presented to the legislature of Pennsylvania as a successor to the Hon. Philander C. Knox, in the United States senate, which post will be vacant upon the entrance of the senator into the cabinet of President-elect Taft, as secretary of state. The proposed candidate is well equipped for the senatorship, because as a statesman, student, and man of affairs he has displayed great ability as a leader of men, and has proven himself the ideal citizen in public service.

Mayor Dimmick is a descendant of an early New England family which has been prominent for generations in the social, political and religious life in whatever community it has chanced to settle. Prior to the announcement of his candidacy for the mayoralty, three years ago, a large petition bearing the names of Scranton's most successful business and professional men, was circulated, urging his making the race, either as an independent candidate or as representing one of the national parties. It was under the Republican standard, with which his family's name had ever been connected, that he made his successful campaign.

Upon entering office, Mayor Dimmick signalized the initiation of his promised "business administration" by making his appointments to the important municipal posts strictly in accordance with his own conscience and judgment, though he was always open to wise suggestions, but never to dictation. His administration has never proposed a measure to councils which has failed to carry, nor has his veto ever been disregarded, although hitherto the mayors had received little co-operation from councils. During his term in office Scranton's physical needs, such as sewers, streets, bridges, parks, etc., have been adequately supplied, and by practically no increase in the tax rate, through equitable property assessment and through the collection of outstanding indebtedness to the city.

HOLDS TEACHING RECORD



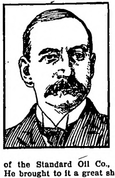
So far as known, Henry W. Clarke, principal of Lenthal school in Newport, R. I., holds the record for teaching in the public schools of New England, having recently completed his 60th year as a teacher. Though born December 10, 1829, he remains in excellent health, and teaches each day with a vigor that stamps him as a remarkable man.

Mr. Clarke enjoys his work, his scholars adore him, and each afternoon children of his schools are seen walking for blocks at a time with the veteran school teacher, who, during all these years of teaching, has taught thousands of the present grown-ups of Newport.

It was through his efforts the mothers' meetings, school gardens and other branches for the betterment of the school, the scholar, the teacher and the parent became prominent in Newport. Born in Jamestown, he became a teacher while attending school at Bridgewater, Mass. He did not take his first formal class, a grammar grade, until 1854. In 1855 he was elected teacher of grade VII. in the old Farewell street school, and in October, 1859, he gave up teaching for commercial life in Providence for some years, but the call of the school bell brought him back to teaching and during September, 1863, he was elected principal of Mill street school, where he continued until 1877, when Lenthal school was built, and he became its principal. He has remained there ever since, without a single day of absence.

Mr. Clarke belongs to various societies. His activity aided greatly the formation of the Teachers' retirement fund of Newport.

A REMARKABLE FIGURE

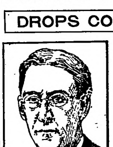


James Stillman, who recently relinquished the presidency of the National City bank of New York to Frank A. Vanderlip, is one of the remarkable figures of the financial world. When he was elected to head the City bank, then a minor institution, he was a young man totally without banking experience. He had been left a fortune by his father, and had added to it in the cotton business. He was the youngest of the directors of the City bank when selected as president. When he stepped out of that position the other day he left the institution the largest, most powerful bank in the world, not even excepting the "Old Lady of Threadneedle Street," as the Bank of England is familiarly known.

Stillman attracted to the bank the millions of the Standard Oil Co., and made it known as "the Rockefeller bank." He brought to it a great share of the United States treasury deposits, and an immense proportion of corporation cash. He opened a European department in charge of experts, and built up a big business of that type.

Known as "the silent man of Wall street," Stillman has not courted publicity in connection with his corporation interests. But he made himself the superior of his fellow-bankers in the getting, holding and creating of business, and that with no previous knowledge of the banking business.

DROPS CONSERVATIVE VIEWS



J. C. Stubbs, traffic director of all the Harriman railroads from Chicago to the Pacific coast, is a man just turned 60, sturdy, hard-working and keen as a boy of 25. He went to work 39 years ago in a Columbus, O., freight office, and two years later took a promotion to the freight department of the Central Pacific. He followed the fortunes of the C. P. Huntington roads through good and ill until he came with them into the Harriman camp.

At this moment Mr. Stubbs has leaped into sudden notice by his announcement of his conversion to the most modern and radical ideas of railroad management, rate laws, commissions and all. He believes that reform of the sort will make for railroad expansion, becouse it will leave the roads free to build, to improve and to strengthen their present facilities for public service. The expression of his views in an address before the Trans-Mississippi Commercial congress at San Francisco is making something of a sensation in railroad as well as political circles.

Ma's Recovery.

"I was so sorry," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "to hear of your mother's illness. Typhoid fever is such a hard disease for old people to recover from."

"Yes," replied her hostess, as she adjusted her $7,000 tiara, "ma did have an awful hard time, but she's adolescent now, thank goodness."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Chicken Farm Now on Waldorf Roof

COCK-A-DOODLE-DO-O

NEW YORK.—Bingham is the happiest man in New York—not Bingham who is at the head of our police department, but Ezra C. Bingham, who is at the head of the engineering and mechanical departments of the Waldorf-Astoria. Bingham is happy because, after years of urging, he has at last pursuaded George C. Boldt to permit him to establish a chicken farm on the roof of the magnificent hostelry on Fifth avenue over which Mr. Boldt presides.

Bingham is a farmer from the far west. A big, stalwart fellow, with the breezy atmosphere of the prairies still clinging to him. During the warm spring, summer and early autumn, when the doors and windows were all open and Bingham could breathe something like pure air, he did not mind living in the Waldorf-Astoria, but when the late fall and winter months came and like every one else doing indoor work he had to be housed many hours of the day, his mind reverted to the old life in the west and he longed to be back on the farm raising live stock of some sort.

"I don't see," said Bingham to Mr. Boldt one day, "why New Yorkers don't have some sort of farms on the roofs, of course they can't have dairy farms, but they might have chicken farms or squab farms."

"We can't have farms," said Mr. Boldt, "but we can have roof gardens both summer and winter, and this winter we will open a garden on the roof of this hotel which will be as good as a farm. We will spend $100,000 to make this winter garden and sun parlor the finest in the world. Now is your chance, Bingham. You may have chickens, ostriches or birds of paradise up there if you like, so long as they are an attraction."

Bingham saw his chance and took it. With the result that he has in a few months built the finest and most complete chicken ranch in the world on the roof of the $8,000,000 Waldorf-Astoria.

Mrs. Stirling Once a Broadway Nomad

ALONG that thoroughfare sometimes known as "The Great White Way," the chorus girls are all gossiping over the remarkable English achievements of one of their number, Clara Taylor, now in the divorce court at Edinburgh, Scotland, as Mrs. John Alexander Stirling.

Clara Taylor came to New York from Washington in 1901. She brought a letter of introduction to the editor of a dramatic paper. She got a job on the paper and worked there two days. She was only 16 years old, so she said. She was attractive, and appeared to be well educated and well brought up. She was looked upon as a runaway from home, an innocent, heedless young thing.

But she gathered wisdom in those first days of her Broadway life, gathered it quicker than did Solomon or the Queen of Sheba, and soon lowered all records for holding and resigning jobs as a show girl. In one week she had six different places.

The little runaway girl from Washington brought her New York stage career to an end when she tried the patience of George Lederer, seven years ago, when Lederer had on "The Wild Rose." She was in the chorus of this company, along with Evelyn Nesbit, Mazie Follette and Vida Whitmore. Eddie Foy, then playing in the piece, indulged in a little joke, and this meant the turning point in the career of Clara Taylor.

"Why don't you go on barefooted?" he suggested to Miss Taylor as the chorus stood in the wings, waiting for the cue to romp on the stage.

"Why not?" asked the lass. And down she sat on the boards and stripped off shoes and stockings. Barefooted and barelegged she went down to the footlights, inaugurating the Trilby dance in New York.

At the close of the show Miss Taylor packed her handbag and went forth seeking another job. Having run the gamut of the New York shows, she went to her friends and collected enough money to take her to London. She landed in the chorus of "The Earl and the Girl," playing at the Adelphi theater. In the company were many American girls, friends of Miss Taylor.

These friends found that Miss Taylor had a suitor in John Alexander Stirling, and that she was well supplied with money. The announcement that she had married Stirling did not surprise the profession on this side of the water.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt in New Romance

SOCIETY is constructing a new romance. Eleanor Sears and Alfred G. Vanderbilt have been cast for the leading roles.

Ever since Mr. Vanderbilt sailed away for Europe the other day and Miss Sears, the Boston society girl, waved good-by to him from the dock, gossip has connected their names.

Miss Sears and her mother were in the party which went to the dock with Mr. Vanderbilt a few minutes before sailing time to see him off. Not a moment of the interval before the "going ashore" whistle sounded were Mr. Vanderbilt and Miss Sears separated, and the millionaire's attention to the young woman was generally commented upon.

When Mr. Vanderbilt boarded the vessel, he was accosted by a man believed to be his lawyer, and after a few moments of earnest conversation he was seen to sign a number of legal looking documents.

Mr. Vanderbilt said he was going abroad to prepare for another season of coaching in England.

"Tim" Sullivan's Annual Shoe Party

COMPLIMENTS OF TIM MURPHY

"BIG TIM" SULLIVAN'S annual distribution of shoes and woollen socks among his friends and supporters in the Bowery took place the other day. Five thousand pairs of shoes were distributed at the Metamora club, on the Bowery.

"Little Tim" Sullivan attended the affair in the capacity of master of ceremonies, although the actual work of passing out the shoes was accomplished by a selected corps of workers.

One day recently men in Bowery lodging houses received invitations to the affair from Sullivan.

The line of "dear friends" formed early in front of the Sullivan stronghold. It extended south a distance of two blocks. Policemen who confined their attentions to the task of trying to keep the shoe seekers from extending their line into the street said there were more men in line than last year. The line led up the narrow stairs into a big clubroom on the second floor. At one end of this room the shoes and socks were piled in a stack extending almost to the ceiling. As each man entered he surrendered his ticket of invitation and told an attendant his size of shoe. Most of the shoes given away were numbered nine and ten, although there were some eight's. There was nothing smaller than an eight, and all the shoes that were distributed were of excellent wearing quality.

"Big Tim" Sullivan looked in during the afternoon to see that everything was running smoothly. His appearance was greeted with cheers

Some of his friends remained in the club till the last pair of shoes was given away. These friends reported that there were many new faces in the assemblage.

Justice and Charity.

Jewish charity will not be true to itself until it recognizes, and, having recognized, crys aloud so that its voice be heeded, the half is not greater than the whole. Mankind must be in the saddle and ride things. Property is less than man. Justice is more than charity. The charity of to-day ought to become the justice of every day, declares Rabbi S. S. Wise, in an address before the National Conference of Jewish Charities. The only preventive charity is justice, and justice is not charity. Charity can never rightly become more than the complement and crown of justice. Millions for charity and not one cent for justice must be superseded by: Everything for justice. This conference must bring much abused, but little tried, justice into better repute. Upon our age this conference must press the prophetic note: Justice, justice shalt thou pursue. It must reassert the command of Micah: Do justice and love mercy. Before mercy, justice! Justice ever and mercy superadded! Is not much of charity necessitated by social injustice, the apparently cureless injustices of the present order? What injustice hath done justice alone can undo; what injustice hath undone, justice and not charity shall restore.

Freak Pillars of Society.

But it is a social philosopher, methinks, who should be most grateful to Curio Hall. Its existence spells safety for the existing social order, declares R. L. Hart in the Atlantic. Think you it is the progress of enlightenment that sanctions and perpetuates our scheme of human relationships? Far otherwise. Rather is it the survival of benightedness. So long as endures the gallery of "exclusive living oddities," with pitiful blockheads to gape at them, so long will there abound those scullions, scavengers, stokers, flunkies and wretched wage-minions upon whose docility we depend for our maintenance. Given intelligence to perceive the joke implied in their adoration of abnormalities, they might detect the huge, historic, practical joke played upon them by destiny. At long, long intervals—for us happily long—they get fleeting glimpses of its point. When that occurs, there results the process known as revolution, which Charles Dudley Warner defined as "turning society over, and putting the best underground as a fertilizer."

"For God's sake, go and see my wife and babies, and do what you can for them," wrote a stranger to a high official of the Salvation Army, the other day. "I can't help them, for I'm just out of jail, but I'm going into a lumber camp to see if I can do something. But don't you think of me. I don't deserve any pity or sympathy. Only please do what you can for them." The appeal was promptly heeded; but a gift of food and clothing did not close the case, and the official's report showed how far-sighted and sympathetic is the philanthropy of the present time. "I'm trying to get at the man who wrote that letter," he said. "There's good stuff in him. He's worth saving."

Letters mailed in the United States for Germany, and dispatched direct, and not via England or France, are now two cents an ounce or fraction of an ounce. Persons who wish letters for Germany sent by England or France (the quickest route) must fully prepay postage thereon at the Universal Postal Union rate of five cents. The reduced rate applies only to letters mailed in the states and territories of the United States, including Alaska, on the mainland of North America, and does not extend to letters mailed in Hawaii, Porto Rico, the Philippines or other possessions of the United States.

The fact that more than a hundred freshmen in a western college have been obliged to enter a spelling class, because each of them misspelled 20 or more words from a list of 200 of no great difficulty, has led to some inquiry at other colleges. Of ten prominent institutions of learning, one reports that one-tenth are poor spellers, and two declare that they must put one-fifth into that category. Of the others, some say that the spelling is "fair," one declares it to be "atrocious," and three say that the standard is "high." The pupils in the technical schools are much poorer spellers than those in the colleges.

Hereafter the steamship companies bringing immigrants to America must provide about seven cubic yards of air space for each person. The object of this rule, which was lately enacted into law by congress, is to prevent the overcrowding of the steerage and the consequent danger to the health of those who have to travel in that part of the ship.

PRESIDENT - ELECT TAFT TALKS OF INFLUENCES THEY MAY EXERT.

SHOWS DUTY OF THE CITIZEN

Address Before the University of Pennsylvania on the Present Relation of the Learned Professions to Political Government Coupled with a Eulogy of the Life and Works of George Washington—The First President's High Character as a Man.

Philadelphia, Feb. 22.—Hon. William H. Taft, president-elect of the United States, was the principal speaker at the exercises in the University of Pennsylvania, commemorative of the birth of Washington.

He chose for the subject of his address the "Present Relations of the Learned Professions to Political Government." He discussed at considerable length the influence which the learned professions, in this day, have upon national and municipal government. He outlined luminously the part each of the important professions plays in a government by the people and compared their influence, one with another. In brief part, he said:

"It is the duty of every citizen to give as much attention as he can to the public weal, and to take as much interest as he can in political matters. Americans generally have recognized these duties, and we find active in political life, men representing all professions, all branches of business and all trades. I propose to-day to invite your attention to the present relation of each of the learned professions to politics and government.

Ministry Placed First.

"The first professon is that of the ministry. Time was in New England, and in every other part of the country under the influence of its traditions, when the minister of the Congregational church, in addition to that of his sacred office, exercised a most powerful influence, which was of a distinctly political character. His views on the issues of the day were considered of the greatest weight in the community in which he lived, and he ranked everyone as its first citizen. This was in the days when New England might almost be called a 'theocracy;' when it was deemed wise and politically proper to regulate by law, to the minutest detail, the manner of life of men, and as these laws were understood to be framed in accord with moral and religious requirements, the minister of the community was the highest authority as to what the law should be and how it ought to be enforced. Great changes have come over our methods of life since that day. Then the ministry, because of the rewards in the way of influence, power and prominence, attracted the ablest of educated minds, and the ability and force of character were where power and influence resided. But the spread of education and independent thinking, the wide diffusion of knowledge and news by the press, the enormous material development of the country, the vast increase in wealth, the increase in rewards and influence of other vocations, the disappearance of the simple village life, have all contributed to change radically the position and influence of the ministry in the community. To-day it is not true that that profession attracts the ablest young men, and this, I think, is a distinct loss to our society, for it is of the utmost importance that the profession whose peculiar duty it is to maintain high moral standards and to arouse the best that there is in man, to stir him to higher aspirations, should have the genius and brilliancy with which successfully to carry out this function. Of course, the profession of ministry is supposed to have to do largely with the kingdom of the next world rather than with this, and many people expect to find in the representatives of the profession only an other worldliness and no thought of this. This, of course, is the narrowest view of the profession. Whatever the next world, we are certainly under the highest obligation to make the best of this, and the ministers should be the chief instruments in making this world morally and religiously better. It is utterly impossible to separate politics from the lives of the community, and there cannot be general personal and social business morality and political immorality at the same time. The latter will ultimately debauch the whole community.

Has Made Improvement.

"During the administration of Mr. Roosevelt, and under the influence of certain revelations of business immorality, the conscience of the whole country was shocked and then nerved to the point of demanding that a better order of affairs be introduced. In this movement the ministers of the various churches have recognized the call upon them to assist, and they have been heard in accents much more effective than ever before in half a century. The greatest agency to-day in keeping us advised of the conditions among oriental races is the establishment of foreign missions. The leaders of these missionary branches of the churches are becoming some of our most learned statesmen in respect of our proper oriental policies."

Judge Taft, discussing teachers, said that "their relation to politics and government is of the utmost importance, though indirect." He went on:

"The next profession is that of the teacher. Of course, the great number of teachers are engaged in primary and secondary instruction and in industrial or vocational work. Their relation to politics and government is of the utmost importance though indirect. It is, and ought to be, their highest duty to instill in the minds of the young girls and boys the patriotism and love of country, because the boy is father to the man and the patriotism of the extreme youth of the country may well determine that of the grown men. The effect of an intense patriotism which thrills through the nerves of the boys of a country is illustrated in the immense strength which Japan derives from it. No one who visits that interesting country or comes into contact with the Japanese can avoid seeing its patriotism. The term 'Bushido,' is a kind of apotheosis of patriotism. The joy with which Japanese give up their lives in defense of their country has its foundation in a real religious feeling, and is most inspiring to all who come to know it. It should be full of significance to those of the teaching profession who become responsible for the thoughts and ideals of the young."

To the writer, in whatever capacity he may labor, Judge Taft attributed great influence, either for good or for bad.

Judge Taft paid a high tribute to the profession of medicine, because it had contributed to the preservation of the health of all the people. He pointed out that the profession had been exalted by its great discoveries and by its assistance in the expansion of our government in the tropics and in the construction of the Panama canal. He said:

Medical Profession Eulogized.

"The triumph which has been reached in the name of the medical profession in the discovery as to the real cause of yellow fever and malaria and the suppression of those diseases by killing or preventing the propagation of, or the infection of the mosquito, is one of the wonders of human progress. It has made the construction of the Panama canal possible. It has rendered life in the tropics for immigrants from the temperate zone consistent with health and reasonable length of life, and it has opened possibilities in the improvement of the health and strength of tropical races themselves under governmental teaching, assistance and supervision that were unthought of two decades ago. Sanitary engineering with its proper treatment of water, making it wholesome and harmless with its removal of the filth and sewage and its conversion of what was noxious into most useful agencies, all confirm the governmental importance of the profession of medicine and the kindred technical profession of chemistry, engineering and all branches of physical research. So marked has been this increase in the importance of the medical profession in governmental agencies, that the doctors themselves have organized a movement for the unification of all agencies in the federal government used to promote the public health, in one bureau or department, at the head of which they wish to put a man of their own or kindred branch of science. How near this movement will come in accomplishing the complete purpose of its promoters, only the national legislature can tell. Certainly the economy of the union of all health agencies of the national government in one bureau or department is wise. Whether at the head of that department should be put a doctor of medicine or some other person must depend on the individual and not on his technical professional learning or skill. It is the capacity to organize, co-ordinate and execute that is needed at the head of a department, and not so much deep technical and professional skill. It is the ability to judge whether others have such technical or professional skill that the head of the department who makes the selection of the members of his department should be endowed with However this may be, it is becoming more and more clear that the extending of governmental duties into a territory covered by the profession of medicine is bringing physicians more and more into political and governmental relation, and we may expect that in the next decade they will play a far greater part than they have heretofore; and it is proper that they should."

Washington's Greatness.

After mentioning the great good, in actual results, accomplished by many technical professions, Judge Taft considered in extent the profession of the law, which, he said, "is in a wide sense the profession of government." He said that lawyers often were selected to carry on governmental work, because the executive faculty was a very marked attribute of the modern lawyer. While he realized that there were defects and weaknesses in the profession of the law, he regarded it as the most important in its relation to political government. In conclusion, he said: "National exigency seems to call forth the men peculiarly fitted to meet the requirements of the situation. Such were Lincoln and Grant during the great civil war. Such was Washington in the revolution, the anniversary of whose birthday this university appropriately makes its Commencement Day. He was not a lawyer or a doctor, or a minister. He was a leader of men. His pure, disinterested patriotism, his freedom from small jealousies, his marvelous common sense, his indomitable perseverance and patience, and his serenity and calm under the most trying circumstances, gave him the victory—a victory which could be traced not to brilliant genius or professional training, but to that which, of all things, is the most to be pursued and desired—his high character as a man."

GREAT FLEET IN HOME PORT AGAIN

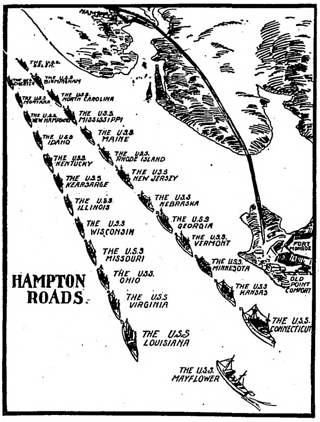
AMERICAN SHIPS DROP THEIR ANCHORS AT HAMPTON ROADS.

VESSELS IN FINE CONDITION

Long Voyage Has Demonstrated the Marvelous Efficiency of the American Navy—Foreign Countries Impressed as Never Before—Desertions Reported as Surprisingly Few —President Roosevelt Reviews Armada from the Mayflower.

Hampton Roads, Va., Feb. 22.—The most stupendous task of naval history was completed when President Roosevelt reviewed the fleet of 16 battleships as they filed into Hampton Roads to drop anchor at the port from which they sailed one year and two months before.

The homecoming was much the same as the departure. The ships were the same, with the exception of the Nebraska and Wisconsin, which took the place of the Maine and Alabama. The flag of Rear-Admiral Sperry flew from the Connecticut, Rear-Admiral Evans, Rear-Admiral Emory and Rear-Admiral Thomas, who were successively in command, having been placed on the retired list.



ALIGNMENT OF WARSHIPS AT HAMPTON ROADS.

Crowding the piers the same wives and sweethearts gathered to welcome those to whom they waved their farewells from the same spot over a year ago. And with the rattle of chains and the splash of anchors, as the great ships wheeled into their berths, the journey of 42,227 miles—not including the side trips in the Mediterranean and other waters—from zone to zone, over the world's oceans and through foreign seas, was at an end.

Marks Epoch in History.

The event marks an epoch in the naval and diplomatic history of the United States. As a mere physical achievement it is a thing of enormous proportions. As a test of naval efficiency it has shown the sailing value of the fleet and demonstrated to many peoples the power of the United States and its equipment for war. It has been a sort of gymnastic exercise with the big stick. It has given the navy department the results of an experience that will be invaluable in the upbuilding of future fleets and brought out defects that must be overcome. As a diplomatic messenger it has dissipated international misunderstandings and brought closer in friendly relations the United States and many of the world's countries.

The successful completion of the cruise without noteworthy accident or untoward incident, from either a naval or political point of view, is regarded by all nations as history making from several points of view. Never before has any battle command made such a long, continuous voyage. Never before has any battle command circumnavigated the globe, whether in one or separate voyages. Never before has any fleet or armada of any of the countries of the world visited so many ports, so many countries, under so many flags. And never was any naval command received with such wide and universal acclaim and enthusiasm of friendly feeling and spirit of welcome as marked the progress of the American battle fleet at every one of its twoscore or more stops on the cruise around the world.

Few Desertions Reported.

A remarkable feature of the cruise has been the excellent discipline. While there have been a few desertions, the number has been far less in proportion than it usually is in home ports. The extent of the drinking on the part of the men and officers at receptions and while on liberty in strange and peculiarly interesting places has been far less than was expected.

From the point of view of the trained mariner, bringing a ship around the world is no extraordinary task. But bringing 16 battleships, with 15,000 men, around the world is a most gigantic naval undertaking. Unlike the merchant ships, they are things of massive and intricate mechanism. They moved in battle formation, maneuvering at sea, to simulate, as far as possible, war conditions. At two stops in their journey, Magdalena bay and the Philippines, the great batteries were brought into play for target practice, without preparation, to prove the fitness of the ships for fighting at the end of a long cruise.

Many Countries Visited.

The fleet visited 20 countries and anchored in 26 foreign ports. The 16 ships passed through the Straits of Magellan, made the journey through the Suez canal without mishap and coaled at Port Said in record time to be off to help the Italian earthquake sufferers, all without mishap. Two passed through the Dardanelles, the first foreign warships to do so without grave conferences between the vigilant powers, to pick up the young Turkish officers who were to come to the United States. Two saluted the new sultan of Morocco. One division dropped anchor at Amoy to do honor to China. The whole fleet flew their colors in the ports of Japan. The flags of nearly all the world were unfurled in welcome to them.

To drive the ships 410,000 tons of coal were used. Practically all of this came from America, in order that there be no variations in quality which would interfere with the elaborate steaming tests to determine the maximum power to be obtained from the quantity of fuel consumed. In this respect alone the experience gained is invaluable. Nearly 100,000 gallons of oil were consumed in lubricating the engines and machinery.

All Nations Impressed.

It is as a naval test that the cruise of the fleet takes rank as the most interesting and greatest achievement of modern times. Naval experts of foreign nations waited with cynical patience for the fleet to arrive in Magdalena bay, battered and disabled after the first leg of the rigorous journey. When the ships went through target practice without any preparation they hastened to report to their governments. Later, when the same ships continued on their way around the world and did the same thing at Manila bay, the fighting efficiency of the American navy was unquestioned.

Foreign naval experts also waited confidently until the ships should reach California, to see the bluejackets desert in shoals as soon as they set foot on their own soil again. On the contrary the men kept to their posts more faithfully than even the department itself anticipated. This is the one problem of the American navy that has been a source of constant difficulty. Re-enlistments become more common than before and for the men who left the fleet after the long cruise around South America there were more men to take the places when they were ready to leave San Francisco.

But there were some things, some very simple things, brought out by the fleet's voyage which seem to have escaped the critics of the navy. If naval operations are to be carried by the United States at long range, and that will probably be the case, so far as the Pacific is concerned, there must be colliers to fill the bunkers of the battleships, supply ships to fill the store rooms, and ammunition ships to fill the magazines. In their last reports the chief of the bureau of ordnance said that a navy without ammunition was helpless, the chief of the bureau of supplies and accounts said that a navy without food for the men was helpless. The colliers are being built now and it is only a matter of time before each of the bureau chiefs will get what he wants.

WELL PLEASED WITH WESTERN CANADA.

GOOD CROPS, SPLENDID CLIMATE, AND WELL ENFORCED LAWS.

Mr. George E. Hunter is a Maidstone, Saskatchewan (Central Canada), farmer, who writes to a Canadian Government Agent as follows:

"It was the first week in November, 1907, when we arrived here. There was very little snow or cold weather until after the holidays, then the snow and cold increased, but to no great extent. I think the coldest I heard of was 30 degrees below zero, but that degree of cold would not be felt here any more than 10 degrees below zero would be back home in Michigan, owing to the beautiful dry atmosphere of this country. There came a good thaw every month that settled the snow, the fields soon became bare, and on the 12th of April I commenced ploughing. The snow was then all gone and summer at hand. This last season was something more than an average year around here, with fine crops gathered from a large acreage. In parts the crops were less than average, but generally speaking they were above it. The price of wheat was quite good. Some fine yields sold at $1.10 per bushel, while some were marketed at much less, but hardly any went below about 60 cents a bushel.

"Oats started on the market at 35 cents a bushel, barley about 50 cents, and flax from 90 cents to $1.00 a bushel.

"As this was my first year in this country, it was a hard year for my horses, owing to their being eastern horses, and not used to the western climate, but they will soon get climatized.

"The soil on my farm is a black loam, about one foot in thickness, below that we find about six feet of clay, and below that again gravel and sand, with an abundance of excellent water. This was the condition of the ground as I found it when I dug a well. I can say that the water is as sweet and as free from alkali and impurities as I ever saw.

"My opinion is that the man who comes here with a little means can do no better than invest $500 or $1,000 in cattle, after locating a homestead adjoining or near some hilly part of the country where it will not be taken up as soon. There is plenty of grass and hay to be found in the hilly country and small lakes and sloughs will afford sufficient water for any amount of cattle. The bluffs with a few hay or straw sheds will make sufficient shelter for them. There is no need to worry about the market for cattle, as there is already a great call for stock of all kinds to satisfy the continued demands of the large packing house at Edmonton, established by Swift and Company.

"The dairy business should by no means be forgotten. It is one of the paying enterprises of this great west. The price of butter seldom goes below 25 cents and reaches as high as 40 cents a pound. Also the new creameries that are fast being erected along the lines of railroad are calling on the farmers for their cream.

"These creameries are greatly welcomed in all communities, because selling cream is better than making butter, even at an average price of 25 cents a pound. For a new country the railroad transportation facilities are good; not yet, of course, what they are in older countries, but the new lines are swiftly gaining as the country gets more settled and supplies them with produce to ship. It is hard to say too much in favor of this country. All one needs is a little money with grit and ambition. I have seen homesteads that were filed on a little over three years ago that the owners have refused $3,000 for.

"There is much more that can be said in favor of Western Canada, but I think my letter has been long enough."

No Heed Paid to Begging Letters.

As nearly as can be ascertained, the wealthy persons of New York city receive 35,000 begging letters a day from strangers, and the writers stand a better chance of finding money than in getting from them, for even the most liberal of philanthropists do not dispense their charity excepting according to careful plans and after investigation.

Dr. Eliot at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis—Charles William Eliot, president of Harvard university, was an honored guest in Minneapolis and as a testimonial of the reverent love and esteem in which he is held by Harvard alumni of the Twin Cities was tendered a banquet at the Minneapolis club by the Harvard club of Minnesota. Other college presidents occupied posts at the toastmaster's table. They included Cyrus Northrop of the University of Minnesota, Dr. George Bridgman of Hamline university, Dr. T. M. Hodgman of Macalester college, Dr. Merrifield of the University of North Dakota, and Franklin L. McVey, who has accepted the presidency of the North Dakota institution to succeed Dr. Merrifield.

Blocks in Brainerd Burned.

Brainerd.—Fire broke out in the hardware and furniture store of A. L. Hoffman & Co., destroying the building with all contents and rendering those of Iver Holden and Jens Molstead practically a total loss. The fire, it is thought, was caused by a stove, of which three were in use. The losses were A. L. Hoffman & Co., building, $8,000, insurance, $4,500; stock, $11,000, insurance $7,000; Iver Holden, hotel and saloon building and part of contents, $4,000, partially insured; Jens Molstead, tailor, building and part of contents, $2,500, with partial insurance. All were wooden buildings, the Hoffman building being steel sheathed.

Six Sons at Reunion.

Mankato.—Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Treanor of Danville township celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. A reunion of the family took place, and many of the neighbors and friends gathered. Mr. and Mrs. Treanor have six sons, all living in this county, and all are among the wealthiest farmers in the county. Mr. Treanor is 80 years old, and his wife 68. They were married Feb. 14, 1859, at Streeterville, Can.

Twin City Students Fail.

Minneapolis.—Exactly 300 out of 612 students who were reported just previous to the examinations last semester as doing unsatisfactory work in one or more subjects in the college of more subjects in the college of science, literature and arts are graduates of Twin City high schools. Minneapolis leads with the greatest number, securing 187 names of its high school graduates on the black list to 118 for St. Paul.

Martin Lahr Acquitted.

St. Cloud.—Martin Lahr was acquitted of the charge of murder in the second degree late this afternoon. The jury came in shortly before 4 o'clock with a verdict of not guilty, which was read in court.

The acquittal will meet approval, especially in the vicinity of Opole where the defendant resides. Lahr stabbed Vinas Esser during a free fight.

Committed for Forgery.

Stillwater.—John Conoly of New name when arraigned on an accusation of forgery in the second degree York admitted that to be his true for offering a forged check for $360, signed J. J. Eichten, at the First National bank on Feb. 11. After a hearing he was held to the grand jury and committed to the county jail.

NEWS NOTES.

Duluth—Joe Snell, driver of the stage which runs between Mountain Iron and Virginia, was held up and robbed of $600.

Crookston.—The biggest birthday party ever held in Crookston was participated in by 120 friends of Alex Thompson, for many years the agent of a Minneapolis company in northern Minnesota with headquarters here. He entertained them at a banquet at the Palace hotel. A bagpiper from Winnipeg was in attendance.

Stillwater.—George Torinus, son of Mrs. Helen M. Torinus and a brother of L. E., M. A. and Bert Torinus, died of dropsy at a hospital in this city. He was about 42 years of age and leaves a wife and children. He had been prominently connected with the St. Croix Lumber company for many years.

Duluth—John Wicks, a homesteader living four miles from Paine in the northern part of St. Louis county, has been arrested, charged with threatening the life of W. T. Bailey of Virginia, head of the W. T. Bailey Lumber company, and was placed under $250 bonds to keep the peace. The Bailey Lumber company was hauling logs over his property and he is alleged to have felled trees in the way and when Mr. Bailey objected, is said to have drawn a revolver. Bailey then had him arrested.

St. Paul.—Frank Adams, wanted by the United States army for false enlistment, was captured yesterday in Winnipeg, and probably will be brought back to Fort Snelling as soon as the necessary papers can be made out. Adams was formerly a soldier, but deserted.

Mankato.—John Miller, an aged quarry worker, was arrested Saturday on the charge of forgery in the second degree. It is said he raised a time check from $10.50 to $20.50 and cashed it in Bader & Peter's saloon. He denies the charge.

Stillwater—Alfred Burow of Cottage Grove has sued Amanda Burow for divorce and wants a share in her house and lot in that village. They were married in December, 1905, and have a child two years old, besides two children of the wife by a former husband. The woman is accused of cruel treatment, calling her husband bad names and refusing to do housework.

St. Paul—Michael Dorr was acquitted of the charge of grand larceny in the second degree by a jury after being out fifteen minutes. Dorr with William Keating and Edward Keener were accused of stealing nine hogs from John Haake's farm near Fort Snelling last December. Dorr said he merely drove the two men to the scene of the theft. The other men cannot be located.

Stillwater.—One of the several events in celebration of Lincoln day was that at the Sawyer house under the auspices of the citizens committee, composed of more than one hundred delegates made up from seventy-five of the fraternal and other societies of the city. The primary object of the organization formed three years ago was to observe Memorial day. Following the business session of the committee a banquet was held.

New London—Because, it is alleged, he found language sanctioned by good society too impoverished for use in adequately expressing himself in a letter to his rival in a love affair, Herman Skaalerud of this village, has been bound over to the United States court for examination at Minneapolis in the April term, on a charge of sending an improper letter through the mails. G. Maylott of Hancock, Minn., was the recipient of the alleged philippic.

Minneapolis—At the first annual meeting yesterday of the recently organized Minneapolis Stock Exchange the officers chosen at the organization meting were re-elected for the year. They are Eugene M. Stevens, president; Charles E. Lewis, vice president; Fred A. Likely, secretary, and Edward T. Chapman, treasurer. The board of directors consists of W. A. Durst, D. F. Johnson, George B. Lane, Eugene M. Stevens and Charles E. Lewis.

Faribault—The noted Crane Creek ditch case, which has been pending in the district court and state supreme court for a long time, has finally been settled. Judge Buckham has finally found in favor of the petitioners and ordered the construction of the ditch. He holds that it is justified on the score of health and public utility. It will drain three lakes, the beds of which will be converted into valuable farming lands and affects Rice, Steele and Waseca counties.

Stillwater—Chief R. F. Barnes has received a letter from the chief of police of Saginaw, Mich., telling of an attempt to work the raised check trick at the Second National bank there on Feb. 9, two days before a similar attempt in Stillwater by John Conoly. The description of the man who tric the scheme there and escaped corresponds to Conoly. The letter stated that a check for $312 was offered and refused. The check was signed by H. P. Oppenheimer for only $9.40 and sent to a New York firm and was stolen together with the letter from a mail box there.

Minneapolis—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Longden are unable to sleep day or night, to go visiting or even do their work, because of an 8-months-old baby they took on trial a few weeks ago when a strange woman called at their restaurant. All their time, they say, is divided between searching for the mother and trying to keep the baby from crying. Their troubles reached the point of distraction today, for they want to go to St. Louis to visit relatives. A woman, who gave her name as Mrs. Dietauk, who left no address, called at the Longden place and asked them if they would like to adopt a baby. The baby was well dressed and apparently well behaved, so they agreed to take it on trial.

Grand Falls—Coroner Jensen has been directed by the attorney general's office, through the district court, to go to International Falls and take possession of the office of sheriff, which has been the bone of contention between the board of county commissioners of last year and this year. Coroner Jensen will serve as sheriff until the state supreme court has decided whether Henry Tower of Little Rock or Hugh McIntosh shall assume the duties of that office. Tower was appointed last fall following the death the day after election of Sheriff Walsh, but the new board held that his incumbency ceased with the termination of the period for which Walsh was elected two years ago. McIntosh was then appointed and the snarl resulted Stillwater—The action of John R Mason of Bangor, Me., as executor of the estate of the late Eugene M. Hersey against Mrs. Mariana Hersey and others, including W. H. Bean as trustee, has been transferred from Mille Lac to Washington county for trial. It involves adjustment of the estate of the late Samuel F. Hersey of Maine.

Stillwater.—Robert Moffat, a resident of Oak Park and owner of large real estate interests for thirty-five years, is dead, aged eighty-two years. He came here from Canada.

MINNESOTA SOLONS

TRYING TO LAND GOVERNMENT TIMBER LABORATORY.

Bill Reported to Exempt Social Clubs From Paying Liquor License.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 15.—The senate and house today both passed a resolution authorizing the regents of the state university to enter into an agreement with the federal government at Washington, accepting the proposition to establish a timber testing plant and laboratory at the Minnesota state university. The resolution to this effect in the senate was introduced by Senator J. T. Elwell of Minneapolis, and in the house G. H. Mattson of Roseau moved its adoption. There was no debate on the resolution, and no opposition.

The establishment of the timber testing plant will be a great advance in forestry work for Minnesota. The new department will not only test timber, but experiment with various wood preservatives, the use of different woods and other materials for the manufacture of paper pulp, and in wood distillation for the production of turpentine, wood alcohol etc. The government will install a corps of 14 men with an annual payroll of $28,000. These men may be used in general instruction work, and thus add greatly to the strength of the faculty in forestry subjects. The government will also equip a laboratory and office at an expenditure of $100,000, which shall be open to advanced students. The state is only asked to furnish floor space, light, heat, power and trackage.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 16.—Today was probably the most uneventful in the legislature of any day since the session opened. But few new bills were introduced in either upper or lower house, and the sessions were "short and sweet."

In the house, Dr. J. A. Gates introduced a bill which is of special interest in view of the investigation pending against the operations of the alleged school book trust. The Gates bill creates a state school book commission, consisting of the president of the state university, superintendent of public instruction, state auditor, secretary of state, and state treasurer. This commission is authorized to every five years adopt a set of text books for use in the public schools, and to fix the prices thereon.

A. K. Ware of Northfield introduced a bill to increase the membership of the state board of control to five members, and providing that not more than three members shall belong to any one political party. Messrs. Lee and Rosenwald jointed in introducing a new anti-discrimination bill. It prohibits purchasers of general products and commodities from paying a different price in different parts of the state for the same product or commodity.

Elmer E. Adams introduced a bill which deprives county commissioners of the right to issue liquor licenses, leaving this power solely with councils of municipalities. If enacted, this would mean prohibition throughout the state for all territory lying outside of the limits of municipalities.

Senators Sullivan and Durment joined in introducing a bill for a constitutional amendment, which will permit the legislature to increase the membership of the associate judges of the state supreme bench, at its discretion, from four, as at present, to eight.

Tomorrow the legislative session will conclude at 10:30 a. m., after which the lawmakers will proceed to the state university on a tour of inspection.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 17.—The legislature—both house and senate—adjourned shortly after ten o'clock this morning, after barely an hour's session, and in special chartered street cars proceeded to Minneapolis, where the rest of the day was spent in visiting the state university.

Prior to introduction of bills in the house today, a lively debate was had over the Alvin Rowe bill. This bill aims at prohibiting the Armour company from establishing a packing plant at New Brighton, just out of Minneapolis. It prohibits such a plant from being located within four miles of the state university; prohibits it from discharging its sewage within a limit of five miles about the St. Paul bath houses, and in other minor provisions aims to knock out the New Brighton site. The St. Paul author of the bill started today's fracas with a motion to refer the bill to the committee on public health, taking it away from the tri-county delegation. This was a move to take the bill out of the hands of the Hennepin members, and at once the members from Minneapolis, led by John Lennon, objected. Eventually, the motion to refer to the public health committee carried.

A number of new bills put in an appearance in the house before adjournment for the junket to the state university. Dalzel, chairman of the committee on taxes, introduced a bill providing that general property shall be assessed on a basis of fifty per cent of its real value. O'Brien caused a laugh by presenting a bill prohibiting the retail sale or the giving away of snuff in the state. Walhuter had a bill to permit counties to establish county hospitals, if a majority of the people of the county voted for it. Ware, who is getting some fame for temperance measures, offered a bill which prohibits manufacturers or wholesale dealers in liquors to have any interest in the operation of retail saloons. Doyle introduced a bill to limit the amount to be charged for sleeping berths on railroads, to 30 per cent of the railroad fare for lower berths, and 20 per cent for "uppers." Wells had a bill to amend the state barber board law, so as to make the board consist of five members, to serve three years each. Christiansen, with the success in mind of the northern Minnesota members in getting a new judge, introduced a bill for one more district judge for St. Paul.

The senate satisfied itself today by the introduction of a few bills, then adjourned on request of Senator Elwell of Minneapolis, to take special cars for the state university to spend the rest of the day.

None of the new bills was of special importance. One by Senator Nelson requires moving picture theaters to have their moving picture machines enclosed in a sheet-iron casing with the operator, with a view to preventing the spreading of fire should the celluloid films catch fire. A. L. Hanson offered two bills. One provides that unexpended balances of state funds for county road and bridge aid shall be turned over to the respective counties instead of reverting to the general fund of the state. His second bill demands that owners of property along drainage ditches shall cut all weeds within a hundred feet of such ditches. Senator Cushman had a bill which provides that parties desiring to adopt a child from the state public school at Owatonna must have the superintendent of the institution join with them in a petition, and that such petition shall be accepted as permission for the adoption.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 18.—A radical change in the form of city governments for St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth is made in a bill introduced in the senate today by E. E. Smith of Minneapolis. The bill proposes to put into effect in these cities what is known as the "Galveston plan," because it originated in that city. It was later successfully adopted by Des Moines. The bill creates a commission of five, to serve six-year terms, and to absorb the powers and abolish the offices of Mayor, city council, city treasurer, controller, and the various city public boards. The bill will doubtless become the leading issue of this legislative session for the tri-county delegation.

Senator Smith also introduced several bills for the state tax commission today, the most important innovation being a plan to establish a system of county assessors throughout the state, each assessor to be allowed one deputy for each 5,000 of population.

Senator L. O. Cook of Kellogg introduced a bill which creates an executive council of the governor, auditor, state treasurer, secretary of state and attorney general. This council is empowered to fill vacancies in state offices in event of vacancies caused by death or withdrawals. It seems to be an open secret that this is a republican plan to prevent the governor from appointing a democratic state auditor in event of Samuel G. Iverson, present state auditor, being appointed to a membership on the state tax commission.

R. J. Wells introduced a bill in the house today to establish a special annual state tax on water powers of 25 cents per horse power. N. J. Holmberg presented a bill to appropriate $10,000 for the state livestock board, to be used in suppression of disease among livestock. E. E. Kling offered a bill to permit of appeals from county boards of equalization by the dissatisfied, to the state tax commission. R. L. Mork introduced a substitute for his former anti-pool room and bowling alley bill. The new bill prohibits boys under 18 years of age from entering these places and playing. The bill was considered at some length by the house in committee of the whole, and recommended for passage.

This afternoon the house tax committee gave another hearing on the iron ore tonnage tax bills. H. H. Phelps of Duluth and C. A. Congden, member from Duluth, spoke against the tonnage tax system, claiming it to be unjust to establish a law that will put the taxes from the mines practically all in the state treasury, and further impoverish the St. Louis county range towns, which even now have a hard time to raise money to run their local governments.

Paxtine

TOILET ANTISEPTIC

—NOTHING LIKE IT FOR—

THE TEETH Paxtine excels any dentifrice in cleansing, whitening and removing tartar from the teeth, besides destroying all germs of decay and disease which ordinary tooth preparations cannot do.

THE MOUTH Paxtine used as a mouthwash disinfects the mouth and throat, purifies the breath, and kills the germs which collect in the mouth, causing sore throat, bad teeth, bad breath, grippe, and much sickness.

THE EYES when inflamed, tired, ache and burn, may be instantly relieved and strengthened by Paxtine.

CATARRH Paxtine will destroy the germs that cause catarrh, heal the inflammation and stop the discharge. It is a sure remedy for uterine catarrh.

Paxtine is a harmless yet powerful germicide, disinfectant and deodorizer. Used in bathing it destroys odors and leaves the body antiseptically clean.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. C. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30, 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

Senator A L Hanson has introduced a bill calling for the distribution to the various counties of the funds heretofore appropriated for road purposes, but which are held up under technicalties. —Norman County Index.

A House bill provides for an additional member of that body from the district comprising Isanti, Sherburne, Mille Lacs and Anoka counties. If a reapportionment bill cannot be passed some of the more glaring inequalities in representation could be equalized by bills of this kind and this senatorial district should be given tow mere members; so that Red Lake Clearwater and Mahnomen counties could have representatives.—Norman County Index.

It seems that W. A. Swanson, of Deer Park township has dug into the bridge question w thont taking time to look the matter up to see where be is at. However he has only one man besides himself in the whole township that looks at this matter throu such a narrow pair of specticals that they would try to oppose an effort being made by the people liveing in eastern Red Lake county to get an appropriation from the state of Minnesota to build this badly needed bridge There is not one of these five per cent fellows, that want this bridge one mile farther east than the ninty five per cent want it, have contributed a dollar or made any effort toward getting any bridge across Red Lake River, at any point in eastern Red Lake county, until after the location was picked out and the premission granted to build by the government, then the five per cent held a cracker box meeting to kick, because the 95 per cent had not located the bridge just where the 5 per cent wanted it. Then Vrolson drew up some kind of a paper and paid Polema $2.00 in store pay, to circulate it, as a petition to build a bridge across the Red Lake river at Highlanding, well knowing that there had been no permission granted by the government to build any bridge across this river at any place east of Thief River Falls, except at the present location, and that his petition was really a remonstance against any bridge being built at all for a number of years. Mr. Swanson, the lone man from the town of Deer Park then thought he see an opp otunity to make himself famous and jumped into print with an article, disclosing such ignorance of the true situ atin, that if we had a boy 10 years old that didn't have any more brains than to write such an article, we would send him to an asylum for the feeble minded, However we are going to continue the fight to try to get this first bridge across the Red Lake River in the eastern part of the county, and have put about sixty dollars of our good hard earned money into it, and if we fail the township of Kratka will undoubtly be the next ones to make application to the governmen to get permission to build, go into the legislature united and get the money to build, and when we Highlanding people want to go across the river on a bridge we can go down to Kratka, and cross. If you think at this time that these are pet [illegible] not think so [illegible] force.

Pet Boars.

The nicest pet the French forest affords is the marcassin, or baby wild boar. It is almost human in its cleverness, delights in funny pranks, has an evident sense of humor, makes friends of children and dogs and even lends itself to mimic hunts, playing the part of the hunted animal. Its antics are varied and original. The only creature to which the marcassin objects is its distant relative, the pig. Directly it sees that animal its back is up and its growing tusk is bared. In babyhood it has a lovely sleek coat of very dark brown and tan. When the silky hair is shed and bristles take its place the temper grows uneven. If marital and paternal cares come on, the wild boar puts away its childish ways and wants to take its family to the forest to feed there on acorns and beech mast. Woe to the hound or to the keeper who wants to keep him back. In the forest this paterfamilias may be called the first line of defense, the sow the second, and the little ones gambol round her.—Paris Cor. London Truth

Siberian Convicts.

Some interesting phases of Siberian life are described in Samuel Turner's book on that country. Of the exiles he writes: "When I told a Siberian friend that I carried a revolver as a protection against wolves I was promptly informed that I had much more reason to fear the human wolves I might encounter, and this, I found, was a general view of the case. About one-third of the criminal exiles escape all control. Armed with a stick. to which is attached a strong piece of cord or catgut, they will approach the unwary traveler from behind, throw the cord round his neck and quietly strangle him by twisting the stick, to rob him at their leisure of whatever he may possess or secure his passport in order to make their escape from the country."

A Word For Nero.

"Nero fiddled while Rome burned!" exclaimed the student.

"Well," replied Mr. Growcher, "that's better than the custom many violinists have of practicing at a time when everything is nice and quiet otherwise." —Washington Star.

The Compromise.

"My bride wanted to go on a week's wedding tour, and I wanted to stay at home. Well, we compromised by going on a tour around the world!"—Meggendorfer Blaetter.

Advice to Young Men.

If the average young man would read the want ads. as closely as the baseball news he would find that he had as many "chances" as a first baseman.—Erie (Pa.) Times.

Consideration.

Duke McGluke—Why do you call your dog Feathers? Count Noaccount —Because I dislike to call him down.

Don't express a positive opinion unless you perfectly understand what you are talking about.

Carlyle Was a Terror.

The domestic infelicity of the Carlyles is common knowledge, but it is not inappropriate to give Mrs. Carlyle's view of her husband. "If he would only be satisfied!" she used to sometimes complain of Carlyle. "But I have had to learn that when he does not find fault he is pleased, and that has to content me."

On one occasion when Carlyle was away from home Mrs. Carlyle busied herself to get all in perfect order for her husband's arrival, and when all was complete—his dinner ready, his armchair in its usual position, his pipe and tobacco prepared, all looking as comfortable as possible—Mrs. C. sat down at last to rest and to expect him with a quiet mind. He arrived, and "after he had greeted me, what do you think he did? He walked to the window and shook it and asked, 'Where's the wedge of the window?' And until we had found that blessed wedge nothing would content him. He said the window would rattle and spoil all."

Not Fickle.

Mrs. Lakeside—Is she fickle?

Mrs. La Salle—It seems not. She has been married to the same man three times in succession.—Philadelphia Ledger.

It Is Odd.

Gyer—Isn't it queer that the bump of benevolence is located exactly at the top of a man's head? Myer—What's queer about it? Gyer—Why, it's as far from the pocketbook as possible.—Chicago News.

Ringing In the Ears.

"Ringing" in the ears is a most peculiar condition. It is interesting to learn that, though the brain so distinctly receives an impression of sound, there is really no sound at all. The sensation is produced by derangement of the nerves of the ear, caused by poor circulation or such pressure and interference as come from hardened, excessive wax, boils, etc. Some one oddly remarked that when the ears were ringing they were "insane." Truly, they carry wrong impressions to the brain. They record things that do not happen.

Child Love.

Welcome to the parents the puny struggler, strong in his weakness, his little arms more irresistible than the soldier's, his lips touched with persuasion which Chatham and Pericles in manhood had not. His unaffected lamentations when he lifts up his voice on high, or, more beautiful, the sobbing child, the face all liquid grief, as he tries to swallow his vexation, soften all hearts to pity and to mirthful and clamorous compassion.—Emerson,

She Was a Bit Bashful.

Mr. Peet, a very diffident man, was unable to prevent himself being introduced one evening to a fascinating young lady, who, misunderstanding his name, constantly addressed him as Mr Peters, much to the gentleman's distress. Finally summoning up the courage, he earnestly remonstrated: "Oh don't call me Peters. Call me Peet!"

"Ah, but I don't know you well enough, Mr. Peters," said the young lady, blushing, as she withdrew behind her fan.—London Telegraph.

Not Daunted.

"You will understand, sir," Dr. Price-Price began, "that I cannot undertake to cure your case without a diagnosis."

"That's all right," interrupted Nuritch haughtily. "I s'pose that's the medical word for 'fee in advance.' Name yer figger!"—Philadelphia Press.

Sizing Him Up.

"How much money really has he?"

"I don't know. What is his attitude toward the law?"

"What do you mean?"

"Does he evade, defy or ignore it?"—Washington Herald.

Spectator-- We learn that an epidemic of typhoid fever has broken out in the township of Louisville, south of Wylie and in nearly all of thecases the parties have been using Red Lake river water. The water in the river is evidently full of typhoid germs and anyone is assuming a great risk in drinking the water.

The [illegible] social and ball, at the Kratka hall on Saturdry evening last was one of the largest attended and best social eventst of the season. The party was gotten up by Miss Agnes Kelly, teacher, and Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Johnson, clerk of School District No. 84 for the bennefit of thesir school, and the neat little sum of $34.00 was taken in, which will be turned over to the school District. There was quite a number of young people drove out from Thief River Falls to attend the ball, and they all took an active interest in helping keep the ball room floor warm. First class music was furnished by the Kolski string band of Deer Park, assisted by Richard White, of Thief River Falls, who proved himself to be the right man, in the right place.

NOT ALL OF THEM BAD.

Be it said to the overlasting credit of Andrew Ellingson, the Highlanding merchant, that he refused to sign his name to a petition to Congressman Steenerson to chang the present bridge site to a point one mile father east, bucause it containd the statement, that the section line between sections 28 and 29 had been traveled for a period of four years, which statement Mr. Ellingson knew was not true, so refused to sign it although the proposed change would bring the bridge along side of his store, and yet two supervisors and one town clerk certified to Congressman Steenerson, that this line had been traveld for four years. Now you men that know this line, we want to ask you what your opinion is of township officials that would do a trick like that?

Fatal Accident.

Gasstin Gjerginson, a farmer liveing three miles south of Lillo was instantly killed by having a load of feed tipped over on him on his way home from Plummer on Wednesday evening. It appears that he had on a big load of feed and that on the high grade three miles west of Garnes the sleighs sloughed off from the grade and turned bottom side up, catching Mr. Gjerngeson under it. The horses then ran to Garnes with the front bob sleigh and were caught by the store keeper, and driven back the place of the accident by him, where he found Mr. Gjergenson under his load of feed dead. The deceased leaves a wife and seven children in mcrderate circumstances to mourn his loss.

HOW WE ARE FORMED.

A Few of the Many Marvels of the Human Body.

On an average man's body there are 840,000 hairs. Plucking one every second it would take him twelve eight hour working days to pull them all out In his blood there are 25,000,000,000,000 red corpuscles. Laid out side by side they would cover a surface of 3,150 square yards.

The whole of the blood passes through a man's heart nearly twice in every minute. It weighs one-thirteenth of the entire body weight, and it moves in different parts of the body at speeds varying from ten feet to 1,666 yards (nearly one mile) an hour.

The fat of your body is fluid. It becomes solid only when the body cools after death. It is one of your most useful constituents, forming a nonconducting sheath to protect you from cold, acting as pads to preserve from shock, on the tips of the fingers, the toes and the heels and lying always ready as a reserve food supply when you can get nothing to eat.

A little artery passes from your brain through the skull into the scalp, which acts as a safety valve when the brain is congested with blood.

The skin cannot grow again once it is destroyed: hence the unsightly scars left by burns and severe wounds. Only the surface layer can renew itself. When the whole thickness is destroyed, it never reforms. This is the more curious as muscles, nerves, blood vessels and bones, all less liable to injury than the skin, can grow again.

You are really a water rather than a land animal. Although as a whole you live on dry land, your body consists of countless millions of separate living particles, and these are all immersed in the water which constitutes four-fifths of your substance.

Within the inner part of your ear, deep in the bone, is a quantity of fluid which acts as a spirit level and enables you to keep your balance.--Chicago Record-Herald.

The Crab in the Oyster.

"The little crab found in the oyster," said a dealer, "is not, as supposed by two-thirds of the oyster eaters, the young of the blue crab, but is a distinct species. It is a messmate of and caterer to the wants of the oyster, being, therefore, a benefit instead of a detriment to the latter. In return for the oyster's kindness in protecting it against its enemies the little crab catches and crushes food which in its entire state could not be taken by the oyster. A singular thing in connection with them is that all found inside of the oyster are females. The male of the same variety has a hard shell."

GROWTH OF CARICATURE.

John Law's Wild Schemes Gave It a Tremendous Impetus.

Caricature is nowadays one of the principal methods of criticism. No movement can overreach the mark without eliciting dozens of works of art from caricaturists all over this and all other countries.

This branch of criticism and attack dates far back, but the greatest impulse it ever felt came from the age of tremendous speculation, when, in 1710 and 1730, John Law was manipulating things financial in France. Never before had the financial world been so carried off its feet as it was at that time. Members of the nobility were waiting for a chance to purchase shares in Law's schemes. Duchesses, and ladies of high renown, tried their most persuasive charms on Law in the attempt to get hold of shares. Men hired out their backs for writing desks, so great was the press of business in making contracts, and one hunchback is reputed to have made 100,000 francs in this way in a few weeks. The French went veritably mad over the schemes to become wealthy. Naturally the papers of the time, especially those of Holland, caricatured the state of affairs. There were pictures of all sorts caricaturing Law, the nobility, the schemes and everything connected with them.

It was this tremendous amount of pictorial work that first directed the energies of William Hogarth in London in this direction. Caricaturing began to be used more and more in the political field, and soon afterward it caused the shelving of Robert Walpole from the English ministry Ever since then has caricaturing been one of the bitterest and most effectual methods of checking public men and their schemes.

Another Knock.

"Hotel clerks are cold hearted," sighed the shabby tragedian, who was traveling with a toothbrush and a compass.

"Speaking from experience, pal?" asked his barnstorming chum.

"Sure! I approached the clerk of the Red Dog Inn and told him actors deserved special terms."

"Ah, indeed! And what did he say?"

"He said yes, they deserved six month terms in the county work house."—Chicago News.

Not Grasping.

"What a grasping fellow you are, Hawkins! You've bothered me about this bill fifty times in ten days."

"You wrong me, Jarley. I'm not grasping. I've bothered you about the bill, I admit, but I haven't been able to grasp anything yet."

Where there is emulation there will be vanity; where there is vanity there will be folly.—Johnson.

AN ESCAPE VIA THE GRAVE

By GEORGE T. PARDY

Did Justice Go Wrong in the Case of Luke Phipps?

Tale of a Long Search, the Disappearance of a Criminal and the Hanging of Man by Essex County Authorities—An Achievement of That Master Sleuth, John Wilson Murray.

IN March, 1884, a man by the name of Luke Phipps was the proprietor of a billiard room in Detroit, Mich. Phipps was about 34 years of age, of fair complexion, with brown hair and a sandy mustache. His family consisted of his wife and two children, a boy and a girl. Mrs. Phipps was a pretty little woman, apparently very fond of her husband.

But fate decreed that the serpent of jealousy should creep into this Eden of domestic bliss. Mrs. Phipps, without the knowledge of her husband, had been in the habit of making secret trips across the river to Windsor, and it chanced that Luke Phipps received information of this fact. Passionately devoted to his wife, this discovery filled him with madness. He watched her carefully and shadowed her movements. One fateful night she left her home and boarded the ferry boat for Windsor. Close on her heels followed the infuriated husband, armed, and under the influence of strong liquor in which he had been indulging freely since he had been informed of his wife's supposed unfaithfulness.

Not until the boat was well out in the river and approaching the Canadian shore did Phipps reveal himself to the woman. Angry words passed between them, the husband accusing the wife of infidelity. Mrs Phipps replied harshly and the words had scarcely left her lips when the man drew a revolver and fired point blank at her. The bullet sped true to the mark and Mrs. Phipps fell to the deck dead. The murder was witnessed by a score of passengers and Phipps was instantly seized. He made no resistance but meekly gave up the weapon with which the deed was committed, and when the boat landed at Windsor was taken in charge by the Canadian authorities. He was taken at once to Sandwich jail, three miles from Windsor, and committed for trial.

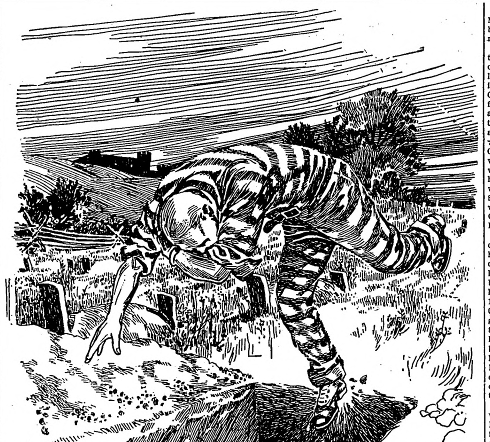
Into this ill-omened place of confinement came Phipps sobered by the realization of the awful tragedy of which he had been the author. The future looked black indeed, for Canadian justice frowns grimly upon the destroyer of human life no matter what her or his provocation may have been, and the gloomy shadow of the gallows loomed threateningly before him. Among the inmates of Sandwich jail was one "Bucky" Greenfield, a professional thief, who like Phipps was awaiting trial, but on a far less serious charge. To this man Phipps was assigned as cell-mate; and glad to find someone in whom he could confide, the wife-slayer told him the story.

As a result of this conference a mysterious female shortly afterwards paid a visit to Greenfield and for ten days following her call Bucky kept close in his cell. During this interval Luke Phipps became seized with a mania for music. He whistled and sang continually in a loud voice for hours at a time. None of the warders offered any objection. Life in Sandwich jail was a monotonous existence at the best, and if a prisoner found comfort in the sound if his own voice they saw no particular reason for silencing him.

The truth of the matter was that Phipps had resorted to the performance of these nocturnal concerts for the purpose of stifling the sounds of Greenfield's labors in the cell.

At last the persistent gnawing of the file conquered the stubborn resistance of the steel bars. They were cut through and the way of escape lay open before the prisoners. In the dead of night the two men slipped out into the darkness. Greenfield got through the narrow opening with little difficulty, but Phipps when half way through stuck fast. His comrade tarried for a few moments making desperate efforts to extricate him, but Phipps remained immovable, as though gripped in a vice. Self preservation being the first law of nature, Bucky Greenfield resolved to obey its dictates, and seized with sudden panic fled swiftly into the night.

Despair seized the heart of Phipps in its icy clutch when his comrade deserted him. A few seconds passed, and he still lay in the narrow opening panting from his exertions. Then a wild fury filled his veins. He struggled savagely, desperately, and finally tore himself loose with a wrench so powerful that the momentum hurled him over the wall, and he fell heavily to the ground below. There he lay for some time, severely bruised and only half conscious. He was aroused by hearing voices in the jail, and staggering to his feet dragged himself away in search of a hiding place.



FELL HEAD FOREMOST INTO A NEWLY DUG GRAVE.

He came to a graveyard, and as he crawled along in the darkness, fell head foremost into a newly dug grave.

Silent he lay without moving, with fast-closed eyes and rigid body. He heard a creaking and bumping and faintly, as though far away, he heard the harsh rattle of earth falling on the casket. Yet no weight seemed to press upon him, but this did not surprise him, for he was long past the stage of astonishment. It was the end, and nothing mattered now. He heard the rumble of wheels as the carriages departed and the footsteps of the mourners died away.

His awakening came suddenly, accompanied by a cold thrill of horror, as his eyes opened upon the utter darkness. He tried to move, but his entire frame seemed to be paralyzed. With a rush of recollection there crossed his mind the memory of the burial, the prayer and singing. He moved his head feebly and through the hay caught sight of the twinkling stars. Slowly and with great pain he managed to rise to a sitting posture. Where was the coffin, where the six feet of earth underneath which it lay? He staggered to his feet and saw that the grave he occupied was empty. His brain whirled madly in a maze of torturing conjectures. What did it all mean? He tried to clamber out, but fell back exhausted. He lay back on the hay, rested and tried again. It was the work of an hour for him to drag his feeble limbs over the edge of the pit, but at last he succeeded. Then the mystery was solved. Close beside the open grave from which he had emerged a new-made mound stood darkly in the moonlight. The burial had indeed taken place, but in the grave adjoining that in which he lay.

The escaped murderer stood up and laughed hysterically as he looked around and saw the distant outlines of Sandwich jail looming black and gigantic in the moonlight. Rallying his failing strength he staggered away from the grave that had been his place of refuge. On the new-made mound stood a vase of flowers, and bending down weakly, he plucked one and tossed it into the empty grave.

Then painfully he turned and crept out of the cemetery, across the road, through the fields, traveling like an injured dog, limping on all fours.

His progress was very slow. His destination was the river, which he reached an hour after midnight, and where he found an old boat, half full of water. He discovered a piece of board, crawled into the boat, shoved off and began to paddle. When dawn was breaking he reached the American shore, below Detroit, nine miles down stream, wet to the skin, wounded, blood-stained and faint. But he knew the country round about and made his way into the city to the home of a friend, knocked and was taken in, clothed and fed. When his wounds were healed and his strength returned, he left Detroit resolved to enter upon a new life.

But the Canadian authorities were not disposed to tamely relinquish the possession of a prisoner who had broken their laws and set them at defiance. Orders were issued to capture Phipps, wherever he might be, and the task of hunting him down was assigned to Detective John Wilson Murray.

He sent out a description of Phipps to police headquarters all over the continent. The fugitive was a billiard-room keeper and Murray calculated that it would be simply a question of time until his money gave out and he would be obliged to look for a job in a billiard room. Every man to his trade is a maxim that also holds good in the case of a fugitive from justice, and the detective's surmise proved correct. Phipps was located in Pullman, Ill., where he had obtained a position in a billiard room. Murray prepared extradition papers, went to Illinois and took Phipps from Pullman to Chicago.

In the latter city the fugitive employed Jesse Ball, an able lawyer, and made a hard fight against extradition. His counsel endeavored to show that the shooting was done in American waters, and there is no hanging in Michigan. If the crime had been committed in American waters, Phipps would have been tried in Michigan, and if convicted, he would not have been hanged. Murray proved by the captain of the boat and a number of its passengers that the shooting was done in Canada waters, on the Canada side of the river. The legal fight lasted a couple of days, both sides calling witnesses, and Phipps lost. An appeal was taken and a writ of habeas corpus issued, but the proceeding was dismissed and Murray and his prisoner started for Canada.

At Ann Arbor two newspaper men, after going through the car, stopped in front of Phipps and asked him in a whisper as they pointed towards a well-known Detroit minister, who was slumbering in a nearby seat, "Is that Phipps, the murderer?"

Phipps merely smiled in reply, but it was evident that the title of murderer used in conjunction with his name made him flinch considerably, and Murray was about to explain the situation to the reporters when the train started and the two seekers for information left the car hurriedly. The news of Phipps' coming had gone before him and when the train reached Detroit there were nearly two hundred of his former friends waiting at the station to see him. The reception they gave the prisoner testified strongly to the high tide of popularity in his home town and Murray felt still more favorably inclined toward the man whom duty compelled him to hand over to the grim mercies of Canadian law.

"I'll see you fellows at the Michigan exchange," called out Phipps to his friends as he followed Murray into a cab that Chief Bains of Windsor had waiting for them. "I'd like to take a farewell drink there," added the prisoner to Murray, and the latter nodded assent and ordered the cabman to drive to the barroom in question. Phipps' friends gathered there in full force and crowded around him, shaking hands and giving vent to loud expressions of sympathy. Finally Murray delivered himself of a short speech to the crowd that was trenchant and very much to the point.

"It's all very well to be sorry, boys," said the detective bluntly, "but Phipps needs something more than that. What he wants is money for his defense and I'm ready to start a collection right now." Murray backed up his statement by making a handsome donation and the crowd, growing enthusiastic over the idea, followed suit, with the result that a comfortably large sum was soon subscribed and given to the prisoner. That done Murray asked him if there was any other place in Detroit he wanted to visit before crossing the river.

"I'd like to drive past my old home on Jefferson street," said the prisoner, wistfully.

Many times in after life the detective was glad that he acceded to this last request of his unfortunate prisoner. The cab drove along Jefferson street and Phipps gazed with soul-hungry eyes upon the house wherein he had once lived so happily. He watched it out of the cab window and then from the window in the back until it had faded from his view.

"I'm ready to go now," he said, and Murray took him across the river and back to the jail from which he had made such a daring escape.

There were several circumstances that weighed heavily against Phipps' chances of escaping death on the gallows. In the first place his jail-breaking exploit in company with Bucky Greenfield was against him. Greenfield got away safely to Mexico, and as there was no extradition treaty between Canada and the former country at that time covering his offense, he was never brought back. Doubtless Greenfield meant well by his cell-mate when he planned their escape, but it would have been far better for Phipps had he not broken jail. Then there was the episode of Billy Callaghan in Sandwich jail which had much to do with influencing public opinion in the County of Essex at the time of the Phipps trial.

Callaghan belonged to Detroit. He came of a respectable family, and in his younger days was a dry goods clerk, but became a professional burglar and desperate crook. He and a burglar named Kennedy were being held in Sandwich jail and on March 16 they made a dash for liberty. George O'Callghan Leech, the old governor of the jail, tried to intercept the escaping prisoners, and Billy Callaghan drew a revolver which had been smuggled into his cell, shot and killed the governor and escaped with Kennedy. Callaghan got safely away out of the country but Kennedy was caught and sent to Kingston penitentiary for seven years.

While there Kennedy became pals with another convict named Blinky Morgan who was serving five years for manslaughter. Shortly after becoming acquainted the pair broke out of Kingston penitentiary. Morgan was traced to Reno, Ohio, by a detective named Hoolihan and in the fight that occurred when they met the officer was killed. Morgan escaped after slaying Hoolihan but was run down in Alpena, Mich., where he shot the sheriff and wounded another man. He was captured, taken to Cleveland and hanged. Kennedy got away.

In the meantime Callaghan, after killing Gov. Leech of Sandwich jail, had disappeared completely. Murray sent out circulars offering a reward for his arrest and finally received a telegram from the police of Hannibal, Mo., which read:

"Come at once. Callaghan in jail, acknowledges identity."

Murray wired back: "Will come, but I do not believe it is Callaghan. He would not acknowledge identity."

He prepared the necessary extradition papers and went to Hannibal, taking with him Turnkey Smith of Sandwich jail, who knew Callaghan well. Arriving at their destination they were informed by the police that two crooks, known as Joe Rice and John Carr, had burglarized Banker Patterson's house in Barry, Ill., making him get out of bed, open up his safe and turn over the contents, besides taking his gold-mounted revolver. They had been caught in Hannibal and Rice had the stolen revolver. On the way to the jail Rice whispered with Carr, and in the jail he had said to a fellow prisoner:

"I wonder if these cops know who I am? They offer a reward for me in Canada." The prisoner reported the conversation, Rice was questioned and confessed he was Bill Callaghan. Then Murray was sent for.

The detective was shown to the cell occupied by the supposed Callaghan. It was a gloomy hole, but even in the semi-darkness a single glance at the inmate convinced Murray that he was not the murderer of the Sandwich jail governor. Turnkey Smith also shared his opinion. The prisoner was ordered to step into a better light and Murray looked at him closely.

"No," said the detective, "he is not Callaghan. This is Jim Leavitt of New York. Jim, I have seen you at Billy Brown's in Bleecker street, and at 'The' Allen's."

The prisoner laughed, and admitted that Murray's statement was correct. Murray returned to Toronto without Callaghan whom he next heard of in Mexico. It was later reported that Callaghan was drowned in South America, but however that may have been, he was never captured.

Between Greenfield and Callaghan the fate of Luke Phipps was sealed. The murder of Gov. O'Callaghan Leech enraged the people of Essex county, and when Phipps, who had escaped from the same jail, came up for trial some months after the Leech killing, public opinion was against him. He was found guilty of murder, hanged in Sandwich jail in November, 1884, and buried near the grave where he had once sought refuge and lay hidden from the eyes of his hunters for the space of a night and a day.

NEW STRENGTH FOR WOMEN'S BACKS.

How to Make a Bad Back Better.

Women who suffer with backache, bearing down pain, dizzy spells, and that constant feeling of dullness and tiredness, will find hope in the advice of Mrs. Mary Hinson of 21 Strother St., Mt. Sterling, Ky. "Had I not used Doan's Kidney Pills I believe I would not be living to-day," says Mrs. Hinson. "My eyesight was poor, I suffered with nervous, splitting headaches, spots would dance before my eyes, and at times I would be so dizzy I would have to grasp something for support. My back was so weak and painful I could hardly bend over to button my shoes and could not get around without suffering severely. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me from the first, and I continued until practically well again."

The Penny Saved.

The Penny Saved was put in the bank, the old broken teapot having gone out of style. Here it presently overheard two voices talking.

"I want to borrow $50,000,000 to finance a candle trust!" said one voice.

"Glad to accommodate you!" said the other.

And the next the Penny Saved knew, it was going out into the channels of trade.

When the man to whom it belonged fell into sore need (he was a candlemaker and the trust crushed him out) and came to the bank for his money, he was courteously informed that the institution had passed into the hands of a receiver and recommended to call again in a year or two and get his share of the assets, should there prove to be any.—Puck.

Tenderness.

It was in the hotel of a western mining town that the New England guest, registering in the office, heard a succession of youd yells.

"What in the world is that—a murder going on upstairs?" he demanded.

"No," said the clerk, as he slammed the book and lounged toward the stairs. "It is the spring bed up in No. 5. That tenderfoot up there don't get the hang of it, and every few days he gets one o' the spiral springs screwed into him like a shirt stud. I guess I'll have to go up, if there ain't anything more I can do for you for a few minutes."—Youth's Companion.

Distinction Without Difference.

While holding a term of court at Augusta once, Judge Walton sentenced a man to seven years in prison for a grave crime. The respondent's counsel asked for a mitigation of the sentence on the ground that the prisoner's health was very poor. "Your honor," said he, "I am satisfied that my client cannot live out half that term, and I beg of you to change the sentence." "Well, under those circumstances," said the judge, "I will change the sentence. I will make it for life instead of seven years."

Got the Letters Mixed.

A young American, who is particular about his washing, the other day wrote a note to his laundress and one to his sweetheart, and, by a strange fatality, put the wrong address on each envelope and sent them off. The washwoman was delighted at an invitation to take a ride the next day, but when the young lady read, "If you tumble up my shirt bosom any more as you did the last time, I will go somewhere else," she cried all the evening and declared she would never speak to him again.

Thoughtful Child.

They are considerate youngsters in England, as most people know. A little boy whose grandmother had just died wrote the following letter, which he duly posted: "Dear Angels: We have sent you grandma. Please give her a harp to play, as she is short-winded and can't blow a trumpet."—London Tit-Bits.

PRIZE FOOD

Palatable, Economical, Nourishing.

A Nebr. woman has outlined the prize food in a few words, and that from personal experience. She writes:

"After our long experience with Grape-Nuts, I cannot say enough in its favor. We have used this food almost continually for seven years.

"We sometimes tried other advertised breakfast foods but we invariably returned to Grape-Nuts as the most palatable, economical and nourishing of all.

"When I quit tea and coffee and began to use Postum and Grape-Nuts I was a nervous wreck. I was so irritable I could not sleep nights, had no interest in life.

"After using Grape-Nuts a short time I began to improve and all these ailments have disappeared and now I am a well woman. My two children have been almost raised on Grape-Nuts, which they eat three times a day.

"They are pictures of health and have never had the least symptom of stomach trouble, even through the most severe siege of whooping cough they could retain Grape-Nuts when all else failed.

"Grape-Nuts food has saved doctor bills, and has been, therefore, a most economical food for us."

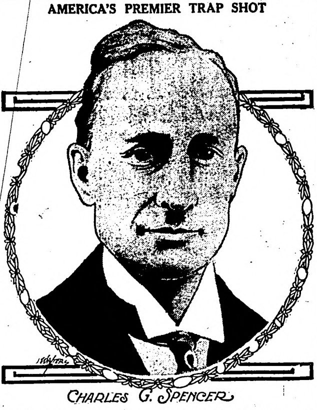
AMERICA'S PREMIER TRAP SHOT



This St. Louis man heads the list of American Trap Shooters, according to the official averages for the year 1908 recently given out by the secretary of the Interstate Association for the Encouragement of Trap Shooting.

NEW BLOOD TO BE SEEN IN NATIONAL CUE TOURNAMENT

Many Good Players Listed to Fill Vacancies Made by Demarest and Others.

There is likely to be some new blood in the coming amateur championship tournament under the auspices of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players at New York. At least two of the players who took part in the championship last year will not compete this year—Calvin Demarest, who is now a professional, and J. F. Poggenburg, whose wife died recently and who has retired from competition for a while. It is doubtful, too, whether E. W. Gardner plays this year, and Wright of San Francisco is not sure of entering.

There are plenty of amateurs of class, however, to make up a good field. Eligibles for this tournament, players whom the tournament committee would regard as equal to a grand average of 7 at 18:2—this will be the first year for 18:2 in the national amateur tournament, though it was the style of play in the last international tournament—are Dr. L. L. Mial, Arthur Townsend, Charles B. Norris, Byron Stark, Wilson Foss, Martin Mullin, Messrs. Rolls, Mayer Morton and Dr. Uffenheimer, of Philadelphia, Messrs. Brown and Whitehead of New York, Dreher of Cleveland and Jackson, Bingham and Conklin of Chicago. All these will not enter, but there will be enough probably to give sufficient length to the entry list.

The N. A. A. B. P. championship has been won by the following players: 1901, Townsend; 1902, Gardner; 1903, Foss; 1904, Poggenburg; 1905, Conklin; 1906, Gardner; 1907 and 1908, Demarest.

Demarest's two victories gave him the trophy for keeps, and a new one will be played for this year. The N. A. A. B. P. has decided that outside of the trophy the regular prizes shall not cost over $100 apiece this year. There will be the usual special prizes for high runs and best averages. The place for the tournament has not been decided, but should it be held at the Liederkranz club at Brooklyn again no admission will be charged. Admission would be by invitation only.

A French amateur championship tournament is to be held in Paris soon, and efforts have ben made to induce several of the American players to enter. None is likely to be over, however. One of those who was invited was J. F. Poggenburg, but he wrote to the Count de Dree that he would not be able to go.

Plans are already being discussed for another international tournament in 1910, and it is expected that one will be held either in New York or Paris.

Chicago Track Dates.

Track athletics are booming at the University of Chicago. Coach A. A. Stagg has announced the schedule for the outdoor season and the dates show what promises to be a third series of competitions. A team will be sent to the Pennsylvania relay carnival, a fact which necessitates the men getting out early and rounding rapidly into condition. The schedule is as follows: April 17, Pennsylvania relay meets tryouts; April 24, Pennsylvania relay meet; May 8, Wisconsin at Madison; May 15, Illinois at Chicago; May 22, Purdue at Chicago; May 29, open; June 5, conference meet at Chicago (not official); June 12, University of Chicago interscholastic meet.

Latham to Coach for Giants.

Old Arlie Latham, the most entertaining coacher baseball ever knew, bobs up again as an active diamond participant. He has been signed by John McGraw, not to play with the New York Giants, but to be one of them on the coaching lines. He is expected to stir up things considerably in the coaching department. Of late years Latham has been umpiring.

WANTS CLEARING HOUSE FOR BASEBALL PLAYERS

President Dovey of Boston Nationals Has Plan to Help the "Poor" Clubs.

President Dovey of the Boston Nationals has a plan for a national clearing house for baseball players which he will put up to the national commission and the major leagues. In addition to this he will press a resolution limiting the number of players to be held by any one club in either league to 18 players after May 15 of each year.

Dovey's clearing house scheme is devised to do away with the exorbitant prices paid by some of the clubs for players and to put all clubs, regardless of their money, on an equal basis. He will ask the national commission as formed at present, to be the clearing house.

According to Dovey's scheme every club in both leagues by May 15 must reduce its staff to 18 players. All players who are released, whether new players or drafted from minor leagues, are to be sent to this clearing house.

The clearing house will fix a price on each player and this list of players with their prices is then to be submitted to the clubs in both leagues, beginning with the clubs of lowest standing. After they have had their pick the list goes to the better clubs. In this way the poorer clubs, with no money, will have a chance to build themselves up, as no player can go back to the minor leagues or be purchased by a club of higher standing until the lower club has waived on him at the listed price. Dovey thinks the national commission will hearken to the scheme.

"The club that won the pennant," said Mr. Dovey, "with many of its players at the top of form, even if they did go bad the following year, would have as good a chance as any other club to strengthen, even if it had to wait a season or so to do it. One year a club might be weak in pitchers, or another year weak in the infield. Under the clearing house conditions the weak clubs stand a chance which to-day doesn't exist. The clearing house for ball players is, in my opinion the salvation of organized baseball."

BASEBALL BRIEFS

Forrest Moore, one of the Cub recruits, has been appointed clerk in the Indiana legislature.

All the guesses on the lineup of the Pirates for the coming season put Alan Storke on third base.

John Hummell, the Brooklyn outfielder, is keeping in condition this winter by mountain climbing.

Outfielder Seymour is of opinion that he could pitch as well as in his early days if put to it.

President Pulliam's brother is president of the Oshkosh club of the Wisconsin-Illinois league.

Roger Bresnahan will be presented with a big loving cup the first time he comes to bat in New York next season.

Clark Griffith may try Mike Mitchell on first base if the California outfielder, Oakes, comes through all right.

Catcher George Echiel has accepted the New York club's terms, coupled with the statement that he is immensely pleased with his transfer to the Giants.

Len Stanley, brother of Joe Stanley, now a member of the Cubs, is to get a trial with the Boston Americans. The younger Stanley is a tall left-handed pitcher, and said to be a hummer.

Manager McGraw is rather sweet on the outlook for a good season from his Indian catcher, J—. Meyers, purchased from the St. Paul club. The Indian is said to be a good thrower and he batted .292 for 83 games in the American association last season. He was something of a run-getter with 45 tallies and he had 132 assists.

Professor Munyon has just issued a most beautiful, useful and complete Almanac; it contains not only all the scientific information concerning the moon's phases, in all the latitudes, but has illustrated articles on how to read character by phrenology, palmistry and birth month. It also tells all about card reading, birth stones and their meaning, and gives the interpretation of dreams. It teaches beauty culture, manicuring, gives weights and measures, and antidotes for poison. In fact, it is a Magazine Almanac, that not only gives valuable information, but will afford much amusement for every member of the family, especially for parties and evening entertainments. Farmers and people in the rural districts will find this Almanac almost invaluable.

It will be sent to anyone absolutely free on application to the MUNYON REMEDY COMPANY, PHILADELPHIA.

Early Morning Poems.

"Why, Hiram," began Mrs. Dusenbery, glancing up from her favorite newspaper at her husband on the opposite side of the table, "did you ever hear of such a thing? Here is a piece about a man who writes four magazine poems every morning before breakfast. Must be quite a strain on him to do all that writing on an empty stomach. Don't you think so, Hiram?"

"Well, I dunno about that," responded Hiram dryly. "I reckon a man wouldn't have such a terrible strain on him writin' the sort of magazine pomes we run across now'days with his stomach an' head both empty!"

A Republican Reliance.

Three-year-old Norris is fond of the Twenty-third Psalm, sometimes repeating it instead of his regular evening prayer. Facts For Sick Women

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or secured so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Almost every woman you meet has either been benefited by it, or knows some one who has.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing over one million one hundred thousand letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved many women from surgical operations.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made exclusively from roots and herbs, and is perfectly harmless.

The reason why it is so successful is because it contains ingredients which act directly upon the female organism, restoring it to healthy and normal activity.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials such as the following prove the efficiency of this simple remedy.

Minneapolis, Minn.:—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women, I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. Within three months I was a perfectly well woman.

"I want this letter made public to show the benefits to be derived from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. John G. Moldan, 2115 Second St. North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

THE VALUE OF PERSONAL KNOWLEDGE

Personal knowledge is the winning factor in the culminating contests of this competitive age and when of ample character it places its fortunate possessor in the front ranks of

The Well Informed of the World.

A vast fund of personal knowledge is really essential to the achievement of the highest excellence in any field of human effort.

A Knowledge of Forms, Knowledge of Functions and Knowledge of Products are all of the utmost value and in questions of life and health when a true and wholesome remedy is desired it should be remembered that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., is an ethical product which has met with the approval of the most eminent physicians and gives universal satisfaction, because it is a remedy of Known Quality, Known Excellence and Known Component Parts and has won the valuable patronage of millions of the Well Informed of the world, who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual use that it is the first and best of family laxatives, for which no extravagant or unreasonable claims are made.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to worldwide acceptance as the most excellent family laxative. As its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well Informed of the world to be the best we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of—Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects, always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, whether you call for—Syrup of Figs—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna.

Uncle Sam's "Black Cabinet"

BY WALDON FAWCETT

PHOTOGRAPHS
COPYRIGHT 1909
BY WALDON FAWCETT

THE United States secret service, which is the bone of contention between the president and congress in a controversy that promises to become historic, is frequently denominated the "least known branch of our government." Whether the present agitation will dispel the mystery that has long existed is very doubtful. If a debate is precipitated there will doubtless be an airing of certain phases of secret service work but it is not to be expected that there will be any lifting of the veil as regards the means and methods of Uncle Sam's "black cabinet."

Owing to the stipulations made by congress in providing the last annual appropriation for the maintenance of the secret service—the self-same limitations under which President Roosevelt is now chafing—the operations of the secret service are at present restricted to what might be termed its original functions—namely the apprehending of counterfeiters and the protection of the person of the chief magistrate. Until congress called a halt, however, there was a gradual but continuous expansion of the activities of the nation's secret police until they bade fair to outdo their European brethren in the scope of their surveillance.

For instance, secret service operatives were "loaned" to the secretary of the interior and rendered the most important service in securing evidence in connection with the land fraud cases in the west. Other secret service men had a hand in exposing the sensational "cotton report leak" in the department of agriculture, and so the list might be prolonged to include practically all the executive departments of the government, not forgetting the part played by these cleverest of plain clothes men in investigating charges against naval officers.

THE ROGUES GALLERY

Because of the fact that its primary purpose and principal function at the outset was the trailing of counterfeiters the secret service was made a branch of the United States treasury department. In connection with their shadowing of suspected counterfeiters the secret service men have been enabled to gather much information of the greatest value regarding Black Hand organizations and the operations of anarchists. Yet other investigations along these lines have resulted from the responsibility of the secret service for the safety of the president, and thus without overstepping the bounds of the law of authorization, the secret service has been enabled to accomplish much in the field that is the chief concern of foreign secret police—namely, eternal vigilance as to the plans and ambitions of the plotters against the world's rulers. Until congress shut down upon it last year the treasury department also used the secret service to detect smuggling enterprises and other frauds upon the customs service and to investigate robberies and irregularities of all kinds—and there have recently been some notable ones—in branch mints, subtreasuries, assay offices, etc. One of President Roosevelt's most bitter complaints has been against the hampering of operations in these directions.

The headquarters of the secret service are in the treasury building at Washington. Here are the private offices of the chief of the service, Mr. John E. Wilkie, who receives a salary of $4,000 per year, and the assistant chief, William Herman Moran, who is paid $3,000 per year. There is a clerical division, employing some half a dozen men; and a large store room where confiscated counterfeiting outfits, spurious coin and other contraband seized by secret service men is deposited and allowed to accumulate until at intervals of about a year a committee is appointed to superintend the destruction of these unlawful articles. The equipment of the secret service headquarters embraces some interesting features including delicate scales for weighing coin whose genuineness is questioned and a "rogues' gallery," consisting of a monster file of photos of counterfeiters and other offenders against the law.

However, the secret service bureau at Washington is essentially a nerve center from which are directed the operations in the 25 districts into which the country is divided on the secret service map. In each of these districts a secret service operative is stationed just as a patrolman is on duty on his beat, but in addition to the men thus detailed to indicate geographical divisions there operate from the central office at Washington a number of trained detectives who may literally be sent to any place at any time. To this class belong the extra secret service men who reinforce the regular bodyguard of the president whenever the chief executive makes a tour of the country or participates in any great public function.

PLANNING A CAMPAIGN

It is this field service which makes it necessary for every secret service man to abandon all thought of fixed habitation with social and family ties. He may be ordered from New York to Texas or from the mountains of Tennessee to San Francisco at an hour's notice, and it is impossible to predict in advance how long he will remain at any given place. True to its name and policy the secret service aims to let the public know just as little as possible regarding its personnel. No secret service operative allows his photograph to be made, much less published, if he can help it, and he seldom acknowledges his vocation. At the headquarters of the secret service there is a rule against disclosing the name or address of any of the sleuths and in no government publication, not even in the "Blue Book," which is supposed to list every government employe, can there be found any roster of the secret service men or information as to the salaries paid them.

However, it may be stated that the pay is not high, considering the hardship and danger involved, and the secret service is likely to attract only men whose love of a life of adventure and excitement outweighs their desire for monetary reward. A new recruit in the secret service starts out as an assistant operative at $3 per day and, if he proves worthy, it promoted in due course to the rank of operative at $5 per day. As an operative his pay may increase to $7 per day but the secret service operative whose salary reaches the point just short of $50 per week must have proven his worth by long service and have the experience which can be gained in no other manner than by practical secret service work.

For all that the monetary rewards of a secret service career are by no means excessive, there is never any dearth of applicants for the limited number of positions in this confidential corps. Following any occasion such as the present, when the secret service is brought conspicuously to the attention of the public, Chief Wilkie receives applications by the score from young men in all parts of the country who are ambitious to shine as sleuths. A large majority of the aspirants naively confess that they have had no experience whatever which would fit them for this highly specialized field. Many of the inexperienced applicants are obviously impossible but even among those who are sufficiently promising to receive more than passing consideration the proportion of inexperienced is overwhelming. Indeed, of the 700 men whose names are now on the "waiting list" of eligibles at the secret service—that is men who have complied with the civil service regulations governing applications for places in the secret service—more than 600 admit that they are totally devoid of practical experience in this line.

JOHN. E. WILKIE
CHIEF OF
U.S. SECRET SERVICE.

With a profession which above all others needs devotees who can bring to it wide knowledge and thorough training, yet with most applicants sorely deficient in these qualifications, the question naturally suggests itself: Where does the secret service secure its agents? In reply it may be said that upward of a dozen different callings have demonstrated their value as fields of apprenticeship. Some of the most capable secret service operatives now on Uncle Sam's payroll have come from the claim departments of the great railroads. Others have gained their training with the mercantile agencies and still others have come from law offices where certain classes of detective work are frequently necessary. Two of the best men on the force were formerly heads of municipal police departments. Others served for years in legitimate private detective organizations or independent police departments maintained by the great railway systems. A certain proportion have had the benefit of preliminary service as United States deputy marshals and not a few have come to the secret service from the departments of public safety in foreign countries. These latter, by reason of their knowledge of foreign tongues and mannerisms, have been invaluable to the service.

As may be surmised, secret service duty is preeminently work for young men. The average age of the field operatives is under 35 years and some of the best men in the corps are under 30 years. Chief Wilkie, himself, who, by the way, was one of the bright young men whom Lyman Gage brought from Chicago when he was secretary of the treasury, is but 46 years of age, and was only 36 years old when he stepped into his present responsible position.

The portion of President Roosevelt's message which evoked the ire of congress is:

"Last year an amendment was incorporated in the measure providing for the secret service, which provided that there should be no detail from the secret service and no transfer therefrom. It is not too much to say that this amendment has been of benefit only, and could be of benefit only, to the criminal classes.

"The chief argument in favor of the provision was that the congressmen did not themselves wish to be investigated by secret service men. Very little of such investigation has been done in the past, but it is true that the work of the secret service agents was partly responsible for the indictment and conviction of a senator and a congressman for land frauds in Oregon.

CONTRABAND STORE ROOM

"I do not believe that it is in the public interest to protect criminals in any branch of the public service, and exactly as we have again and again during the past seven years prosecuted and convicted such criminals who were in the executive branch of the government, so in my belief we should be given ample means to prosecute them if found in the legislative branch.

"But if this is not considered desirable a special exception could be made in the law prohibiting the use of the secret service force in investigating members of the congress. It would be far better to do this than to do what actually was done, and strive to prevent or at least to hamper effective action against criminals by the executive branch of the government."

In a later message Mr. Roosevelt said: "A pending case illustrates the ramifications of interest with which the government has to deal:

"Charles T. Stewart of Council Bluffs, was indicted at Omaha for conspiracy to defraud the government of the title to public lands in McPherson county, Neb., also indicted for maintaining an unlawful inclosure of the public lands, and also under indictment for perjury in connection with final proof submitted by him on lands filed on by him as a homestead. In his final proof he swore that he and his family had resided on the lands in McPherson county (which are within his unlawful enclosure), when as a matter of fact his family has at all times resided in Council Bluffs, Ia. He is engaged in the wholesale grocery business, his store being located in Omaha, in the wholesale district there. He is reputed to be quite wealthy. Stewart's attorneys are Harl & Tinley of Council Bluffs, Ia., who are also the attorneys at that place for the Omaha and Council Bluffs Street Railway Company, in which company Harl holds considerable stock, Stewart being also a stockholder and possibly a director of the company. He is also represented in Omaha by W. J. Connell, one of the attorneys there for the same company. Stewart is also represented in his perjury case by 'Bill' Gurley of Omaha, Neb., who at one time was quite closely connected in a political way with the U. P. R. R. Company; Stewart is also closely associated with C. B. Hazleton, postmaster at Council Bluffs. Harl & Tinley and Hazleton are all members of the same lodge. Another close personal friend of Stewart's is Ed. Hart, alias 'Waterworks' Hart, president of the Council Bluffs Water Company, and interested in the street railway. Stewart's father was interested in, and practically owned and controlled, during his lifetime, a large ranch along the U. P. R. R. in Nebraska.

TESTING (WEIGHING) COUNTERFEIT COINS

"Concerning this case the United States attorney at Omaha states: 'There are three cases against Stewart; one for fencing, one conspiracy, one perjury, all good cases and chances of conviction good.' The amendment in question was of benefit to no one excepting to these criminals, and it seriously hampers the government in the detection of crime and the securing of justice."

WASHINGTON.—From government clerk to princess is the change made by Miss Georgie Jeffrey, formerly a clerk in the office of the auditor of the post office department.

She is now the wife of Prince Alfred Ahrenheim-Gagarin, adjutant to his imperial majesty, the czar. The wedding took place in Canton, China. The prince and princess are now traveling in the far east,

The romance which culminated in the marriage of the American girl and the Russian nobleman had its inception on an ocean steamer bound for the far east. Miss Jeffrey, who was regarded as one of the best clerks in the post office department, was transferred at her own request from that department to the Philippine service.

She left Washington early in October bound for Manila, but stopped in Denver to visit friends before leaving the country. While visiting in Denver she became acquainted with friends of her hostess who were also bound for the east and who had taken passage on the steamer which was to carry her to Manila. Miss Jeffrey learned that they were to make several side trips and so she obtained an extension of leave from the Philippines and decided to join the party of tourists.

Whether the prince was a member of this party or whether Miss Jeffrey met him after the ship passed through the Golden Gate has not been made known. At any rate, he was a passenger on the steamer, and the acquaintance which formed then resulted in a pretty little love affair. The prince continued with the party through their travels in China and Japan and the love story progressed in the most satisfactory way.

While in Hong Chow the party went for an outing. The funny little native rig in which Miss Jeffrey was riding collided with a carriage. Miss Jeffrey was thrown to the ground and injured painfully, but not seriously. It was not long after this that the marriage took place.

Secretary Satterlee's Zest for Duty

HERBERT LIVINGSTON SATTERLEE, son of the late Bishop Satterlee and son-in-law of J. Pierpont Morgan, recently appointed to succeed T. H. Newberry as assistant secretary of the navy, was one of the board of visitors at the Naval academy last June and entered into his duties with a zest and interest that was particularly pleasing to the academy staff. He insisted upon seeing everything there was to be seen, ate in the mess hall, went out in the launches and watched the drills. At last he decided that he must slep in a midshipman's bed; so he was assigned to a room on one of the decks.

Now at the very time the board of visitors was at the academy the West Point-Annapolis baseball game was on and the West Point team were to be given a rousing send-off when they took their departure, which was fixed for very early in the morning of the night that Mr. Satterlee played at being a midshipman and slept in Bancroft, or "Bankrupt," hall as the middies facetiously call it, apropos of their cronic penniless state. "All out" was called promptly and those who did not turn out quickly enough to suit the middy officers were unceremoniously dumped out on the floor, mattress and all. The officer of one of the decks rushing hurriedly around at the last moment to see that all had obeyed his summons came to a room whose occupant had not stirred, but with his head buried in the pillow was soundly sleeping. "Here, you, get up," called out Mr. Midshipman, and meeting with no response, said, "Oh, you wont, won't you?" With that he rushed toward the bed and taking hold of the mattress was about to jerk it down on the floor, when a sleepy voice said, "What's the matter?" and a sleepy face, wearing a full beard, emerged from the bed clothes. It was Mr. Satterlee of the honorable board of visitors who had been so unceremoniously aroused, and when this fact dawned upon the brain of the enterprising midshipman he beat a hasty retreat.

Capital Is Cordial to Little Countess

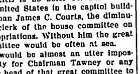
THE Countess Luise Alexandra von Bernstorff, only daughter of the German ambassador and Countess von Bernstorff, has found the national capital of her mother's native land much to her liking. Ever since the arrival in Washington of the kaiser's new representative and his family, they have been entertained constantly. To all affairs given for the younger set the "little countess," as she is frequently called, has been invited.

Countess Alexandra was born and educated abroad, and is making her first visit to this country. She speaks the language with only a slight accent, for her mother, who has lived in foreign countries ever since she was 15 years old, has never dropped the English tongue, but has spoken it to her daughter and son, the latter now a student in Germany.

A year ago the daughter of the Von Bernstorffs made her debut in society at Cairo, Egypt, where her father was his country's representative up to a few months ago. She feels as if she were making a second debut since coming to Washington, for she has taken part in all the affairs given for Miss Ethel Roosevelt, as well as in many of the official functions.

Since the dismantling of the German embassy by the Baroness von Sternburg, who recently sailed for Europe with her mother to spend the rest of the winter on the Riviera, the house has been placed in the hands of decorators and furnishers, and the ambassador and his family have been obliged to live at one of the hotels. The embassy is expected to be ready for occupancy in April.

House Committee Clerk Courts in Demand



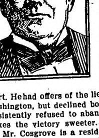
THERE is no abler servant of the United States in the capitol building than James C. Courts, the diminutive clerk of the house committee on appropriations. Without him the great committee would be often at sea.

It would be almost an utter impossibility for Chairman Tawney or any other head of that great committee to carry in his mind the vast details of the appropriation bills which it brings into the house, carrying amounts varying from a few to more than $100,000,000. Some member of the house wants to know about some item in every bill and frequently the whole house wants to know about a good many of them. Chairman Tawney can answer offhand as many questions as any other chairman who ever stood in his shoes, but it is Courts who, when he sits down, is almost hidden by the desk in front of him, but is the ready prompter when the chairman's memory fails. Between Tawney and Courts practically no time of the house is wasted in getting necessary information for all comers.

When congress recently voted $800,000 for the relief of the Italian earthquake victims, an unusual scene was enacted in the house. A misunderstanding had arisen between the president and congress as to the amount of the relief and the bill prepared by the house committee on appropriations did not fit with the president's message by $300,000. Courts was summoned by a general alarm and responded readily, pen in hand. A conference was held at the speaker's table lasting about two minutes, and those two minutes brought $300,000 more relief to the sufferers of Italy. Courts and his pen fixed the bill and Courts later rushed the bill to the engrossing committee and had it in the senate in record time.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

GOVERNOR OF WASHINGTON



Samuel G. Cosgrove, the new governor of the state of Washington, is a native of Ohio, having been born in Tuscarawas county, April 10, 1847. He was formally inducted into office in the presence of the joint assembly at Olympia the other day, the inauguration having been delayed because of the illness of the governor, who passed ten weeks in Paso Robles, Cal., on that account.

Back of this simple announcement is the story of a campaign of 30 years with a single ambition, politically, and that to be the chief executive of the most northwesterly commonwealth in the union. Mr. Cosgrove never permitted the dazzle of minor office to blind him to his goal, nor would he be turned aside from the prize, upon which, as a boy, he had set his heart. He had offers of the lieutenant-governorship and congressman of eastern Washington, but declined both. The honor which he courted was coy, but he persistently refused to abandon his suit. He won against great odds, which makes the victory sweeter.

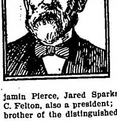
Mr. Cosgrove is a resident of Pomeroy, Garfield county, 187 miles southwest of Spokane. He has lived there 22 years.

Growing up in Defiance county, O., he enlisted as a member of a regiment of Ohio volunteers in 1863, at the age of 16 years, and served until discharged in 1865. Next year he entered the Wesleyan university, among his classmates being Charles W. Fairbanks, vice-president of the United States. Graduating in 1873, he studied law at Woodsfield, O., and was admitted to practice in 1875. He remained in his native state till 1880, when he was touched with the western fever and he started for Nevada. Then he went to the California coast and settled in Washington two years later.

When the town government of Pomeroy was organized under an early territorial charter he was elected a member of its first council and later served the town five times as mayor.

Mr. Cosgrove started his campaign in the summer of 1907. At the primaries he polled the largest number of first and second choice votes, defeating Gov. Albert E. Mead and ex-Gov. Henry McBride, neither of whom received the required 40 per cent. of first choice votes to nominate. The campaign was managed by his son.

OLD HARVARD GRADUATE



Harvard's second oldest graduate, Dr. James Lloyd Wellington of Swansea, Mass., recently celebrated his ninety-first birthday.

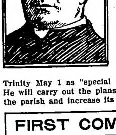
Dr. Wellington is a native of Templeton, and he entered Harvard college in 1834. He recalls distinctly his first meeting with Josiah Quincy, then president of the corporation, and somewhat feared by the freshmen for his austerity until they had made his acquaintance.

"What is your name?" was the first question addressed to the student. "Wellington, ah? I hope that you will be a better man than your father was," he added, with affected secerity.

The father was a Harvard man of the class of 1802, afterward becoming a Unitarian minister. Educators so distinguished as Prof. Benjamin Pierce, Jared Sparks, afterward president of the college; Cornelius C. Felton, also a president; Henry W. Longfellow and Edward T. Channing, a brother of the distinguished divine of the same name, were members of the faculty.

The physician has lived in Swansea for 65 years, opening an office there shortly after graduating from the medical school. He was the only doctor in the town at the time, and his services were in demand for a radius of 15 miles. Everybody came to know him, and he came to know everybody. Public life had no attractions for him, though he was greatly interested in town affairs, and the only time he would permit himself to be an official in Swansea was when he allowed himself to be elected a member of the school committee. Five years ago he decided to retire from practice.

TRINITY'S MISSIONARY PASTOR



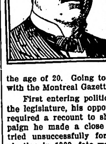
Rev. William Wilkinson, who is to take charge of St. John's chapel as a missionary pastor of Trinity, is best known in New York as "the bishop of Wall street," because for years he has held open-air meetings in Wall street for the benefit of the brokers and bankers and their employes.

He is very well known in London, where he was priest at the bishop of London's home, Fulham palace, last June. When the bishop of London was in New York he preached for Mr. Wilkinson in Wall street.

Mr. Wilkinson is known not only as a preacher of great force, but as an author. He wrote the history of the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church in 1895.

Mr. Wilkinson will go into residence at Trinity May 1 as "special evangelistic preacher for the parish of Trinity." He will carry out the plans of the rector and vestry to enlarge the work of the parish and increase its efficiency and power in all possible ways.

FIRST COMMONER OF CANADA



Charles Marcel, the first commoner of Canada, is entitled to that unofficial title by reason of his selection as speaker of the Dominion parliament, succeeding Hon. R. F. Sutherland of Windsor in that important position. In his eight years of service in parliament, Speaker Marcel has made an excellent reputation, and is considered one of the strongest among the Liberal leaders.

Although he represents the constituency of Bonaventure in parliament, the new speaker resides in Montreal, in illustration of the fact that Canada, like the mother country, does not require a member of parliament to live in the district he represents. Born in St. Scholastique, the "cradle of Liberalism," in 1860, Marcel engaged in the profession of journalism at the age of 20. Going to Montreal, he was connected for a number of years with the Montreal Gazette.

First entering political life in 1897, Marcel contested Gaspe, Quebec, for the legislature, his opponent being E. J. Flynn, then premier of Quebec. It required a recount to show Marcel defeated by 11 votes. During this campaign he made a close canvass of the district upon snowshoes. He then tried unsuccessfully for parliament in Magdalena island. In the general election in 1900, fate was more kind to the aspiring journalist, and he was elected from Bonaventure with a majority of 149 votes. Four years later he increased this lead to 892, and in last October's election his majority was 1,262.

School to Teach Parisian Art of Smiling

NEW YORK.—A young woman in Paris having started a school for smiles, an investigation has revealed that already a plan is on foot to start one right here in New York—besides the ones on the corners, of course.

The ingenious French young person, in a pink and scented prospectus, sets forth that a smile is about as good a piece of personal property to have concealed about your person as you can well possess. She advertises a special course for shop assistants who are looking for a raise.

In the school that will shortly be started here there will, as at present outlined, be courses for persons receiving doctors' bills, the man who offers a car conductor a Canadian dime, the fellow who has just slipped on a banana peel, the unfortunate who chases his hat for two blocks on a windy day and then sees it crushed beneath a truck, the woman who meets her friend snuggled up in a set of Russian 'possums, while she's snooping along with a last year's outfit of mink, and last, but by no means least, the board of directors of the Consolidated Gas company. It is planned to have a special night class for wives whose husbands are detained down town on business.

Attached to the school will be a dental parlor where you can, for a moderate expense, be equipped with a diamond-studded smile, a gilt-edged smile or just a plain porcelain smile, according to one's means and inclination.

The first crude plans drawn up provide for sets of large colored charts to be hung on the walls of the operating room showing different styles of smiles from which the smile-seeker may select his desired brand.

A hasty summary includes the White House molar display, the Inspector Walsh variety, the Big Bill species, the sub-variety known to the south as the Private John Allen smile, the success facial contortion, the oleagenous or John D. Rockefeller greeting and the celebrated expression of delight assumed by J. P. Morgan meeting reporters on his return from Europe.

Then, of course, there will be an important class to be devoted to subway employes and elevator men

Only Daughter of Hetty Green to Wed

MATTHEW ASTOR WILKS of New York city will soon become the son-in-law of America's richest woman.

Announcement of his engagement to Silvia Green, the only daughter of Mrs. Hetty Green, the marvelous female financier, has been made to intimate friends and it is said that the wedding will probably take place in June.

Though Mr. Wilks can no longer be called a young man and Miss Green is past 30, their romance nevertheless has given lively satisfaction to the limited social circle aware of its progress.

It blossomed and grew under the eye of Countess Annie Leary, who introduced Miss Green into society nearly a dozen years ago. Mrs. Leary has been on terms of intimacy with the descendants of John Jacob Astor. Her father was the fashionable hatter of Old New York and his store in the Astor house was the resort of the beaux and merchants early in the last century. He bought his furs and pelts from the original Astors.

Miss Green has never cared for gay society and when she was under the chaperonage of Miss Leary appeared at receptions and teas more frequently than at dinners, balls or the opera.

She has been reported engaged to the earl of Yarmouth, Duke de La Torre and one or two others, but the reports have always been denied.

Mr. Wilks is about 57 years old. He has been a member of the Union club for more than thirty years and also belongs to the Metropolitan, Knickerbocker, Turf and Field, Fencers, Badminton and New York yacht clubs.

Evelyn Thaw Now Lives Simple Life

IN A MODEST apartment of four rooms and bath on the third floor of a house in West Thirty-third street, not far from Fifth avenue, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is living the simple life. It is an old-fashioned four-story building of brick, painted white.

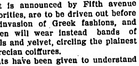
No thick, soft carpets cover the upper stairway or hall leading to the young woman's home. The staircase and hall floor are of bare wood, worn between the nailheads. Above the Thaw apartment is an attic studio, occupied by two young artists.

The apartment is in the name of Howard Nesbitt, the young woman's brother, and her name is not over the bell. When a reporter called there the other night no one answered the summons at the electric bell, but the door was opened when the colonial knocker of brass was used. Mrs. Thaw answered the door. She wore her usual costume—white turnover collar, black tie, black waist and skirt. She said:

"I have been living here for the last two months in seclusion and quiet. This is my home now—my real home. Yes; it is a great contrast to the other places I have lived in, but I'm tired of all that show and glitter. I wanted a home and found this place, where I intend to stay. It has interested me greatly to fix up this little nest, and I have learned to love it.

"I am studying art seriously. Frequently I go upstairs to the studio in the attic and put in many hours there. I am drawing and painting. No; I haven't sold anything yet, but I'm content to wait and work. Later I may take up the study of anatomy, which always has interested me greatly, but there is nothing definite about that now. I am keeping house. I haven't time to bother with restaurants.

Greek Coiffures to Doom Beloved Puffs



PUFFS and curls and marcel waves, it is announced by Fifth avenue authorities, are to be driven out before the invasion of Greek fashions, and women will wear instead bands of jewels and velvet, circling the plainest of Grecian coiffures.

Rats have been given to understand that their end is at hand.

"Rats will disappear before the fashion invaders like leaves before a November wind," said a well-known fashioner. "The rat has had its day, that's all there is to it. Everything now is the Grecian coiffure.

"If Fifth avenue cannot produce Grecian beauty, or something equal, if not superior, then it is not to be found anywhere at this day," remarked the fashioner. "The very newest style of hairdressing is straight—no curls and waves, if you please—parted on the right side, brought low over the forehead. Then it is brought loosely up from the neck and coiled, so that it reaches even with the top of the head. Then you just use your own taste with the rest.

"If you have a bit of black on your gown—a bit of black on hats and gowns is to be fashionable—you use a black velvet band for the finishing touch. Place the hand just below the coil of hair at the back of the neck and bring it up on top of the head with a bow knot or a jeweled buckle arranged just a bit to the side in front.

"There is no doubt that this new hair-dressing will be a big success. It really cuts ten years off a woman's age."

Not satisfied with this victory, according to the latest fashion bulletin issued from Fifth avenue the other afternoon, the Greeks have captured the dressmaking field. Grecian gowns won out after a hard fought battle with the Parisians.

A Pest with a Sting.

America is threatened with another pest. The French brown-tail moth is almost, if not quite, in the midst of us. He came over in nursery packages from France and is only awaiting the gladsome days of spring to break forth, expand and begin pesting, just as though he were at the old stand. He will compete as a foreign pauper pest with our own infant industries in the pest line. If you do not know what the French brown-tail moth does to the human race you will learn if he decides to sojourn among us and to increase and multiply, says the Chicago Daily News. Archery is his hobby. Unlike the bee and the mosquito, which have but one stinger, the little French brown-tail carries a quiver full of arrows, which he shoots in passing as a small boy trains his popgun on a bald head. There is no chance to slap him on the wrist in return, for he stings without alighting and then moves on to the next victim. No wonder the scientists who saw him first are very anxious to find a way to put him gently to the bad.

There is comfort for the murderers of the king's English in the latest contribution to periodical literature by Mr. Lounsbury, emeritus professor of English at Yale, excusing and in a measure justifying some of the so-called vulgar mistakes in orthography and grammar committed by uneducated people. According to Prof. Lounsbury, there is, or was, the best of authority for saying pint for point, jist for joist, ile for oil and bile for boil. Our'n and your'n and his'n are upheld by ancient usage. The double negation is similiarly vindicated and there are a dozen instances of the use of learn in the sense of teach in Shakespeare. It is gratifying to note that the professor draws the line on "I done it." There are limits to what are euphoniously termed archaic forms of speech, it seems.

A report declares that in the state of New York marriages have decreased 20,000 during the past year. Yet this is President Roosevelt's own commonwealth. It is more than likely that the depressed condition in many lines of business and labor will account for much of this falling off. In the early part of the year thousands of men were out of employment and were probably looking for work harder than they were looking for wives. The present year gives promise of being a prosperous one, and it is safe to predict that the marriage record in the Empire state for 1909 will make a far more satisfactory showing.

The Chicago professor's theory that marriage licenses should not be used until six months after they are issued is evidently for the purpose of preventing hasty marriages. But why not go further? Say that marriage licenses shall not be used until the last installment on the furniture is paid; or until both parties to the match have cut their wisdom teeth. Certainly marriage licenses should not be used until after the ink on the divorce decree is dry.

Ellen Emerson, oldest daughter of Ralph Waldo Emerson, and for years his close companion and assistant, died at the home of her sister Edith, wife of William M. Forbes, in Milton, Mass., on January 16, aged 70. Miss Emerson was active in the social and literary life of Concord at all times, and especially in the affairs of the Unitarian church. Besides her sister, a brother, Dr. Waldo Emerson of Concord survives her.

In his various plays Shakespeare used about 15,000 words. Milton used only about half as many in his writings. A person of culture and education has a speaking vocabulary of about 5,000 words; an ordinary person uses from 2,000 to 3,000 words. This would indicate that the 300,000 words of the English langauge include a good many that are seldom employed except in president's messages.

Frank Wentworth of Winsted, Conn., has doped it out that in 2,000,000 years the human race will have developed so far that instead of walking on a pair of alternate pendulums, as now, men will have on their lower extremities wheels actuated by turbines driven by hot air. Here's a chance for some people to get just 2,000,000 years ahead of the rest of us, merely by standing on their heads and talking rapidly.

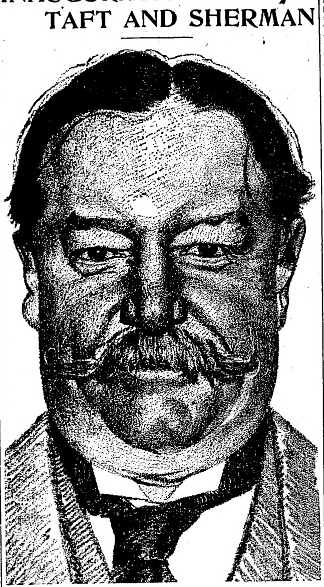
INAUGURATION OF TAFT AND SHERMAN



PRESIDENT TAFT

BY EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington, Mar. 4.—Standing on the east portico of the capitol, just after noon, William Howard Taft took the oath of office as president of the United States, an immense throng of his fellow citizens witnessing the impressive ceremony. James Schoolcraft Sherman already had been sworn in as vice-president, in the senate chamber, and the people acclaimed the new chief executives of the nation.

Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Taft has been in civil pursuits all his life, the military display which accompanied his induction into office was greater than that which marked the inauguration of the militant rough rider president, Theodore Roosevelt, four years ago. Washington was filled with civilians and soldiers and sailors. From the earliest daylight hour the streets were crowded with people. Pennsylvania avenue, the center of all things in Washington, was packed with the crowds, every man and woman in which sought, by an early arrival, to obtain a place of vantage from which the great procession, which for hours passed through the broad thoroughfare, could be seen.

Meet at Executive Mansion.

Early in the day the president-elect met the out-going president in the White House. About an hour before noon, the congressional committee of arrangements, consisting of Senators Knox, Lodge and Bacon, and Representatives Burke, Young and Gaines, arrived at the executive mansion and informed the president and the president-elect that congress was in readiness for the ceremonies of the actual inauguration. At half-past eleven President Roosevelt and President-to-be Taft entered a carriage, Mr. Taft sitting at the left of Mr. Roosevelt. In the carriages immediately following were the members of the congressional committee of arrangements. A body of veterans of the civil and Spanish wars acted as an escort for the outgoing and incoming chiefs of state.

Escorted to Senate Wing.

The president and the president-elect were escorted by the congressional committee into the senate wing of the capitol through the historic doorway of bronze on the east side of the building. They went directly to the president's room where they remained until the committee of arrangements came to them and announced that the senate was in readiness to receive them. Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft then walked to the senate chamber, taking the seats reserved for them in the first row directly in front of the vice-president's desk.

Vice-President Fairbanks and Vice-President-elect Sherman drove to the capitol together and went directly to the room of the vice-president. In turn they were escorted to the senate chamber as the two chief figures of the occasion had been escorted before them. Mr. Fairbanks went at once to his place as presiding officer of the senate and Mr. Sherman took a seat at the left of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft, just across the center aisle of the chamber.

Edward Everett Hale, the veteran chaplain of the senate and one of the most picturesque figures in the United States, offered prayer. Immediately following the prayer, the oath of office was administered to Mr. Sherman by the outgoing vice-president, Mr. Fairbanks. The new vice-president next delivered his inaugural address, and then at once, as the first duty of his new office, he administered the oath to the newly elected senators of the United States.

March to East Portico.

As soon as the senators-elect had been sworn into office, a procession was formed to march from the senate chamber through the rotunda of the capitol to the platform on the center portico of the east side of the building. The sergeant-at-arms of the senate and his fellow officials of the house of representatives led the way. They were followed in order by the marshals of the District of Columbia and of the supreme court; the chief justice and associate justices; the congressional committee of arrangements; the president and the president-elect; the ambassadors to the United States; the ministers plenipotentiary; the vice-president and the secretary of the senate; the senators and ex-senators; the speaker of the house and the representatives in congress.

The platform upon which President Taft took the oath of office extended well out from the portico until it overhung the broad plaza to the east, where directly to the front were gathered the cadets from the military and naval academies, to the rear of whom were the other military bodies. Beyond the cadets, extending to the right and left as far as the open ground reached, were gathered the thousands upon thousands of civilians.

BLACK HORSE TROOP OF CLEVELAND, O.

Taft Takes Oath of Office.

The white-haired chief justice of the United States, Melville W. Fuller, administered the oath of office of Mr. Taft, who, when he had taken it, bent and kissed the Bible held in the hand of his country's chief jurist. Immediately following the taking of the oath, President Taft delivered his inaugural address.

The president's speech frequently was interrupted by applause and at its close the greatassembly broke into cheers. The president was congratulated by those who were close to him, including the retiring president and the other chief officials. President Taft then entered a carriage which was at once surrounded by the members of the Black Horse troop of Cleveland, O., which formed the special guard of honor. The president's carriage was driven north and then down the hill by the senate wing of the capitol until Pennsylvania avenue was reached. From that point the president drove slowly to the White House along the thoroughfare filled, save for its center, with crowds of his cheering fellow citizens.

Make-Up of Parade.

The guard of honor attending President Taft was followed immediately by a mounted police guard and a full military band. Then came Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, chief of the general staff of the United States army, who was the parade's grand marshal, and his staff. The military division had the right of way after the president's escort. At its head were the West Point cadets in their gray uniforms, marching with the perfect alignment for which the military students are famed. Behind the stripling soldiers came the stripling sailors, the midshipmen from the naval academy at Annapolis. Immediately behind the future officers of army and navy came the regulars of the military service, veterans most of them, who had seen service in Cuba and in the Philippines, and, many of them, upon the plains in the days before the Indians had left the war path for the ways of peace. In the line were the 2,600 men who had formed the Cuban army of pacification.

Atlantic Fleet Sends Men.

In the waters of Hampton roads for ten days the fleet which had made its record breaking journey around the world had been assembled. The battleships, the cruisers, the destroyers and the torpedo boats were drawn upon for "jackies" to give the sea service an adequate representation in the inaugural ceremonies. There were 3,000 sailors from the Connecticut, the Illinois and the other ships of Sperry's fleet in the parade. The marines followed the sailors. There was a full regiment of them, men from that branch of the service which has taken the initiative in many of the beyond-the-sea troubles in which the forces of this country have been engaged—in Korea in the late '60's, in Cuba in 1898, and in China in 1900.

The regulars of the government service led the way, their conceded right. Behind them came the men who, in time of war, form first the reserve force, and later when brought into real soldiers' shape, the backbone force of the government's army—the National Guardsmen of the states of the union.

Many Civic Organizations.

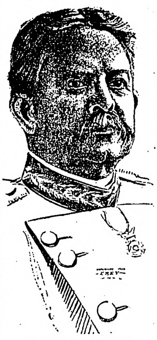
In the rear of the military division came the civic organizations. There were in line more than 100 clubs and political associations from all parts of the country, nearly all of them wearing some unique and distinguishing uniform. The American club of Pittsburg acted as personal escort to Thomas P. Morgan, the chief of the civic organizations' committee.

Among the organizations which had a place in the parade were several from President Taft's state—Ohio. Among these were the Citizens' Taft club and the Stamina Republican club of Cincinnati, Uniform Rank Knights of Maccabees, Cleveland; the Republican Glee club and the Buckeye Republican club of Columbus.

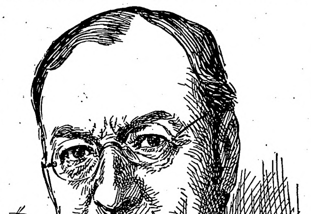
Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Kentucky, Minnesota and other states of the middle west and of the south were represented by associations of citizens, political clubs, and by prominent state, county and municipal officials. Many veterans of the civil war who served in the ranks of the union or in the ranks of the confederacy were present in the parade. There were more former confederates in line than were present at any previous inauguration of a Republican president.

Luncheon at White House.

As soon as President Taft reached the White House he entered and was greeted by the members of a specially invited presidential party, including the governors of several states, prominent federal officials, personal friends of the president and the members of the presidential family to a remote degree of relationship. A light luncheon was served in the great state dining-room, and as soon as it was over the president walked across the grounds of the White House to the presidential reviewing stand built on the south side of the avenue directly in front of the main entrance to the White House and facing Lafayette square. The president took his place on the reviewing stand, and with him were the members of the presidential party. Vice-President Sherman stood on the immediate right of the chief executive.



Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell.



VICE-PRESIDENT SHERMAN

Across Pennsylvania avenue directly in front of the president was a huge stand for spectators occupying the entire length of one side of Lafayette square.

President Reviews Parade.

As soon as the president appeared on the reviewing stand the leading band of the procession, which had been halted to await the appearance of Mr. Taft, began to play "Hail to the Chief." Gen. Bell gave the order to pass in review, and the great procession, having its head at the White House, moved forward to pass before the chief magistrate. As body after body of soldiers, sailors and civilians passed, they saluted and the president saluted in turn.

It took the procession three hours to pass the reviewing stand. It was a great sight, full of interest and color. Under the direction of the trained military chieftains who had given their time to the perfection of details, the parade passed quickly and in perfect form. When in front of the reviewing stand some of the civil marching clubs showed their proficiency in drill by performing evolutions. The regulars and National Guardsmen, however, swept by in perfect military precision. The parade was worthy of the occasion that called it into being.

WESTERN CANADA'S SPLENDID CROP YIELD FOR 1908.

AMERICANS PROFITED LARGELY AND SEND BACK SATISFACTORY REPORTS.

The census branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, Canada, has completed its returns of the showing of Western Canada's grain yield for 1908, and the reports make very interesting reading. In the three provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, which comprise what may be known as Central Canada, there was a total wheat yield of about 107,000,000 bushels, worth to the farmer about $85,000,000; in addition to this the oat, barley and flax crops were worth another $35,000,000. Letters have been received from many of the settlers from the United States. From these, that of Rev. Oscar L. King has been selected. He lives in the vicinity of Edmonton, Alberta, and what he says will be of interest to those who contemplate moving to Central Canada. Every line of the letter is interesting. Those who wish for the particulars as to how to secure homesteads and preemptions should write any Canadian Government agent. Mr. King says:

"Mr. M. V. McInnnes, Detroit, Michigan: I am well satisfied with Alberta. This country offers excellent opportunities for anyone to make a good home for himself and family if he is willing to put up with a few hard knocks for the first two or three years. But it is worth a few hard knocks to get a 160-acre farm of rich, productive land with no mortgage on it. This province is well fitted for grains, stock raising and dairying. We have found the climate generally healthful, more healthful than Michigan, and although the thermometer sometimes drops to 40 degrees below zero in winter, yet we do not seem to feel that temperature any more than we did 5 or 10 degrees below zero in Michigan. We like the winters.

"The Government takes great interest in the education of the people and quickly aids the settlers in establishing schools where they are called for, The schools, though graded differently than those in the States, are efficient and advancing. Our great drawback has been the limited and inadequate railway facilities, but new roads are being rapidly built and many more are projected through various parts of the province. The new policy of the Alberta government to construct a great many branch lines throughout the province will greatly help all parts of the country. If those new settlers who have to go back a considerable distance from existing railroads and towns to find free homesteads will but locate along the line of a projected railroad they will in two or three years be near both town and railroad. When I first came to this country three and a half years ago the homestead I took was 75 miles from a railroad town; now there is a railroad 25 miles north, another 25 miles south, and a third is being built through my neighborhood.

"I think the prairie country or country that is partly prairie offers much better opportunities than the hilly portions."

Stealing the Davy Jones

By an Ex-Operative of the United States Secret Service.

CAPTAIN DICKSON, a Retired Officer, Uncovers and Nabs Perpetrators of Most Daring Theft—Full-Grown Steamboat Is Taken on Inland River—Vessel Long Used by Government and Then Sold to Hank Parlow—His Part in the Tale of the Davy Jones—Last Cruise of Famous Craft.

"IT SEEMS preposterous," said Capt. Dickson, "that thieves could steal and get away with a full grown steamboat and that, too, on an inland river. But this is just exactly what a gang of river pirates did in the case of the Davy Jones, a stern-wheel steamboat that once belonged to the government service and which was employed with other boats of the government fleet on the Mississippi river in looking after the levees, keeping the channel clear and the government lights burning, and the numerous other matters that the government has assumed in connection with the navigation on that stream."

Capt. Dickson was a retired secret service officer and I had known him for many years. He had no thought of publishing his reminiscences, but when I could get him under the influence of a warm fire in his cozy parlor, a pipe, and a glass—never more than two in an evening—of his favorite sherry, I always got something that was worth publishing and I used to tell him so. And as the principals to the affairs were so hidden in the telling and the locale of the events was usually so far away he did not object. I prefer to tell it in his own words.

The boat had been operated by the government until it had been considered unsuited for its needs, and then it was sold to a curious old river man named Hank Parlow, who employed it as a trading boat, towing a large flat boat with it, and picking up such odd jobs of towing and freighting as chance threw in his way.

I was in the office of the surveyor of customs at a certain Mississippi river city one day when Parlow came in to have his license renewed and the surveyor introduced him to me. He was a peculiar character, and when it came to paying the fee for the license, Parlow drew forth a greasy pouch from some indeterminate place of concealment about his person, and paid the amount from a $20 gold piece. He asked for his change in gold, but as there happened to be none in the office just then he accepted the silver and bills with some showing of reluctance and bowed himself out of the office.

After he had left, the surveyor told me that Parlow was a miser and was reputed to be worth many thousands of dollars. His fortune, so the rivermen said, was concealed somewhere about the boat Davy Jones, and it was thought to be all in gold, as Parlow invariably had every bit of silver and every bill that fell into his hands converted into gold coins at his first opportunity.

I didn't see Parlow again until some weeks later, when he came into my office and told me that his boat had been stolen from the wharf the night before and he wanted me to find it. He was frenzied with grief and chagrin and swore, with many black and long-winded oaths, that he would kill the thieves on sight if he could find them. I doubted if the case was one in my jurisdiction, but I wired the particulars to the department at Washington and received instructions to go on search for the vessel and endeavor to capture the rogues. It seems that there had been considerable complaint from the port where I was then stationed, of thefts of goods and other articles from steamboats, and as the work was attributed to a gang of river pirates, the chief thought it would be a good job to round up the gang and put them where they would do no harm.

Parlow offered to pay all expenses, and he told me that a friend of his, a sallow, slouching fisherman named Wastrow, owned a fast cabin gasoline boat that would be put at my disposal. I wired notice of the theft of the Davy Jones to points along the river and its tributaries, as I felt sure that the boat could not remain long undetected if it showed itself at any port of the Mississippi.

The next morning when I opened my office, I found a dirty slip of paper among the letters in my mail box. Examining it, I discovered pencil writing on it and after some difficulty I deciphered this message:

the dav Jones is up st francis River.

It was not signed and the writing showed that its author was in no sense a scholar. I was pondering over it when Parlow came in to tell me that the gasoline launch was ready for my departure whenever I wished to set out. I had not really intended going on a cruise, as I thought the boat would be found in a day or so, but the anonymous letter had put the idea in my head. I showed the note to Parlow and he became highly excited.

He swore. "That's just what I thought they'd do. They've run out there in the swamps to pick the boat to pieces so that they can find my gold. There ain't no gold aboard it, but them thieving river-rats think there is, and this ain't the first time they've tried to get at it."

We left about one o'clock and made rapid time down the river. I had often seen the Mississippi river during a flood but I had never fully understood its irresistible force until this trip down it in the 30-foot launch. We traveled at the rate of a race-horse. Parlow wanted to run after nightfall, and while I was more in favor of tying up, he and Wastrow assured me that traveling was absolutely safe and, as they were experienced river men and seemed to understand the boat and the river, too, I consented and turned in, making a bed on the locker seat of the forward cabin. My bed was a little cramped and the situation was a novel one, but I soon dropped asleep and didn't wake until it was broad daylight next morning.

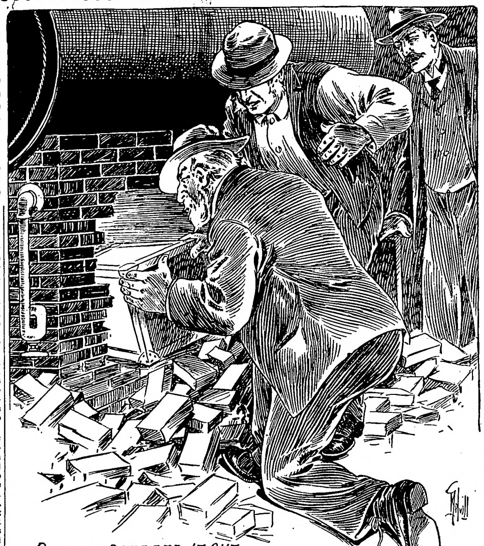
It was close to noon when we turned a sharp bend in the river, which Parlow told me was 30 miles from the Mississippi. On the farther shore there was a depression in the treeline, which Parlow said indicated that a slough or lead put out there, and that if it were followed up one would probably find a lake back in the timber. I looked at it curiously, and was on the point of asking some question when Wastrow, who was steering, became greatly excited and called Parlow to his side. He pointed across the river at the mouth of the slough and seemed to be endeavoring to show some object to his companion. Parlow saw it in an instant, and the boat's prow was headed for it. I couldn't make out what they had discovered, although I strained my eyes, as I asked what it was.

Parlow pointed with his long, skinny arm at a tree limb which had been broken half off near the trunk and which dangled down, hanging by a strip of bark. I saw, even at that distance, that the break was white and fresh. My companions seemed to attach the greatest weight to it, for they gesticulated and pointed at it, talking excitedly all the while.

We were now approaching it closely, and I suddenly saw Parlow grab up his rifle and point it at a streak on the trunk of the tree in which hung the broken limb. I saw what he referred to, and as we ran close beside it I saw that it was a smudge of paint and splinters of wood as if something had rubbed against it. Then I realized the purport of these signs and did not need the excited explanation that the rivermen gave me. We slowed the engine down until its muffled exhaust was scarcely audible and stealthily crept into the narrow slough that ran back into the timber. The men were sure that some boat had run up this slough, and I felt that they were right, and that it must be the vessel that we were after, for no sane pilot would drive a boat into such a channel unless he were endeavoring to find a place of concealment.

It was a tortuous course through the forest, by this narrow slough, or lead, fringed with stately cypress trees standing as straight as arrows. Even my inexperienced eye could detect that the boat had surely passed along the channel ahead of us. The drift was disordered and willows and saplings were broken off here and there.

As we proceeded, the rivermen gripped their rifles nervously and peered ahead through the open window of the cabin with baleful glare of panthers. They swept every bit of the channel on both sides with eyes that overlooked nothing, and at the discovery of a new sign of the boats having passed that way, they would nudge each other and exchange glances that boded no good for the thieves. Parlow was especially noticeable for the steely glitter of his eyes, and I read murder in them as plainly as I have ever seen it in box-car letters on the front page of a yellow journal.



PARLOW DRAGGED IT OUT WITH SOME DIFFICULTY.

We must have traveled a mile or more, when, just as we darted around a clump of willows and saw a stretch of open water loomed ahead, there was a spiteful report far down the lake, and a rifle ball sung over our heads. I had been under fire before, but it happened so suddenly that I ducked involuntarily. But not so with Parlow and Wastrow. They seemed to hail the attack with a fiendish delight, and I saw them stick their rifles farther out of the open window and sight carefully down the barrels.

Our course was changed slightly, and as the prow of the boat swung to the right in obedience to the rudder, I saw the Davy Jones tied up to a gigantic cypress tree at the farther side of the lake. We headed directly for it, and there were several more shots from its direction, and one bullet plumped into the woodwork of the cabin and sent a shower of splinters about my ears. Over the bowed heads of the two river-men I could plainly see the steamboat, and on its lower deck I saw three men, each firing at us with a repeating rifle. We were now less than 200 yards' distant from them, but neither of my companions had replied to their fire. Our progress was slow, and we made an excellent target, as the sullen crunching of bullets through the woodwork and the splintering of glass indicated.

As coolly as if he were giving some direction about the running of the launch, I heard Parlow mutter to his companion:

"You take the one on your right side and I'll take care of the one on mine. You say when."

Wastrow immediately grunted his understanding, and although he didn't say "when," he said something that caused two fingers to curl about two triggers. There was a loud report from their rifles, sounding like a single shot, and I saw two of the men on the steamer crumple up like a sere leaf, stagger a step or so, and fall to the deck. The third man turned to run, but he had only gone far enough to permit of the flinging back of a lever and a hasty taking of sight before I saw him pitch forward in response to a spiteful crack from Parlow's rifle.

"I'd 'a' got him if you hadn't," Wastrow grunted in a matter-of-fact way, just as if he had been shooting at squirrels or ducks instead of human beings.

It made me turn sick to hear them speak so lightly of killing three of their fellow men. We ran alongside, and one of the river-men jumped out and made fast to the steamer. Parlow looked apprehensively about the boat, and I followed his gaze, which finally settled on the brick foundation for the boilers. I saw a glad light come into his eyes, and somehow I jumped to the conclusion that his treasure, whatever it might be, was concealed in that brickwork.

Wastrow had not noticed this.

The boat was in the wildest confusion. It was evident that the thieves were literally following Parlow's suggestion and picking it to pieces. The stuffy cabin and squalid staterooms had been absolutely wrecked. The mattresses were slit open, planking torn away, and every place of concealment laid bare. Parlow grinned maliciously at the wreck of his boat, and I saw that he felt the keenest satisfaction at the knowledge of the three inert things that lay out upon the forward deck, stiffening in the drizzle which had now turned to sleet.

Parlow examined the corpses and said that he knew all three of them; they were members of a gang of toughs that infested the river, and he began to display symptoms of alarm as soon as he had looked them over. "This ain't all of 'em," he said. "There's more'n this, and they will be coming back here and takin' a pot shot at us if we don't hurry up and get away." Wastrow seemed to share this apprehension, and suggested that we had best leave as soon as possible, for the pirates would have every advantage of us if they should come back, the timber about the boat affording excellent places of concealment from which they could fire upon us with safety.

Acting upon this advice, Parlow secured a crowbar and attacked the brick foundation under the boiler at a point near the farther end from the fire-box, while Wastrow stood by and watched him with greedy eyes. With a few lusty strokes Parlow pried out some of the bricks, and I saw a small iron-bound box within the opening. Parlow dragged it out with some difficulty. It was heavy, and something within it clinked like metal when it was moved. With Wastrow's assistance he carried it to the gasoline launch and placed it inside. Then he hastened up the companionway into the stuffy office and dived into the rickety stove that stood in one corner. He scooped the ashes from the waste box at its bottom, and disclosed a small ring. Pulling on this, he raised an ingeniously contrived door which had been quite concealed by the ashes. The stove had a false bottom and from the cavity in it he brought forth three heavy sacks which I saw contained coins.

Wastrow had watched these proceeding with eyes that were narrowed to tiny slits. I could see that he was interested, and I didn't like the cupidity and cunning which showed in his entire face.

Parlow had lugged his sacks down the companionway and started for the launch, declining the assistance that Wastrow offered him, and he was in the act of stepping into the launch when there came a spiteful crack and a puff of smoke from somewhere back in the timber, and a bullet plumped into a stanchion beside him, to which the launch was tied.

It was no time for hesitation, so we three jumped into the launch and Wastrow cut the rope which moored us to the steamer. The surviving members of the gang were returning, and we had no desire to be trapped on the dismantled steamer. In a trice Parlow had started the engine and we were headed away from the Davy Jones. Bullets sang all around us, and although we returned the fire, the pirates were hid away in the timber, and there was small chance of silencing them. We tore through the water with bullets skipping and ricocheting about us on every hand until we turned the bend in the slough. Not until then did we draw a full breath or feel that we were out of danger from the murderous bandits hid back in the thick timber.

It was an uneventful cruise back to the city, it having been decided that it was better to return there and send out a strong party to recover the stolen boat, than for us three to attempt it. I am sure that Parlow didn't sleep a wink on the return journey, for whenever I was awake I saw him huddled down upon the ironbound box into which he had surreptitiously slipped the sacks of money that he had taken from the bottom of the stove.

I was dog tired when we reached port late the next afternoon, so I left the river-men aboard the launch after offering to help Parlow carry his box to a place of safety, an offer which he declined.

That was the last I ever saw of either of the river-men.

Parlow was found dead, floating in the river some months later.

Wastrow, who had disappeared, was suspected of the murder, but he was never apprehended.

I don't know what became of the ironbound box, but the Davy Jones never went on another cruise. The pirates burned it clear to the keel where it was tied up in the isolated lake.

CURE

BY W. C. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30. 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam' Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

People that are opposed to the bonding of this Township to pay bonus to banks an buy graders to stand beside the road and rot, should turn out to election next Tuesday and elect township officials who are not watching for an opprotunity to call a bonding election when the farmers are busy [illegible] and large numbers of them are in N.D. threshing.

Our school district made a loan of the state of Minnesota for 10 and 20 years at 4 per cent interest and got every dollar that we bonded for turned over to school treasurer, but we regret to state, that there was "nothing in it," for the school board. This Township could have made a loan the same way, instead of paying big bonuses to banks, but of course there would have been no "rake off" for any body, so it is prehaps better to make the loan of the banks, so as to give the Township officils a chance, when the tax payers are focting the bills.

There seems to be a good prospect fo the state legislature passing the proposed law changing the method of procedure in the removal of county seats. This law if enacted will take such matters out of the hands of the county board altogether If a petition, signed by the necessary number of legal voteas, is filed with the county auditor it is to be certfied by the auditor to the secretary of the state who will cause such proposition to be placed on the ballots to be voted upon at the next general election held in such county. Which looks like a fair proposition as putting it fairly and squarely up to the people.--Plummer Pioneer.

The petition is to be signed by 60 per cent of the leagal voters of the county and an affidavit made by each one that he is a legal voter, which will not make it necessary for the man that gets up the petition to hunt for any other job for a year, in fact we doubt their ability to get a petition of this kind in Red Lake county at this time, bu maybe they can, but we certainly would not like the job.

One session of the state legislature makes some bad laws, and the next legislature repeals them, but there is one law that was passed in 1905, which escaped two years ago, which should have been repealed, and that is the law which compelis a prospective bride groom to go to the Clerk of District Court in person to procure a marriag license. There is no one that can possibley be bennefited by this law only the railroad companies, and it is a detriment to mariage in the northern part of the state Supposing a bacheldor farmer in norther Belltrami conuty, was to meet a Miss that he thought just suited him and they should decide to marry, and Mr. Man finds out that he must go to Bemidji to get a license, at an expense of about a hundred dollars and the loss of a weeks time, do you not think that he would be likely to tell the girl that he had concluded to wait a while before he got married. But if he could go to a Notary Public and sware to his sffidavit and get his license by mail, he would tall her that he would be ready to marry the next week.

Tenderness of the Hanging Judge.

Mr. Justice Hawkins' tenderness for women prisoners was well known. He admitted it, and he had a great dislike of sentencing these poor creatures to death who had been recommended to mercy and would probably be repriev- ed. On one such occasion the sheriff asked if he was not going to put on the black cap.

"No," he answered, "I am not. I do not intend the poor creature to be [illegible] I am not going to frighten her to death."

Addressing her by name, he said: "Don't pay any attention to what I am going to read. No harm will be done to you. I am sure you did not know in your great trouble and sorrow what you were doing, and I will take care to represent your case so that nothing will harm you in the way of punishment."

He then mumbled over the words of the sentence of death so that the poor creature did not hear them.—London Graphic.

The Value of Diamonds.

The value of the diamond is at so much per carat, and up to a certain limit the value per carat increases as the size of the stone increases. When a carat diamond is quoted at $125, a diamond weighing a half a carat is counted at the rate of $75 per carat. three-quarter carat diamonds at $100 per carat, one and one-quarter carat diamonds at $140 per carat, one and one-half carat diamonds at $150 per carat, one and three-quarter carat diamonds at $180 per carat, and two carat stones at $200 per carat. Stones weighing more than two carats sell at about the same rate as that quoted for two carat stones, and do not increase as rapidly owing to the more limited demand for the larger sized stones.—New York Herald

Diamond Cutters and Their Work.

Not only is diamond cutting not a specially highly paid occupation, but it is one involving a most humiliating system of espionage to the worker. Each man has to strictly account for the stones he receives on going to work in the morning, and the count has to be carefully taken when the unfinished work is handed in at night to be locked up in a safe against the return of the workmen the next day. The possibilities of theft are great, though a dishonest workman knows that an attempt to dispose of an unfinished stone would bring suspicion upon him wherever the attempt was made.

On Long Island a hundred and more years ago there was fox hunting for three days during the season, and the biography of Catherine Schuyler contains the following apt lines from the pen of a witty woman whose name remains unknown:

> A gallant act no doubt is here.
> All wicked foxes ought to fear,
> When twenty dogs and twenty men

Hawking is the oldest of all British sports. Treasuring.

Madge—How do you know you can keep a secret?

Marjorie—I know something about Dolly, and I'm keeping it from her until I get angry with her.—Puck.

Unpardonable.

He held her in his arms awhile.
She struggled to be free.
At last he let her go and said:
"I pray you pardon me."

He had not kissed her, had not made
Her struggle hard—she sighed:
"Ah, no, I cannot pardon you,"
She bitterly replied.

Reassuring.

Patient (to dentist)—I say, this gas is absolutely safe, isn't it?

Dentist—Don't worry, sir. In these times I couldn't afford to lose a customer.—New York Life.

Invariable.

To travel is a healthy life,
As all of us admit,
And yet it has, like everything,
Exceptions governing it.
For instance, take the traveling man,
Who never takes a trip,
No matter what the season be,
Unless he has the grip.

All Sound.

"Has the young man any avuncular relatives?"

"No, sir; he's got only two uncles and they're as sound as a dollar."—Baltimore American.

They Wanted Him.

"He says that his employers always regarded him as a valuable man."

"Yes; they offered a large reward for him when he left."—New York Life.

The Bobtail Flush.

"Take back the heart that thou gavest!"
He sang as he mournfully laid
The ace of that suit on the table.
What he wanted was one little spade.
—Puck.

Once.

"Why, I didn't know that you and Higgley were acquaintances."

"Oh, yes. He was my brother-in-law for awhile once."—Houston Post.

Caught in Her Own Trap.

When she assured me that I might
Look on her always as a sister,
I exercised a brother's right
And most affectionately kissed her.

Curious Almshouse.

The most curious almshouse in England is St. Mary's hospital at Chichester. There eight old ladies live actually in the church, which is a fine old building dating from 1080. It was originally a monastery, but when Queen Elizabeth came to visit there she turned it into an almshouse to endure as long as almshouses exist. The old ladies have two neat little rooms each down the sides of the main church, with windows looking out on the garden. They have each a coal supply, a kitchen range, water and gas. At one end of the church is the chapel, where daily services are held. The choir stalls are beautifully carved old oak, the original seats that the monks used. The church stands in a quiet little square.

Ringing in the Ears.

"Ringing" in the ears is a most peculiar condition. It is interesting to learn that, though the brain so distinctly receives an impression of sound, there is really no sound at all. The sensation is produced by derangement of the nerves of the ear, caused by poor circulation or such pressure and interference as come from hardened, excessive wax, boils, etc. Some one oddly remarked that when the ears were ringing they were "insane." Truly, they carry wrong impressions to the brain. They record things that do not happen.

Child Love.

Welcome to the parents the puny struggler, strong in his weakness, his little arms more irresistible than the soldier's, his lips touched with persuasion which Chatham and Pericles in manhood had not. His unaffected lamentations when he lifts up his voice on high, or, more beautiful, the sobbing child, the face all liquid grief, as he tries to swallow his vexation, soften all hearts to pity and to mirthful and clamorous compassion.—Emerson.

She Was a Bit Bashful.

Mr. Peet, a very diffident man, was unable to prevent himself being introduced one evening to a fascinating young lady, who, misunderstanding his name, constantly addressed him as Mr Peters, much to the gentleman's distress. Finally summoning up the courage, he earnestly remonstrated: "Oh don't call me Peters. Call me Peet!"

"Ah, but I don't know you well enough, Mr. Peters," said the young lady, blushing, as she withdrew behind her fan.—London Telegraph

Failure of a College Education.

"Well," observed old man Potts. "I've spent a heap of money on my boy Bill's education, more'n $600, jest to see him through Yale, and I ain't through yet. It shorely makes me sore to think of the money I'm wastin' on a boy who ain't got as much sense now as he had before he went to college."

"What's the matter, father?" asked Mrs. Potts. "Mebbe you're a little hard on Bill."

"No, I ain't, Mary," answered the old man. "Just to show you, a little while ago I says to him I thinks it was going to rain tomorrow. What fool answer d'ye suppose he made me?"

"I'm sure I don't know, father."

"He begged my pardon!"—Harper's Weekly.

A Case of Urgent Need.

It was in the hotel of a mining town that the New England guest, registering in the office, heard a succession of loud yells. "What in the world is that—a murder going on upstairs?" he demanded.

"No," said the clerk as he slammed the book and lounged toward the stairs. "It's the spring bed up in No. 6. That tenderfoot up there don't get the hang of it, and every few days he gets one of the spiral springs screwed into him like a shirt stud. I guess I'll have to go up if there ain't anything more I can do for you for a few minutes."—Youth's Companion.

Antiquity of Death Masks.

Although there is no mention of death masks in the works of Homer or in any of the later classics, modern explorers have satisfied themselves that in the early burials of all nations it was the custom to cover the heads and bodies of the dead with sheets of gold so pliable that they took the impress of the form, and not infrequently, when in the course of centuries the embalmed flesh had shriveled or fallen away, the gold retained the exact cast of the features. Schliemann found a number of bodies "covered with large masks of gold plate in repousse work," several of which have been reproduced by means of engraving in his "Mycenae," and he asserts that there can be no doubt whatever that each one of these represents the likeness of the deceased person whose face it covered.

Dickens' Characters.

Couldn't Fool Johnny.

Louise—I'm in an awful boat. After I started to bleach my hair I found I had only enough to do half of it, and Nelson is coming tonight. Julia—Never mind, dear. Let him sit on the perox-side.—Harper's Bazar.

POWER OF ONE VOTE.

A Single Ballot Has Often Decided an Important Contest.

In the Continental congress of 1775 Benjamin Harrison defeated John Hancock by one vote for the presiding office. But the Virginian insisted on a new ballot and by his own vote chose Hancock.

In 1784 the illness of one delegate from New Jersey kept slavery out of states admitted to the Union after 1800 and thus confined the civil war contestants to the south Atlantic states.

July 25, 1788, one vote ratified the constitution after the famous debate between Madison and Henry at Richmond. The next day the debate between Hamilton and Clinton ended with New York following suit. In 1790 Rhode Island came in with an equally small margin.

Alexander Hamilton swung one vote to Thomas Jefferson in the electoral college of 1800, thus breaking a deadlock after thirty-six ballots and defeating Aaron Burr. This really began the feud which cost Hamilton his life on the Palisades at Weehawken.

In 1808 Jesse Thomas by his own vote went to congress from the Indiana district. He succeeded in moving the northern boundary of Illinois fifty miles north, thus giving it a lake outlet. Had Illinois been united commercially with the south and her interests tinged with southern ideas the election of Lincoln could never have taken place, and the whole history of the country would have been different.

May 26, 1868, the senate of the United States declared against the impeachment of Andrew Johnson by one vote, 35 to 19, when two-thirds were necessary to decide.—Chicago Journal.

A MISNAMED EXHIBIT.

Brings Joy to the Museum Visitors and Worries the Curator.

A curator at the Metropolitan Museum of Art is threatened with insanity, the cause being a small misnamed exhibit in the gallery outside his office door.

"Twenty times a day," declared the harassed man, "people discover that that china statuette out in the Franklin collection is named General Washington instead of Benjamin Franklin. Then they burst in here and announce their discovery and wonder that no one ever noticed it before. Half my time is spent in explaining that we know it well, that it was simply a mistake of the potter who labeled it in France over a century ago and that we cannot change it nor wouldn't if we could.

"Of course I tell them this courteously and patiently, and you know what a strain that is when you are going over the same thing for the thousandth time! I'd latch the door, only there are too many employees seeking me all day long, so here I must sit and listen to the names of George Washington and Benjamin Franklin repeated a million times till I wish that neither of those glorious patriots had ever lived. And it's driving me insane, I tell you; it's driving me insane!"

Just then the door opened and a lady popped in with:

"There's a statue out here named General Washington, but I'm sure"—

And the weary curator, being a southerner, rose smilingly to his task.—New York Times.

A Telegram That Talked.

At one time when Georgie Drew Barrymore was playing in San Francisco a fabulous sum was offered her by a local theater for her services for a few weeks. The offer was exceedingly tempting, but her contract with Charles Frohman stood in the way. However, on the nothing-venture-nothing-won theory, she telegraphed a detailed statement of the offer she had received to Frohman in New York, explained how anxious she was to accept it and wound up with the plea, "Will you release me?" In due course of time she received the following telegram in answer:

Mrs. Georgie Drew Barrymore, Palace Hotel, San Francisco:
No! CHARLES FROHMAN.

Albeit disappointed, Mrs. Barrymore at once sent this characteristic reply:

Charles Frohman, New York City:
Oh! GEORGIE DREW BARRYMORE.

Doing Double Duty.

"It was one of those sleepy, one horse, back water towns, like Squash," said a congressman, describing at a Hot Springs dinner a town that he disliked.

"Squash is the limit. A gentleman arrived there the other day and wanted a hair cut. He found the barber shop and, after shaking the barber vigorously, managed to awaken him.

"'How long will it take you to cut my hair, barber?' he asked.

"'Not long, boss,' said the barber.

"And he rose, yawned and stretched himself. Then he called upstairs to his wife:

"'Hey, send the kid down to the newspaper office to tell the editor I want my scissors just as soon as he's done editin' the paper. There's a gent here waitin' for a hair cut.'"—Washington Star.

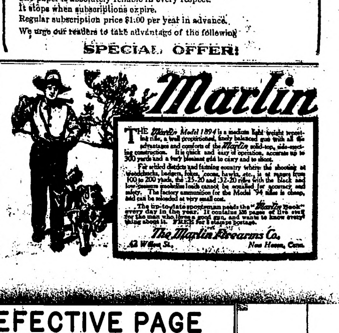
SPECIAL OFFER!



Marlin

THE Marlin Model 1894 is a medium light weight repeating rifle, a well proportioned, finely balanced gun with all the advantages and comforts of the Marlin solid-top, side-ejecting construction. It is quick and easy of operation, accurate up to 300 yards and a very pleasant gun to carry and to shoot.

For settled districts and farming country where the shooting at woodchucks, badgers, foxes, 'coons, hawks, etc., is at ranges from 100 to 200 yards, the .25-20 and .32-20 rifles with the black and low-pressure smokeless loads cannot be equalled for accuracy and safety. The factory ammunition for the Model '94 rifles is cheap, and can be reloaded at very small cost.

The up-to-date sportsman needs the "Marlin Book" every day in the year. It contains 136 pages of live stuff for the man who loves a good gun, and wants to know everything about it. FREE for 3 stamps postage.

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Hangs Himself in Barn.

Gibbon, Minn.—Fred J. Glassbrenner, a prominent farmer living about two miles southeast of this place, was found by his hired man, Nels Trueson, hanging by a rope from the rafters of his barn. There was still a quiver of life in the body but death came before medical aid could be procured.

The deceased was very prominent and well known throughout this section of the country and his act is a surprise to his relatives and friends here. No particular motive for Glassbrenner's suicide is known, but it is thought that his many acres of land were heavily incumbered and that he could not face a financial collapse.

Two letters bidding his family good-bye and containing requests to be fulfilled after his death were found upon examination of the place where the deed was committed. He was sixty years old and is survived by a widow and nine children.

Fergus Falls.—Otto Fresonke of Dent pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny here before Judge Baxter and was sentenced to the St. Cloud reformatory. Fresonke broke into a saloon and was caught inside.

Mother and Sons Dead.

Crookston.—Pierre Audette, a farmer residing near Huot, is prostrated as a result of the loss of two sons and his wife in less than a week. On Friday Rock Audette, aged 19, died of typhoid fever. Saturday last another son, Artell, aged 22, died of the same disease. The two were buried on Monday, and while the funeral was taking place, Mrs. Audette passed away of typhoid, and was buried yesterday. It is feared the stricken man will not survive the shock.

May be Wolves' Victim.

Duluth.—The unknown man who was killed by wolves recently in the wild and unsettled country between Stony river and Ely, and whose picked bones were found by woodsmen may have been Carl Frykdah, aged eighteen years, living here. He left Duluth on Feb. 9 to work for the lumber company in the section where the bones were found and as he did not keep his promises to write to his mother, she is fearful he was the victim of wild beasts.

Conoly Is A Bad Man.

Stillwater.—Facts coming to the hands of Chief Barnes by wire and letter indicate that John Conoly, in the county jail here on a charge of attempting to pass a forged check, is wanted in several Eastern and Southern cities. He is suspected of murdering Joseph Beins in New York, and an alleged photograph of him as a prisoner sent from New York, corresponds to the man under arrest here.

Duluth Girl Victim of Assault.

Duluth.—Miss Edna Stabrodt, twenty-three years old, daughter of Charles Stabrodt, residing on the Hermantown road, was assaulted by an unidentified man. Alphonse Laurin, a laborer who worked for a neighbor of the Stabrodts, is under suspicion. Mr. Stabrodt tried to shoot the girl's assailant when his attention was attracted by his daughter's cries, but the gun missed fire.

Will Have Wireless Station.

St. Cloud.—The United Wireless Telegraph company of New York announces that an expert will be sent to this city soon to make the final arrangements for the location of a station here. The system will be in operation this summer. The company has 157 stations in the United States.

Stillwater Loses Pioneer.

Stillwater, Minn.—The funeral of Hiram Dockendorff, an aged pioneer, who died at Hot Springs, Ark., where he was taken with the hope that his life might be prolonged, was held in the hall of the Masonic lodge. The Masons were in charge throughout. The dead man is survived by three sons.

NEWS NOTES.

Crookston.—J. M. Ball has left for Mexico, where he will make his future home.

Stillwater.—John Conoly was sentenced to three years in the state prison and will be taken there today. He was arraigned Wednesday afternoon in the municipal court on a new charge of attempting to pass a forged check, waived examination and was committed to the county jail. Through his attorney he petitioned the district court to direct the county attorney to prepare information without waiting for grand jury action. This done he was arraigned under the information, pleaded guilty and was sentenced.

The Marine bank of Bath, Maine., claims that a forgery for $370 was perpetrated there and through Howard Wheeler, an attorney of St. Paul, a suit has been instituted in the local district court against Conoly to recover that amount of money and the roll of bills taken from him by Chief Barnes has been garnisheed.

Litchfield.—Mrs. Elnora Zeigler, an aged woman living east of this city, committed suicide by hanging herself at the home of her son, Charles Zeigler, during a period of temporary aberration.

Greenbush.—The creamery report for January has just been issued, and shows $649.80 of business for that month. Farmers are getting a better grade of dairy cows and are going into the business on a more extensive scale. A ditch will be constructed from the town of Moose west to the Kittson county line, which will open valuable land. Other ditches will be constructed this year.

Cokato.—The Wright county high school declamation contest between the high schools of Cokato, Annandale, Buffalo and Howard Lake took place at the Baptist church before an audience of at least 500. Miss Florence Mattson and Gardner Olson, of the Cokato high school won and Miss Aichliff of Annandale and Mr. Lovell of Buffalo second. The contest was for the Wright county high school cup offered by the Cokato school and the judges awarded it to the Cokato high school.

Willmar.—The drinking place long maintained here by Tenius Olson is likely to be wiped out by reason of the attitude taken by Sheriff Bonde. Both Olson and his bartender were arrested again this week, the former being fined $50 and $10 costs and the latter $50 and $14 costs. Olson says he will take an appeal. The sheriff has possession of all effects of Olson's place and they will probably be sold. This makes three convictions for Olson and another case against him is pending in the district court.

St. Cloud.—Herman Abeles, who committed suicide in New York, was a resident of St. Cloud fifteen years, during which he was associated with his brother, David Abeles, in the clothing business. Three or four years ago he sold his interests to his brother and went to New York and engaged in the retail clothing business there. The firm of Abeles Brothers of this city was long one of the best known in this part of the state. The dead man was never married. Prior to entering business in New York he traveled through Europe.

Minneapolis.—The trip to Washington is practically the sole subject for discussion at the club rooms of Company B, First regiment M. N. G., and every member of the company is making preparations for the great event. The company will meet at the Armory, together with the members of other companies who are to make the trip, and the march to the St. Louis depot will be made with the First Regiment band, which will also make the trip. It is expected that about 100 men in uniform will go, in addition to a number of civilians and the band.

Rochester.—The board of county commissioners of Olmsted county has set aside the sum of $4,500 for good road work for the present year, and with the maximum amount to which the county will be entitled from the state a fund of $6,750 will be had. Besides this amount the Rochester Automobile club will raise a large sum for the same purpose, and the Rochester Commercial club also will have a share in the work. From present indications the work that will be done this year will make the roads of Olmsted county by far the best in the state.

Duluth.—Alleging that she was unable to endure the cruelty to which she was subjected by her husband, and compelled to flee with her youngest child from their home, Mrs. Emma Fischer has brought suit in the district court for divorce from her husband, Harry Fischer. She is twenty-eight years old, her husband is forty-two, and they were married at Fergus Falls Feb. 11, 1896. There are three children, aged eight, seven and four years. Mrs. Fischer alleges that immediately after the birth of her first child her husband began a course of cruelty.

Lakeville.—An attempt at a double murder and suicide, following his release, after being arrested on a charge of threatening to kill his wife, may end in the death of John E. Cook, a farmer living a mile west of this village. His wife and his son Earl, the objects of his attack, escaped serious injury. Cook was brought to this city and is being attended by a local physician, but as the bullet passed through his head little hope for his recovery is entertained. Cook's son came to the village and swore out a warrant charging his father with threatening to beat and kill the boy's mother. An officer went in search of Cook and found him at Farmington in the afternoon. He made the arrest and brought his prisoner to Lakeville, where he was released on bail.

Minneapolis.—A large tract of land at the head-waters of the Mississippi is to be given to the University of Minnesota by the Weyerhauser interests. The tract, which is situated in Carlton county, and which comprises 2,200 acres, will be used in connection with the university forestry department.

Stillwater.—Mrs. Ursula Schindler, who lived on a farm near Lake Elmo thirty-five years, and who was the oldest woman in this county, is dead, aged almost 98 years. Six children and eighty grand children survive.

MINNESOTA SOLONS

HOUSE DECIDES TO INSPECT THE OIL INSPECTOR.

Senator Sageng's Bill for Woman's Suffrage Laid on the Senate Shelf.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 23.—The legislative fight over the proposition of whether Armour shall be allowed to establish a packing plant at New Brighton, just outside of Minneapolis, came to its first test vote in the senate late this afternoon, and was defeated by a vote of 30 to 24. The vote was on a resolution of Senator J. M. Hackney of Hamline which called for a legislative investigating committee to look into the matter. The roll call followed a lengthy speech against the Hackney resolution by Senator George P. Wilson of Minneapolis. The vote doubtless means that the opposition to the packing plant will be unable to summon sufficient votes to pass the Rowe bill which contains conditions that would prohibit the plant being installed at New Brighton.

The Ole Peterson bill in the house today, was killed in committee of the whole. It provided that hereafter road taxes must be paid in cash. Speaker A. J. Rockne took the floor for the first time this session and opposed the measure.

A number of new bills were introduced in the senate this afternoon, one by Ole Sageng provides for an increase in membership of the Duluth and the Minneapolis grain inspection boards; that the governor, on passage of the bill, shall at once appoint three members for each board to serve one year, and three members additional to serve two years; and that thereafter the terms shall be two years for each appointee. E. E. Smith proposes in a new bill that all credits hereafter listed for taxation, shall pay a five per cent tax on such income as they yield. Frank Clague proposes a constitutional amendment, to permit of the state granting aid for the payment of at least one half, instead of one-third, of the cost of constructing roads and bridges. S. A. Nelson introduced two bills. One charges a state license of $100 a year for a circus, and $20 a year for moving picture and side shows. His other bill permits the smaller cities and towns of the state to levy a one mill tax for the establishment of children's playgrounds. Manly L. Fosseen is the author of a measure to permit cities of over 50,000, through their school boards, to purchase school text books and supplies for public school pupils, on contracts of 3 to 5 years, and to either give or sell these at cost to the pupils.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 24.—The C. J. Swanson senate bill, which aims to abolish the tuberculine test for cattle and horses, was the subject of over an hour's discussion by the senate today. The livestock and dairy products committee came in with a split report. The majority—Messrs. Anderson, Nelson, H. E. Hanson, Hackney, Briggs and Hall—reported the bill for indefinite postponement. The minority report—by Messrs. Swanson (author of the bill), Sageng, and James Johnston—favored advancement of the bill. Senator Swanson spoke at length on his bill. He claimed that the tuberculine test is absolutely unreliable; that its use means the killing of many healthy cattle. He also asserted that the condemnation money was paid out wrongly; that one year some ten men got $10,000; another year, a dozen men drew $15,000 for condemned animals.

A dozen brief speeches followed, ending with a suggestion by Senator Clague that the bill be given a further show, by amending the majority report of the livestock committee to advance the bill to general orders. The committee wouldn't stand for this, so the motion was put for adoption of the minority report. This carried, 36 to 14, and the bill abolishing the tuberculine test will live for a while longer—at least until its turn comes for consideration by the senate in committee of the whole.

A few bills were introduced in the senate today. McColl and Hardy joined in introducing a senate duplicate of the house bill which is aimed at prohibiting the Armour company from establishing a packing plant at New Brighton. Weis would let savings departments be established by state banks. Farrington desires that no game be killed on tracts which the game commission shall declare to be reserved for game propagation. Senator Elwell of Minneapolis had a bill which is of special interest to reforestration workers. It provides for the purchase of a 480 acre federal government reserve in Carlton county, to be used by the state university in advancement of teachers on forestry.

The Stuart bill for the exemption of credits from taxation occupied the entire time of the house today. The measure came before the house on the report of the tax committee, a majority report of nine members, headed by Chairman Dalzel, for advancement of the bill to general orders, and with a recommendation that it pass, and a minority report of eight members, led by W. A. Nolan, for the measure's indefinite postponement. The debate waxed warm, and at its conclusion victory wavered between both sides, those who favor the measure getting the best of it eventually. Debate was cut off by a motion for the previous question by L. H. Johnson of Minneapolis. The vote was then taken on the minority report for indefinite postponement. This received 50 yeas, to 65 nays. A motion was then made by Mr. Nolan that the subject matter of the bill be referred to the judiciary committee to pass upon its constitutionality—Nolan aiming at preventing the action of the house on the report of the majority of the tax committee to advance the bill. Nolan's motion carried, 56 to 45. But Nolan had "slipped a cog." He had failed to have the bill itself referred to the judiciary committee. So the next business in order was the disposition of the majority report. This motion was put and carried, in spite of objection by Nolan, and the bill will now accordingly be printed and placed on general orders for consideration in its turn by the committee of the whole.

The morning was taken up in numerous speeches for and against the Stuart measure. Burdette Thayer called attention to the question of whether the bill is constitutional. L. C. Spooner thought this phase of the bill should be given careful consideration. Stuart spoke at length in favor of his bill, stating that only some five million dollars worth of credits gets on the tax books; that most of these credits escape. The debate then drifted into the mortgage registry tax law, which the Stuart bill would repeal. Dalzel contended that the registry tax is an imposition, as the borrower is the man who is made to pay it. "You can't tell me," he said, "that the man who holds the mortgage is paying the tax." Carl Wallace stated that Minnesota is injured as a financial market because of the registry tax and taxation of credits. He stated that but yesterday the city of St. Paul had to sell $400,000 worth of bonds, drawing 4 per cent, in Chicago; that there was no market for them in Minnesota. The bill then went to a vote.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 25.—The house today adopted the Rosenwald resolution for a thorough examination of the state oil inspection department by the house committee on public accounts, on the ground that the oil inspection work is a vastly extravagant system in its present form.

The calling up of the resolution by Representative Rosenwald called for a hot speech by Representative Carley, who charged that the resolution was but politics, and who moved in conclusion that the investigating be done by the illuminating oils committee.

Mr. Rosenwald replied, as hotly, charging that as a matter of record the oil inspection department now has a bill asking for $65,000 for expenses, and that the bill is now in possession of the finance committee, and that in his belief, this vast additional amount is only wanted for political machine purposes to give employment to 85 men, when it could and would be proved that eight good inspectors can do the work better. Representative John Lennon also backed up Mr. Rosenwald in his allegations. The house seemed to think the same way, and after turning down the Carley amendment, adopted the Rosenwald resolution, 89 to 2.

The J. N. Johnson bill for the initiative and referendum was reported for indefinite postponement by the house elections committee today. Its author made a lengthy speech in its behalf, in which he was seconded by Representative Campbell, but the report of the committee was sustained by the house and the bill killed.

This afternoon, the public health committee of the house gave a hearing in the house chamber on the bill to prohibit the Armour company from establishing a packing plant at New Brighton. Mayor D. W. Lawler was among those who spoke against the proposed plant as a menace to public health of St. Paul's best residence district.

In the senate today, the elections committee reported the Ole Sageng woman suffrage bill out for indefinite postponement. Senator Seward of Lyon strongly opposed the committee report.

"A few days ago," he said, "the livestock committee reported the tuberculine test bill out for indefinite postponement; but the senate decided to give it a fair show, and advanced it to general orders. My God, gentlemen, is it to be said of us that we are to be less courteous to the women of Minnesota than we have been to bull calves?"

Seward carried the day, and the bill went back to the elections committee for further hearing and consideration, although it has no chance ever to get enough votes to pass the senate.

Cuticura Proved a Great Success.

"Eczema began over the top of my ear. It cracked and then began to spread. I had three different doctors and tried several things, but they did me no good. At last one side of my face and my neck were raw. The water ran out of it so that I had to wear medicated cotton, and it was so inflamed and sore that I had to put a piece of cloth over my pillow to keep the water from it, and it would stain the cloth a sort of yellow. The eczema itched so that it seemed as though I could tear my face all to pieces. Then I began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and it was not more than three months before it was all healed up. Miss Ann Pearsons, Northfield, Vt., Dec. 19, 1907."

The little negro heard the question, and looked around with astonishment, but not being entirely satisfied as to where the voice came from, walked on. Again the ventriloquist said: "I say, where is you-all takin' me?" This time the boy was satisfied that the turtle had been gifted with a miraculous power of speech, and instantly dropped it on the sidewalk in consternation, exclaiming: "I isn't a-takin' you-all nowhar. I has done dropped you!"

NEW IDEA

Helped Wis. Couple.

It doesn't pay to stick too closely to old notions of things. New ideas often lead to better health, success and happiness.

A Wis. couple examined an idea new to them and stepped up several rounds on the health ladder. The husband writes:

"Several years ago we suffered from coffee drinking, were sleepless, nervous, sallow, weak and irritable. My wife and I both loved coffee and thought it was a bracer." (delusion.)

"Finally, after years of suffering, we read of Postum and the harmfulness of coffee, and believing that to grow we should give some attention to new ideas, we decided to test Postum.

"When we made it right we liked it and were relieved of ills caused by coffee. Our friends noticed the change—fresher skin, steadier nerves, better temper, etc.

"These changes were not sudden, but relief increased as we continued to drink and enjoy Postum, and we lost the desire for coffee.

"Many of our friends did not like Postum at first, because they did not make it right. But when they boiled Postum according to directions on pkg., until it was dark and rich, they liked it better than coffee and were benefited by the change." "There's a Reason."

Breaking Him Up

By Nellie Cravey Gillmore.

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Mrs. Marsden had arrived at the conclusion that heroic measures would have to be resorted to.

It was a dreary, sun-forgotten morning. Spasmodic gusts of sleet pelted the window-panes and the wind cried shudderingly through the naked branches of the trees. Mrs. Marsden came down to breakfast a little late. She looked a good deal troubled and her cheeks were pale. There was a suggestion of sleeplessness about the dull, inflamed eyes.

Her husband glanced up from the newspaper he was reading with the customary perfunctory nod. Something in his wife's face chained his attention a second.

"What is the matter?" he asked.

Without meeting his glance, she replied:

"Jack was restless all night; a bit feverish, I'm afraid. I think you'd better speak to the doctor and have him stop by this morning."

The paper dropped listlessly from Marsden's hands; the boy was his idol. Throughout the meal, he dallied with his coffee, pushing aside all food that was set before him. At the conclusion of the meal, he rose abruptly and ran upstairs to the nursery. The child was asleep now, but his cheeks were almost too vividly pink and the breath was coming through his dry, scarlet lips in little labored jerks. He did not hesitate, but went at once to the telephone and called up the family physician.

In half an hour the doctor came, making a careful examination of the patient. It was nothing serious, he thought; nothing, at least, to occasion alarm at present. There was considerable temperature with a slightly irritated throat, but the child would be better as soon as the prescribed medicines were administered.

Jack Very Ill—Perhaps Dying.

Marsden remained until this was done and the boy had gone off into a quiet doze.

With his hand on the front door knob he paused. Kathleen came down hurriedly and laid her fingers with a little pleading gesture on his arm. There were tears on her lashes.

"Don't go just yet," she asked him; "somehow—I feel unaccountably anxious, notwithstanding the doctor's assurances."

Marsden was silent a moment. When he spoke his voice was gentler than usual.

"I'll come back as soon as I possibly can," he said, "but it is out of the question for me to stay at home this morning. You are unnecessarily worried, I think. Perhaps you'd better take a little rest yourself."

She half-opened her lips to speak, but reconsidering, turned away without so much as a word. Marsden followed her with his eyes, almost wistfully. Her gesture, the atmosphere of her conveyed an unmistakable sense of irritation, of reproof.

Out in the open air, apprehension died from the father's mind. His brief uneasiness was quite lost in the contemplation of the stirring day before him. It was not the first time he had hung almost his last dollar on the caprice of some promising stock. He had begun the struggle in Wall street a comparatively poor man. During a 20-years' career there, he had managed to make several fortunes—and lose them. There had always been a little left in the family exchequer with which to start over again, and in no case had he hesitated to use it. But to-day would mark a crisis. He had plunged every cent into this copper deal and if he did not come out with flying colors he would come out a bankrupt.

When he turned into the Street, scores of familiar faces greeted him cordially on all sides. For Marsden had long been a power on 'Change.

Excitement was rife. He flung himself into the thick of it like a drunken man. Hours passed. He forgot everything. He knew nothing, saw nothing, was conscious of nothing—save Copper!

In the midst of the tumult a man pushed his way through the crowds to where Marsden stood with strained ears, blood-shot eyes and shaking hands waiting for the rapidly approaching crisis. Would the stock hold or—if prices broke—

"A note for you, Dick."

One of the men had taken it from the messenger and thrust it into his hands. Marsden took it mechanically and jammed it into his pocket—and forgot it. When things had quieted a bit, and he had returned to his private office, he recollected and pulled out the note, breaking the seal in a sort of daze. He glanced at the handwriting a trifle impatiently at first. But suddenly his eyes swam red. A little hoarse cry caught in his throat and he turned ashen. Jack very ill—perhaps dying—perhaps dead! He did not wait to read the letter through, but with a groan turned and tore his way through the congested throngs that packed about the doors.

He forgot that there had ever existed such a thing as copper; Wall street faded into oblivion. When he reached the house an ominous stillness reigned outside and in. His knees shook under him as he staggered up the stairs. With his trembling fingers on the doorknob he stood panting for breath, fearing to open the door. But after a minute he controlled himself and went in. The child was sitting on the floor, playing with some toys. The nurse was darning in a corner and Kathleen was nowhere in evidence.

"Jack!"

Marsden's relief was so great that he sank into a chair, his breath almost sobbing through his white lips. He was perfectly limp after the strain of the past hour, but every other emotion was swallowed up in the feeling of intense thankfulness that enveloped him. When he had collected himself sufficiently, he spoke:

"Where is your mistress, Zella?" He turned to the maid.

"She went out, saying she would be back in time for luncheon."

"But she—she sent me a note, did she not?"

"Yes, sir; I think she did."

Marsden pondered the situation bewilderedly, a slow light forcing its way on his brain. It was probably a mere device, a trick of Kathleen's to break him up in the Street. He had explained to her that it would be impossible for him to stay at home at this particular time and she—this was her—revenge! Tears, reproaches, threats—she had meted them out in plenty to carry her point, and failing, she had deliberately essayed this last—outrage. Well, she had succeeded at last. His summary absence at the most critical period had doubtless lost him his last penny. This recalled him to the necessity for immediate action, and he rose and went to the telephone and rang up his brokers. It was as he had thought. It was too late now to cover; everything had been swept away by the rapid break in prices.

A curious feeling of revulsion suddenly came over Marsden. If, indeed, Kathleen cared so deeply as all this, then why not reconcile himself to the life of toil that, in his penniless state, stretched inevitably before him? After all, perhaps life in its simpler solution, held much greater joys than he knew!

Presently a door opened downstairs. Steps approached and in another moment the nursery door was thrown open.

Mrs. Marsden came in nervously, very pale, her dark eyes shrinking from her husband's quick glance. There was a transitory hurt look in his face, but he accused her by neither word nor gesture.

She paused half way across the floor. Her eyes were bright, her lips beginning to quiver.

"Dick!" she said, penitently, "Dick, forgive me!"

For a space he made no answer, and she bent forward, clasping her hands.

"I was mad, beside myself," she hurriedly on in little gasping way, "mad to think there was nothing could take you away from—from that; not for a single day—not for a single hour! I—a devil entered my heart—I was determined to—" Her voice trailed off to a whisper, and she stopped, breathing hard. She shook from head to foot.

Marsden rose and laid an affectionate hand across her shoulder, drawing her over to him.

"Never mind, little girl," he said; "I'm afraid that I haven't always treated you just fair and right in my blind selfishness. And in the long run I am the more to blame. But we'll start life all over again—in earnest. All those things will have to go, of course, but we are both young and—we have each other. I am strong enough to do any sort of work—"

"What do you mean?"

She had fallen back, her hand going to her throat as though she felt stifled.

He looked at her in perplexity, his eyes clouding.

"Why, it is quite clear, isn't it? I had to leave right in the midst of a crisis. I threw down everything. I did not even think to arrange with anyone about protecting my stock. The boy was dying, as I thought—as your words led me to believe. God! what was money—what was anything—compared to our child?"

The face she lifted to him was convulsed with passion.

"You—you left there with everything you had at stake? Is that what you mean?" Her voice was hoarse, strained.

"Exactly." A suddenly vacant look had come into Marsden's eyes.

She burst into a wild laugh. The words fairly hissed through her clamped teeth:

"And you—you are my husband!" She stamped the floor with her foot.

A dazed moment went by. When Marsden looked up, even his lips were white. His eyes were sunken and into them had come the tragedy of years.

"Kathleen!"

But only her quick, angry footsteps, sounding along the polished corridor answered him.

WHAT CONSTITUTES TEAM WORK IN NATIONAL GAME

Nothing More Than Perfect Understanding Between All Members of the Club.

"What constitutes team work?" is a question often asked. The fans are constantly reminded that this feature of a club's play is one of the most important essentials.

Naturally they wonder what really constitutes team play and hence the reason the above question is so often asked. Team work is nothing more than a perfect understanding between all the members of a club as to what is going to be done on any particular play.

For instance: There is a man on first with but one out. If the base runner decides to try for second he should first impart this information to the batter, so that the man at the plate can in any legitimate way help him reach the base in safety. Or vice versa.

This applies to every play a team may make, where there are two or more men connected with the play. We will say that with a man on first the guardian of the sack decides that there is a chance to catch the base runner napping.

The first sacker accordingly signals the catcher to throw down there on the next ball pitched. In order for the backstop to be sure that his end of the play is going to be made right, he must let the pitcher know what he is going to do, so that the box artist can hand the ball so wide of the plate that the batter will not have a chance to hit the ball and thus spoil the attempted play.

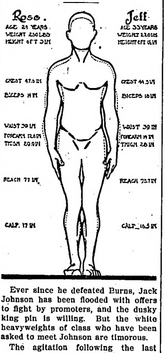
When his understanding is not thorough it certainly works havoc with a club's team play. With a man on first and one out, the hit and run play is attempted.

That is, the batter decides on that play and gives the signal. He takes it for granted the man at first is going down on the next ball pitched, and to help him out swings at the ball, no matter where it is.

Instead of the base runner starting for second, he remains glued to the bag simply because he has missed the sign. The man at bat goes through with his end of the play and possibly misses hitting the ball.

A play of this kind may easily lose a club the game, and emphasizes the importance of having an understanding between every member of the club.

ROSE BIGGER THAN JEFFRIES



Ever since he defeated Burns, Jack Johnson has been flooded with offers to fight by promoters, and the dusky king pin is willing. But the white heavyweights of class who have been asked to meet Johnson are timorous.

The agitation following the last championship fight has resulted in a number of would-be candidates offering themselves upon the sacrificial stone to redeem the white man's supremacy.

Prominent among those mentioned is Ralph Rose, the California giant, for whom Battling Nelson stands sponsor. Grandly equipped by nature, Rose may be groomed to fight Johnson.

Rose eclipses Jeffries in size. He is blessed with strength which has never been thoroughly tried out. In the hands of a master trainer Rose might in a few years gain the experience necessary to equip him for an encounter with the Galveston cyclone. At present he knows nothing of the fighting game's finer points.

An idea of this youngster's immensity may be gained from the illustration showing how much bigger Rose is to that monster puncher, Jim Jeffries.

Donovan Hired as Scout.

President I. Taylor of the Boston Red Sox has signed Patsy Donovan to act as scout for his team and pick up all the best players in the minor clubs he can get his eyes on, and he will travel far and wide to find them. Donovan has been manager of the Brooklyn Trolley Dodgers for three years, and while there was certainly up against it, but he managed to pick up some fine talent for the team, including Rucker and McMillan. He has had several offers to manage minor league teams, but has sidetracked them in favor of accepting a berth with the Boston club. Donovan will assume the position which Fred Lake filled last year before he was appointed manager of the team.

"The Last Best West"

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The government of Canada now gives to every actual settler 160 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. The 300,000 contented American settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1908 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

Making Crime a Business

By George T. Pardy

True Record of the Achievement of Famous John W. Murray in Uncovering the Guilty Parties in the Blenheim Swamp Slaughter—How the Slayer Was Unearthed by the Master Sleuth.

FOUR miles from the little town of Eastwood, Ontario, Canada, there lies a dark, gloomy marsh known as Blenheim swamp. It is a desolate, lonely spot, which fallen logs and tangled thickets combine to render well-nigh impassable to the feet of the curious explorer, and at one edge there lies a pool of black, sullen water yclept Pine pond.

Far in the depths of this foul morass on the morning of February 21, 1890, two brothers, Joseph and George Eldridge, while out chopping wood, stumbled over the lifeless body of a young man, half buried in the weeds and brush. In the back of the head was a round, black hole indicating where a bullet had ploughed its fatal way, and near the nape of the neck was a similar wound. Even to an unexperienced eye it was evident that the victim had been shot down from behind, perhaps without obtaining a glimpse of his cowardly assassin. The body was that of a smoothly shaven youth of refined appearance. The clothing was of excellent quality, English in style and cut, with a check caped mackintosh, and underwear also of British make. There was no clue to his identity. The name of his tailor and the label on his clothes had been cut away and the label on his brown derby hat removed.

Detective John Wilson Murray of Toronto was ordered to take the case in hand and he went to view the big Blenheim swamp where the body had been found. He gazed upon the tell-tale crimson splotch where the head of the murdered man had lain, then surveyed the surrounding ground and came across a grim trail of accusing red. He followed it back a few paces and found that it ended in one great blot of gore, beyond which there was no further trace of blood. It was evident that there the shot had been fired that felled the victim. His murderer had borne the lifeless body to the denser place to hide it. On his hands and knees Murray crawled around the scene of the crime, going over the ground inch by inch. Three times he crossed and recrossed the fatal trail hoping that he might discover a bit of a label, a button, a scrap of paper—anything that might lend a clue to the history of the murdered man. At last his exertions were rewarded by the finding of a cigar holder with an amber mouthpiece, marked F. W. B., and that was all of the grim secret yielded by the dismal swamp.

Five days had elapsed since the finding of the body, but though pictures of the victim were published in all the leading Canadian papers and copies sent to England, no identification was made. The body was buried at Princeton, a few miles from Blenheim. On the sixth day a man and woman arrived at Princeton and asked to see the body, saying that they had seen the picture printed in the papers and fancied they recognized the features. They had crossed from England recently, and on the same ship was a young man who resembled strongly the picture of the deceased. The body was dug up on March 1, the lady and gentleman viewed it, and identified it as the remains of their fellow passenger.

"We think his name was Benwell," they said. "He was merely a casual acquaintance aboard ship and we knew nothing of him."

They returned to Paris, a town about ten miles from Princeton, and Murray, returning from a visit to the swamp, went directly to the hotel where they were staying.

"I am John Wilson Murray of the department of criminal investigation," said the detective, introducing himself. "You are the gentleman who has been viewing the body found in the swamp?"

"Yes," said he, "my wife and I were out at the grave and saw the body."

"You were acquainted with the young man?" queried the detective.

"Very slightly," was the response. "I just met him aboard ship."

"What was his name?" inquired Murray.

"I think it was Fred Bentwell or Benswell or Benswell," replied the gentleman. "We were fellow passengers on the Britannic of the White Star line. He was on his way to London, Ontario. I last saw him at Niagara Falls. He had a good deal of luggage and left some of it."

"Will you be able to point out his baggage?" asked Murray.

"Why, yes," responded the gentleman. "I am going to the Falls to-day. We only came here because we saw the picture in the paper."

"Let me have your name, please, so that I can find you at the Falls," requested Murray.

"Reginald Birchall of London, England. I shall be pleased to help you in any way that is in my power," replied the gentleman.

"How was the young man dressed when you last saw him?" inquired the detective.

Murray was wearing a navy blue overcoat at the time, and Birchall touched the sleeve of it lightly.

"Like that," he said, "a whole suit of blue."

"Did he drink?" asked Murray.

"Yes, he used to get pretty jolly at times," asserted Binchall.

The detective shook his head gravely.

"That London, Ontario, is a bad place for a convivial chap," he said. "They'd kill a fellow there for $5. Were you ever in this country before?"

"I have been in New York and Niagara Falls, but never in Canada," replied Birchall, and having thanked him for the information given, Murray withdrew.

On his way to the telegraph office he reviewed the conversation that had just taken place. He had already reached the conclusion that Birchall had lied to him.

"Shadow this man," the message read, "but do not arrest him unless he tries to cross the river to the United States. I will be there Sunday night."

Further investigation revealed that Mr. and Mrs. Birchall and a young man named Douglas Raymond Pelly were guests of Baldwin's boarding house at Niagara Falls, and had arrived there the day after the murder. Murray called on Pelly, who was a handsome young fellow, five feet nine inches tall, of slight build, with a small, light moustache and decided English accent. Pelly declared that he was the son of the Rev. R. P. Pelly of Walden Place, vicar of Saffron Walden, Essex, England. He was 25 years old, a graduate of Oxford, and a cousin of the beautiful Lady Pelly, who was one of the suite of Lord Lansdowne, formerly governor general of Canada. He informed Murray that he knew both the dead man, whose picture was in the papers, and Birchall.

"Benwell, Birchall, Mrs. Birchall, and I all came out from England in one party," said Pelly. "Birchall and Benwell left us for a day and Benwell never came back. I saw the picture of the dead man a few days later, and I told Birchall it was Benwell and that he ought to go and identify the body and make sure."

Murray spent several hours conversing with Pelly who was perfectly willing to tell all he knew regarding the suspect and murdered man. Among Birchall's papers, found in searching his effects, were letters corroborative of what Pelly said. The latter, with his Oxford course finished and the world before him, was looking for an opening in life, when, in December, 1889, he read an advertisement in London, England, newspapers as follows:

"Canada.—University man, having farm, wishes to meet gentleman's son to live with him and learn the business, with view to partnership; must invest £500 to extend stock; board, lodging, and five per cent. interest till partnership arranged. Address, J. R. Burchall, Primrose Club, 4 Park Place, St. James, London."

Pelly wrote to the above address, requesting further particulars. In reply he received a telegram from J. R. Burchall, stating that he would visit Walden Place, Saffron Walden, on the following Thursday. Pelly answered with a note, which was found with other letters in Birchall's effects, hoping that he would stay all night as it was a long way to come for such a short interview, and also he desired to have his father meet J. R. Burchall. On the appointed day Burchall arrived at Walden Place, and later met Pelly in London, and won over both son and father.

He pictured to them a large farm one and a half miles from Niagara Falls, Ontario, a farm with large brick houses and barns, the former heated by steam and lighted by gas and the latter by electric light, with lights placed around the farm. He told of the big and profitable business, and mentioned the fine fishing, shooting and other sports to be enjoyed on the estate. He explained that the business carried on was buying horses in the rough and grooming them to sell for profit; that the farm was used to raise horse feed; that during J. R. Burchall's absence his overseer, a Scotchman named McDonald, and several hired men looked after the farm and business; that he had a branch business at Woodstock, Ontario, and had rooms there, where he and his wife lived at times. He said a number of Englishmen lived around Niagara Falls, and that a club had been created in which the members lived in English style and had English servants. Burchall said he had organized the club. The country was an earthly paradise, with wealth to be had for simply sojourning in the land.

Completely captivated by this glowing description, on January 11, 1890, Pelly wrote from Hollington, St. Leonard's-on-Sea, to J. R. Burchall, saying: "Please consider all settled. If you will have the agreement drawn up, I will sign it and forward you a cheque for £170 at the same time. I shall look to meeting you on February first. When you get my steamer tickets would you be so kind as to forward me some steamer labels?"

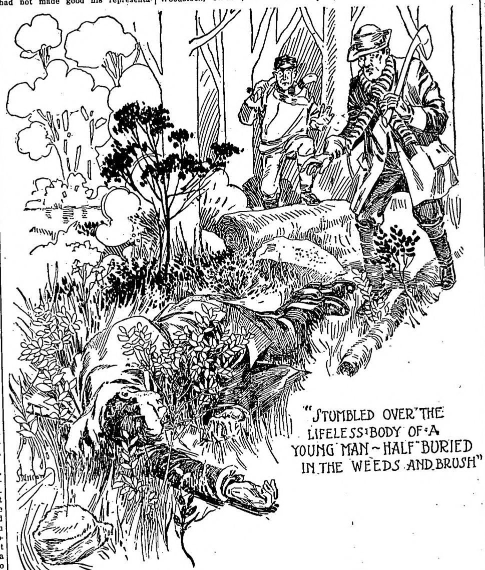
At half past eight that evening Birchall returned to the Stafford house in Buffalo alone. He was in high good humor, joking and laughing pleasantly. In response to Pelly's inquiry for his companion of the morning he stated that he took Benwell to the farm and introduced him to McDonald, the overseer. Later Benwell told him that he did not like the place or the people but he had stayed at the farm when Birchall left for Buffalo. Birchall also said he had given Benwell several addresses before leaving, so that he could visit folk in the country roundabout, including Attorney Hellmuth of London, Ontario, who had been a passenger on the Britannic. Pelly began to ask too many questions, whereupon Birchall declared he was tired and went to bed. On the following day they went to Niagara Falls, taking their luggage with them. They crossed to the Canada side and stopped at Mrs. Baldwin's, Birchall arranging for rooms and board there.

Soon after their arrival at Baldwin's Birchall invited Pelly to take a walk during which the young man, who was beginning to suspect that his astute host was not playing an altogether straight game, told Birchall that he had not made good his representations. Birchall gave an evasive reply, and under pretense of showing his companion the beauties of the Niagara river, took him down an old rotten stairway that led over the cliffs to the edge of the water. At the bottom of the shaky steps there stood a stranger, the sight of whom seemed to annoy Birchall, for without lingering to admire the view he turned and retraced his steps. Returning to their rooms they saw a newspaper containing the account of the discovery of the body of a murdered man near Woodstock, and Birchall proposed that Pelly should go there and see if the remains were those of Benwell. This sinister remark aroused fresh suspicions in Pelly's mind and alarmed him to such an extent that he slipped a revolver into his pocket, determining to carry it in the future.

On the next day Birchall persuaded Pelly to go over to the American side of the river with him, under the pretense of looking after some missing baggage. It was raining and blowing hard when they started to walk back to Canada across the Suspension bridge. There were no other pedestrians in sight as they neared the center of the bridge and Birchall, halting, requested Pelly to look over the cables at the roaring torrent below.

"The view is superb," he said, as he leaned over the edge, "come and see it."

Pelly saw that it would be an easy thing to thrust an unsuspecting person over the cable into the river. His mistrust of Birchall had increased a thousand fold and he curtly refused to move from where he was standing. Birchall turned white, looked around and stepped toward his companion. As he did so Pelly walked on. Birchall called to him sharply: "Come, walk alongside me," he said. "Your heavy overcoat will help keep the rain off me." Pelly shook his head obstinately and was about to take to his heels and run when two men came walking across the bridge. Birchall then ceased to argue with his companion and the two made their way back to Canada, keeping several paces apart. The next day Birchall, accompanied by his wife, went to Paris, Ontario, to view the body of the man whose picture had appeared in the papers and shortly after their return to the Falls the arrest followed.



"STUMBLED OVER THE LIFELESS BODY OF A YOUNG MAN—HALF BURIED IN THE WEEDS AND BRUSH"

Murray cabled and wrote at once to Scotland Yard, London, England, for information about Birchall, Pelly and Benwell. He was advised that J. R. Birchall was none other than the younger son of the Rev. Joseph Birchall, late well-known vicar of church kirk and rural dean of Whalley. After completing his course at Oxford, young Birchall, who had achieved a reputation for wildness during his college days, went to London. There he eloped with Florence Stevenson, daughter of David Stevenson, for 50 years master of transportation of the London and Northwestern railroad. Birchall's favorite club at this time, November, 1888, was the Badminton club, 100 Picadilly, W. When he made ready to leave England after his marriage, he cashed cheques for £25 at the Badminton club, and C. Stewart Sproat, secretary of the club, wrote him on January 7, 1890, when he was back in England, to send the cash without further delay.

He and his bride sailed for America in the fall of 1888. They wrote to David Stevenson from America, and early in 1889 Birchall wrote from Woodstock, Ontario, to creditors at Oxford, saying that he was in the employ of Somerset & Co., Brock street, Woodstock, and would pay his debts promptly. In the summer of 1889 Birchall and his wife returned to England and lived with Mr. Stevenson. Then it was that Birchall began advertising, under the name of J. R. Burchall, address the Primrose Club, for young men with money to go to Canada and learn farming. Pelly's father was, as he had stated, vicar of Saffron Walden, Essex, and Benwell's father was Col. Benwell of Cheltenham.

At Woodstock Murray learned that Birchall and his wife arrived there from England in the autumn of 1888 to look over farm lands and enjoy the country life of Canada. Birchall and his wife passed as Lord and Lady Somerset. They lived gayly and seemed to have money befitting their rank in life. They were fond of driving and picnics, and one of the spots "Lord Somerset" visited on various occasions was Pine Pond, which was surrounded by Blenheim swamp. When they returned to England, "Lord and Lady Somerset" departed from Woodstock very suddenly, leaving numerous unpaid bills behind them.

When Birchall again sailed for America it was not in the role of Lord Somerset. He came accompanied by his wife, Pelly and Benwell, and the four arrived in New York on the Britannic on February 14. From this date Murray took up the trail and verified the truth of Pelly's narrative. He verified the dates of arrival and departure at the Metropolitan hotel of the party of four, and their arrival at the Stafford house, Buffalo, on February 16. At the Stafford house he ascertained the fact that, on the day following their arrival, Pelly and Mrs. Birchall stayed at the hotel, while Birchall and Benwell were called before six o'clock and went away together. Birchall returned in the evening but Benwell never returned.

The next step was to follow the course of Birchall and Benwell after leaving the Stafford house on February 17. Conductor William H. Poole, running on the Grand Trunk railroad between Niagara Falls and Windsor, asserted that he had two passengers who got off his train at Eastwood, four miles from Blenheim swamp. Their description answered that of Birchall and Benwell. The train stopped at Eastwood at 11:14 that morning. Matthew Virtue, a bailiff of Woodstock, was on the train. As it left Eastwood he saw two young Englishmen walking away from the station, one of them wearing a cape coat. A Miss Lockhart of Blandford was on the train. A couple of seats ahead of her sat two young Englishmen. As the train approached Eastwood her attention was drawn to them by the manner in which they were talking about the land. They were admiring fields which had nothing about them to be admired. One was easy to identify by the big astrakhan cap he wore. She saw them alight at Eastwood and walk north.

Alfred Hayward and his wife saw the pair leave Eastwood station. John Crosby, a young farmer living in Blenheim township, was driving in Governor's road about noon when he saw the two young men walking towards Blenheim swamp. Miss Allie Fallon, who lived with her mother a short distance from Blenheim swamp, saw them pass the house on the road leading past the marsh. One, in a cape overcoat, walked ahead of his companion. She had known Lord Somerset by sight the year before and thought the man walking behind was that nobleman. James Rapson, owner of a swamp adjoining Blenheim swamp, was out with his men cutting timber about one o'clock in the afternoon, when he heard two pistol shots fired in rapid succession in Blenheim swamp.

Thus Murray completed his chain of evidence to the swamp and the very hour of the murder when the assassin was alone in the swamp with his victim. The shots were fired about one o'clock, half an hour after Miss Fallon had seen the men pass. Birchall had evidently pointed out land from the car window as part of his farm, and told Benwell they would take a short cut through the woods to it. Benwell was a credulous youth and innocently entered the swamp and started up the winding path. It was an easy matter for Birchall to drop behind a moment while Benwell was pressing eagerly on anxious for a view of the farm—the farm he was never to see.

At half past two Charles Buck, a young farmer living on the road between Eastwood and Blenheim swamp, was driving home from Woodstock when, at the crossroads leading to Eastwood, a man turned the corner from the Blenheim swamp road and started for Eastwood. The man wore a fur cap, and he stopped and asked Mr. Buck the way to Gables Corners, as he wished to get to Woodstock. Buck told him he was within much less than two miles of Eastwood and he could get to Woodstock from there as easily as from Gables Corners. The man thanked him and walked on toward Eastwood at a rapid pace.

At three o'clock Miss Alice Smith arrived at the Eastwood station to post a letter. As she was going into the station gate she came face to face with Lord Somerset, who had been in Woodstock the year before, and who had called at the home of her grandfather, John Hayward at Eastwood. Somerset wore an astrakhan cap. He came up to Miss Smith and shook hands, saying: "How do you do? Don't you remember me?" and asked after her family and grandfather. He told Miss Smith he was coming back later, and then bought a ticket for Hamilton. Miss Mary Swazie, another young lady of Eastwood, also was at the station for the three o'clock train, and saw the stranger. His trousers were turned up and his shoes were muddy. Miss Ida Cromwell of Eastwood also saw him at the station. James Hayward, an Eastwood storekeeper, saw him at the station and recognized the so-called Lord Somerset.

At 3:38 the train for Niagara Falls reached Eastwood and the stranger in the fur cap climbed aboard. George Hay, a brakeman, saw and remembered him distinctly and identified Birchall positively as the man. Other witnesses also identified him, their evidence covering Birchall's trail up to his return to the Stafford house, Buffalo, at 8:30 at night. Witnesses also identified the dead body of Benwell as that of the young man with Birchall on the train to Eastwood, and on the road to the swamp. Birchall, according to the detective's deductions, had four hours and 24 minutes in which to walk the four miles from Eastwood to the swamp, do the murder, and walk back to Eastwood. He arrived at 11:14 in the morning and departed at 3:38 in the afternoon. If he took three hours to walk the eight miles, he still had one hour and 24 minutes for the crime.

As a final proof of Birchall's guilt, Murray was advised by the London, England, police that Col. Benwell had just received from Birchall an undated letter, headed with the address of Niagara Falls. The postmark revealed its date as February 20, three days after Birchall left Benwell dead in in the swamp. In this letter Birchall asked that $500 be sent him at once, adding: "I have been talking to your son to-day about arrangements, and he is so well satisfied with the prospect here that he is ready to go immediately into the partnership, and he is writing to you to-day on the subject."

The $500 asked for was to be the first payment on $2,500 which Col. Benwell was to send to his son for Birchall if the farm and prospects pleased the youth. Pelly identified the body found on February 18 as Benwell's body, and therefore Birchall could not have been talking to him on February 20. Instead of writing to his father on February 20, Benwell was lying cold in death. Having found witnesses who identified Birchall as the bogus Lord Somerset, who had made frequent visits to Blenheim swamp the year before, and had learned the path to Pine Pond, the lake in the swamp that is supposed to be bottomless, Murray knew that his case was complete.

Birchall had embarked in business as a murderer. He had deliberately planned the crimes and fitted himself for the practice of his profession. While masquerading as Lord Somerset he had selected the bottomless lake known as Pine Pond for the grave that would tell no tales. The Blenheim swamp he marked as the place of slaughter. He was familiar with the emigration business, through his father-in-law's knowledge of it, and conceived the idea of taking rich young men instead of poor immigrants. He created an imaginative farm and went back to England seeking victims, but made the mistake of taking two instead of one. Even then his plans were well laid. He intended to kill Benwell in the swamp and shove Pelly into the whirlpool rapids. Neither body would be found for he would bury Benwell in the bottomless lake and Pelly would vanish in the rapids. If one of the Elridges had not slipped in the swamp he would not have stepped upon Benwell's body, revealing the crime. Birchall had not meant to leave the body where anyone could find it. He was heading for Pine Pond when he slew Benwell and intended to drag the body there, but a recent storm had swept the swamp and choked with debris the path to the bottomless lake. With Benwell and Pelly vanished from off the face of the earth, Birchall would have collected through bogus letters to the fond parents the sum still due from his victims and then returned to England in pursuit of other prey.

Birchall's trial began at Woodstock, Ontario, on September 22, 1890. The case attracted world-wide attention and the English newspapers as well as those of France, Germany and Italy printed columns upon columns of the proceedings. Despite the brilliant and desperate fight made by the prisoner's counsel to save his client, the evidence gathered by Murray was too convincing to be set aside. Birchall was found guilty and sentenced to be hanged on November 14. He went to his doom bravely on a cold, gray morning, walked out in the prison yard unsupported and mounted the scaffold with a steady step. The drop fell, and an inert figure dangled at the end of a rope, swinging to and fro in the chill wind. Frederick Benwell had been avenged by the law.

VOL. VIII. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, MARCH 12, 1909. NO. 50.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S STRONG ADDRESS

INAUGURAL DELIVERED BY NATION'S NEW CHIEF EXECUTIVE.

EXTRA SESSION IS PROMISED

Congress Will Meet March 15 to Take Up Tariff Revision—Adequate Army and Navy Urged—Panama Canal Heartily Approved—Southern Race Problem and Labor Legislation Discussed.

Washington, Mar. 4. — President Taft, having been sworn in as chief executive of the nation, delivered an inaugural address that was listened to with great interest. In part it was as follows:

My Fellow Citizens: Any one who takes the oath I have just taken must feel a heavy weight of responsibility. If not, he has no conception of the powers and duties of the office upon which he is about to enter, or he is lacking in a proper sense of the obligation which the oath imposes.

The office of an inaugural address is to give a summary outline of the main policies of the new administration, so far as they can be anticipated. I have had the honor to be one of the advisers of my distinguished predecessor, and as such, to hold up his hands in the reforms he has initiated. I should be untrue to myself, to my promises and to the declaration of the party platform upon which I am elected to office, if I did not make the maintenance and enforcement of those reforms a most important feature of my administration. They were directed to the suppression of the lawlessness and abuses of power of the great combinations of capital invested in railroads and in industrial enterprises carrying on interstate commerce. The steps which my predecessor took and the legislation passed on his recommendation have accomplished much, have caused a general halt in the vicious policies which created popular alarm, and have brought about in the business affected a much higher regard for existing law.

More Legislation Needed.

To render the reforms lasting, however, and to secure at the same time freedom from alarm on the part of those pursuing proper and progressive business methods, further legislative and executive action are needed. Relief of the railroads from certain restrictions of the anti-trust law has been urged by my predecessor and will be urged by me. On the other hand, the administration is pledged to legislation looking to a proper federal supervision and restriction to prevent excessive issues of bonds and stocks by companies owning and operating interstate commerce railroads.

I hope to be able to submit at the first regular session of the incoming congress, in December next, definite suggestions in respect to the needed amendments to the anti-trust and the interstate commerce laws, and the changes required in the executive departments concerned in their enforcement.

Promises Extra Session.

A matter of most pressing importance is the revision of the tariff. In accordance with the promises of the platform upon which I was elected, I shall call congress into extra session, to meet on the fifteenth day of March, in order that consideration may be at once given to a bill revising the Dingley act. This should secure an adequate revenue and adjust the duties in such a manner as to afford to labor and to all industries in this country, whether of the farm, mine or factory, protection by tariff equal to the difference between the cost of production abroad and the cost of production here, and have a provision which shall put into force, upon executive determination of certain facts, a higher or maximum tariff against those countries whose trade policy toward us equitably requires such discrimination. It is thought that there has been such a change in conditions since the enactment of the Dingley act, drafted on a similarly protective principle, that the measure of the tariff above stated will permit the reduction of rates in certain schedules and will require the advancement of few, if any.

Money Needed for Big Projects.

The putting into force of laws which shall secure the conservation of our resources, so far as they may be within the jurisdiction of the federal government, including the most important work of saving and restoring our forests, and the general improvement of waterways, are all proper government functions which must involve large expenditure if properly performed. While some of them, like the reclamation of arid lands, are made to pay for themselves, others are of such an indirect benefit that this cannot be expected of them. A permanent improvement, like the Panama canal, should be treated as a distinct enterprise, and should be paid for by the proceeds of bonds, the issue of which will distribute its cost between the present and future generations in accordance with the benefits derived. It may well be submitted to the serious consideration of congress whether the deepening and control of the channel of a great river system, like that of the Ohio or of the Mississippi, when definite and practical plans for the enterprise have been approved and determined upon, should not be provided for in the same way.

For Army and Navy.

Then, too, there are expenditures of government absolutely necessary if our country is to maintain its proper place among the nations of the world, and is to exercise its proper influence in defense of its own trade interests, in the maintenance of traditional American policy against the colonization of European monarchies in this hemisphere, and in the promotion of peace and international morality. I refer to the cost of maintaining a proper army, a proper navy and suitable fortifications upon the mainland of the United States and in its dependencies.

We should have an army so organized, and so officered, as to be capable in time of emergency in co-operation with the national militia, and under the provisions of a proper national volunteer law, rapidly to expand into a force sufficient to resist all probable invasion from abroad and to furnish a respectable expeditionary force, if necessary, in the maintenance of our traditional American policy which bears the name of President Monroe.

Our fortifications are yet in a state of only partial completeness and the number of men to man them is insufficient. What has been said of the army may be affirmed in even a more emphatic way of the navy. A modern navy cannot be improvisesd. It must be built and in existence when the emergency arises which calls for its use and operation.

Asiatic Immigration.

The admission of Asiatic immigrants who cannot be amalgamated with our population has been made the subject either of prohibitory clauses in our treaties and statutes, or of strict administrative regulation secured by diplomatic negotiation. I sincerely hope that we may continue to minimize the evils likely to arise from such immigration without unnecessary friction and by mutual concessions between self-respecting governments. Meantime, we must take every precaution to prevent, or, failing that, to punish outbursts of race feeling among our people against foreigners of whatever nationality who have by our grant a treaty right to pursue lawful business here and to be protected against lawless assault or injury.

This leads me to point out a serious defect in the present federal jurisdiction which ought to be remedied at once. Having assured to other countries by treaty the protection of our laws for such of their subjects or citizens as we permit to come within our jurisdiction, we now leave to a state or a city, not under the control of the federal government, a duty of performing our international obligations in this respect. By proper legislation we may, and ought to, place in the hands of the federal executive the means of enforcing the treaty rights of such aliens in the courts of the federal government. It puts our government in a pusillanimous position to make definite engagements to protect aliens and then to excuse the failure to perform those engagemnts by an explanation that the duty to keep them is in states or cities, not within our control.

Monetary Laws Need Change.

One of the reforms to be carried out during the incoming administration is a change of our monetary and banking laws, so as to secure greater elasticity in the forms of currency available for trade, and to prevent the limitations of law from operating to increase the embarrassments of a financial panic. The monetary commission lately appointed is giving full consideration to existing conditions and to all proposed remedies, and will doubtless suggest one that will meet the requirements of business and of public interest. We may hope that the report will embody neither the narrow view of those who believe that the sole purpose of the new system should be to secure a large return on banking capital or of those who would have greater expansion of currency with little regard to provisions for its immediate redemption or ultimate security. There is no subject of economic discussion so intricate and so likely to evoke different views and dogmatic statements as this one. The commission in studying the general influence of currency on business and of business on currency, have wisely extended their investigation in European banking and monetary methods.

The incoming congress should promptly fulfill the promise of the Republican platform and pass a proper postal savings bank bill. It will not be unwise or excessive paternalism. The promise to repay by the government will furnish an inducement to savings deposits which private enterprise cannot supply, and at such a low rate of interest as not to withdraw custom from existing banks.

Panama Canal All Right.

The Panama canal will have a most important bearing upon the trade between the eastern and the far western sections of our country, and will greatly increase the facilities for transportation between the eastern and western seaboard, and may possibly revolutionize the transcontinental rates with respect to bulky merchandise. It will also have a most beneficial effect to increase the trade between the eastern seaboard of the United States and the western coast of South America, and, indeed, with some of the important ports on the east coast of South America reached by rail from the west coast. The work on the canal is making most satisfactory progress. The type of the canal as a lock canal was fixed by congress after a full consideration of the conflicting reports of the majority and minority of the consulting board, and after the recommendation of the war department and the executive upon those reports. Recent suggestion that something had occurred on the isthmus to make the lock type of the canal less feasible than it was supposed to be when the reports were made and the policy determined on, led to a visit to the isthmus of a board of competent engineers to examine the Gatun dam and locks which are the key of the lock type. The report of that board shows that nothing has occurred in the nature of newly revealed evidence which should change the views once formed in the original discussion. The construction will go on under a most effective organization controlled by Col. Goethals and his fellow army engineers associated with him, and will certainly be completed early in the next administration, if not before.

South and the Negroes.

I look forward with hope to increasing the already good feeling between the south and the other sections of the country. My chief purpose is not to effect a change in the electoral vote of the southern states. That is a secondary consideration. What I look forward to is an increase in the tolerance of political views of all kinds and their advocacy throughout the south, and the existence of a respectable political opposition in every state; even more than this, to an increased feeling on the part of all the people in the south that this government is their government, and that its officers in their states are their officers.

The consideration of this question cannot, however, be complete and full without reference to the negro race, its progress and its present condition. The 13th amendment secured them freedom; the 14th amendment due process of law, protection of property and the pursuit of happiness; and the 15th amendment attempted to secure the negro against any deprivation of the privilege to vote, because he was a negro. The 13th and 14th amendments have been generally enforced and have secured the objects for which they were intended. While the 15th amendment has not been generally observed in the past it ought to be observed, and the tendency of southern legislation to-day is toward the enactment of electoral qualifications which shall square with that amendment.

Laws for Labor's Benefit.

There is one other matter to which I shall refer. It was made the subject of great controversy during the election and calls for at least a passing reference now. My distinguished predecessor has given much attention to the cause of labor, with whose struggle for better things he has shown the sincerest sympathy. At his instance, congress has passed the bill fixing the liability of interstate carriers to their employes for injury sustained in the course of employment, abolishing the rule of fellow-servant and the common law rule as to contributory negligence. It has also passed a law fixing the compensation of government employes for injuries sustained in the employ of the government through the negligence of the superior. It also passed a model child labor law for the District of Columbia. In previous administrations an arbitrary law for interstate commerce railroads and their employes, and laws for the application of safety devices to save the lives and limbs of employes of interstate railroads had been passed. Additional legislation of this kind was passed by the outgoing congress.

I wish to say that in so far as I can, I hope to promote the enactment of further legislation of this character. I am strongly convinced that the government should make itself as responsible to employes injured in its employ as an interstate railway corporation is made responsible by federal law to its employes.

In conclusion the president discussed the question of the power of federal courts to issue injunctions in labor disputes, reiterating forcibly his belief that to take away this power from the courts would result in the creation of a privileged class among the laborers and save the lawless among their number from a most needful remedy for the protection of business against illegal invasion

HOUSE PASSES THE ANTI-CIGARETTE BILL.

Bills for New Normal Schools Provoke Warm Debate in Lower Body.

St. Paul, March 1.—The house suspended all rules this morning, and passed the general road and bridge bill, introduced by the road and bridge committee. The bill originally carried an appropriation for general state aid to the various counties of $400,000, but in its amended form as passed, carried but $300,000. It seems certain the measure will meet with no opposition in the senate.

Representative Washburn, of Minneapolis, introduced a resolution memorializing congress to pass a pending act for the establishment of a children's bureau. Representative White succeeded in getting a resolution passed inviting Professor E. P. Sandsten of the Wisconsin University to address the house the evening of March 9, relative to the feasibility of introducing tobacco growing in Minnesota. The resolution cites that tobacco is now profitably grown at Clear Lake, Minn.

A number of new bills put in an appearance. One by McGrath provides that railroads shall stand for decrease in property valuations caused by abandonment of tracks. One by Dalzel calls for an appropriation of $7,500 for a Fort Ridgley park. Saugstad introduced a bill providing that any citizen or organization may hire an attorney to bring prosecutions for violations of the liquor laws, and that no such case may be dismissed by the county attorney unless such action is argued before the court. A bill by McKenzie calls on the railroads to have operators at their depots at least half an hour before train time. The drainage committee offered a measure which authorizes the state drainage commission to make a topographical survey of the state for drainage purposes; that the survey of each county must be filed with the county auditor, and all county drainage be carried out according to such survey and under direction of the state commission. Wells introduced the predicted bill to combine the forestry boards and department of the state with the game and fish commission in a state forest and game board of six members to be appointed by the governor. The salary of the executive agent is raised to $3,600, superintendent of fisheries to $3,000; and the office of chief forester is created at $3,000 a year.

An important bill to further regulate banking and guarantee deposits, was introduced in the senate today by Senator A. L. Hanson. It divides the banks of the state into two classes, Class A being banks in towns of less than 50,000 inhabitants; Class B being banks in towns of over 50,000. In banks of Class A deposits shall not be allowed to exceed ten times the paid-in capital and surplus; in Class B, deposits shall not exceed eight times the capital and surplus. For violation of this provision, each offending bank shall be subject to a fine of $100 a day after the date of receiving notice from the public examiner. Beginning May 1, 1909, a state tax levy of one-tenth of one per cent shall be levied on the amount of the average deposits of each bank in Class A; and one-fifth of one per cent for Class B. This money is payable to the state treasurer July 1. These assessments shall be continued till the state guarantee fund for depositors equals one per cent of the past year's average of state bank deposits. This fund shall remain subject to the orders of the public examiner.

Another bill by A. L. Hanson, reapportions the 61st legislative district, making it into two.

St. Paul, Minn., March 2.—The house celebrated its first evening meeting of the present session by making a record on the speedy passage of a radical anti-cigarette bill. On roll call the bill received 92 votes in its favor, to one against—the vote of Alvin Rowe of St. Paul. L. H. Johnson then moved the reconsideration of the bill and asked that the motion be voted down; and it was. This prevents the house from going back on its passage of the bill.

A flood of new bills were introduced. They included the following: by Holmberg, to appropriate $150,000 for a new state fair agricultural building; by Christianson, to make the state treasurer custodian of state fair funds; by Ware, to permit all women over 18 years of age to vote in 1910 as to whether women shall be granted the right of suffrage; by Peters, limiting state fair passes to reporters, firemen, policemen, veterans, mail carriers, fair officials, employes and privilege holders; by Noble, providing judges of the supreme court and all county officers be nominated by non-partisan preliminaries; by Nolan, to apply the 3 per cent gross earnings tax on a share of the interstate earnings of telephone companies. The Grant bill was passed which requires all counties effected by judicial ditch petitions, to receive notice of the hearing; also the bill to permit traveling men to vote for the state and national ticket in any part of the state they happen to be.

The house spent the entire morning today in fighting over the pending bills for a new normal school. These bills calls, respectively, for a school to be established at Warren, Bemidji, Red Lake Falls, Thief River Falls, Cass Lake, and one bill calling for a school to be located by the normal board in northwestern Minnesota. After much discussion, P. M. McGary, author of the Cass Lake bill, got the house to adopt his minority report by a vote of 60 to 57—a "close shave." Representative Opsahl then asked that the Hinds bill be given a fair show, and that it be printed and advanced with the Cass Lake bill to general orders. The house then turned around and granted his request by a vote of 62 to 54.

Senator Vail today introduced a bill in the senate which provides that no railroad shall charge for the transportation of non-bessemer ore, more than 60 per cent of the present tariff now charged for the transportation of other iron ore within the state. The bill was referred to the committee on railroads.

Senator Stephens of Crookston introduced the biennial appropriation bill for the Crookston agricultural school and experimental station. It provides for a number of improvements, as well as maintenance; for the agricultural school for 1909-10, for expenses, $15,000; a water system, $2,000; for building, library, offices, etc., $40,000; for 1910-11, expenses, $15,000; girls' dormitory, $25,000. For the northwestern experimental station, 1910-11, expenses, $8,000; root cellar, $1,000; to establish and maintain a denatured alcohol plant, $6,000; for 1910-11, expenses, $8,000; a swine barn, $1,500; a slaughter house, $1,000.

Senator Farrington comes to the front for the state fair, with a bill to appropriate $250,000 for a new state fair grand stand. Farrington and C. A. Johnson join in a bill to appropriate $25,000 to dam and dyke Big Stone lake, the Minnesota and Whetstone rivers, to prevent future floods.

St. Paul, Minn., March 4.—Interest centered at today's session of the Minnesota legislature in the final action of the house tax committee which has been conducting a series of hearings on the Bjorge bill for a tonnage tax on iron ore mined in the state. Mr. Bjorge occupied two hours in an argument for his bill, going at length into constitutional questions. C. A. Congdon of Duluth replied, charging that the bill aims to place a much higher rate of state taxation on iron ore than on any other class of property in the state. The committee then went into executive session, concluding by deciding to return the bill to the house without any recommendation. It was also decided to have a sub-committee of seven members make an investigation as to whether the iron mines are at present asessed properly, and as to the progress made toward establishment of a steel plant at Duluth.

The house got rid of a lot of routine business today, but did little else of general importance. This evening, in committee of the whole, the T. J. Greene bill to permit six-round boxing matches was the subject of considerable fun. Mr. Bicknell moved to amend to limit the contestants to members of the tri-county delegation, and during the remainder of the legislative session only; but the amendment was not voted on. The committee recommended the bill for passage, then reconsidered its action, and was on the verge of adopting a motion by Haugland to indefinitely postpone, when O'Brien of St. Paul came to the rescue with a suggestion to continue the bill on general orders, which was accepted. The bill for an additional district judge for St. Louis county was recommended for passage.

The senate today passed, among other measures, the house bill which declares state ownership to all ore deposits beneath the waters of meandered lakes.

Senator Elwell of Minneapolis introduced an important bill. It provides that city councils in cities of over 50,000 inhabitants may regulate the rates of all public utilities, including gas, waterworks, electric light and power. Senators Dale and Coller joined in the introduction of a bill to repeal the mortgage registry tax law. Senator Thorpe offered an important banking bill, which is a copy of the New York law providing that when banks become defunct the public examiner and his deputies, shall assume full control, instead of a receiver, thus saving considerable cost. The live stock committee presented a bill prohibiting the sale of blooded cattle unless accompanied by a health certificate.

THE SUNBEAM.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30, 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam, Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

We never devoted as much time and space to a Township election as we have this year but we are more than satisfied with the result.

We presume that some of the badly defeated candidates for Township office, at last Tuesday election will say they were not in the race, which is true, and we could have told them before election, that they would not be in the race, if they had asked us.

Lattimore ran on his popularity for town clerk of Highlanding, and got 3 votes. His chieff corespondent from Deer Park, "also ran," and at the last accounts they were still running, but we guess they have discovered that their popularity, only existed in their mind, as they were not only defeated, but "skunked"

The senate committee on elections has reported out for passage what is known as the Canfield bill This bill repeals the present primary law but in lieu of the present system delegates to county conventions to elect delegates to state conventions or to nominate candidates for county offices must be chosen under the primary method What kind of treatment the bill will receive remains to be seen Should it fail to be enacted it is more than likely that the Cooke or Holten bills providing for a certain percentage of a party vote at a primary in order to maintain a party organization will be reported for passage.

Arago's Modesty.

Arago, the great French scientist, was never seen with a decoration on his breast. He valued honors lightly. One evening Leverrier, the astronomer, called on him on his way to dine with a minister. He expressed a wish to appear decorated with an order to which he was entitled, having received the official notice of the honor, although he had not as yet the decoration itself.

"Open that drawer," said Arago, "and take whatever you want."

In that drawer were all the crosses and ribbons which kings and emperors confer.

While Arago wished above everything to promulgate science and to make his researches useful, he did not attempt to identify himself forever with his discoveries by writing books. He had no time for writing, but contented himself with noting the results of his work in the record of the bureau of longitude or announcing it verbally to the academy.

The Valuables.

The man with a wife and seven children hauled up in front of the hotel desk, registered, got his bellboy and was starting off when the clerk, thinking maybe he might jolly the new arrival, called to him.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "but hadn't you better leave your valuables in the safe?"

"Do you think I ought to?" inquired the man innocently enough, to hear him say it.

"Well, it is the best plan."

"All right," said the man, and, turning to his wife, "Here, Mary, pass the children over to the gent behind the counter. He'll look after them and give us a rest."

Whereupon the clerk apologized.—Judge.

Bendele And Bridge Movers Badly Defeated

It could be easily told by the wink of the farmers eye, that there was something coming, at this spring election, in this Township.

Only a few farmers came to the poles erly, but they all seemed to have that far away look in their eye, which seemed to say "we are next"

LATIMORE TO RESCUE·

At about 1 o'clock our friend Lattimore appeared as cndidate for town clerk, but the farmers gave him a look, which seemed to say "Ah my boy we hardly know you." He got three votes, and J. W. Vrolson got the same number, and August Wentzel got a few scattering votes, but the great majority went to Anthony Dannacher, the anti bording candidate, and he was elected for town Clerk by an overwhelming majority, as was Mr. Sticksrud for supervisor. There was a fair number of voters turned out and the usal township business tranacted, and the best of good nature prevaild, but the farmers and tax payors, and them that take an interest in the advancement and upbuilding of this part of Red Lake county felt that they had a duty to perform, at the ballot box, and they did that duty in a manner that had ought to give notice to all, that under hand methods to tear down, and defeat the steady improvement and advancement of eastern Red Lake County will not be toleriated by the intelligent voters of High Landing. The voters spoke on Tuesday, and they spoke good and loud.

FROM DEER PARK

The echo from this township election has scarsely died out, when the news came from Deer Park, that Wm. Swanson had been badly defeated for town clerk of that township. It will be remembered that Swanson stood alone against the whole township of Deer Park, in the matter of trying to get an appropriation from the state of Minnesota to build a bridge across the Red Lake River in the town of Highlanding, and again he stood alone last Tuesday. We did not learn whether he raised the antie of 3 votes received by Lattimore and Vrolson in this township but he may have got four or five votes, as he has quite a number of realatives in the township.

John Bummrud was elected supervisor, Eddy Singer Town clerk, E.V. Carlson, Justice of the peace. Ed. Rustad Assesson. Ausmond Mandt, treasurer and Aslak Nesland constable.

STILT WALKING.

In Some Parts of France It Is an Absolute Necessity.

In some parts of the world, particularly in the low districts of France, stilt walking is a necessity. In Gascony there are great level plains covered with stunted bushes of dry heath. These waste lands have a soil that is so permeable, so soft and yielding, that the slightest fall of rain makes them practically impassable by ordinary methods of pedestrianism. But these wastes must be traversed at all seasons by the poor people of Gascony, and necessity has accordingly made the Gascons a stilt walking people, and men, women and children may be seen at all seasons of the year stuck upon high stilts, trudging through the waste lands, carrying baskets, bundles and the like. The stilts used are about five feet long and often longer.

The shepherds of Landes all go on stilts. The shepherd is provided with a stout staff that answers for many purposes. At the proper place in the staff is a flap, which makes a comfortable seat when turned down. On this the shepherd quietly sits and watches his flock, and while he sits up there he knits or spins with a distaff thrust in his girdle.

The Landes stilt walker can do marvelous things with these five foot leg extensions. He can run with a speed that will tax a horse, pick up a pebble or pluck a flower as the cowboy reaches to the earth from his pony, and he can drop to the ground level and regain the perpendicular as quickly as a boy can turn a handspring.—Chicago News.

WRECKED VESSELS.

Difficulties That Beset the Work of the Salvors.

What it means to salve a wreck is something that few outside of practical seamen can properly appreciate. The wreck is a ponderous, unwieldy mountain of steel and oak, weighing between 3,000 and 12,000 tons, often dangerous for any vessel to approach, and this must be lifted bodily and floated from the decks of pitching, unstable scows and barges. The wreck may be submerged beneath fifteen or thirty feet of water and so store in that divers must go down and effect temporary repairs before it can be raised. It may be a wreck so shattered that it is not worth raising, so that the wrecker's work consists merely in blowing up the hulk and removing it as a menace to navigation. Or the vessel may be fairly intact, but sunk too deep to make attempt at raising advisable, the wrecker's work consisting in salving valuable cargo. Often the wreck is one not submerged at all. A ship may have run on to a reef, where it lies, nose on a crag and stern afloat, rising and falling on the ocean swell, pounding, pounding and pounding until the very ocean bottom drones and she is gradually broken to pieces. Or, again, the wreck may be that of a steamer which has pointed its nose shoreward in a fog, finding a beach, plowing a furrow through the yielding sand and never coming to a halt until it is stuck fast all but high and dry, a helpless victim to the next storm that comes screeching up the coast to pile breakers against her and crowd her even higher upon the beach.—Appleton's.

Tourist—Where's the bulldog I sold you the other day?

"Oh, the poor baste swallowed a tape measure, and he died, sorr!"

George Jarman, Proprietor

There will be a State Farmers Institute held at the Highlanding school house, on Monday March the 22nd, commenceing at 1 o'clock p.m. These Institutes are being held thruout the state and are of great bennefit to the farmers. All it costs you is your time to attend, and if they don't do you any good, they certaily will do you no harm.

Wm. Swanson comes out in a long winded article last week in The Eleven Towns to continue exposing his ignorarce about the bridge situation. He had ought to know that his treachery to the interests of his home town were not being indorsed by the people, by the Tuesdays election returns. The whole thing in a nut shell, is that the people of Deer Park, south western Highlanding and part of May field and Kratka, are trying to get this bridge across the river at a place where they can get to it, and cross it.

Farmers at Anoka, Elk River, Princeton, North Branch and other towns in the potato belt are receiving $1 per bushel for potatoes today. In Thief River Falls there is no cash market for potatoes, and this condition is due entirely to the fact that farmers are raising too many varieties of potatoes. In this potato section all of the farmers raise the standard varieties and it is possible for a buyer to secure carload lots of Burbanks' or Ohios. Mixed varieties of potatoes will not command a good price.—Thief River Falls News.

CLEARWATER LOCALS.

The weather has been fine the past week.

There was a jolley crowd of boys and girls spent Friday evening at Mr. Erbs place.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Lindberg and his two brothers, Oscar and Adolph spent Monday evening with A. Rolandson and family.

There was a little social party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Con Shorton Sunday evening last, and we guess everybody had a good time.

There will be religious services held at the school house east of Lillo next Sunday at 10 o'clock a m. by Rev. Onpegaard.

Mr G. A. Hoveland made a trip to Plummer Monday on business.

Mr. Jarman rents the basement and second floor of this building and the first floor is to be rented to Henry Eide, Carl Angel and Ephram Thompson who will open up a moving picture show about the fifteenth of March, Mr. Jarman has made a great success in the restaurnt business.—Thief River News.

A GREAT RUNNER.

One of His Feats of Which He Had to Be Reminded.

"I'm the real thing as a runner," said Howard James majestically as he seated himself at the first home dinner since his return from college. His mother and sister looked at him in sheer admiration.

"Yes, mother, I wish you could have been at the university to see me run During the football season I ran away from every one on the team. They were not in it for a minute. In the classes I took the lead, leaving them in the lurch. I always stood highest in my lectures. And then when it came to selecting a president for the class I made the race. When the voting started I ran second, but at the last, well, I ran ahead of all of the other candidates. There's no doubt about it, I'm a runner. Of course, when the baseball season opened the crowd wanted me to get on the team. At first I hesitated because I realized my superiority, but persuasion succeeded. I went on the team, and the way I ran bases was a positive shame. Then I went into the track meet. I ran ten yards in ten seconds, almost equaling the world's record. Yes; I am a runner. Then"—

"Then you ran into debt," interrupted Old Man James, with a distinctive grunt, "and I have to pay you out."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

SUPERSTITIONS.

They Find a Place in the Minds of Even Great Men.

A man more absolutely governed by pure reason than Lord Macaulay could not well be found. But in his diary he refers to an after dinner talk about the feeling which Johnson had of thinking oneself bound to touch a particular rail or post and to tread in the middle of a paving stone, and he adds, "I certainly have this very strongly." In one of his Hibbert lectures Max Muller said to the students: "Many of you, I suspect, carry a ha'penny with a hole in it for luck. I am not ashamed to own that I have done so myself for many years."

Charles Dickens refused to lie down unless his bed were placed due north and south. He gave notice of the rule before arriving at a friend's house or a hotel, but a compass was always handy in his baggage to make sure. Miss Justin McCarthy has told how Parnell gravely checked her stirring coffee "the wrong way" and insisted that she should take another cup. A gentleman of Portrush sent Lord Roberts an old horseshoe when things looked ill in South Africa. Gratefully acknowledging it, the general added that he would keep this horseshoe in company "with one I picked up the day I entered the Orange Free State and another I found at Paardeburg the day before General Cronje surrendered."—Pall Mall Gazette.

BLUE EYED BABIES.

They Are the Favorites For Adoption Out of Orphan Asylums.

"Every baby who expects to be adopted out of an orphan asylum ought to make it a point of being born with blue eyes," said an asylum director. "That precaution will insure him a maximum of home comforts with a minimum of endeavor. There is no doubt that in an institution of this kind blue eyed babies up for adoption are more popular than the dark eyed youngsters. The brown eyed, black eyed or gray eyed girl or boy may be just as pretty, just as amiable, just as likely to achieve future eminence as the blue eyed child, but it is hard to make benevolent auxiliaries of the stork believe so. In their opinion blue eyes indicate special virtues.

"'I know he will turn out to be an honest, reliable little fellow because he has such heavenly blue eyes,' is the way they explain their preference.

"So on the strength of these 'heavenly blue eyes' the baby is chosen. The youngster will no doubt do justice to his bringing up, but it is hard for the children with eyes of another color to be so discriminated against."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

As Smart as His Boy.

When Sir William Gilbert was twenty-seven and was known to the world as a promising writer, his father, who was a retired naval surgeon, wrote a semi-metaphysical, semi-medical book entitled "Shirley Hall Asylum," his first book.

Edith A. Brown, when preparing a biography of the younger man, having heard that the son was the incentive from without which spurred into action the inherent but dormant literary talent of the father, asked if such was the fact.

"Yes," replied the author of the "Bab Ballads" and the wittiest librettos ever written. "I think the little success which had attended by humble efforts certainly influenced my father.

"You see," he added, with a suspicion of a smile, "my father never had an exalted idea of my ability. He thought if I could write anybody could, and forthwith he began."

DARK DOINGS.

The Reason One Woman Is Disgusted With the Voting Proposition.

When any one asked little Mrs. Pratt her opinion on the question of equal suffrage she had her answer ready. "I don't want to hear anything about it," she would say pleasantly, but firmly, "and I'd just as soon tell you why. It's because there's got to be a concealment and mystery about voting, and I like things open and aboveboard. It's the way I was brought up and the way I shall always feel if I live to be a hundred.

"I've had one experience, and that's all I want. A friend of mine talked and talked to me about voting on the educational question till at last I said I would, because I was brought up to think a great deal of education, and I always shall. So I gave up an engagement to go to the polls and register (and the dress was almost spoiled on account of my missing that trying on, too, because she didn't wait to see whether it fitted or not, but stitched the seams right up), and then I took the greatest pains to go and vote just as they'd told me to, and what do you suppose Henry Pratt told me afterward? My vote was thrown out because I had the frankness to write my full name and address on it!

"I told Henry that nothing would surprise me after that—nothing!"

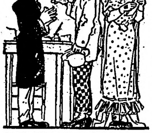
Green Garnets.

Green garnets are more valuable than diamonds because they are so exceedingly rare. They are of an unsurpassed rich shade far beyond that of an emerald and are very brilliant. On the other hand, red garnets are so common that they cost next to nothing.

Murder In Spain.

Spain has a death penalty, but rarely imposes it, the customary sentence for premeditated homicide being penal servitude in chains for life. A parricide is punished by being imprisoned in chains "in perpetuity until death."

The Legal Fee.

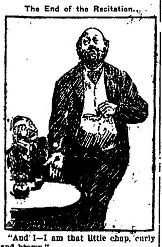


Newly Wed—What's the damage for hitchin', parson?

The Parson—Well, the law allows me $1, but you can pay what you like.

Newly Wed—Well, here's a quarter. That makes a dollar and a quarter.—Browning's Magazine.

The End of the Recitation.



"And I—I am that little chap, curly and brown."

A Bitter Retort.

"Do you think," he asked, "that you could learn to love me?"

"I don't know," she answered. "I might, but if I were a man I'd hate to think that I was an acquired taste."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Pity the Groom.

Pity the groom on his wedding day,
On one the sun ne'er shone,
Of whom the guests had a word to say—
They have eyes for the bride alone.
Pity the groom on the day he's wed,
And a bachelor adds, with laughter,
"He needs it on that day, as you've said
But pity him ever after."

MORE BIG CROPS IN 1908

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Another 60,000 settlers from the United States. New districts opened for settlement. 320 acres of land to each settler,—160 free homestead and 160 at $3.00 per acre.

"A vast rich country and a contented prosperous people."—Extract from correspondence of a National Editor, whose visit to Western Canada, in August, 1908, was an inspiration.

Many have paid the entire cost of their farms and had a balance of from $10.00 to $20.00 per acre as a result of one crop.

Spring wheat, winter wheat, oats, barley, flax and peas are the principal crops, while the wild grasses bring to perfection the best cattle that have ever been sold on the Chicago market.

Splendid climate, schools and churches in all localities. Railways touch most of the settled districts, and prices for produce are always good. Lands may also be purchased from railway and land companies.

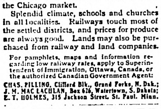
RHEUMATISM



I want every chronic rheumatic to throw away all medicines, all liniments, all plasters, and give MUNYON'S RHEUMATISM REMEDY a trial. No matter what your doctor may say, no matter what your friends may say, no matter how prejudiced you may be against all advertised remedies, go at once to your druggist and get a bottle of the RHEUMATISM REMEDY. If it fails to give satisfaction, I will refund your money.—Munyon

Remember this remedy contains no salicylic acid, no opium cocaine, morphine or other harmful drugs. It is put up under the guarantee of the Pure Food and Drug Act.

For sale by all druggists. Price, 25c.

DYSPEPSIA

"Having taken your wonderful 'Cascarets' for three months and being entirely cured of stomach catarrh and dyspepsia, I think a word of praise is due to 'Cascarets' for their wonderful composition. I have taken numerous other so-called remedies but without avail, and I find that Cascarets relieve more in a day than all the others I have taken would in a year." James McGune,

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Sues His Father-in-Law.

Sleepy Eye.—Roman Kruger, night policeman, whose marriage to Miss Grace Cunningham at St. Paul last fall was followed by his arrest and imprisonment at the instance of his bride's father, Willis Cunningham, on the charge of perjury in giving the young lady's age to the clerk of court of Ramsey county, has brought an action against the latter to recover $10,000 damages for alleged malicious prosecution and false imprisonment. The bringing of the suit has caused almost as great a sensation as the wedding and subsequent prosecution. Cunningham is a wealthy resident of this place.

Laborer Meets Frightful Death.

St. Paul.—Lawrence Brennan met a frightful death under the trucks of a Great Northern freight train near the Como yards. One of his limbs had to be cut off in order to disentangle his body from the wheels and during the terrible ordeal he bravely maintained consciousness. His arms, legs and ribs were crushed and two hours later he died at St. Joseph's hospital.

Brennan was at work between two empty merchandise cars in the yards a train was run onto the side and crashed into the two where Brennan was working.

Held for Murder in 1905.

Duluth.—William Bailey, an employe of the Cloquet Electric Company of Cloquet, was arrested by Chief of Police McSweeney of that town for Sheriff Armstrong of Morrison county. Bailey is suspected of the murder of Miss Annie Kintop of Little Falls. The murder took place four years ago. Bailey has been at work in Cloquet for more than a year and was well thought of. Much surprise was felt there at the serious charge so suddenly brought against him. Bailey was in bed when arrested. He denies that he killed the Kintop girl.

Beating Shows He Is Boss.

Little Falls.—John Reitzka, a farmer living near Royalton of this county, was brought into that village on the complaint of his neighbors, who asserted that Reitzka had been beating his wife. When brought before the justice, Reitzka said that he was God and that his wife is the devil. He says that as his wife is possessed with the demon from the lower world, it is his sacred duty as God to pound the devil out of her. He also said that it incidentally served to show that he was boss of the house. The defendant was fined $22 and allowed to return to his home.

Two Children Perish in Smoke.

Duluth.—The home of a C. Nelson in Hebron township, twenty-five miles from Aitkin, was burned and two of the three children of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson were suffocated. Mr. Nelson was away from home at work and, the day being pleasant, Mrs. Nelson was drawing wood from a pile a short distance from the house. When she entered the house was on fire and the rooms were filled with smoke. She reached the baby, but it was dead, as was also the other child.

Dog Scare at Kasota.

Kasota.—Kasota has a genuine mad dog scare. A dog bit several others a few days ago, and its head was sent to the bacteriologist of the St. Peter hospital, who inneculated two rabbits with serum from the spinal column of the dog, one of them dying in five or six days, and the other a little later. All dogs in the village have been muzzled, and several valuable ones shot, having exhibited signs of hydrophobia.

Minneapolis Murderer Hangs Self.

Minneapolis.—Henry M. Sussman, serving a life sentence for murder for shooting his wife in the Glenwood hotel, Minneapolis, committed suicide in his cell at Stillwater. He was found hanging by a cord made of the covering of his pillow.

Sussman was received at the prison Dec. 19, 1906. His parents live in Fargo, N. D., and he has brothers in St. Paul.

NEWS NOTES.

Minneapolis.—In "Bunco in Arizona," Lillian Mortimer's comedy drama, which will be seen at the Bijou, Minneapolis, the week of March 7th, the theatre-going public will have an excellent opportunity of witnessing a production that keeps faithfully to the traditions of the far southwest.

Hibbing.—Ole Larson of Minneapolis and Ole Mangseth of Coleraine made a twin jump of 98 feet at Hibbing, and it is claimed that it is the American record for twin jumping. Ole Larson broke the record for the Hibbing hill for longest standing jump, making 126 feet.

Duluth.—M. L. Britton, wanted by the United States government on a charge of using the United States mails to defraud, has been arrested in Duluth by Postoffice Inspector Fraser of Wisconsin and has been taken to Kansas City, Mo., where he will be tried for the alleged fleecing of several wholesale jewelry firms.

New Ulm.—Mrs. Amelia Scherer died, aged 70 years. She is survived by seven children, one of whom is Captain Louis Scherer, U. S. A., stationed at Fort Snelling. She located here with her husband in 1859.

BABY HORRIBLY BURNED

By Boiling Grease—Skin All Came Off One Side of Face and Head—Thought Her Disfigured for Life.

Used Cuticura: No Scar Left.

"My baby was sitting beside the fender and we were preparing the breakfast when the frying-pan full of boiling grease was upset and it went all over one side of her face and head. Some one wiped the scald with a towel, pulling the entire skin off. We took her to a doctor. He tended her a week and gave me some stuff to put on. But it all festered and I thought the baby was disfigured for life. I used about three boxes of Cuticura Ointment and it was wonderful how it healed. In about five weeks it was better and there wasn't a mark to tell where the scald had been. Her skin is just like velvet. Mrs. Hare, 1, Henry St., South Shields, Durham, England, March 22, 1908."

Bridget, who had administered the culinary affairs of the Morse household for many years, was sometimes torn between her devotion to her mistress and loyalty to the small son of the house.

"Bridget," said Mrs. Morse, in a tone of wonder, after an inspection of the storeroom, "where have those splendid red apples gone that the man brought yesterday—those four big ones?"

"Well, now, ma'am," said poor Bridget, "I couldn't rightly say; but I'm thinkin' if you was to find where my loaf o' hot gingerbread is, likely thim four red apples would be lyin' right on top of it, an' I'm hopin' his little stummick can stand the sthrain."—Youth's Companion.

Lese Majeste.

A teacher in one of the schools of Berlin has given to the papers of that city a composition written by one of the pupils in his school on the subject, "The Kaiser," in the course of which the young author says: "Prince Wilhelm was born on the kaiser's birthday. From the dome of the castle 101 salute shots were fired. The old grandfather and old Wrangel hopped into a cab and went to the schloss, and old Wrangel said: 'The boy is all right,' and the father made a bow from the balcony, and it was awful cold. And when the boy was baptized his father held his watch in front of the litle fellow's nose, and he grabbed it and never let go again, because he is a Hohenzollern."

Truthful Bessie.

There had been a lovers' quarrel and it was his first visit in two weeks.

"I guess you know there was a difference between your sister and myself?" he ventured, trying to pump the little sister.

"Yes, indeed," responded the latter without hesitation.

"Well—er—do you think Clara will make up when she comes down?"

Litle Bessie leaned over nearer and whispered:

"She ought to, Mr. Bilkins. She is upstairs making up now."

CONGENIAL WORK

And Strength to Perform It.

A person in good health is likely to have a genial disposition, ambition, and enjoy work.

On the other hand, if the digestive organs have been upset by wrong food, work becomes drudgery.

"Until recently," writes a Washington girl, "I was a railroad stenographer, which means full work every day.

"Like many other girls alone in a large city, I lived at a boarding house. For breakfast it was mush, greasy meat, soggy cakes, black coffee, etc.

"After a few months of this diet I used to feel sleepy and heavy in the mornings. My work seemed a terrible effort, and I thought the work was to blame—too arduous.

"At home I had heard my father speak of a young fellow who went long distances in the cold on Grape-Nuts and cream and nothing more for breakfast.

"I concluded if it would tide him over a morning's heavy work, it might help me, so on my way home one night I bought a package and next morning I had Grape-Nuts and milk for breakfast.

"I stuck to Grape-Nuts, and in less than two weeks I noticed improvement. I can't just tell how well I felt, but I remember I used to walk the 12 blocks to business and knew how good it was simply to live.

"As to my work—well, did you ever feel the delight of having congenial work and the strength to perform it? That's how I felt. I truly believe there's life and vigor in every grain of Grape-Nuts."

RATHER PAY THAN SERVE.

Citizen Soldier's Unique Idea of the Duties of a Sentry.

Australians still tell stories of the C. L. V.'s, although the war is a far memory. One, a member of the Stock Exchange, was left one wet and miserable night to guard a wagonload of goods.

He shivered in the unsheltered place for some hours pondering many things, and then a bright thought struck him just as the colonel came around on his tour of inspection.

"Colonel," he asked, "how much is this wagon worth?"

"I don't know," was the answer. "Much or little, we can't afford to lose it."

"Well, but colonel," persisted the amateur soldier, "you might give me a rough idea of the value."

"About £200," said the Colonel testily.

"Very well," was the answer. "I will come down to the camp and give you a check for the amount. Then I'll turn in. I wouldn't catch my death of cold for twice that much."

What the colonel said is not recorded.—Melbourne Times.

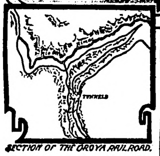
PERU'S WONDERFUL RAILROAD

ENGINEERING SKILL THAT SUBDUED MOUNTAINS

"INFERNILLO" BRIDGE.



SECTION OF THE OROYA RAILROAD.

The Oroya railroad has been called "a railroad among the clouds." In order to construct it, the chief engineer, Mr. Ernest Mallinoski, and his assistants resorted to the most extraordinary devices and methods. The height ascended by this railway is within 136 feet of that of the summit of Mont Blanc, Switzerland. The road bends upon itself with sharp angles as it ascends the mountain sides, like a staircase with many turns. It pierces the obstructing peaks with 32 tunnels, which often come together so closely that they seem continuous to the traveler. Great gorges had to be traversed and torrent streams spanned by bridges that seem to hang in mid-air.

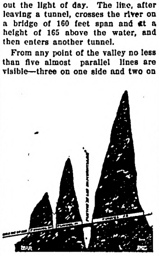
The mountain sides were in several instances so precipitous that the workmen could only reach the point at which a tunnel started by being let down with ropes from the edge of the cliff and held there till they had cut for themselves a foothold in the rock. The diamond drill was used in many of the borings.

Engineers were often compelled to triangulate from the opposite side to mark out the course of the road, while in one case they and their men were conveyed across a chasm over the Rimac on wire ropes suspended several hundred feet in the air between the two opposite cliffs. The upper portion of this narrow and tortuous river rages down through the bottom of gorges and chasms walled in with mountainous, overhanging bluffs, sometimes over 2,000 feet high.

A considerable portion of the railway follows the Rimac in its windings, or crosses and recrosses it at the sharpest angles. The grade from Lima (448 feet above sea level) to San Bartolome, 39 miles inland, is constantly up, and at the latter station the elevation is 4,910 feet above the Pacific ocean—an astonishing ascent for that distance. Here occurs the first of many retrograde developments, rendered necessary by the increasing rise up the gorges, ravines and slopes of the Andes, where the line takes the form of a V, and, receding upon an ascending grade, reaches the elevated plateau on which the village of San Bartolome stands. Thence, crossing and recrossing the Seco, a tributary of the Rimac, it makes two complete detours and ascends on the opposite side past a point overlooking San Bartolome Station. The road clings to the rugged sides of the ever-towering ridges, passes through two tunnels and crosses a deep mountain gorge on the famous Verrugas viaduct. This was regarded in the Meiggs epoch as the highest bridge in the world.

A notable feature in the section of the railway from Verrugas on to Surco is a tunnel through a precipitous side of the mountain, about 575 feet above the bed of the river. In some of this there is a curve of 395 feet radius. The Oroya railroad now continues onward and upward through a wilderness of mountain heights in the Cordillera, with the familiar Rimac river still near for a very considerable portion of the journey, while snowy peaks that are 16,000 feet high overlook its tempestuous and roaring course. Continuing amid Andean scenery, already above the lowest limit of perpetual snow, the road gains from Tambo de Viso to the station of Infiernillo, a distance of 10½ miles, an ascent of 1,153 feet. The name "Infiernillo" (Little Hell) has been bestowed on this region because the Rimac thunders and foams down a narrow gorge, the cliffs of which reach hundreds of feet toward the sky and shut out the light of day. The line, after leaving a tunnel, crosses the river on a bridge of 160 feet span and at a height of 165 above the water, and then enters another tunnel.

From any point of the valley no less than five almost parallel lines are visible—three on one side and two on the other of opposite mountains—while the greatest distance between any two of them is scarcely 500 feet. A few miles above Casapalca, and nearly opposite Anterangra, the narrow valley of the Chin Chan opens suddenly from the north, and divides two towering ridges crested with perpetual snow. Here the route crosses the Rimac and advances up the Chin Chan for 2½ miles, where, making a sharp detour, it returns above the first line and reappears on the right bank of the Rimac 1,000 feet above the bed of the valley. From this natural fortress to the dividing crest of the Andes the line of the road is often lost to sight amid desolate masses of snow and ice. One can perceive that extremely heavy work had to be done and great obstacles overcome, but the line advances on higher and higher, winding the sources of the Rimac, which it has followed from the Pacific ocean, until at last it reaches the desolate summit of the Andes and enters the Galera, or "tunel de la Cima," as the Peruvians style it. This tunnel is 1,173 meters, or 3,848 feet long, and enters the mountain about 680 feet beneath the apex of an undulation lying between Mount Meiggs (17,500 feet above sea level), and two gigantic peaks on the left. It is 104½ miles from Callao and 15,645 feet above sea level, or only 136 feet less than the altitude of Mont Blanc. The rest of the route to the village of Oroya, 22 miles beyond, is on a gradually descending grade, the construction of which was relatively easy compared to the herculean labors already accomplished.



Railroad Construction on a Portion of the Oroya Line.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

Many Old Faces Absent from Congress

WASHINGTON.—Twelve senators and 77 representatives, who were members of the last congress, were absent when the Sixty-first congress assembled in special session.

The re-election of Mr. Hopkins in Illinois not having taken place up to the present writing it is possible that his failure of election will augment the number of senatorial absentees to 13.

Of the 77 representatives who retired on March 4, one, Mr. Hepburn of Iowa, has served 22 years in congress, and another, Mr. Sherman of New York, who is now vice-president, has served 20 years in the house. Mr. Cousins of Iowa and Delegate Smith of Arizona served 16 years each, while Jenkins of Wisconsin, Cooper of Texas, Overstreet of Indiana, Williams of Mississippi and Acheson of Pennsylvania each served 14 years.

In years of service Senator Teller of Colorado is the Nestor of the retiring statesmen, having been elected senator upon the admission of his state to the union, taking his seat on December 4, 1876, since which time he has served continuously.

He is a member of the national momentary commission, and will continue his public service in that connection.

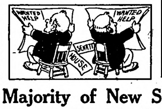
Senator Platt of New York served in the Forty-third and Forty-fourth congresses as a member of the house, entering the senate in 1881.

Senator Foraker, whose political career is fresh in the minds of every one, served in the senate 12 years.

Senator Hemenway succeeded Charles W. Fairbanks when he resigned his seat in the senate to become vice-president and the senate's presiding officer, so that Hemenway had but four years as a member of that body. Previous to that he had been a prominent member of the house since the Fifty-fourth congress.

Senator McCreary also had a long service in the house of representatives, having entered that body in the Forty-ninth congress and, after serving six terms, entered the senate six years ago.

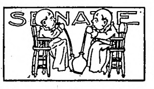
Other senators who were retired are Ankeny of Washington, Fulton of Oregon, Gary of South Carolina, Hansbrough of Nebraska, Kittredge of South Dakota and Long of Kansas.



Majority of New Senators Still Young

IF any evidence were needed after the spectacular administration just ended that this is the era of the young man a glance into the careers of the new solons who have succeeded to the togas of the retiring senators would dissipate all doubts. Some of the newcomers are among the most picturesque who have come to that august body in years. A good two-thirds achieved fame in their tender years and are still young men in the senate sense.

The new senator from Kentucky, William O'Connell Bradley, is attracting much attention because he is the great-grand-nephew of the great Irish liberator, and his friends see many of the legal talents of the immortal Daniel revived. Bradley was in the Union army at 14 and had been admitted to the bar at 18. He fairly devoured books and mastered the standard legal works without the aid of masters. Then there is the fiery Albert B. Cummins, who had learned the trade of carpentry before he was 13, and before he was 21 was the boy oracle of his village. Theodore Burton, who won his toga against the brother of the president, Charles P. Taft, was also a boy oracle and boy orator, and is a young man yet as senatorial ages go. George E. Chamberlain, the youngest of the new men, was in the legislature of Oregon when he was 26, and has climbed the ladder to the present high place with giant strides ever since. He gave up two years of his term as governor of Oregon to go to the senate, the goal of his ambition ever since he won a prize in a debate years ago.



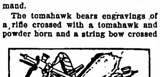
Museum Gets Relics of Famous Indians

THE silver pipe which Maj. Gen. William Henry Harrison presented to the Delaware Indians in 1814 and a silver tomahawk inscribed with a new moon and seven stars and the rising sun "with eyes in it," are among valuable historical relics which Richard C. Adams, Washington, a leader of the Delawares, has deposited with the national museum. The relics are subject to return to Adams or his heirs on demand.

The tomahawk bears engravings of a rifle crossed with a tomahawk and powder horn and a string bow crossed with an arrow. The moon and the sun are on opposite sides of the tomahawk.

The relics include a war club with silver plate, which Capt. Swannock, Delaware war chief, carried through the Florida war, and Capt. Secondine, another Delaware war chief, carried on his two journeys with Fremont across the Rocky mountains, and also in the Mexican war. The war club was also carried through the civil war, always in behalf of the United States, and was presented by the Delaware Indians in 1892 to Mr. Adams.

Other relics presented are a cedar flute, used when the Delawares lived near Fort Pitt and presented to Adams by his people in 1900, and a wampun belt and a war bonnet which the Delawares say has the same buffalo horns that were on the war bonnet worn by the head chief of the Delawares at the signing of the treaty by Penn in 1682.



Incident at Social Affair Causes Comment

THE latest bit of gossip which the social elect of Washington are now excitedly discussing is an incident that happened at the last Bachelors' german.

This winter, as everybody knows, at the smartest balls and cotillons, it has been the custom to set aside a room for bridge, a wise and considerate innovation, since a number of both men and women who attend these functions do not care to dance, especially the chaperones, who are little enough considered.

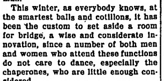
Mrs. Longworth, always keen after the latest fad, decided to institute this practice at the Bachelors, and so at the last german started a game of bridge. It seems some of the men on the committee objected. Jerome Bonaparte, great-grandson of Jerome Bonaparte, king of Westphalia, and therefore great-grandnephew of Napoleon, giving himself the royal airs, which he occasionally assumes, approached Mrs. Longworth and informed her, as a member of the committee, that the game of bridge must stop. The conversation between them is not reported, but its import presently came to the ears of Nicholas Longworth.

Mr. Longworth went up to the kingly Jerome and asked him if he had told his wife she must stop playing bridge. Mr. Bonaparte admitted that he had used his royal prerogatives to the extent named, whereupon Mr. Longworth said:

"All I have got to say is you are a blankety blank blank. Now, what have you got to say about that?"

"I will settle that with you later,' said Mr. Bonaparte, as he turned.

The occurrence has been discussed from every point of view, some siding with Mr. Bonaparte in the course he took, others upholding Mrs. Longworth, and everybody applauding "Nick."



YOUR AFTER-DINNER COFFEE

INTERESTING HISTORY THAT IS BEHIND IT.

MEXICANS GRADING COFFEE

COFFEE TREE AND BERRIES

Coffee derives its name from the city of Kaffa, Abyssinia, in which country, it is believed, the coffee tree originated. Its botanical name is coffea arabica, as Arabia was the first country into which it was extensively introduced. If left to grow in its natural state, a coffee plant may grow into a shrub 14 to 18 feet high, having then a long and slender trunk without branches on the lower part. The plant has thin and numerous roots, which grow deep in the earth, having one central root going straight down, the length of which depends upon the height attained by the plant. When cultivated, however, the shrub is generally not allowed to grow beyond six feet in poor sandy soil and eight in rich soil. This restriction is imposed on the coffee tree because, when the plant grows over that height, the difficulties for cultivating it increase.

The leaves are at first of a bright green color, turning into the olive shade when they are full grown. Healthy coffee trees produce, in the spring, in the axilla of each leaf, from 12 to 16 buds, which soon bloom and have an exquisite perfume. The beauty of a coffee plantation is fleeting, as, on a plantation, one may see the trees in full blossom and two days later the ground may be covered with white flowers. Two or three efflorescences occur before the buds become completely ripe. The flowers become dark and wither in two or three days. Dry weather is better for the plants during the first days, but when the buds are becoming consistent the water washes the petals and discloses numerous pistils or germs of fruits on which all depends.

Experience teaches that, when the pistils look fresh and have whitish tips, it may be expected that the crop will be approximately the same as the number of flowers, but when a black spot is noticed the planter may be sure that he has lost his crop. This happens generally when the plant is not sufficiently strong or is due to an inopportune rainfall.

It is when the leaves fall that there issue from the small stems groups of seeds at first yellow and coarse to the touch. When they ripen they begin to redden until they become the coffee berries. The bean in its natural state is convex on the one side and flat on the other. There are two seeds in the ripe berry, side by side, each one covered by a delicate silver-colored skin; then comes a cartilaginous membrane of rough consistence, and afterward the pulp, which is mucilaginous, saccharine, and sometimes agglutinated, the outer part being covered by the outer skin.

The coffee bean is prepared by separating it from the pulp which surrounds it by means of water and fermentation. The hard shell is removed by mechanical processes. Thus is produced the coffee bean which is sold in the market.

The principal coffee-producing countries of the world, in the order of their importance, are Brazil, Venezuela, Guatemala, Colombia, Nicaragua, Hayti, Costa Rica, Dutch East Indies and British India. The chief coffee importing and consuming countries are the United States, Germany, France, Belgium, Austria-Hungary, Turkey, Holland and the United Kingdom. The last named country is remarkable for the great quantities of coffee which it re-exports to all parts of the world, re-exporting, for instance, in 1904, two-thirds of the 118,186,000 pounds of coffee which it had imported in that year.

Statistics show that the total quantity of coffee delivered in the United States from all sources last year, amounted to 929,754,540 pounds, of which there were imported from Brazil 753,840,648 pounds, or somewhat over 81 per cent., which was about the same proportion as during 1906-7. The deliveries in Europe have remained stationary for the past two years, or about 1,386,000,000 pounds annually. Thus, the total consumption for Europe and America is approximately 2,310,000,000 pounds annually.

With the ever-increasing consumption of coffee in the world, a bewildering variety of beans has been evolved, but among the most popular and widely used are the Java, Sumatra, Mocha, Rio, Maracaibo, and La Guaira. There are many substitutes for, and adulterations of, coffee, and some authorities assert that in the United States, for example, very little true Java and Mocha coffee is sold, owing to the skill with which many planters and dealers have been able to approximate in color, appearance, and aroma the Dutch Indian and the Arabian varieties in the preparation, for the world's consumption, of their own indigenous coffees.

THING WAS NEW TO HER.

Shopper's Amusing Mistake in Nature of Article Purchased.

Shoppers in the toilet goods end of a Market street department store were amused recently at the mistaken idea of an elderly woman customer, very evidently far removed from the seats of fashion in her every-day life. Approaching a counter on which a quantity of puffs, rats, extra curls and the like were carefully arrayed, the woman picked up a new fangled rat, long and thin, evidently intended to reach all around milady's head, reinforcing her tresses both back and front. Eying carefully the long fur-like object in her hand, the customer warily inquired the price. Upon being told she handled it some more and then astonished the salesgirl by asking, in turn, if it would wear well, if it would stand the cold and if it would keep off the cold. All of these questions are very unusual in the case of rats, although all might have bearing upon the subject. Accordingly, the salesgirl wonderingly gave an affirmative answer to each of her customer's questions. Finally the purchase was concluded and the trifling sum required having been paid in, the shopper settled herself to await her purchase. Finally it came, and to the surprise of the girls behind the counter and the shoppers in front the elderly woman whipped the paper from off the purchase and swung the rat around her neck in most giddy fashion and stalked off up the aisle, saying, "I reckon I might as well wear my boa, it's so cold."—Philadelphia Record.

Better Than Courts.

Boston women established the first playground in 1902, with one playground. Last year there were eight and nearly $2,000 was expended, or about one dollar for each child, a very cheap price for the amount of good obtained. The Playground league is the name of a society of the playground boys themselves, who wear buttons and discipline all bad boys, thus making the government easy enough for those in charge. Not the least important result of the playgrounds in that city is said to be that involved in the self-government.

Crime and the Telephone.

From the beginning to the end of a transaction in crime the telephone comes into use serving both sides with equal fidelity, says a writer in Appleton's. The thief uses it to determine which house he may safely rob. The man next door sees the burglar, and calls up the police. The police arrive, catch the burglar and telephone for the Black Maria to take him to jail. The thief telephones a lawyer to defend him. The lawyer telephones for the bondsman to bail out his client, and the banker telephones the sheriff that the bondsman's check is good. When the day of trial comes, the clerk of the court, being a kind gentleman, telephones to the burglar's lawyer; the sheriff telephones witnesses to be present. When the burglar is convicted and sentenced the sheriff uses long distance to tell the warden of the penitentiary when his prisoner will be delivered. After that the telephone line is kept hot by influential politicians petitioning the governor for a pardon.

Here, girls, listen to what London Society says of you! "The charm of the American girl lies in her beauty and social talents. She is an ideal partner to dance with, to take in to dinner or to sit out a picnic with, and she usually makes an active and successful hostess. But when her husband discovers that she is never happy except when going to parties, is bored in the country unless with a houseful of guests, and is always craving to tear from one fashionable resort to another—no rest, no peace—it is then that trouble comes in." Much London Society knows about it, eh? Granted you are an ideal dancer, a beauty and a charming dinner companion, did you ever "sit out a picnic?" Picnics are believed to be obsolete, as far as the type of girl referred to here is concerned.

A quaint and amusing party, now that fancy balls are in order, was a "Noah's Ark," given in Parisian "high life" several evenings ago by one of the leading mondaines. The guests filed in characters two by two, and as no indication had been given as to how the characters were to be carried out, the result was a huge success. Some of the fair ladies tried to make their impersonations of the animals pretty and coquettish, the effects being most attractive, yet immensely funny, while the men, on the other hand, made their characters as grotesque as possible. As the fun waxed warmer and warmer, the "animals" gave vent in speech to the sounds allotted to them by nature, and the ballroom [illegible] rang with the lion's roar, the barking of dogs, the cooing of doves and the singing of birds.

A house to cost fifteen or twenty thousand dollars is, in the opinion of the governor of Indiana, good enough for the chief executive of that state. He fixed that limit in expressing his opposition to the proposal to spend a hundred and fifty thousand dollars for a governor's house. No governor on a salary of $8,000 could maintain so expensive a house, and he does not think the state ought to be asked to maintain it. Few of the states provide a house for their governor in the state capital, and most of the governors continue after their election to live in their permanent homes, and go to the capital when business calls them there.

Now has arisen a militant woman to tell other women that men dictate what they shall wear, so that said men may make fortunes through women's weakness. She also suggests that if they stopped buying clothes for six months there would be the worst commercial panic ever. Men may smile indulgently over foolish tirades about masculine marital tyranny and frantic appeals for the ballot, but this sort of thing is serious. Luckily no amount of eloquence, truth, denunciation or any other mortal method will make women stop buying clothes.

Bedouins in Arabia are not pleased with the new railroad which is carrying pilgrims to Mecca by steam, and freeing their caravans from the raids of the desert tribes. The Bedouins recently attacked one station of the road, and were not repulsed for two hours. A train which reached another station found the building destroyed, the telegraph wires cut, the ground covered with blood, and none of the staff of 40 men anywhere about. When the road was opened in September this sort of thing was freely prophesied.

Reports of death and injuries on last Fourth of July have been collected by the Journal of the American Medical Association. The figures, which nevertheless are not complete, show a hundred and sixty-three deaths in the country and more than five thousand injuries from explosives. Remind yourself of this fact on July 1, 1909.

Fortunately the date on the new cent will be on the same side as the head. This will assist popular confusion in flipping it up.

MINNESOTA SOLONS

ST. PAUL'S ANTI-ARMOUR PETITION PRESENTED.

House Makes a General Clean-up of Business Passing a Big Batch of Bills.

St. Paul, Minn., March 9.—Senator C. J. Gunderson of Alexandria today jumped into the arena as a candidate for United States judge, district of Minnesota, to succeed Judge Milton D. Purdy, who was appointed originally by President Roosevelt, and has recently been re-appointed by President Taft. Mr. Gunderson's entry comes through a resolution adopted unanimously and by a rising vote of the state senate today. Senator Seward of Lyon county introduced the resolution. The resolution recites that:

"We have absolute knowledge and implicit confidence in the integrity, learning and ability of Hon. C. J. Gunderson of Alexandria; and we hereby respectfully pray that he be appointed as judge of the United States district court for the district of Minnesota.

"Resolved further, that this resolution be engrossed and signed by the president and secretary of the senate, and copies forwarded to the Hon. Knute Nelson and the Hon. Moses E. Clapp, United States senators at Washington, D. C."

The resolution was seconded by Julius Coller of Scott county, and adopted without an opposing vote. This means a contest over the confirmation of Judge Purdy's appointment by the United States senate.

E. S. Durment of St. Paul introduced a re-draft of his employer's liability bill in the senate today. It now permits contributory negligence to be entered as a defense. It also materially reduces the scale of damages allowed for various injuries, the death allowance being $3,500. Elwell of Minneapolis introduced a bill increasing the rate of the general tax levy for the university from .23 mills to one-half a mill, which will increase the standing tax allowance $100,000.

S. A. Nelson introduced a bill to declare a state office vacant when the holder thereof is incapacitated to discharge the duties of such office for a period of six months by reason of sickness or other cause. It is understood this is especially aimed at L. A. Rosing, whose long illness has kept him away from the state board of control most of the past year.

Senator Gunn offered a bill to permit towns and townships to levy a three mill tax for libraries, museums, art galleries and reading rooms. Geo. P. Wilson introduced a bill to deny legal recognition in future to common law marriages. S. A. Nelson had a bill to require a political candidate in filing his statement of expenses to also include a statement of all money and aid received, the amount and the [illegible] contributors.

The bill for abolishment of capital punishment in Minnesota was killed in the house today by the close vote of 35 for indefinite postponement to 31 in favor of the measure.

The principal address for the bill was made by Representative MacKenzie, former prosecuting attorney of Sibley county.

T. J. Greene introduced an "old timer" today, to appropriate $22,000 for W. H. Temple, to pay for certain state bonds which Temple holds. These were issued by the state in 1859, and only redeemed in part. The payment asked has been rejected by several legislatures.

Representative Hinds introduced a bill to place wall-eyed pike among the fish that cannot be sold or shipped in this state.

A protest against the bill to permit six-round boxing contests was received from the St. Paul Y. M. C. A. today, signed by Arthur B. Driscoll, president of the St. Paul organization. The bill is at present on the calendar in the house.

Gov. J. A. Johnson has signed the bill asserting state ownership in mineral properties beneath the waters of meandered lake beds.

St. Paul, Minn., March 10.—The St. Paul petition against the proposed Armour packing plant in the Midway district, within the limits of Minneapolis, was presented to Speaker A. J. Rockne at noon today. Mayor D. W. Lawler and Representative Cal Stone of St. Paul, made the formal presentation to the speaker on the steps in front of the capitol. The petition, rolled on a large reel, was then carried up to the house chamber, on the second floor, by the detail of police.

The house this morning, on motion of Represenative Bjorge, author of the iron tonnage tax bill, agreed to make that measure a special order to be considered next Wednesday at 1:30 p. m.

The senate occupied the entire morning fighting over the new normal school bills. By a vote of 35 to 25, the Daniel Gunn bill, for a new normal at Cass Lake, was advanced from "the table," where it has rested for several days, to the calendar. The vote was the test between the friends of Cass Lake and those who stood for a bill to permit the normal board to select a location in northwestern Minnesota.

The senate busied itself with consideration of bills in committee of the whole this afternoon, while the house worked with its calendar.

The bills passed by the house, included the following St. Louis county delegation bills: to create a county public examiner; to create a county court house and city hall commission; to authorize the county commissioners to publish the time when real and personal property taxes become delinquent; to increase the clerk hire allowance of the county auditor to $22,000 a year, and that of the county treasurer to $15,000. Other bills passed included one to authorize the purchase of a federal reserve in Carlton county for university work in forestry; to permit local school boards to employ truant officers; and to require a record of all logs measured and fees received by surveyors general of the state.

On motion of Ole Sageng of Otter Tail county, the senate this afternoon killed the Rowe bill providing special vengeance to descend on the heads of chicken thieves.

A number of new senate bills appeared. These included the following: by Putnam and Dale, to permit county commissioners to establish agricultural experiment stations and schools on county poor farms; by Sageng, to establish a wheat-testing laboratory under the state railroad and warehouse commission; by S. A. Nelson, requiring a record to be kept of all saes of firearms; by Campbell, requiring railroads to clean and fumigate livestock cars at the end of every trip.

St. Paul, March 11.—The house decided today to indefinitely postpone the Ware and Johnson female suffrage bills. The house also knocked out the Kneeland bill for a convention to revise the state constitution, 62 votes for to 49 against.

Two drainage bills were also put to sleep by the house. One was to permit the state drainage commission to survey and improve as it saw fit for drainage purposes, such streams within the state as are not under federal jurisdiction. The second bill appropriated $15,000 of state money for improvement of water courses in Sibley county. Representative Opsahl of Beltrami, as chairman of the drainage committee, gave a majority report for adoption of the bills. A minority report was adopted for indefinite postponement.

Betting at any game is prohibited in a bill introduced in the senate today by Manley Fosseen of Minneapolis. Mr. Fosseen also came to the front with a new dog tax bill. It provides for a state tax of $1 a year on every dog. Whenever any domestic animals or fowls are killed or injured by dogs, the owners may apply to the county commissioners for damages, and their award shall be paid out of the "state dog fund." The first of each year, whatever balance there is in this fund in excess of $25,000, shall be paid into the state school fund. Thus "man's best friend" will be made to aid in the education of the young idea of the state.

A third bill by Fosseen provides that cities of over 50,000 inhabitants may issue an additional $3,000,000 in 4 per cent 30 year bonds for the acquirement of gas plants. The law of 1907 permitted cities to issue $2,000,000 in bonds for this purpose. Thus this bill would make the total amount allowed for the purpose $5,000,000.

A. L. Hanson had a bill to appropriate $25,000 for a hospital at the state agricultural college, St. Anthony Park.

White wants the state board of health to have five new sanitary inspectors.

An important reform bill was introduced by Senator Sullivan of Stillwater. It requires the governor to appoint one member of the board of control, who with the warden of the state prison and the superintendent of the state reformatory, shall visit the various states where indeterminate sentences for punishment of all crime are in effect, and report as to the advisability of adopting such a law in Minnesota. The bill appropriates $500 for the actual expenses of the commission.

The railroad committee of the senate has taken unexpected action, in voting to recommend for passage the Vail bill, prohibiting transportation rates for non-bessemer ore to be more than 60 per cent of the rate on bessemer; and also the Cashman bill for a distance tariff.

The house this afternoon, in committee of the whole, voted to recommend the White bill for passage; limiting saloons in future to one for each 500 of population, and voted to indefinitely postpone the so-called "midnight lid" bill, to permit saloons to remain open till twelve instead of eleven p. m.

Camel Works Hard.

From the beginning of the journey to its end a camel is never relieved of its load. It eats, walks and sleeps under its burden, often for weeks at a time. The training of a camel is no easy matter, as it takes about three years to teach it to bend the knees in order to be loaded and unloaded.

Like Many Another.

"I am always so busy doing nothing," remarked the Little Spalpeen, "that I never have time to do anything else."

The Last Word.

A good deal of fuss is going on in the "culchawed" crowd about a claim that Paul Revere never made his famous midnight ride. "H'm," murmurs C. E. Ingalls, "doesn't the poem say 'Scarcely a man is now alive who remembers that famous day and year?"—Kansas City Journal.

LABOR FAVORED BY RULING

COURT OF APPEALS MODIFIES BUCK STOVE DECISION.

No Action Taken on Contempt Charges Against Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

Washington. — The court of appeals of the District of Columbia yesterday modified and affirmed the opinion of Justice Gould of the supreme court of the District, enjoining the American Federation of Labor, Samuel Gompers and other defendants from publishing in the "We don't patronize" list the name of the Buck Stove and Range Company of St. Louis.

The opinion, which was handed down by Justice Robb, holds that the decree of Judge Gould should be modified to the extent that there should be eliminated from the decree the restriction of the labor organization and the other defendants from "mentioning, writing or referring" to the business of the Buck Stove and Range Company or its customers. Otherwise the decree is affirmed. The court holds that the "combination" and boycott in furtherance thereof and the publication in the "We don't patronize" list in aid of the boycott is illegal.

The court held that the defendants could not be restrained from all publications referring to the Buck Stove and Range Company, but only to such as are made in furtherance of an illegal boycott.

In a partial dissenting opinion Chief Justice Shepard took a strong hand in upholding the freedom of the press. He says that even assuming that the publication of the complainants' name in the "we don't patronize" column of the Federationist "was a step in the formation of a conspiracy to coerce independent dealers into refusing to have further business relations with that company, I cannot agree that the publication can be restrained for that reason.

The chief justice held that "the only remedy for libelous or otherwise malicious, wrongful and injurious publications is by civil action for damages and criminal prosecution. There is no power to restrain the publication."

The decision does not settle the appeal in the contempt proceedings in which Messrs. Gompers, Morrison and Mitchell were given jail sentences. This case will be heard later by the appellate court.

MILITIA TO PROTECT NEGRO.

Governor of Iowa Says Junken Must Have Proper Trial.

Des Moines, Ia.—"John Junken, murderer of Clara Rosen, must be arraigned during the daytime at Ottumwa. The law must take its course and all the militia necessary will be furnished to prevent violence," said Gov. B. F. Carroll Wednesday night. The governor so notified Sheriff Jackson over the telephone.

"I intend to protect the good name of Iowa and of the people of Ottumwa," said Gov. Carroll, "and I will not have it said that a prisoner has to be arraigned by stealth, under cover of darkness, to secure a fair trial.

"If Junken is to be hanged I want it in the legal way and not by a mob."

Joe Gans Whips Englishman.

New York.—Joe Gans, former lightweight champion of the world, easily defeated Jabez White, the English lightweight champion, in a ten-round bout at the National Athletic club Friday night. It was a tame exhibition and the big crowd was disappointed, as the men were slow and lacked force behind many of their blows. Gans was far from being the Gans of even two years ago, as he missed several blows, misjudged the distance and failed to take advantage of many opportunities that presented themselves.

HELD FOR $70,000 SHORTAGE.

Utah's Ex-Treasurer Admits the Theft of State Funds.

Salt Lake City.—James Christiansen, former state treasurer, who retired from office January 1, is under arrest on the charge of being a defaulter to the amount of $70,000.

The arrest followed Christiansen's confession of his responsibility for the shortage. He is now in jail here. The money, it is acknowledged, was used in speculations in Nevada mining ventures.

Christiansen was state treasurer for the four-year term ending at the beginning of the present year. The shortage in the accounts was discovered a few days ago through the checking of the accounts by the state board of examiners. At the time Christiansen was in Nevada where he has extensive mining interests. In response to a telegram apprising him of the discovery he returned to Salt Lake City and admitted his shortage. The amount of the shortage has been deposited to the credit of the state by the bondsmen and friends of the ex-official.

HAVE NEW DEATH MYSTERY.

Dayton Police Believe Body of Woman Is Another Murder Victim.

Dayton, O.—Another baffling mystery confronts the police in the discovery of the body of an unidentified white woman in the canal below the Apple street bridge. In the opinion of the officers, it must have lain in the water about a month. They fear it is another of the baffling murder cases that have thrown the city into a panic.

The woman apparently was 30 years old and well dressed. She was attired in black. She wore Romeo slippers, but over these she had a pair of new rubber shoes. The woman's under garments were in good condition. The decomposition will, it is feared, prevent the identification of the woman.

Six girls have been found slain in Dayton recently. Four of the murders have never been solved.

TAFT JOINS OPTIMIST CLUB.

Says His Administration Is to Be Hopeful and Cheerful.

Washington.—President Taft Thursday said his will be an optimistic administration to an optimistic country, full of hope, cheerfulness and confidence.

The president expressed this sentiment when he became a full-fledged member of the Optimist Club of America, upon the invitation of its founder, William J. Robinson of New York.

But It Sometimes Is Bad for the Painting.

When a property-owner knows nothing about paint it is bad for the property-owner, and bad for the painter. It would not be so if the property-owner would always hire a skilled painter, and then really leave everything to him. But the house-owner so often fools himself on one or the other of these things.

The skilled painter in every community has some of the most incompetent competitors that ever vexed a conscientious workman or contractor, and the incompetents get jobs generally by working cheap. In the next place, when the skilled painter is hired, they do not leave everything to him, as so many property-owners boast they do.

They interfere most ignorantly and most fatally. They insist sometimes on using paint materials without investigating whether they are good or not. Or perhaps they insist on the painter's hurrying the work.

"I'm not going to have that painter's mess around my house a month," the wife says, and what wife says goes—at the cost of a lot of wasted painting money.

If the painter stays away a few days to allow the paint to thoroughly dry the owner says: "That painter's neglecting this work—guess he's side-tracking me for Jones' work. I won't stand it."

What chance does a painter have to do good work for a man who is continually nagging at him and otherwise handicapping him (without meaning it, of course)? A poor job is the inevitable result of such interference.

Poor painting costs the houseowner money—don't forget that. It might pay you to get the practical paint book, painting specifications and instrument for detecting paint adulterants, which National Lead Co. are offering under the title of House Owner's Painting Outfit No. 49. Address National Lead Co., 1902 Trinity Bldg., New York City. This company do not make paint (they leave that to the painter to do) but they make pure white lead ("Dutch Boy Painter" trademark kind), and they can tell you how to save money by securing durable painting.

Wanted Longer Sermons.

It was a proud boast one clergyman made to two or three others who were having a quiet chat in his study the other night—namely, that he had actually on one occasion been asked to make his service, both prayers and sermon, a bit longer.

His brethren regarded him with superstitious awe, and one asked, feebly:

"Where on earth was that?"

"Well, boys," was the frank confession, "it was with a goal where I acted as chaplain for a short time. The poor beggars dreaded to leave the church for their cells."

What He Lacked.

It is related of a South American general, who was extremely well pleased with himself, that once, when about to sally forth to a grand dance, he surveyed himself contentedly in the mirror, and then soliloquized thus:

"Ah! Thou hast all—bravery, wealth, position, good looks. Ah, what dost thou lack?"

Whereupon his orderly, who, unknown to the general, was close at hand, remarked:

"Sense, general, sense!"

What Ailed Tommie.

Tommie was eating walnuts. His mother cautioned him about eating many, fearing they would make him sick. Presently he came in, his hand on his stomach and a very distressed look in his face.

"Those nuts have made you sick, I see. I just knew they would," said the mother.

"They haven't, either," whined Tommie. "I am not sick; it's just my pants are too tight."—Delineator.

Proving His Caution.

Elder W. H. Underwood, chaplain of the state senate, was walking down a street at his home at Clay Center recently with a friend. Another friend, with whom Underwood joked a good deal, met them and said: "Elder, I thought you were careful of the company you keep."

"I am," replied the chaplain, walking right on. "I'm not going to stop."—Kansas City Journal.

DIDN'T REALIZE

How Injurious Coffee Really Was.

Many persons go on drinking coffee year after year without realizing that it is the cause of many obscure but persistent ailments.

The drug—caffeine—in coffee and tea, is very like uric acid and is often the cause of rheumatic attacks which, when coffee is used habitually, become chronic.

A Washington lady said, recently: "I am sixty-five and have had a good deal of experience with coffee. I consider it very injurious and the cause of many diseases. I am sure it causes decay of teeth in children.

"When I drank coffee I had sick spells and still did not realize that coffee could be so harmful, till about a year ago I had rheumatism in my arms and fingers, got so nervous I could not sleep, and was all run down.

"At last, after finding that medicines did me no good, I decided to quit coffee entirely and try Postum. After using it six months I fully recovered my health beyond all expectations, can sleep sound and my rheumatism is all gone." "There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

PHILANDER C. KNOX SECRETARY of STATE
FRANKLIN MacVEAGH SECRETARY of the TREASURY
JACOB M. DICKINSON SECRETARY of WAR
GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM ATTORNEY GENERAL
FRANK H. HITCHCOCK POSTMASTER GENERAL
GEORGE von L. MEYER SECRETARY of the NAVY
PRESIDENT WILLIAM H. TAFT
RICHARD A. BALLINGER SECRETARY of the INTERIOR
JAMES WILSON SECRETARY of AGRICULTURE
CHARLES NAGLE SECRETARY of COMMERCE AND LABOR

PRESIDENT TAFT'S OFFICIAL FAMILY

SKETCHES OF THE NINE EMINENT MEN FORMING HIS CABINET.

P. C. KNOX HEADS THE GROUP

Pennsylvanian Is Secretary of State—Franklin MacVeagh, Chicago Merchant, Holds the Treasury Portfolio—Jacob M. Dickinson, Tennessee Democrat, to Manage the Army—Affairs of the Agricultural Department Left in James Wilson's Hands.

Philander Chase Knox of Pennsylvania, secretary of state in the cabinet of President Taft, was born at Brownsville, Pa., in 1853. He was graduated from Mount Union college, Ohio, in 1872, and three years later was admitted to the bar. During the years 1876 and 1877 he served as assistant United States district attorney for the western district of Pennsylvania. In the latter year he formed a law partnership with James H. Reed which still exists and which has represented many large corporations, including the Carnegie Company. Mr. Knox entered President McKinley's cabinet as attorney general in April, 1901, serving until 1904, when he was elected United States senator from Pensylvania. The latter position he resigned to become the head of President Taft's cabinet.

Wilson Retains His Place.

Only one member of the Roosevelt cabinet retains his portfolio under Mr. Taft. That is James Wilson of Iowa, secretary of agriculture. So excellent had been his work in that position that there was no serious talk of making a change. Born in Scotland in 1835, Mr. Wilson came to the United States in 1852 and three years later settled in Iowa. In 1861 he engaged in farming in Tama county. He was a member of the Iowa assembly for three sessions and speaker of the house for one session, and also was a member of the Iowa state railway commission. In 1873 he was elected to congress, serving two terms, and was sent to the national legislature again for one term in 1883. He was regent of the State university of Iowa in 1870-74, and in 1890 was made director of the agricultural experiment station and professor of agriculture at the Iowa Agricultural college, Ames, Ia. In 1897 he became secretary of agriculture.

MacVeagh for the Treasury.

Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the treasury, was born on a farm in Chester county, Pennsylvania, graduated from Yale in 1862 and from Columbia Law school in 1864. He began the practice of law in New York city but ill-health forced him to abandon it and in 1865 he went to Chicago and engaged in the wholesale grocery business. In this and other commercial pursuits he has amassed a large fortune. Before entering the cabinet he disposed of his holdings in the big grocery firm and resigned as director of the Commercial National bank of Chicago. Mr. MacVeagh has always been interested in movements for the public welfare, locally and nationally.

Dickinson Is War Secretary.

Jacob M. Dickinson of Tennessee and Chicago, the new secretary of war, was born in 1851 at Columbus, Miss. He graduated from the University of Nashville in 1872 and afterward studied law at Columbia college, at the University of Leipsiz and in Paris. He served several times by special commission on the supreme bench of Tennessee and was assistant attorney general of the United States in 1895-97.

Postmaster General Hitchcock.

The first cabinet officer selected by Mr. Taft after his election was Frank H. Hitchcock of Massachusetts, who gave up his place as first assistant postmaster general to manage successfully the Taft presidential campaign. He has been given the office of postmaster general in the new cabinet. Mr. Hitchcock was born at Amherst, O., in 1867, and graduated from Harvard in 1891 and from Columbia Law school in 1894. Since 1891 he has been a government official.

Nagel Has Commerce Portfolio.

Missouri has been rewarded for its switch to the Republican column by the appointment of Charles Nagel as secretary of commerce and labor. Mr. Nagel is a leading lawyer of St. Louis and the west. He was born in Texas in 1849, moved to St. Louis when a child and graduated from the St. Louis Law school in 1873. He has been senior member of the law firm of Nagel & Kirby, professor in the St. Louis Law school and a trustee of Washington university. In 1881-83 he was a member of the Missouri house of representatives, and in 1893-97 was president of the St. Louis city council. He is a member of the Republican national committee and for years has been an intimate friend of Mr. Taft. He was one of Mr. Roosevelt's most enthusiastic supporters. As an attorney Mr. Nagel was identified with several important cases dealing with the numerous complications in the affairs of the Five Civilized Tribes in the then Indian territory.

Navy Under Meyer's Charge.

President Taft's secretary of the navy, George Von L. Meyer of Massachusetts, has had wide experience as a business man, legislator, diplomat and cabinet officer. He was born in Boston in 1858 and graduated from Harvard in 1879. He then entered business and has been prominently conected with a number of financial and mercantile concerns. His career as a public official began in 1889, when he was elected to the Boston common council. He then served on the board of aldermen, and in 1892-96 he was a member of the Massachusetts legislature, the last two years being speaker of the house. In 1900 Mr. Meyer was sent to Italy as American ambassador, and in 1905 was transferred to Russia. In January, 1907, President Roosevelt called him home to enter his cabinet as postmaster general. This portfolio he has relinquished for that of the navy. Mr. Meyer's home is Hamilton, Mass.

Ballinger Secretary of Interior.

After about one year's service as commissioner of the general land office, Richard A. Ballinger of Seattle, Wash., has entered the cabinet as secretary of the interior. He is a native of Iowa, having been born in Boonesboro in 1858. After attending the University of Kansas and Washburn college at Topeka, he went to Williams college, graduating in 1884 and afterward studying law and removing to Washington. He was United States court commissioner in 1890-92 and later was judge of the supreme court in Jefferson county, Wash.

Attorney General Wickersham.

George W. Wickersham, who becomes President Taft's attorney general, has had the reputation of being one of the ablest lawyers in New York city. Born in Pittsburg in 1858, he studied civil engineering in Lehigh university and in 1880 graduated from the law school of the University of Pennsylvania. For two years he practiced law in Philadelphia. In 1884 he became associated with the law firm of Strong & Cadwalladare, to which Henry W. Taft, brother of the president, belongs.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Wet and Dry Elections.

St. Paul—The annual spring battle over license was fought out in many cities and towns in Minnesota this week. License prevailed in twenty-eight towns and no license in twenty-two towns. Temperance men at Excelsior were nearly caught napping, no license winning by only one majority. License carried at Echo by the same narrow margin. In Ogilvie the vote was a tie and license will hold another year. The following were the results:

License — Alexandria, Badger, Browns Valley, Buffalo, Cokato, Dodge Center, Echo, Eyota, Glenwood, Isanti, Jackson, Madella, Montrose, Morton, Ogilvie, Owatonna, Princeton, Raymond, Renville, Rush City, Slayton, Spring Valley, St. Louis Park, Stephen, Tonka Bay, Tyler, Walker, Winnebago.

No License—Atwater, Bagley, Belgrade, Braham, Bricelyn, Cambridge, Cottonwood, Cyrus, Elbow Lake, Elmore, Excelsior, Hanley Falls, Hanska, Hayfield, Hazel Run, Long Lake, Maynard, Osakis, Roseau, Sacred Heart, Starbuck, Woodstock.

Fire at Worthington.

Worthington — The Worthington Real Estate company's building, the first brick building erected in this place, was burned, the fire starting from an overheated stove in the shoe store of Loren Clark. The Workmen had lodge rooms on the second floor and lost all their fixtures and paraphernalia. Clark's loss on his goods was $12,000 and he had insurance of $6,000. Nelson's restaurant was damaged to the extent of $1,000, the insurance being $500. The insurance on the building was but $3,000 and the total loss caused by the fire is estimated at close to $25,000. The burned structure will be replaced with a bigger and better building.

Celebrates 100th Birthday.

Winona—James Hogan, who makes his home with his son, James Hogan, Jr., of Homer Ridge, celebrated the 100th anniversary of his birth. Mr. Hogan has been a cripple from rheumatism for the past 20 years, and his sight and hearing are impaired. As a result of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Hogan 13 children were born, of whom four are now living, these being Mrs. Kate Green of Homer, Mrs. Anna Nunn of St. Paul, Thomas Hogan of South Dakota, and James Hogan, Jr., of Homer Ridge. Twenty-eight grandchildren were born, of whom seven have died. There are 30 great-grandchildren.

Capt. Tapper Dead.

Villard—Captain John Tapper, pioneer ferryman of Minneapolis, is dead. After a long illness the end came yesterday at the home of his son, Frank Tapper. The infirmities of old age led to his gradual decline in health, a decay which was markedly noticeable in the last year. At various times since he retired from active work Captain Tapper has been in Minneapolis for extended visits. Connected so closely with the early days of the city, both as a ferryman and toll keeper on the old suspension bridge, he has been a familiar acquaintance of all the old settlers.

Sues the Omaha for $15,000.

Mankato—Thomas L. Bastow of Owatonna has started an action in the federal court in this city to recover $15,000 for injuries alleged to have been sustained in a wreck at Cumberland, Wis., last August. The Omaha road is the defendant. The complaint alleges that Bastow was a passenger, and that through the negligence of the company the train was derailed and his hip and several ribs were broken, and all of his front teeth knocked out.

NEWS NOTES.

Rochester—John Dick, a pioneer resident of the county, died here. He was 84 years of age.

Mankato—A. H. Fowler, a prominent resident, died of apoplexy in the basement of his residence. He was city assessor and a member of the board of public works.

Hokah—Lake Como lodge, No. 40, I. O. O. F., has let the contract for a new lodge hall, to be erected at a cost of about $2,000. The building is to be 26x70, and the first floor will be a public hall. It will be ready for use about July 15.

Minneapolis.—The dramatic form of Goethe's immortal poem, "Faust," with Miss Rosabel Morrison, the daughter of the late Lewis Morrison, in the role of Marguerite, will be the attraction at the Bijou, Minneapolis, the week of March 21st. A better version of the story has never been seen than the coming production will present.

Winona—J. N. Adee, superintendent of the public schools at Batavia, Ill., was elected by the Winona board of education as superintendent of the Winona schools succeeding Charles R. Frazier, who recently resigned to take a position as assistant state superintendent of public instruction.

Hastings—The explosion of a kitchen stove in the home of Louis Husting, a nursery salesman, burned his 4-months-old son to death, injured his 2-year-old daughter, Eva, so that she died, and seriously burned his wife, who struggled to rescue the children.

Hastings—John Wilscheck committed suicide at his home on East Fourth street by hanging himself to a beam in his barn.

Duluth—Yousiff Mahmout wrestled for an hour with Fred Beell without securing a fall. The bout was evidently a frameup and the crowd of 1,000 was sore.

Minneapolis—Mrs. Christine Margaret Olson, one of the few centenarians of Minneapolis, died. Mrs. Olson has just passed the hundred mark, her last birthday being Sept. 17. Her death was due to old age and her decline had been noticeable for several months.

Minneapolis—From cellar to garret, the residence of Congressman Frank M. Nye, 2708 Pillsbury avenue, was ransacked by burglars, who gained entrance to the house by forcing open a basement door and cutting panels from the bolted doors leading to the upper floors.

Minneapolis—Mrs. Emily S. Eustis, who died at her home, was one of the old Minnesota pioneers. She was born in New Hampshire in 1819, and in 1845 was married to Samuel S. Eustis. In 1853 they removed to this state where they located between St. Paul and what was then St. Anthony. In 1866 they removed to southeast Minneapolis where the family has since resided.

Mankato—Rev. Nels Simon Haggerness died, aged 64 years, leaving a wife, three sons and one daughter. Death was due to a stroke of apoplexy. He was born in Norway, but came to America 37 years ago, and at once entered Augsburg seminary, graduating two years later. He filled the pulpits of the Norwegian Luthern churches at St. Peter and Mankato for some years and organized several churches in southern Minnesota.

Cloquet—W. F. C. Gadeau, resident of this city, entered suit against 11 saloonkeepers and two slot machine arcades of this city for the recovery of $4,000 alleged to have been gambled away in slot machines by him during the last six years. Prominent among the defendants are: L. McCullough, Joe Wilson, Olson & Elm, Joe Claveau and the Brunswick company, all of whom have their place of business on the Island.

St. Paul—When Virginia Saigle was rescued from a terrible death under the wheels of a street car by Edward Riley, an 18-year-old youth, she felt so grateful that she threw her arms around his neck and kissed him full on the lips, to the boy's embarrassment and the amusement of the crowd that quickly assembled. Miss Saigle is 18 years old and lives at 464 Edmund street, St. Paul. She was running for a car, slipped and fell, and if it had not been for the quickness of young Riley, she would have been caught under the wheels and probably fatally injured.

St. Paul—John Scheldberg, saloonkeeper, was beaten into insensibility with a beer bottle, and left for dead in his saloon. He was discovered in a semi-conscious condition by the bartender when he opened the saloon at 6 o'clock in the morning. At St. Joseph's hospital Scheldberg regained consciousness last evening, and he said that two men detained him in the saloon until 1 o'clock in the morning, and that during the conversation one of the men started a quarrel, and that one of them struck him a blow on the head with a bottle.

Montevideo—A special session of the grand lodge I. O. O. F. of Minnesota was held here. The grand lodge degree was conferred on a class of ten past grands. A district meeting was held in the afternoon and representatives were present from Ortonville, Appleton, Milan, Madison, Watson, Renville and Olivia. Charles A. Lammers, grand patriarch of the grand encampment, delivered an address on "Encampment Oddfellowship." In the evening Montevideo lodge, No. 75, exemplified the work in the initiatory and first degree after which a banquet was served.

Spooner—George W. Toombs, employed by the Cross-Dodds Lumber company as assistant manager, while driving near Shevlin-Mathiue Lumber company's planing mill, was thrown from a load of lumber and struck on his head. Toombs never regained consciousness and died. All arrangements for a funeral had been completed to be held but it developed that Dr. Oplinger in his certificate of death alleged malpractice on the part of Dr. J. E. Corrigan, who first attended the wounded man, and as a result Dr. Corrigan, who is chairman of the board of health, refused to issue a burial permit, necessitating the calling of the coroner from Bemidji, who held an inquest and postmortem examination on arrival.

Preston—Great indignation is rife here because of the refusal of the German Lutheran pastor to conduct the funeral of the late George Reidel. Mr. Reidel was highly respected, but had not attended church during the present pastor's incumbency nor was the latter called during Mr. Reidel's illness. Some of the members of the church have withdrawn.

St. Cloud—The St. Cloud Street Car company will extend this season to the Sauk river at Waite Park, then south to take in the seven granite shops along the Osseo track.

THE BEST REMEDY

For Women—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Noah, Ky. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from headaches, nervous prostration, and hemorrhages.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me well and strong, so that I can do all my housework, and attend to the store and post-office, and I feel much younger than I really am.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most successful remedy for all kinds of female troubles, and I feel that I can never praise it enough." —Mrs. Lizzie Holland, Noah, Ky.

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

For 30 years it has been curing women from the worst forms of female ills—inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and nervous prostration.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Farmers Mass Meeting.

The farmers of eastern Red Lake county, that expect to stay and make their home here, are beginning to awaken to the fact, that something must be done to take care of the surplus water in the Red Lake River during the flood seasons.

On Monday last they called a monster mass meeting of farmers, from Little Oak, to Kratka, to meet at Highlanding to discuss the situation. The meeting was largely attended by representative farmers that have been making their home here since this the reservation opened, and desire to continue to reside here, if the overflowing of Red Lake River don't drown them out.

It was not a meeting of men, that sit down and wait for the town or state to drain their farms but are trying to drain them by hand, but during the high water season, when the ditches are the most needed the water comes out of the river through them, instead of flowing into the river. The only way to remedy this is deepen the channel of Red Lake River about four feet, and the following petition was drawn up to be signed and presented to Congressman Steenerson.

TO HON. H. STEENERSON,
M. C.
Washington D. C.

WE The undersigned legal voters liveing tributary to Red Lake River, above Thief River Falls Minnesota, Respectfully petition you to use your best endevors to urge the passage of appropriation bill, now before Congress, to dredge and deepen Red Lake River. As this River now is, it overflows a large portion of the country, at certain seasons of the year, distroying our crops and makeing large tracts of valuable hay meadows worthless. Therefore we pray that you will urge the passage of said appropriation.

This Township has 23 Socialist votes, and they are not a bad lot of fellows, but we never heard of one of them voting for, or supporting a republican for a legislative office, but after the republican is elected any one of them can give them more advice about how to run their business, in a minuit than a whole District of repulicans can in a year, but we pity the one that listens to their advice.

The Experienced Swine.

The crowd around the postoffice stove, after exhausting the possibilities of politics, local and national, had been discussing the alleged lack of the truth telling instinct in Old Man Simpkins. Uncle Ezra came in, and Jim Peters said:

"What do you think about it, Uncle Ezra—would you call Old Man Simpkins a liar?"

"Well," answered Uncle Ezra slowly as he thoughtfully studied the ceiling, "I wouldn't go so fur as to call the old man a liar, but I do know it to be a fact that when feedin' time comes to get any response he has to have somebody else call his hogs fur him."—Woman's Home Companion.

LONG FELT WANT.

A Plea For a Graduated Standard of Misconduct.

What is really wanted at the present time is a standard of misconduct. We are constantly doing things in doubt, as if we hadn't a right to do them.

The confusion caused by people doing things which in their circumstances we had no right to expect is the principal cause of our troubles. It ought to be definitely settled, for example, that any millionaire who has, say, over a hundred millions will thereafter lead an honest life. If he has only fifty millions his life should be semi-honest, and if he has only a paltry ten millions then it ought to be conceded that he can loot a few railroads or so until he gets on his feet.

Up to, say, ten thousand a year no man can afford to be dishonest. He ought to get up in the cars and give his seat to women under thirty-five at least, and of course he will not take the chance of robbing any safe. From ten thousand up to a hundred thousand he can engage in little dishonest fliers by making one of a pool or putting through a land deal or so for variety.

When he gets fifty millions or more together, however, every man ought to ask himself plainly the question whether from now on he ought not to be a philanthropist. Doesn't he owe this to his fellow men?—Life.

CHOOSING A VOCATION.

Follow Common Sense and Conscience and Do Your Best.

It is very certain that no man is fit for everything, but it is almost as certain, too, that there is scarce any one man who is not fit for something, which something nature plainly points out to him by giving him a tendency and propensity to it.

I look upon common sense to be to the mind what conscience is to the heart—the faithful and constant monitor of what is right or wrong. And I am convinced that no man commits either a crime or a folly but against the manifest and sensible representations of the one or the other.

Every man finds in himself, either from nature or education—for they are hard to distinguish—a peculiar bent and disposition to some particular character, and his struggling against it is the fruitless and endless labor of Sisyphus. Let him follow and cultivate that vocation; he will succeed in it and be considerable in one way at least, whereas if he departs from it he will at best be inconsiderable, probably ridiculous.—Lord Chesterfield.

The Oyster Crab.

Some of the most remarkable crabs in the world live at the expense of other animals. They are crustacean tramps and have no shame in sustaining existence at other animals' cost. One of these marine tramps is a little fellow that makes its home with the living oyster. In fact, it dwells in the oyster's shell and feeds on whatever is left over from the mollusk's dinners. Oddly enough, however, it is only the female that has this habit of "boarding out." The male crab has no permanent home, but spends its time swimming about at the surface of the water. Oyster crabs sometimes are big enough to have an arm stretch of an inch. Epicures consider them very good to eat. Sometimes they are cooked separately, and occasionally they are pickled. Crabs of nearly allied species, somewhat bigger, are found in the shells of mussels and scallops. In this case, again, only the female is a parasite.

Scottish Caution.

Certainly the cautious Scot spirit pervaded the opinions of the Scottish architect who was called upon to erect a building in England upon the long lease system, so common with Anglican proprietors, but quite new to our friend. When he found the proposal was to build upon the tenure of 999 years he quietly suggested: "Could ye no mak' it a thousand? Nine hundred and ninety-nine years 'll be slippin' awa'."

But of all the cautious and careful answers we ever heard of was one given by a carpenter to an old lady in Glasgow, for whom he was working, and the anecdote is well authenticated. She had offered him a dram and asked him whether he would have it then or wait till his work was done. "Indeed, mem," he said, "there's been sic a power o' sudden deaths lately that I'll just tak' it now."—"Reminiscences of Dean Ramsay."

Gallantry.

At a school in Aberdeen a teacher was examining her class on the Bible, the lesson being a part of Genesis. The teacher asked her class, "Why did the serpent tempt Eve instead of Adam?"

For some time there was silence, but at length a little boy held up his hand and replied, "Please, mum, 'cause it's ladies first."—Tit-Bits.

The Real Thing.

"How do youh possum taste, suh?" asked the solicitous waiter.

"Well," responded the patron who had ordered the article, "it tastes pretty good, but it isn't possum."

"No, suh," rejoined the waiter, "an' dat's a sign it's genuine. De genuine possum is a great pretender, suh; yas, suh."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A CAREFUL MAN.

When It Came to Money He Had to Put on the Brakes.

The passengers in an accommodation train which was winding its way through New Hampshire were interested and amused by an elderly couple who sat in the middle of the car.

They talked as if there were no one else in the car. Therefore, having heard most of their private plans, no one was surprised to have the old man take the assembled company fully into his confidence. At one station he rose and addressed the passengers in general.

"Can anybody change a five dollar bill for two twos and a one or five ones?" he inquired.

"I can," said a brisk woman, and the transfer was quickly made.

"Now, could anybody change this one dollar bill for four quarters or tens and fives?" asked the old man.

"I can give you two fifties," said a man from the rear seat, "unless somebody else can do better."

It appeared that nobody could or at least nobody offered, so as the train started the old man lurched down the car to the possessor of the two fifty cent pieces.

"Thank you," he said as he took the money. "I'm obliged, though I'd have liked the quarters best. You see, Marthy has set her mind to stop off at Nashuy whilst I go on up to my brother's with the eggs and truck. And, though she don't plan nor mean to be a spendthrifty woman, when she's let loose amongst a lot of stores she'll run through 50 cents in an hour easy, and I kind of have to put a curb on her."—Youth's Companion.

THE TURTLE'S HEAD.

Chopped Off, It Retains Life For a Number of Hours.

On the counter, in a porcelain dish, stood the severed head of a large turtle.

"That is rather grewsome," said a man who was buying oysters.

The oyster opener glanced at the head carelessly.

"It is a bet," said he. "I bet Gus Schmidt that the head would keep alive twenty-four hours. It's nearly twenty-five now since I chopped it off. Gus is late. But I win anyhow," he added.

"Where's my money? Pay me my money!" a deep voice shouted at this moment, and a short man swaggered in.

"You've lost, Gus," said the oyster opener. "There is still life in her."

"There is—nit," said Gus Schmidt. "Nix on the life."

And he extended a stumpy finger fearlessly toward the turtle's mouth.

"Gee!"

Startled, amazed, Gus Schmidt leaped back. For in the turtle's open eyes a fierce light had flashed, the ugly mouth had opened and shut with a sharp snap, and the head in some strange way had advanced an inch or two toward the tempting finger, much as a piece of steel advances toward a magnet.

"This may surprise you, Gus," said the oyster opener, wiping his wet hands in order to pocket his winnings. "But it don't surprise me none. I've seen turtle heads keep life in 'em longer'n this here."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Greeley Dodged Lincoln.

President Lincoln, having been often and severely arraigned in the New York Tribune for what Mr. Greeley considered his slowness in prosecuting the war, had said: "If he (Greeley) objects to my policy, I shall be glad to have him state to me his views frankly and fully. I shall adopt his if I can. If I cannot, I will at least tell him why. He and I should stand together."

"If I were to go," said Greeley when the words were repeated to him, "he would simply twist me around his fingers, as he always does."

"Lincoln's smile would win me in half a minute," he said on another occasion when again urged to see the president and have a talk with him. "He is a wonderful man—wonderful! I never can harbor a thought against him except when I keep away from him."

The Lay of the Hen.

Germany's hens produce the lightest eggs. Ten will weigh a pound there, while it requires only nine Russian eggs to make that weight, eight American eggs and seven Spanish eggs.

There will be a State Farmers Institute held at the Highlanding school house, on Morday March the 22nd, commenceing at 1 o'clock p.m. These Institutes are being held thruout the state and are of great bennefit to the farmors. All it costs you is your time to attend, and if they don't do you any good, they certaily will do you no harm.

The question is again up to to the people of Highlanding to establish a buring ground, but again we are met by the proprosition that two or three fellows don't want a bridge across the river, and as people don't choose their time to die we suppose we will have to have two, as there are times that the river can not be crossed.

The social that was to be held at the school house on Wednesday evening was promptly adjourned on account of the sudden and unexpected death of Ole Overum. It was quite a dissapointment to a large number of people who came from a distance, but it could not be helped, as we as one member of the board of directors of this school district, have more respect for others, than to allow a meery party to be held in our school house, when another member of the board lay cold in death, at Thief River Falls.

One evening the lawyer strolled through the grounds of his place and stopped to have a chat with the gardener.

"Faith, an' Oi'm not surprised," replied the gardener. "Ireland niver got justice yit."—Judge.

Money Getters.

"Do you think it pays to send our sons to college? Do they obtain the practical experience in money getting that is so necessary in these days?"

"Well, judging from the experience I have had with my son, I should say they did. His practical experience in money getting increases with every letter that I receive from him."

Simplified Debate.

"Are you going to attempt to answer all the charges made against you?"

"Certainly," replied Senator Sorghum. "Answering charges these days is easy. All you've got to do is to say, 'You're another.'"—Washington Star.

VERY SUDDEN DEATH.

We regret that we are compelled to publish the sad news, this week, that Ole Overum, of Highlanding died, at the Thief River Falls hospital early on Wednesday morning last. Mr. Overum caught a very severe cold about ten days ago, which settled on his lungs, and on Thursday last he taken to the hospital for treatement, where in spite of all that medical skill could do he grew rappidly worse until Wednesday morning when the end came.

Mr Overum was one of the first settlers on the Eleven Town ships and has a valuable homestead at Highlanding which he has under a high state of cultivation He not only built up and improved his own farm, but he always took an active interest in the upbuilding of the country in which he lived, and could always be depended on to contribute time and money for the building up of any publick improvement. He has been a member of the school board since this school district was organized and has always used his best endevors to manage the school for the best interest of the scholars and tax payers Mr. Overum was a man who was highly respected in the community in which he lived and his sudden and unexpected death has cast a gloom over the entire neighborhood. He leaves a wife and two young children in morderate circumstaces to mourn his loss, who have the sincere sympaty of the entire community in their berievement.

Later: The remains will be returned to his late home today and funeral service will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 1 o clock p.m.

Few Beds in Bagdad.

About 60 per cent of Bagdad's population possess no beds. These poor people rest on blankets spread on the floors of their houses in the winter and on the roofs in the summer. Owing to the excessive heat of these regions sleep is made impossible elsewhere than on the roof or in the open gardens. It is an interesting sight to see how the women at sunset emerge from their houses to prepare the evening meal on the roof and spread the bedding for the night. Inasmuch as the climate is very dry, there is little to fear from exposure to the night air. While a considerable number of the roofs are surrounded by latticework to insure a certain amount of privacy, by far the larger number are quite exposed to the gaze of curious and inquisitive neighbors.

TRIED TO BE JOCOSE.

Snicker Was in a Jovial Mood and Hungry as Well.

BUT HE SPOILED HIS MEAL.

By the Time He Managed to Order His Breakfast the Glow of Genial Good Humor He Tried to Shed Around Him Had Turned to Gloom.

Mr. Snicker is well known in his home town as the most facetious man in seventeen counties. His method of expressing what ideas he has is entirely along lines of pure jocosity, but now and then his wit falls upon unappreciative ears. On a recent visit to New York Mr. Snicker arrived rather early in the morning, and the pangs of hunger would brook so little delay that he went immediately upon his arrival to a prominent hotel in the vicinity of the station for his breakfast.

"Good morning, Henri," he chortled in his usual salubrious manner to the waiter as the latter hung his hat on a hook over his table. "Has the butcher come yet?"

"Ze what, sir?" asked the waiter, with a puzzled look on his face, for he was not used to Snickers.

"The butcher," said Snicker, with a merry wink in his left eye. "You know—the chap who brings the food. I thought perhaps"—

"Wait one moment, sir," said the waiter, his perplexity growing deeper. "I will bring ze head waiter, sir."

"Oh, never mind," Snicker began, but the waiter had departed to return in about three minutes with the head waiter.

"What is it, sir?" asked the latter, with a great show of civil interest.

"Oh, nothing," returned Snicker rather sheepishly. "I just asked Henri here if the butcher had arrived yet, fearing that possibly"—

"The butcher, sir?" repeated the head waiter, like his subordinate, very much mystified.

"Yes," said Snicker, with a faint smile, which he hoped the head waiter would find contagious. "I was only jok"—

"Wait till I find ze superintendent," said the head waiter courteously. "I have no doubt we can accommodate monsieur if we can only find out what it is that he wants. I will send for him."

Snicker again started in to explain the mere facetious bearing of his inquiry, but the head waiter, too, had sped away in search of a superior officer who might be expected to be equal to this new and unexpected emergency.

Several omnibus boys and Snicker's waiter as well were dispatched to the kitchen and elsewhere to find him, but apparently without success. Five, ten, fifteen minutes elapsed, and Snicker began to feel that it did not really pay to be as funny as he could under all circumstances.

Finally, however, the head waiter returned and courteously explained that the superintendent had not yet arrived at his post of duty, but that he had telephoned up to the office for the manager of the hotel, who, he assured him, would be down in a very few moments.

"He is rather busy at this time of the morning, sir," he vouchsafed "but he said he would be down right away."

"Well, I'm sorry," said Snicker ruefully. "You'd better head him off if you can. You see, when I asked if the butcher had come yet, it was only meant as a joke"—

"Ah, here is the manager," interrupted the head waiter as a tall, impressive gentleman with a majestic front loomed up in the dining room door and made his way across to Snicker's table. "This is the gentleman, Mr. Pingleton," the head waiter added when the manager had reached Snicker's side.

"Good morning, sir," said the manager breezily. "I hope there is no trouble, sir. I am sorry to have kept you waiting, but this is the busy end of the day with me getting things started along, and our dining room superintendent, I regret to say, is off duty this morning. What can we do for you, sir?"

"I—I—want a hard boiled egg and some lyonnaise potatoes," said Snicker.—John Kendrick Bangs in Lippincott's Magazine.

Cats Disguised as Snakes.

"Do you know why a cat hisses when in rage or danger?" said a nature student. "Well, sir, she hisses as a flying criminal puts on blue goggles and a false beard. With that hiss she tries instinctively to disguise herself as a snake.

"Did you ever notice the markings on a cat's tail? They are transverse, like a snake's markings. The primitive cat in the wild state lived in rather tall grass. When danger approached he hissed and at the same time put up his tail and waved it slowly. The oncomer heard that serpentine hiss. He saw the tail, and only the tail, which waved in an ominous, serpentine manner. He said 'snake in the grass' and withdrew.

"The cat of today, hissing horribly and waving to and fro his erected tail, follows ancestral precedent. It helps him not at all; nevertheless he always does it, thinking it the right thing. Is not man sometimes like the cat in this respect?"

First Lady of the Land

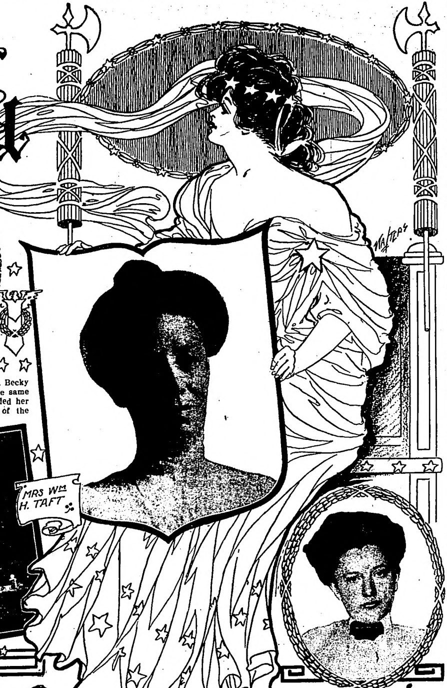
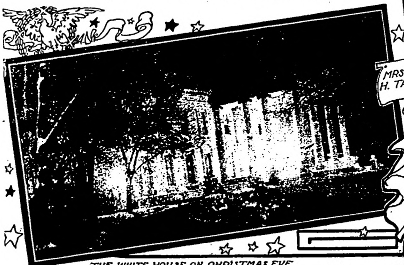
Mrs. Edward Dunroy-Reed

MRS ROOSEVELT



MRS WM H. TAFT

MISS HELEN TAFT



THE WHITE HOUSE ON CHRISTMAS EVE

WHAT manner of woman is Mrs. William H. Taft, whose name has been added to those of the women whose influence has made the social fame of past administrations? How does the White House regime with which history connects the name of Taft compare with the hospitality of Madison's, the elegance of John Quincy Adams', the simple democracy of Andrew Jackson's, or the stateliness of James Buchanan's? More pertinently still, how does it measure with the record of the Roosevelt regime?

These are to-day queries of absorbing interest, and nowhere has this phase of a new administration quite the significance that it has at Washington. Diplomats, and back of them the governments for which they stand, are as much interested in the personality of the rising American powers as their own countrymen.

Mrs. Taft is neither the soft green of the soul of Burke's ideal feminine, nor is she Napoleon's abhorrence, intellect in petticoats. She is that rarer thing, a well-balanced woman. The Tories, said Wellington, when Victoria ascended the English throne, could hope for little headway under a female sovereign, because he had no small talk and Pitt had no manners. Mrs. Taft is a woman whom one might well imagine making allowances for both shortages, provided there were such compensations along other lines as Wellington and Pitt possessed.

Given such a foundation in character, with youth, good health and ambition and the peculiar advantages her life has already given her, few women have gone into the White House so well equipped to meet the exactions of the position of "first lady of the land." Her regime, moreover, has not that negative quality which circumstances have infused into the social atmosphere of some previous administrations. She has tastes and enthusiasms which will give character to the social life at Washington, of which the White House is the center, for the next four years.

Music, which has flourished at Washington under White House patronage during the seven years of Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt's residence there, has even more emphatic encouragement under the social sway of a woman who was one of the founders of Cincinnati's famous musical organization, the Symphony orchestra. Not only is she a patroness of music, but is a musician. She kept up her hours of daily practice regularly until within recent years, when the frequent changes in her life and its many added duties made the continuance impossible.

Though she does not regard herself as sufficiently in practice to perform for a critical audience, she has by no means lost her skill and frequently plays for her husband and children during their evenings at home. These are more than might be supposed, for Mrs. Taft is one of the women who stays usually at home unless her husband can go out with her.

Other avenues through which her artistic taste finds an outlet are her love of pictures and her appreciation of wood carving. Charles Taft's art collection has no more appreciative friend than his sister-in-law. She is enthusiastic about every treasure he adds to it, and enjoys few things more than pointing out its beauties to others. Faces and figures appeal more to her than landscapes, and a recently acquired Rembrandt has given her keen pleasure. She has made a study of wood carving, and has the nucleus of a collection containing some excellent specimens. She is a connoisseur of the craft, and knows the fine points in the work of various schools and masters.

She is a book lover, and has been a student all her life, first because she grew up in a home where books came down from the shelves and made the worlds they contain part of the domestic environment. Elizabeth Bennett and her sisters, with their heart affairs and all the incidental character delineations, stepped from a worn copy of "Pride and Prejudice," bringing into the Herron home in Cincinnati, with its quaint atmosphere of the early century. Becky Sharp, perhaps, temporarily deluded the same youthful group as she for a time deluded her own glad array of daughters, much of the own kith and kin. Henry Esmond embodied their ideal of chivalry, and Thackeray's whole world of characters were familiar figures on the horizon of their imagination. Mrs. Taft is loyal to her old literary friends, and still dips into their society. George Eliot is one of the favorites of her later years.

She is a general reader, the newspapers coming in for a daily share of her time. To any subject in which Mr. Taft is interested or of which he is making a study she also gives her attention. As few men of the period have had occasion to look up information on such a variety of subjects as the president-elect, Mrs. Taft has made herself a student of wide range. It has intensified the sense of comradeship existing between them, and is perhaps but another expression of the sentiment which takes her walking over the golf course with her husband, though she does not play. At Hot Springs last summer she made the tour of the course with Mr. Taft every day, a strenuous walk, as every one knows who has climbed the hills and descended the dales of the golf inclosure at that resort.

CHARLIE TAFT

Mrs. Taft has brains, and uses them, without being in any sense aggressive or pedantic. She talks well, and looks well when she is talking. Her smile has the charm of intelligence, that quick flash of recognition, distinct from the frozen, automatic smile peculiar to many women in official life, on whom social duties make many demands, even to that of continuously "looking pleasant." She has a generous mouth and handsome teeth, a straight nose, well proportioned to her other features, a broad forehead, above which her brown hair is arranged in a soft pompadour.

In her knowledge of languages Mrs. Taft has an advantage over many of her predecessors. During their last winter as members of the cabinet circle, Mr. and Mrs. Taft were in mourning for Mr. Taft's mother, and they took no part in formal social occasions. They have many friends in many lands. Mrs. Taft, however, like many women who have grown up in a large family of girls among whom the tie of kinship is strong, has few intimate friends.

She plays a scientific game of whist, and has gravitated here toward the women who take the game seriously. Of these Miss Cannon, daughter of the speaker of the house of representatives, is one who is frequently with Mrs. Taft. They drive together, one of Mrs. Taft's favorite diversions, and are often together at concerts. Mrs. Hallie Erminie Rives Wheeler, wife of the secretary of the American embassy at Tokyo, is another of Mrs. Taft's friends. She spent several months recently in this country, and during part of the time was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Taft. Their friendship goes back to days of travel in the east, when they saw many things together and discovered a sympathy in the point of view.

Gen. and Mrs. Corbin and Gen. and Mrs. Edwards are prominent in the social entourage of the next White House regime. Gen. Corbin comes from Ohio. Mrs. Corbin was Miss Edith Patten of Washington, formerly of California. Their friendship with Mr. and Mrs. Taft is of long standing. They were all in the Philippines together. Gen. and Mrs. Corbin have recently completed a handsome country home at Chevy Chase, Washington's most fashionable suburb.

Gen. and Mrs. Edwards are close neighbors of the White House. Their friendship with the Tafts has also a far-reaching and interesting background. With Gen. Edwards they have reminiscences in common of many lands. The chief of staff of the army and Mrs. Bell and Gen. and Mrs. Garlington, with their pretty daughter Sally, one of the army circle at Washington, are all prominent figures at the White House. Mrs. Garlington and Miss Garlington were members of the little party who heard the result of the nominating convention at Chicago last June with Mrs. Taft in the office of the secretary of war.

In addition to the sons and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Taft, there are plenty of young people at the White House from time to time, representing various branches of the family. The country became familiar with the names of Mr. Taft's nieces and nephews at the time of the convention in June, when they were on hand to cheer for "Uncle Will." Of Mrs. Taft's five sisters, four are married, as are also her two brothers, and all have families.

Mrs. Taft's sisters are Mrs. Parsons of Columbus, O.; Mrs. Charles Anderson of Cincinnati, who has three charming daughters who are graduates of Bryn Mawr, where Miss Helen Taft is now a student; Mrs. Louis Moore of Cincinnati, who has one little son, and Mrs. Thomas Laughlin of Pittsburg, who has two small children. Her brothers, William Herron, who married Miss Janey Esby of Cincinnati, and John Herron, who married Miss Georgie Aldrich, both have young children.

Much of the domestic machinery of the White House goes on automatically, with little variation from one administration to another. Mrs. Taft is a good housekeeper. In the home maintained until last June she had four servants, one a Filipino boy brought from the islands. The house was tastefully furnished, many souvenirs of travels giving it an interesting background. Mrs. Taft's room was decorated in blue, her favorite color. In matters of dress Mrs. Taft has quiet tastes. She does much of her own choosing and shopping, and patronizes local shops. For evening she wears white frequently, though pink is perhaps the color for which she has greater partiality. At a reception at the White House one afternoon last May, the last formal function she attended there as wife of the secretary of war, she wore a demi-toilette of black lace over white, with a black and white hat. She prefers hats to toques.

The question has already come up as a matter of speculation in official circles of Washington society as to whether Miss Helen Taft will finish her college course or be a White House debutante within the next two years. The question undoubtedly will be left to her own inclination to settle.

One afternoon last June, when the eyes of the nation were on Chicago, there emerged from one of the big, substantial brick houses in K street, Washington, a little group of figures, including a woman who led the way as they turned into Sixteenth street and walked southward toward the White House. She swung along with a step as elastic as that of the boy and girl accompanying her. They talked and laughed as they went, and their voices, all pitched to the same pleasant contralto tone, bespoke their kinship.

Perhaps they noted through the green vista of Lafayette park the glistening columns of the north portico of the White House. The picture was a familiar one to all of them. That to the woman it stood for the moment as the concrete presentment of fate toward which her steps had turned 22 years before almost to the day, who shall say? Her clear, blue-gray eyes looked as unblinkingly at the reality as they had at the vision. Though in no sense under the spell of that faculty which Thurlow Weed years ago declared had bewildered many men whose eyes were turned in that direction, she was too frank to feign an indifference to the alluring possibility of a residence within its walls. She had a candidate at Chicago that day, and if the question were put squarely to her she was ready unhesitatingly to avow him.

The woman and children made altogether an inconspicuous little group as they crossed Pennsylvania avenue and entered the big triple department building on the corner of Seventeenth street. The watchman at the door of the war department and the messengers in the corridors recognized them, however, as they made their way toward the office of the secretary, returning the grinning salutations that greeted them on all sides.

Mrs. Taft wore a white linen suit. A flower-laden hat shaded her face, which retains all its girlhood contours. The door closed upon them, and it was five o'clock before they reappeared. Was it the same party, or had that history-making afternoon wrought some subtle change? Mrs. Taft, wife of the secretary of war, was now Mrs. Taft, wife of a presidential nominee. Her step was lighter, her eyes brighter. Happy? Surely. Her candidate had won the first approaches to ultimate victory.

They went as they had come, on foot, stopping in the street to buy an "extra," for the pleasure of approaching the good news from another angle.

The wife of a man already one of the most conspicuous figures in public life in America, Mrs. Taft became from that moment a national figure. The November victory of the Republican party but concentrated the attention which had been upon her for five months as the wife of its nominee. There were no longer favorites in the field. Comparisons were out of order. The names of the president-elect and his family became household words throughout the land.

320 ACRES INSTEAD OF 160 ACRES

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

As further inducement to settlement of the wheat-raising lands of Western Canada, the Canadian Government has increased the area that may be taken by a homesteader to 320 acres—160 free and 160 to be purchased at $3.00 per acre. These lands are in the grain-raising area, where mixed farming is also carried on with unqualified success. A railway will shortly be built to Hudson Bay, bringing the world's markets a thousand miles nearer these wheat-fields, where schools and churches are convenient, climate excellent, railways close to all settlements, and local markets good.

"It would take time to assimilate the revelations that a visit to the great empire lying to the North of us unfolded at every turn."—Correspondence of a National Editor, who visited Western Canada in August, 1908.

Lands may also be purchased from railway and land companies at low prices and on easy terms.

For pamphlets, maps and information as to low railway rates, apply to Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or the authorized Canadian Government Agent:

WHAT A FORMER OREGON FARMER THINKS OF WESTERN CANADA.

Albert Nelson left Benton Co., Oregon, in Sept., 1904, for the great Canadian prairies. To quote from his letter: "I was greatly surprised to find such an immense stretch of rich virgin prairie still almost unoccupied in the very heart of North America. The splendid crops of oats, wheat, barley, potatoes and hay I beheld in the settlements made me very eager for a piece of this rich soil, and I soon located in the Goose Lake country. We have here a great stretch of the rich, deep clay loam of the Saskatchewan—a soil heavy and hard to break, but particularly well adapted for the retention of moisture and production of the bright No. 1 hard wheat, and great crops of oats, barley, flax and potatoes. I had 60 bushels of oats, weighing 441 lb. to the bushel, per acre. Some of my neighbors had still greater yields. Wheat yielded from 20 to 30 bushels per acre. We have all done well here, and I could name many Americans who came here with means to go ahead, who have done big already. For homesteads one has to go further west, but the best prairie can be bought here for from $12.00 to $16.00 per acre. The climate is dry and healthy. This is the regular Saskatchewan fall weather—frosty nights, and bright, sunny days—ideal for threshing and hauling out of wheat. The trails are dusty, as thousands of wheat teams are moving towards the elevators.

"The sight of it makes one stop and wonder what it will be in a few years when the immense prairies get under cultivation. Heavy snowfall is the exception here. Snow generally falls in December and goes off in March. It sometimes gets very cold, but the Saskatchewan farmer does not fear the cold. Winter is his season of rest. The first or second crop he builds a comfortable house for himself, and warm stables for his horses. He need not, like some, be poking about in the mud all winter attending a few beasts for a livelihood."

HIS MAD CAME LATER.

Paris Banker Falls Victim to a Practical Joker Friend.

Our friend, the mysterious practical joker, who amuses all Paris with his pranks, has ended the year with a hoax that does honor to his fertile brain.

If ever you have been to the Jardin d'Acclimatation—the Paris zoo—you will have seen there dozens of little boys and girls being promenaded through the gardens on the back of a camel or an elephant—as many of them as the animal can conveniently carry.

A few days ago the mammas watching their offspring indulge in that harmless sport were not a little surprised to see a middle-aged gentleman, faultlessly dressed, all by himself, astride on a dromedary. One of the ladies then uttered a little scream when she recognized in the rider M. X——, a well-known banker in this city.

Was he mad? Not a bit of it. He was only the victim of the anonymous practical joker who had sent him a letter on official paper, informing him that he had been appointed general manager of the government bank to be opened in Morocco.

"But," added the document, "as the communications in that country are very primitive, we advise you to practice camel riding."

The poor man believed this story, and he is now compelled to travel underground to escape his friends.—Queen.

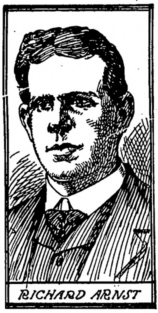
SPORTING GOSSIP

The hours of idleness between training periods often have as much effect on a fighter's future as the way his matches are made, the manner he is trained or his handling while engaged in actual combat. One of the greatest winners who ever presided over a staff is a general who stands in good with all nations. General Dissipation is the nom de plume, and it is during the idle times of a fighter's life that they become acquainted with this old warrior, who seems to have won the affection of the best of them. He leads them to "speed carnivals." Lights of all color attract, the red and white being particularly magnetic to a fighter with a bank roll, a reputation and "pals." And once he has headed this way the end is not far, the roll wilts, his ability dims, and his pals desert him for newer and more succulent acquaintances. Ring history cites many instances of the downfall of champions who were beaten by things not connected with the fighting game; their names and their faults are known, but they do not seem to act as a guide to the present generation of youngsters, especially in Philadelphia, which has as earnest a bunch of little fellows as grace the ring. "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien is one of the greatest examples of the possibilities of the American ring. He is the middleweight champion of the world, and has spent his life in cultivation of his muscles and brain. He has fought the best men in the world successfully, and he has studied sufficiently to transact all of the business of his club, the West End Athletic club, and he has read the best of literature and is a scholar of no mean class. Battling Nelson is another champion who has always taken care of himself and his money. Good habits and a good constitution have caused Nelson to have a bank account in the neighborhood of $200,000. Abe Attell is another wise guy. Attell takes good care of himself, fights oftener probably than any other champion, but always gets the money and seldom the worst of the argument. Freddie Welch, who of late has been very much in the limelight, is a model young man. He is the only vegetarian fighter in the ring, never partaking of meat of any kind. Of course, there are others who walk in the straight and narrow path, but for every one it would be possible to name ten others who like the glare of the white light, the clink of the glass and the pace that kills.

Richard Arnst, the sculling champion of the world, is a New Zealander. Arnst won the title from Webb, also a New Zealander, in a race which was rowed on the Wanganui river a short time ago. Arnst is but 26 years old, and prior to the time he began to give his attention to rowing he was a bicycle rider of some ability. Webb is one of the best oarsmen that the world has produced. Until Arnst was able to defeat him he had beaten all challengers, and he was perfectly at home in the fine waters which abound about New Zealand. A prominent American oarsman, when asked why so many good oarsmen are to be found in the Antipodes, said: "I can't say unless it is that they have abundant opportunity to row and that the sport is more popular there than it is in some other countries. For years they have been turning out good men with the sculls. Their stroke is powerful and their endurance great. In England they expect that Arnst will be a visitor this spring. If he goes to Great Britain it is quite certain that he will be matched against young Barry, the present champion of Great Britain. If he should come to the United States it is likely that he would make a match, but no one seems to know with whom.



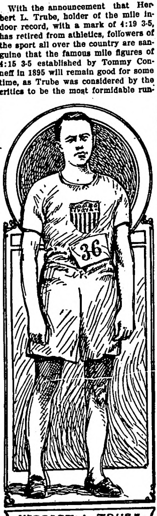
RICHARD ARNST

Only three of the American association players drafted have remained in the major leagues to date. Barbeau is with Pittsburg. Myers is with the Giants and Stanley is still a Cub. He may be turned back to Louisville. The class AA leagues are pretty well combed for talent by purchases every season long before the drafting time comes.

H. L. TRUBE, STAR RUNNER, RETIRES FROM ATHLETICS

Holder of World's Mile Indoor Mark Quits Sport to Devote Time to Business.

With the announcement that Herbert L. Trube, holder of the mile indoor record, with a mark of 4:19 3-5, has retired from athletics, followers of the sport all over the country are sanguine that the famous mile figures of 4:15 3-5 established by Tommy Conneff in 1895 will remain good for some time, as Trube was considered by the critics to be the most formidable runner in America to lower Conneff's wonderful performance.



HERBERT L. TRUBE

Trube is a native of Brooklyn, 23 years old and a graduate of Cornell university. He stands 5 feet 7 inches and weighs little more than 125 pounds, but is withal strong, endurant and cleanly built.

Trube first attracted attention in 1904, when, as a student of the Yonkers high school, he captured the two-mile event at the interscholastic meet held at Princeton, creating a record of 10:31 4-5 for the distance.

The next fall saw him at Ithaca, and during his four years at college he performed creditably and consistently, his reliability making him a very valuable man to the 'varsity team.

Even before leaving college he had taken membership in the New York Athletic club, and it was wearng the "mercury foot" that he won a place for himself on the Olympic team of 1908. He was unfortunate in being affected by the English climate, but he rounded into form in France, and on August 2, in Paris, he won the 1,500-meter French championship from a classy field.

At his return Wefers urged him to take up the mile instead of the two miles as his distance, there being a scarcity of milers at Travers island, and he readily acquiesced. It was a lucky move. He captured the metropolitan championship in 4 minutes 29 1-5 seconds, the national in 4 minutes 25 seconds, and the Canadian in 4 minutes 28 2-5 seconds, thus corralling the three best races of the outdoor season.

Since summer he has competed rarely. Press of business and unwillingness to neglect things for the sake of running back and forth to athletic meets kept him out. At the Boston Athletic association games, though, he ran a mile in 4 minutes 35 seconds through a crowded field, and those present estimated the performance equal to 4:20 under favorable conditions. Then came his sensational mile in 4:19 4-5, and now he has retired from the athletic field to devote his entire attention to his business in Brooklyn.

NIGHT BASEBALL TO BE TRIED

Evening Game Scheduled Between White Sox and Red Colts.

Night baseball is going to get a thorough trial at League park in Cincinnati, according to the present plans of Frank Bancroft. He has scheduled a game between the White Sox and the Red Colts for the evening of Sunday, April 11.

Inventor Cahill is extremely enthusiastic about the plan. He has obtained permission to erect two more light towers, one just outside the left-field fence and the other in right-field. This will make five towers in all, including those in center field and the pair on the roof of the grandstand. The inventor says that he has perfected his apparatus to such an extent that the light will not shine in the eyes of the fielders enough to bother them in their work.

Charlie Comiskey of the Sox and Barney Dreyfuss of Pittsburg are contemplating the plan with great interest. They have both taken stock in the Night Baseball Developing Company, of which Garry Herrmann is president, and will put in plants on their own grounds in case Banny's experiment turns out well

INHERITED KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Could Feel It Constantly Gaining Ground as Time Passed.

Mrs. Frank Roseboom, 512 W. Washington St., Moscow, Idaho, says: "Kidney trouble was hereditary, and my parents spent hundreds of dollars trying to cure me. I was nervous, my eyesight had failed noticeably, my circulation was bad, sleep fitful, heart action irregular, and my back so weak and painful I could hardly stand it. There was also an irregularity of the kidney secretions and a cold always made the whole trouble worse. I could tell many other symptoms, too, but shall only add that Doan's Kidney Pills made me free of all of them."

GOOD STORY TO POINT MORAL.

Told by Rabbi Krauskopf, Who Believes in Divorce.

"Rabbi Joseph Krauskopf, our eloquent preacher," said a Philadelphian, "sees good rather than evil in the frequency of American divorce. He sees in it a sign that American wives will not endure the treatment that European wives put up with. He sees in it a promise that the married men of the future will live better.

"Discussing the divorce question the other day, he told me that they who perceived only evil in it reminded him, in their illogical and confused viewpoint, of a little boy with whom he once took a stroll.

"As they strolled, they passed the young girls of a neighboring boarding school out on their daily walk. The girls moved in military formation, two by two. In front were the youngest, in skirts to their knees. Next came the older ones, in the order of their ages, their skirts lengthening with their years. And in the rear came the oldest of all, the young ladies, whose skirts hid even their boots.

"The little boy looked at the girls. Then he frowned and said:

"'Why is it that their legs grow shorter as they grow bigger?'"

CUTICURA CURED HIM.

Eczema Came on Legs and Ankles—Could Not Wear Shoes Because Of Bad Scaling and Itching.

"I have been successfully cured of dry eczema. I was inspecting the removal of noxious weeds from the edge of a river and was constantly in the dust from the weeds. At night I cleansed my limbs but felt a prickly sensation. I paid no attention to it for two years but I noticed a scum on my legs like fish scales. I did not attend to it until it came to be too itchy and sore and began getting two running sores. My ankles were all sore and scabby and I could not wear shoes. I had to use carpet and felt slippers for weeks. I got a cake of the Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment. In less than ten days I could put on my boots and in less than three weeks I was free from the confounded itching. Capt. George P. Bliss, Chief of Police, Morris, Manitoba, Mar. 20, 1907, and Sept. 24, 1908."

A COSTLY BUILDING OF THE FRENCH STYLE, WITH EXTRAVAGANT WASTE OF ROOM AND WHOLLY UNSUITED TO ITS PURPOSE AND ENVIRONMENT

NOW that every enterprising American city and town and village has begun either to "spruce up" or to talk about doing it, having come of a sudden to the conclusion that perhaps after all it isn't exactly beautiful, the question has arisen: "What can we do about it?"

This question is coming into the offices of architects and officials of various sorts these days from all parts of the country. And something is being done about it, in fact, a very great deal indeed. Before we of the present generation are all comfortably in our graves we will see vast changes—just as astonishing changes as we have seen since we were children, and one of the most striking will be the great metamorphosis from ugliness to practical, helpful beauty in our surroundings.

Our big cities, which have the hardest problems of unloveliness and inconvenience (which usually go hand in hand) are employing commissions of learned experts to tell them what they should and can do. The smaller cities are following suit with local art commissions and sometimes they send for an expert. The towns and villages have local improvement associations and art culture clubs and they are all working in the same direction.

"What's all this fuss about our town being not good enough?" asks the hard-headed business man, who prides himself on his scorn for all this art fol-de-rol. "It was good enough for my folks before me and it's good enough for me. I'm making money.. Ain't we all pretty prosperous?"

"Yes, but," answers the culture club, "look at our rival down the line. It's got a new postoffice that's a beauty. It's on a square with trees around it and the new town hall opposite and a fine new hotel and three new stores are coming in on the square. The farmers are saying that we haven't any attractions over here and they are going over there to do their buying."

"I wondered why that man Jenkins hadn't been in with an order for three weeks," growls the hard-headed business man, and scratches his head to aid in the percolation of the new idea.

And so a new convert is made to the belief that good looks pay, whether it is the good looks of the stock or of the package and label or of the seller or the store, the building, the street or the town. A pleasant view gives pleasure just as surely as does a pleasant face, whether the view be of canned goods or dress goods or factories or mountains.

And the fact must be admitted that with the American people as a whole looks have been considered less in the past than almost anything else. So true is this that we even forgot what we did once know about beauty, about building farmhouses that were pleasant and attractive and public buildings that were dignified and really handsome. We may have thought we did but now we are being taught how little we really understood.

Our forefathers knew, though, and they set us an example, the excellence of which we are just beginning to appreciate.

The founders of the republic, the men of Washington's time, brought with them from the old world fine tradition of the beautiful and an inherited instinct for the value of simplicity. They built courthouses still standing in many little towns in the old south and of New England that later generations despised but which today have become the models for much of our best new architecture. These old courthouses, set in the midst of fine old trees, are genuinely beautiful, but it has taken us a hundred years to find it out and profit by it because we lost the traditions of the forefathers and didn't have time to go back to the old world for a new stock. So, we built queer, ungainly things that didn't fit and now we are finding out what is the matter with us that foreigners should laugh at our buildings and go home and call us barbarians.

The same is true of the homes. All through the south and New England the traveler finds charming old residences, built from 50 to 100 years ago. He says they are beautiful specimens of pure old Colonial architecture, the one style that is really American. We may agree that they are pleasing. We don't, perhaps, know why, but we think it is just because they are old. It has never occurred to us that they were not far inferior to our modern, turreted and otherwise highly embellished residences with the corners all sliced off and bay windows bulging from every vantage point. Perhaps we liked to look at the old house best as it shone white and stately through the trees, but we supposed it was just a little remnant of sentiment, and as such, of course, not to be encouraged.

But the fact remains that it has taken the American people nearly a hundred years to grow up to the point where they could intelligently appreciate the architectural worth of their own inheritance. The awakening is not yet complete, but we are learning very fast, indeed.

An interesting example of how we are returning to the standard our forefathers set and are doing what we can to preserve the fine traditions that were theirs is the Annapolis postoffice. Annapolis, where the United States naval academy is, is an old Colonial town. Almost every building is in that style. Two or three years ago congress made an appropriation for a new postoffice there. The matter was referred to the office of the supervising architect of the treasury, which designs and builds all Uncle Sam's mail depots.

Now the supervising architect, Mr. John Knox Taylor, happens to be a man of discernment, culture and good taste. He soon saw that the only kind of a postoffice that would be harmonious, pleasing and creditable among all those Colonial houses would be one of the Colonial style. At first Annapolis was inclined to be disappointed.

"We are tired of Colonial," they said. "Why can't you give us something up-to-date in Queen Anne?"

So Mr. Taylor explained and discussed and went on with his Colonial plans and built the charming postoffice, a photograph of which is shown on this page. Quite recently a government official who was interested in the work of the supervising architect's office and heard that there was a new postoffice in Annapolis, returned to Washington from a visit there. He at once hunted up Mr. Taylor and in a grieved tone remarked:

"Say, Taylor, I thought you had just put up a new postoffice in Annapolis. I couldn't find it."

"We have," said Mr. Taylor, and it is ——" (naming the locality).

"Nonsense!" answered the official. "I searched that neighborhood thoroughly for one whole hour and I'll take my oath there is not a building in it less than 75 years old."

"Did you notice that?" said the architect, pointing to a photograph on the wall of his office.

"Certainly, that was one of them," was the answer.

Mr. Taylor laughed.

"That is the highest compliment I have received in the ten years I have been in this office," he said.

And now Annapolis, which, by the way, has become more than reconciled to its Colonial postoffice since it has heard the enthusiastic comments of its many prominent visitors, is to have an example of the other thing.

Recently congress appropriated $14,000,000 for a new naval academy. With this, under the government's unsystematic and ridiculous way of looking after its building operations, the supervising architect had nothing to do. It was therefore perhaps natural that the winning designs, passed on by laymen evidently lacking in either discernment or taste, should be for buildings altogether un-American in style and entirely incongruous with either the purpose for which they are intended, the character of the town and location or the traditions of the country. The new naval academy is in the French style, very fine of its kind, and done by an architect of note (and French training), but it has the one fatal fault of being wholly unsuitable. And suitability is the first principle of good architecture just as it is the first principle of a successful career or almost anything else in life.

This case of the Annapolis naval academy is being much cited these days as a typical and flagrant example of what President Roosevelt sought to prevent when he appointed the much-discussed council of fine arts and gave it power over all executive building and park operations recently. He incurred the wrath of congress by doing it, for congress is as jealous as a spoiled child in the matter of its petty powers, but he also voiced the sentiment of a vast majority of the people. For it is very evident that there has been a great popular awakening to the value of the art side of life and to the pressing need for federal reform and the establishment of standards and methods that will help the individual communities to help themselves. So great, in fact, is the sentiment that both the house and senate are being forced to consider bills intended to do by law what the president did by executive order; turn the supervising architect's office of the treasury into a bureau of fine arts with supervision over the buildings and parks of all departments and add an advisory council composed of leading architects, painters and sculptors.

It is even possible that congress will be forced by the public demand to pass such a measure, though there is little doubt that they will avoid doing so if they can, at least until after President Roosevelt goes out of office, which means till the next session.

Instances of the need of such a bureau are especially numerous at the seat of the national government, in Washington, and here again the wisdom of our forefathers is apparent. Those buildings that were built in the early part of the last century are in the main dignified monuments to the sincerity, the intelligence and the good taste of that time. More than that, they were placed according to a definite and all embracing group plan, that of Maj. l'Enfant, which has not been improved upon to this day. In later years not only was this great and noble plan lost sight of entirely but such architectural and monumental monstrosities were produced for the uses of the government or the honor of national heroes as will be one of the great American jokes for generations to come.

There is reason to fear that the danger of further such blunders is not past, for congress is not inclined to be dictated to. It swallowed the "Burton Idea" measure making expert advice on contemplated rivers and harbors improvements compulsory, but it did so with a wry face.

However, the president's council of fine arts is an accomplished fact and for several years we have been getting beautiful postoffices at the rate of a hundred or more a year. The new department buildings are also so far ahead of what has gone before, and with all this growing sentiment and the widespread educational movement working towards more beautiful surroundings for the next generation hope begins that we will not only have beautiful architecture but architecture distinctly American.

In this regard a study of the new postoffices, the new department buildings at Washington and most of the best new monumental buildings in the larger cities, shows that architects have gone back for their models to the original source of the Colonial—to what is known as the classic style. In old Greece and Rome are found the simplest and most majestic monumental buildings ever erected. They are the purest source of architectural inspiration that man has. Their spirit, too, is in a large measure the spirit of our democracy—dignity and strength with simplicity—and it seems to have been some such idea as this that created the Colonial style.

Without forgetting the beauty and inspiration of our Colonial architecture, we have at last found time to go back to the old world to renew our nearly lost traditions. The result is a widespread revival of the classic style, modified to suit changed conditions and a new and distinct nationality, but so fundamentally true to the American spirit that we may feel at least that we are on the road to an expression of ourselves that will picture us truly to posterity.

Sure Cure For Pirates

"A picture recently published in Munich shows that the peculiar vanity which manifests itself in a desire to be photographed often kills the sense of decency," says a writer in a Berlin paper. "The picture shows five uniformed men standing on the smoking ruins of a building. In front of them, propped up against the debris, are eight mutilated corpses. Under the picture is this legend: 'The Indian coast has been infested for hundreds of years by Malaga pirates. Recently a body of Europeans, conducted by natives, pursued and captured one of these robber bands, whom they bound and cast into a pagoda, which they then blew up with dynamite.' The men who posed for a picture, in which they seemed to gloat over the deed, the fruit of which forms the grewsome foreground, were all Europeans."

NEWS FROM the CAPITAL

Mrs. Meyer to Lead Cabinet Social Set

WASHINGTON.—Next to cabinet ministers the most interesting and influential phase of administration life in Washington concerns the cabinet wives.

The social leader of the cabinet undoubtedly will be Mrs. Meyer. She and Mrs. Knox have had much experience in official life and their homes in Washington are already established as gathering places of exclusive society.

The years that Mrs. Meyer spent abroad while her husband was ambassador at Rome and St. Petersburg gave her wide acquaintance in continental society, with the result that on going to Washington two years ago she welcomed in her home the diplomatic corps and many foreign visitors.

Mrs. Knox, by virtue of her husband's position, takes precedence at the head of the cabinet women. Her home in K street is one of the fine homes of Washington, having been built by the late George W. Childs and purchased several years ago by the present secretary of state.

Mrs. MacVeagh, though perhaps the oldest of the cabinet wives, will add interest to Washington society. She is a woman of culture and attractive presence, a lavish entertainer, deeply interested in economic subjects, and possesses an acquaintance that extends around the world.

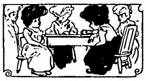
She is the daughter of Henry S. Eames, a former banker of Chicago, and for many years she has taken a prominent part in the social affairs of that city.

Mrs. Dickinson, wife of the new secretary of war, is a southern woman, Nashville, Tenn., being her home, although for the last ten years she has passed most of her time in Chicago, where her husband's legal business required his presence. Her two eldest sons are settled in distant cities, but her youngest, now a student at Yale, will be seen later in Washington.

Mr. Ballinger, wife of the secretary of the interior, had a year's experience in Washington official life recently while her husband was commissioner of public lands, a subordinate position in the department which he now heads. She is a New England woman transplanted to the far northwest.

The Ballinger family consists of two sons. The elder, Edward, is following in the footsteps of his father at Williams college. The younger, Richard, a lively youngster, will probably be a companion for the energetic Charlie Taft.

The new secretary of commerce and labor, Charles Nagel of St. Louis has been twice married. The present Mrs. Nagel was Miss Anna Shipley of St. Louis, whom the secretary married in 1895.



Cost of Conducting the White House

THE discussion in both the senate and house in the late congress over the question of raising the salary of the president, makes the question of the cost of running the executive establishment one of particular interest at the present time. Here is the White House budget for the current year:

President's salary	$50,000
Clerk hire	69,920
Contingent fund	25,000
President's traveling expenses	25,000
Maintenance White House horses, vehicles, etc	35,000
White House grounds	9,000
Fuel	6,000
Greenhouses	9,000
Repair of greenhouses	3,000
Printing, invitations, etc	2,000
Lighting White House grounds	510
Total	$234,430

In spite of these accessory helps, however, the salary proper has proved a scant subsistence with the scale of entertaining demanded by present standards.

The state dinners, of which there are three each year, cost more than $2,000. The cabinet dinner, beginning the season, averages between $400 and $500. The diplomatic dinner, the most pretentious of all, averages about $1,200. The dinner to the supreme court, for which, like the cabinet dinner, there are about forty persons invited, costs about the same amount.

At the diplomatic dinner the number is usually about ninety, and for this, as all other large affairs, the services of a caterer are required. All luncheons and dinners of less than 40 guests are managed by the regular domestic staff at the White House. There are on an average three a week.

At each state reception the guests invited to the blue room, generally about eighty in number, are entertained at supper at the close of the reception. These affairs cost about $400 each.

The dinners of courtesy to visiting foreigners and important government officials depend largely upon the rank of the visitor. The expense of all these is borne by the president.

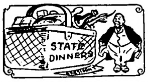
The president's secretary has the entire charge of the office and the clerical staff. The chief usher keeps a close watch on the caretakers of the entire first floor, no tourist visitors being admitted until the morning dusting is finished.

The steward purchases all supplies and looks after the basement. There are a cook, assistant cook, butler and pantry men.

The laundry is a charge of Uncle Sam, likewise the furnishing and care of the linen, china, silver and flowers.

President Roosevelt brought his own riding horses from Sagamore Hill, likewise his carriages. The service at the White House is a government expense and is sufficient for all practical purposes.

The appropriation of $25,000 for traveling expenses has been necessary, since a president cannot travel as a private citizen, alone or alone with his family, but he must be accompanied by a large retinue of secret service men, his secretary, stenographer and personal friends.



Helen Taft, New Belle of White House

HELEN HERRON TAFT has followed in her father's footsteps in choosing her most intimate friends in Washington from the "army set." What Gen. Bell and Gen. Clarence Edwards are to the new president, young ladies like Miss Ayleshire and Miss Webster are to his only daughter.

At the same time she has formed many close friendships at school, and these ties are bringing Miss Taft an ever-increasing number of invitations to devote her vacations to house parties, and will result in the presence of many youthful residents of many different cities when the time comes for Miss Taft to make her debut in the White House—something for which Mrs. Taft has as yet planned but tentatively.

The newly-chosen first lady of the land expects her only daughter to become a White House debutante, of course, but she has also expressed the hope that this social inaugural can be deferred for a year or two, principally because the new president, who is vastly proud of his brilliant and studious daughter, will be disappointed if she does not fulfill the promise made at her entry, when, as mentioned, she won the prize for highest honors in the entrance examinations.

The new White House belle is, like her mother, a member of the Episcopal church. She was reared in this atmosphere of that denomination, almost her first schooling, save for that of German and English tutors, having been obtained at the Cathedral School for Girls.

She was confirmed by the late Bishop Satterlee in a class that also included Miss Ethel Roosevelt and the Misses Julia and Alice von Meyer daughters of the present postmaster general.

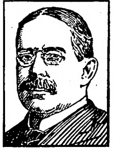
IN THE PUBLIC EYE

SUCCESSOR TO SENATOR KNOX



George T. Oliver of Pittsburg, who has been elected by the Pennsylvania legislature to the seat vacated by the appointment of Philander C. Knox as secretary of state, has been the publisher of the Pittsburg Gazette since 1900. He was for many years a manufacturer of iron and steel, and for ten years, from 1871 to 1881, practiced law. Mr. Oliver was born in Ireland in 1848. He is a graduate of Bethany college, West Virginia.

Mr. Oliver has done much to elevate the newspaper condition of Pittsburg. He has raised salaries all over the city. When he first took up the Gazette and the Chronicle, before he had acquired the Times and made the Gazette-Times, he issued but one peremptory order. It read:

"Give every man a raise in salary. Give him a salary, one on which he can keep himself and his family well—also save money. Make every one present an appearance which will command the respect and confidence of those with whom he comes in contact."

This to the newspapermen of a city where the average salary had for years been $18 per week meant a lot. Other publishers had to come into line, and the result is that Pittsburg newspapermen are as well paid to-day as in most of the large cities in the country—and all thanks to Oliver.

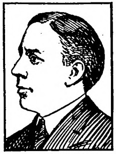
It took the man versed in steel and politics some time to get into the ways of newspapers. He always enjoyed stories of the composing room. On one of his papers he had a managing editor, a sort of legacy, who knew but little of the mechanical end of a newspaper, but there was a night editor on the job who was and is one of the best newspapermen in Pittsburg. The managing editor would occasionally supervise the making up of the paper, aided by the night editor. One night he decided that a certain story was too long to look well. He had a proof in his hand and suggested that about six inches be taken from it. He called the night editor and told what he wanted. The latter glanced at the clock, and bending over the form grabbed a handful of type and threw it on the "stone." Another grab and another handful lay on the stone.

The managing editor was bewildered. He rubbed his eyes and said: "I hope you didn't spoil the continuity of that story?"

"Continuity h—l. We've got to make the mails," said the night editor, as he moved to the next form.

When Mr. Oliver heard of this he is said to have laughed for days. The night editor who profanely "made the mails" is still one of his trusted men and at high salary. The managing editor has long since passed.

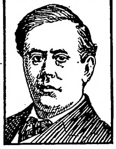
NEAR-MEMBER TAFT CABINET



Judge Willis Vandevanter deserves some recognition in connection with the discussion of the new Taft cabinet. For Judge Van Devanter undoubtedly came nearer to being a member of the new cabinet than did any other man who did not actually land in the job. It had been definitely settled by pretty nearly everybody in the United States—except Mr. Taft himself—that Judge Van Devanter was to be made secretary of the treasury. Failing that, he was to be secretary of the interior. And in case that slipped, almost anything equally as good was to be his portion. Something like 876 veracious public journals gave this information in a husky stage whisper, audible as far as the back seats of the auditorium.

Then somebody seems to have sneaked up and moved the cabinet away without first notifying the western judge. When the gas was lit, Mr. Van Devanter was discovered to be quite outside the jurisdiction, so to speak. However, as he has a pretty fair job as a United States circuit judge for the Eighth circuit, he will probably be able to pull through. Judge Van Devanter is an Indiana man by birth, and a Wyoming man by force of circumstances. He was chief justice of the supreme court of Wyoming in the territorial days, and after statehood came he was elected to the same place.

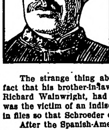
FAMOUS "LAY LAWYER"



Horatio Bottomley of London, editor of John Bull, the Penny Truth, enjoys the distinction of being England's foremost "lay lawyer." He has had many lawsuits, and is now involved in a gigantic legal scrap, the costs of which promise to establish a record. Bottomley always has conducted his own cases, and though pitted against some of the most distinguished counsel of the English bar, he often has won famous victories. He has no systematic legal training, but manages, at each trial, to win verdicts from juries and praise from judges.

Bottomley is one of the "floating financiers" who promote big deals, and naturally his transactions do not invariably pan out according to anticipation. Occasionally disgruntled shareholders attempt to find solace in the law courts and thus has Bottomley become the great "lay lawyer," which, more than anything else, has earned him his reputation. Incidentally he also is a member of parliament, but instead of his "M. P." being a distinction in which he glories, he only regards it as a trifling asset which enables him to float deals and accomplish financial achievements.

NEW COMMANDER OF FLEET



Rear Admiral Schroeder, who has been appointed to the command of the Atlantic fleet, succeeding Rear Admiral Sperry, is 59 years old. He was appointed to the naval academy from South Carolina in 1864 by President Lincoln at the same time with Richard Wainwright, whom Lincoln named at large under the old system of appointment to Annapolis. Schroeder was graduated in 1868. He was with the Benecia in the Asiatic squadron in 1872 and was commissioned a lieutenant the same year. He was for a long time connected with the hydrographic office, but at intervals he served with the Dispatch, the Albatross and the Vesuvius. He also did special service on the Gettysburg in the Mediterranean. In the Spanish-American war Schroeder was an officer on the battleship Massachusetts.

The strange thing about Rear Admiral Schroeder's appointment is the fact that his brother-in-law and lifelong friend and companion, Rear Admiral Richard Wainwright, had been slated for the place. Wainwright probably was the victim of an indiscretion many years ago which caused his reduction in files so that Schroeder outranked him not in title but in grade precedence.

After the Spanish-American war Rear Admiral Schroeder was successively naval governor of Tutuila and Guam and officer in charge of Cuba. He served with distinguished capacity in all these positions. He was made an admiral when the Atlantic battle fleet left San Francisco, following the retirement of Admirals Thomas and Evans.

SEEN and HEARD in NEW YORK

To Raze Vesey Street "Light House"

NEW YORK.—Another old landmark, the famous lighthouse building which has stood on the southwest corner of Vesey and Greenwich streets for more than a hundred years—some say that it is the oldest structure in Manhattan—will soon be razed.

The occupants of the little knickknack and fruit stalls, some of whom have been in and about the building for thirty-five and forty years, were told recently that they would have to vacate, and now the walls are papered with notices of bargain "removal sales."

As to the building itself, everyone in the district was willing to swear that a century ago and more it had served as a lighthouse to guide mariners on their way up and down the river. This has always been the tradition attached to the place, color being lent by the fact that in former days Greenwich was the river-front street, Washington and West streets having been laid out on made land.

This tradition has been disputed. It never was a lighthouse, some say, and they add that the story that it was arose from the fact that in the eighteenth century, or perhaps early in the nineteenth, the place was a tavern known as "The Lighthouse."

And so all that may be said definitely of the building is that it is old and that in the minds of all who live in the district, or who have their places of business there, the conviction that at one time the building served as a lighthouse to warn vessels against collision with Manhattan is firmly intrenched.

Changes Are Proposed in New Charter

THE report of the New York Charter commission, made public the other day, proposes few fundamental changes in the old charter, but perhaps among the most interesting is the recommendation "that no person shall be eligible for the office of mayor unless he shall have been a resident of the city for at least ten years preceding his election," and that the salary be increased to $25,000 a year. The revision commission provides for a uniformed superintendent of police appointed from the ranks of the force, and the age limit for entering the police department is raised to 25 years.

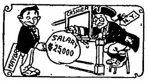
It is proposed to abolish the board of aldermen and in its place create a council of 39 members to serve without pay. The council will have large ordinance-making powers, but will have no control over the administrative business of the city or over franchises. It will have the right to veto specific appropriations in the budget and will make the tax levy. Altogether a much broader grant of legislative power is vested in the council than the board of aldermen enjoyed.

A good deal will be accomplished, the commission thinks, toward simplifying the complex financial system of the city and doing away with much extravagant and unnecessary expenditure by making the board of estimate and apportionment the great business executive committee of the city, with complete control of the city's financial affairs. This board will continue to be made up of the same official members as before, including a borough president to be elected from each borough.

The department of street cleaning will be abolished and the entire control of streets and sewers and street cleaning will be vested in a department of street control, for which the mayor will be responsible.

The board of education will cease to be a separate corporation and will be reduced to 15 members.

The office of coroner is abolished and all the duties he performed turned over to the department of health. Other minor changes are recommended.



Mutual Life Gets Big Sum from M'Curdy

THE Mutual Life Insurance Company has settled suits aggregating nearly $6,000,000, brought in 1906 against its former president, Richard A. McCurdy and others. It received from the defendants, it is said, a total of $815,000.

The suits were brought for the recovery of money alleged to have been obtained by the defendant officers and agents of the company, or improperly expended by them.

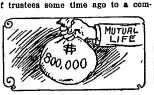
"Proposals looking to an adjustment of the litigation pending between the Mutual company and certain of its former officers and others had been under negotiation for several months," said President Charles A. Peabody.

"They were referred by the board of trustees some time ago to a committee which carefully examined the situation and decided that in view of all the conditions and circumstances it would be wise to settle the controversy on the terms proposed. This decision of the committee was approved by Joseph H. Choate, the company's special counsel in the litigation, and by James McKeen, general counsel of the company, and was duly reported to the board and approved.

"The result of the settlement is that all of the claims in dispute by and against the company have been settled and released, and the company has received the equivalent in value of $815,000."

It is understood the Mutual got $750,000 cash. The balance of the $815,000 was represented by a claim against the company for supplies.

The suits included actions against former President McCurdy, his son, Robert H. McCurdy; son-in-law, Louis A. Thebaud, and Charles H. Raymond, who with Thebaud formed the firm of Charles H. Raymond & Co., metropolitan agents for the Mutual.



Model Homes to Be Built by Mrs. Sage

THE name of Mrs. Russell Sage has again become linked with philanthropy through the purchase of a large tract of land in Jamaica, county of Queens, New York, on which model houses are to be built for those who are unable to live in sanitary and comfortable quarters nearer the heart of the city.

While no official announcement has been made, it is understood that Mrs. Sage will spend several millions of dollars in this latest plan to make her vast fortune do the most good and reach the farthest among those who are in need. Several other persons have become interested in the scheme and have agreed to contribute to the expense of building the tenements and keep them up.

The buildings are to be patterned after those recently built in England for poor persons. They are to be as large and roomy as possible and every effort is to be made to do away with the uncleanliness of those occupied by the poorer class in the city. Baths, many of them, are to be the features of the model tenements, and ventilation will amount to almost a craze with the builders.

The site of the buildings includes more than forty-eight acres just outside the Polish and Italian sections of Jamaica.

If the experiment proves successful and the poor tenants of the squalid buildings in the city flock to seize the opportunity, many more buildings are to be built throughout Manhattan by Mrs. Sage and her associates.

The rents on the apartments in the model building are to be cheap and low as possible so that they will be within reach of even the poorest head of a family. Every facility is to be provided for the comfort of those who have children. The more children the warmer welcome a tenant will receive.

Scrutinize the Maxims.

A busy clergyman declared recently that the way he got through his work was by violating most of the precepts he had been taught in boyhood, foremost among them, "If you want anything done, do it yourself." The housekeeper may take a leaf from his book. For example, the task which she turns over to her daughter lightens her own hands and trains those of the little maiden. The most fatal precept for "mother" to observe is, "Whatever is worth doing at all, is worth doing well" —that is, if "well" is interpreted to mean "as well as you can do it." Here is a place for her to use that judgment which comes so high in the markets of the world and is too often held so cheap in the home. "As well as possible" is none too well when the task is making an apple pie or boiling a potato; but the woman who dusts her house from attic to cellar every day as well as she can do it lacks a sense of proportion. So does she who darns a pair of 25-cent stockings a half-hour a week for three months. "A penny saved is a penny earned" is another dangerous maxim, declares the Youth's Companion, unless it is administered with discretion. Cheap milk may involve large doctor's bills. Cheap eggs may mean an uneatable pudding. A low wage in the kitchen may carry with it waste far beyond its saving. Women are learning that being a woman demands some knowledge of almost every subject of modern economic inquiry, and that it is no longer possible to trust all the useful precepts of the past to solve the problems of the present.

The extraordinary and practical success that has attended the work of well-endowed government-supported institutions for the scientific study of disease and the systematic test of new methods for the treatment of such maladies as have hitherto resisted the efforts of physicians and surgeons is one of the most striking and promising features of present-day medicine. In the United States the most important of the few institutions of this kind is the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, founded in 1901 by Mr. John D. Rockefeller. Under this endowment there is maintained in New York city a well-equipped medical laboratory where a staff of trained investigators, free from the cares of routine practice, hospital work, or teaching, are concentrating their entire attention upon researches which deal with the prevention and cure of disease. As in other scientific institutions, where effective organization and adequacy of material equipment are most essential, remarks Herbert T. Wade, in the American Review of Reviews, so that at the Rockefeller Institute everything has been arranged in order that experimental medicine may be prosecuted under conditions most productive of good results.

Some of the devices by which ignorance tries to deceive intelligence are amusing. The largest coal field in the United States is that which extends from Casper and Douglas, Wyo., northward to the Canadian line. Under the law which provides that coal lands of certain character and situation shall be withdrawn from homestead entry, investigation of this field has lately been made by government geologists. The coal here appears in what is known as "blanket veins," which lie nearly parallel to the surface, so that an outcrop appearing on one side of a hill is likely to be found on the other side at the same elevation. But many of the ranchers and would-be settlers, maintaining that "coal lands," under the law, are only those in which the coal appears on the surface, have gone so far as to level the tops of hills to cover outcropping coal veins, under the delusion that they could deceive the geologists.

Herculaneum lies under the modern villages of Portici and Resina. In attempting to excavate the buried city, the Italian government is encountering the problem of the property rights of the people who live on the modern level. The legal theory is that a landowner owns an inverted pyramid whose apex is the center of the earth —everything under him is his. But who inherits the property rights of the subsoil town which was buried 2,000 years ago? A law is pending to take by right of eminent domain the ground from under the Resina landowners, or at least the treasures it may conceal.

A scientist has made a calculation about the time it will take to fill the world with all the people it will hold. The present population of the globe is supposed to be about 1,467,000,000, and he estimates that the maximum of the inhabitants that can be sustained on the entire land surface of the earth is 5,994,000,000, and this figure will be reached A. D. 2072, or in about 180 years.

NEW TARIFF BILL IS INTRODUCED IN HOUSE

Measure Would Increase Country's Revenues from Customs to $300,000,000 a Year---Inheritance Tax Planned---Coffee on Free List

Washington. — The ways and means committee of the house has begun consideration of the tariff bill which was introduced Wednesday. The measure as it now stands would increase the country's revenues from customs to $300,000,000 a year.

The senate committee on finance also began informal consideration of the measure. The probabilities are that the house committee will have only one sitting on the bill, that the measure will be reported to the house immediately after it convenes to-day and the debates will begin next Monday.

The measure, which was introduced by Sereno Payne, chairman of the committee, chairman of the ways and means committee provides for an inheritance tax; increased internal revenue tax on cigarettes; a $40,000,000 issue of Panama canal bonds; an increased issue of $150,000,000 in treasury certificates, and the imposition of duties on a maximum and minimum basis. Coffee, hides and iron ore are on the free list; boots and shoes, leather goods, steel and iron products, lumber, wool shoddy, and waste, and the cheaper grades of third-class wool are materially reduced. Tea is taxed eight cents a pound. The internal revenue tax on beer and whisky is not disturbed. Thirty thousand copies will be printed.

No Duty on Coffee.

While there is no duty imposed upon coffee, tea is taxed eight cents when imported from the country where it is produced, and nine cents when from other than the producing country. The internal revenue tax on cigarettes is materially increased, while the tax on beer and whisky is undisturbed. A cut of 50 per cent. is made in the steel and lumber schedules. Hides, tallow, cottonseed oil, and works of art more than 20 years old are placed on the free list.

The tariff on boots and shoes is reduced 40 per cent. and on other leather manufactures in proportion. The pottery schedule remains about the same, but the duties on window and plate glass of the smaller sizes are increased, while the duties on the larger sizes are reduced. The tariff on wool of the first and second class, used principally in clothing, is not disturbed, but on wool of the third class, known as carpet wool, it is reduced on the cheaper grades.

Duty on Agricultural Products.

Agricultural products schedule: Barley, from 30 cents per bushel to 15 cents; barley malt from 45 cents to 25 cents; cabbages from 3 to 2 cents each; bacon and hams from 5 cents per pound to 4 cents; fresh meat from 2 cents to 1½ cents per pound; lard from 2 cents to 1½ cents; tallow from ¾ of 1 cent per pound to the free list; wool grease from ½ of 1 cent to ¼ of 1 cent; dextrin, burnt starch, and so forth from 2 cents to 1½ cents per pound; peas, green, from 40 cents per bushel to 30 cents per bushel; all starch, except potato starch, from 1½ cents to 1 cent per pound; sugar, refined, is reduced from 1 95/100 cents to 1 90/100 cents per pound."

Reduction for Wool.

A five cent reduction is made in the duties on shoddy and waste, while wool tops are assessed six cents a pound more than the duty on scoured wool, which is unchanged. The recommendations for placing wood pulp on the free list and reducing the duties on print paper, with certain restrictions, made by the Mann committee of the house, are incorporated in the bill.

The duty on refined sugar is reduced 5.100 of a cent a pound and on dextrin half a cent a pound. A reduction of half a cent a pound is also made in the duty on starch, with the exception of potato starch. Zinc in ore is assessed one cent per pound for the zinc contained. The tariff on pig iron is reduced from $4 to $2.50 per ton.

Where Increases Are Made.

The principal increases are made in the duties on lemons, cocoa and substitutes for coffee, coal-tar, dyes, gloves, and coated papers and lithographic prints.

As was expected, the new tariff bill is made on a maximum and minimum basis, with the provision that the maximum rates are not to go into effect until 60 days after the passage of the bill. Reciprocity provisions are contained in the paragraphs assessing duties on bituminous coal and coke and agricultural implements, by which these articles are given entry free of duty when imported from countries which permit the free importation of these articles from America.

The inheritance tax provision of the bill is similar to the New York state law. It provides a tax of five per cent. on all inheritances over $500 that are collateral inheritances or in which strangers are the legatees. In cases of direct inheritance the taxes prescribed are: On $10,000 to $100,000, one per cent.; on $100,000 to $500,000, two per cent., and on those over $500,00, three per cent. It is estimated that $20,000,000 annually will be derived from this tax.

Ends Foreign Trade Agreements.

The maximum and minimum provision of the bill does away with the necessity of continuing the foreign trade agreements. The abrogation of these is provided for in a section which authorizes the president to issue notices of the termination of these agreements within ten days after the bill goes into effect. The French agreement would therefore terminate immediately, while the German agreement would remain in force for six months.

A provision in the bill is designed to meet the conditions resulting from the patent laws of Great Britain, which requires that patentees must manufacture their articles in Great Britain. This provision applies the same rules to patents taken out in this country by aliens as applied to Americans in the country of the aliens. Drawback privileges are extended by the bill and the method of valuation on articles upon which the tariff imposes an ad valorem duty is broadened for the purpose of preventing the practice of undervaluation.

Payne Explains Bill.

The following explanation of the form of the bill was made by Mr. Payne:

"The new tariff bill is a minimum and maximum tariff bill. The minimum rates of duty are contained in the first section, and the free list for the minimum rates is in the second section of the bill. The third section contains the maximum rates, which are generally equal to the minimum rates and 20 per cent. in addition thereto and the articles on the free list, in the transfer to the third section, bear a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem as a maximum rate. The maximum rate does not go into effect in any event until 60 days after the passage of the act. By the fourth section the minimum rates are applied to all good terms by way of tariff as that given to any other nation, and the maximum rates are applied to those countries which discriminate against the trade of the United States or fail to give the United States tariff rates as favorable as those given any other nation. This section is self acting, making it the duty of the executive to collect the duties, whether minimum or maximum, in accordance with the terms of the bill, leaving it open to the courts to decide upon the legality of the action.

"One problem that confronted the committee was the question of revenue. The business of all commercial nations has been depressed for nearly two years, and thus has affected our commerce and greatly reduced our revenues, so that we have a large deficit, but the revenues under the present law are improving from month to month, as business conditions are becoming better."

Changes by Payne Bill.

The statement gives the rates in the present law, the Dingley tariff, and shows the changes that the Payne bill proposes. The abstract of the bill continues:

"The committee have transferred some articles from the free list to the dutiable, and have increased duties on others for the sole purpose of increasing the revenue. Most of these articles on which duties have been increased are luxuries which have been increased as follows:

"Perfumeries and toilet articles from 50 to 60 per centum ad valorem; fancy soap, from 15 to 20 cents per pound; chicory root, raw, not dried, from one cent to 2½ cents per pound; roasted from 2½ cents to five cents per pound.

"Cocoa, crude, transferred from the free list to the dutiable, at four cents per pound; prepared or manufactured, increased two cents on each classification except that valued above 35 cents per pound, which remains the same. Ten per centum ad valorem is also added to the duties assessed on that valued between 15 and 35 cents per pound. Powdered cocoa from five to nine cents per pound.

For the Discouraged.

Big things are only little things put together. It is encouraging to think of this when confronted with a big task. Remember that it is only a group of little tasks, any one of which you can easily do.—W. P. Warren.

American Phonographs in China.

American phonograph companies do a big business in China. The most famous Chinese bands and palace singers are engaged to make records. They are brought from all parts of the empire to the three record-making centers—Peking, Shanghai and Hongkong. Here the apparatus for making the master records is set up and the recording done under the direction of an expert. A record popular in the north of China seldom is popular in the south.

TAFT MESSAGE SETS A RECORD

PRESIDENT SENDS TARIFF VIEWS TO CONGRESS.

IS SHORTEST DOCUMENT

Adheres to Revision Pledge with Treatise of Less Than 400 Words—Conditions Changed, He Says.

Washington. — When President Taft's personal messenger arrived at the capitol Tuesday, supposedly with the executive message on the tariff question, groans went up from both houses of congress. The congressmen, seeing no evidence of a message, drew the quick conclusion that the president hadn't written it yet and that it was to be postponed for another day.

They knew the message was to be short, but they were thunderstruck when the messenger pulled it out of his vest pocket and laid it before the clerks. It was less than 400 words in length, thus setting a new record for short messages. The messenger had memorized it on the way over from the White House, but owing to the amendment to the old house rules, he was not allowed to recite it, so the clerk read it there.

"Get busy," wa sthe theme of the abbreviated document, the president simply telling congress that conditions in the past 12 years had so changed that a revision of the present tariff duties was an absolute necessity. He further called attention to the fact that in the republican convention at Chicago last June, the party had promised to revise the tariff if elected and this must be done.

As President Roosevelt's messages were usually long and as the former occupant of the White House had engaged in a small war with congress, there was a general expression of satisfaction.

Following is the message:

"To the Senate and House of Representatives: I have convened the congress in this extra session in order to enable it to give immediate consideration to the revision of the Dingley tariff act. Conditions affecting production, manufacture and business generally have so changed in the last 12 years as to require a readjustment and revision of the import duties imposed by that act. More than this, the present tariff act, with the other sources of government revenue, does not furnish income enough to pay the authorized expenditures. By July 1st, next, the excess of expenses over receipts for the current fiscal year will equal $100,000,000.

"The successful party in the late election is pledged to a revision of the tariff. The country, and the business community, especially, expect it. The prospect of a change in the rates of import duties always causes a suspension or halt in business because of the uncertainty as to the changes to be made and their effect. It is therefore of the highest importance that the new bill should be agreed upon and passed with as much speed as possible consistent with its due and thorough consideration. For these reasons I have deemed the present to be an extraordinary occasion within the meaning of the constitution, justifying and requiring the calling of an extra session.

"In my inaugural address, I stated in a summary way the principles upon which, in my judgment, the revision of the tariff should proceed, and indicated at least one new source of revenue that might be properly resorted to in order to avoid a future deficit. It is not necessary for me to repeat what I then said.

"I venture to suggest that the vital business interests of the country require that the attention of the congress in this session be chiefly devoted to the consideration of the new tariff bill, and that the less time given to other subjects of legislation in this session, the better for the country.

(Signed) "WILLIAM H. TAFT.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Mankato Murder Defendant Free.

Mankato.—The trial of Ambrose Rieff on the charge of murder in the first degree in connection with the death of an infant child alleged to have been born to Mrs. Emma Timmerman March 20 last came to a sudden end this afternoon when the court directed a verdict for the defendant. The state rested Saturday and the defense moved to dismiss the case on the ground that there was no evidence that a crime had been committed by any one. This motion was today overruled by the court. The defense put in no testimony but rested and then moved for a directed verdict on the ground that the evidence was not sufficient to justify the submission of the case to the jury. Judge Pfau, in granting the motion, said that, while there had been evidence produced tending to prove the birth and death of a child and that Rieff was its father, there seemed to be absolutely no evidence tending to show that it had come to its death by violence, unless it was evidence tending to show that Rieff had tried to conceal the fact of the birth and death from the public, but this could be explained by his own fear of arrest on other and less serious charges.

Pennington Is New Soo Head.

Minneapolis—At a meeting of the directors of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Saut Ste. Marie railway company, Edmund Pennington, vice president and general manager of the company, was elected president to fill the vacancy made by the late Thomas Lowry. The office of vice president and ganeral manager remains vacant for the present. Horace Lowry, superintendent of the Minneapolis division of the Twin City Rapid Transit company, was elected a director of the company to succeed his father.

An additional stock issue of 24 per cent or $6,048,000 was authorized to meet the financial needs of the company. This makes the total capitalization about $30,000,000. The lease of the railroad and property of the Wisconsin Central railroad to the Soo line for a period of 99 years was ratified by the directors at the meeting.

Rochester Has New Mayor.

Rochester.—In one of the most interesting municipal elections ever held in this city Mayor Julius J. Reiter was defeated for re-election by the Republican candidate, J. C. Thompson, by a majority of ninety-nine votes. W. H. Hendricks was also defeated for re-election as city treasurer by Thomas Hall. In the Third ward the present alderman, C. M. Johnson, and the Democratic candidate, William Lenz, each polled 163 votes, and these two men will cast lots to determine the winner. The mayoralty contest furnished the greatest speculation, the candidates being neighbors, added to which is the fact that Reiter was the candidate of the temperance element two years ago, while this year Thompson was the representative of that element.

Sauk Center.—Sauk Center has a well organized and equipped Young Men's Christian association with a membership of about seventy-five. The organization was formed within the past month. The board of directors consists of Dr. H. F. Hennemann, P. B. Hanson, H. F. Alden, A. M. Welles, A. F. Strebel, F. E. Quist and G. L. Cooper. The officers are: President, Dr. H. F. Hennemann; vice president, P. B. Hanson; secretary, F. E. Quist; treasurer, A. F. Strebel. Additional apparatus was ordered this week, and when received the gymnasium will have an ample outfit. There is a Bible study class of twenty-five members.

Sues to Recover Estate.

Waseca.—Andrew Foslien of New Richland has instituted action in the district court in behalf of his ward, Anna (Olsen) Swensen, to recover one-half of the estate of the late S. Swensen. It is alleged by the plaintiff that Anna Swensen was adopted when a little girl by Mr. and Mrs. Swensen, and that upon the death of Mr. Swensen she was placed under the care of Mr. Foslien. The Swensen estate was sold to T. H. Walthers of this city and he will thus be called on to prove clear title to the property.

NEWS NOTES.

Minneapolis.—The dramatic form of Goethe's immortal poem, "Faust," with Miss Rosabel Morrison, the daughter of the late Lewis Morrison, in the role of Marguerite, will be the attraction at the Bijou, Minneapolis, the week of March 21st. A better version of the story has never been seen than the coming production will present.

Duluth.—Joe Bellmour, a Frenchman who resides in Superior, was killed on a pile driver. He was employed by the Interstate Dredge and Dock company, which has a contract for moving the Duluth Yacht club buildings.

East Grand Forks.—Deputy Sheriff Orin Daniels is back from Seattle, where he went for Thomas Flaherty, accused of the embezzlement of funds of the John Gund Brewing company of La Crosse, while acting as general agent at Minot. The action is brought by the bond company.

Maynard—The village election passed off very quietly. William Conwright, who has served two consecutive terms as president of the village council, was re-elected. License went out by four majority, a decrease over last year of ten.

PREVENTING PAINT TROUBLES.

It's easy enough to recognize the symptoms of poor paint, after it has been on awhile—after its inherent tendency to crack and peel and scale and blister, etc., has developed into trouble. You know these paint "diseases" usually indicate adulteration or substitution in the paint materials. And you know the only remedy is re-painting.

A little knowledge of paint and painting requirements, and how to made sure of the purity and quality of materials, would prevent all trouble, and save the big extra expense of re-painting; just as a proper knowledge of simple health-laws, and observance of them, prevents sickness.

A complete painting guide, including a book of color schemes, specifications for all kinds of painting work, and an instrument for detecting adulteration in paint materials, with directions for using it, can be had free by writing National Lead Co., 1902 Trinity Bldg., New York, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49.

A very simple guide in the purchase of white lead (the only sure and safe paint material) is the famous "Dutch Boy Painter" trademark; that trademark is an absolute guarantee of purity and quality.

DOUBTED TALES OF SCIENTIST.

Scotsman's Summing Up of Character of Man of Learning.

Sir Archibald Geikie, the distinguished geologist, who will probably succeed Lord Rayleigh as president of the Royal society, tells a good story in his capital book of "Scottish Reminiscences."

"I was quite sure you had been in our neighborhood," a friend said to Sir Archibald. "I met the old farmer of G——, who had a strange tale to tell me.

"'Dod, Mr. Caithcart,' he began, 'I ran across the queerest body the other day. As I was coming by the head of the cleugh I thocht I heard a wheen tinkers quarrelin', but when I lookit down there was ae wee stoot man. Whiles he was chappin the rocks wi' a hammer, whiles he was writin' in a book, whiles fetchin' with the thorns and misca'in them for a' that was bad. When he cam up frae the burn, him and me had a large confab. Dod! he tell't me a' about the stanes, and hoo they showed that Scotland was ance like Greenland, smoored in ice. A very entertainin' body, Mr. Caithcart, but—an awful', awful' leear."—Tit-Bits.

Some Resemblance.

A little girl in a California public school complained to her teacher that a Mexican boy had struck her. The teacher took Joe, the only Mexican boy in the school, sharply to task for the offense, but the boy denied it. "Mary," said the teacher, "Joe says he didn't strike you."

"Oh, no," said Mary, "'twan't Joe; twuz that tother boy over there," and she pointed to the blackest of negro boys in the school.

"But, Mary, that boy isn't a Mexican," said the teacher.

"Well, anyhow," said Mary, "he's very much tanned."

She Had Tested the Oyster.

Dora, the pet of the household, was very fond of oysters, and after eating her lunch of oysters and crackers she thought of her dear mother busy at her sewing machine. She selected a nice large oyster, put it in a plate and carried it to her mother, who, pleased with her little daughter's thoughtfulness, ate the oyster and said:

"It is most as good as my little girlie."

"Yes," answered Dora. "I know it is good 'cause I licked it all the way from the kitchen."—The Delineator.

Fiery Courtesy.

In a Canadian town a few days ago a dry goods firm was burned out in the morning. In the afternoon a competing firm inserted the following advertisement in a local paper:

"We desire to extend our sympathy to our respected competitors in their loss by fire and to express the hope that their affairs may soon be so adjusted as to enable them to continue business without undue loss of time."

LESS MEAT

Advice of Family Physician.

Formerly people thought meat necessary for strength and muscular vigor.

The man who worked hard was supposed to require meat two or three times a day. Science has found out differently.

It is now a common thing for a family physician to order less meat, as in the following letter from a N. Y. man.

"I had suffered for years with dyspepsia and nervousness. My physician advised me to eat less meat and greasy foods generally. I tried several things to take the place of my usual breakfast of chops, fried potatoes, etc., but got no relief until I tried Grape-Nuts food.

"After using Grape-Nuts for the cereal part of my meals for two years, I am now a well man. Grape-Nuts benefited my health far more than the $500.00 worth of medicine I had taken before.

"My wife and children are healthier than they had been for years, and we are a very happy family, largely due to Grape-Nuts.

"We have been so much benefited by Grape-Nuts that it would be ungrateful not to acknowledge it."

ROOSEVELT OFF FOR GREAT HUNT

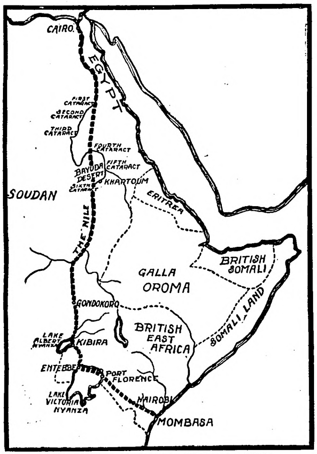
EX-PRESIDENT SAILS AWAY TO DARK CONTINENT.

TO BE IN AFRICA A YEAR

Then He Will Travel and Speak in Europe—Three Skilled Naturalists and His Son Kermit Accompany Him.

New York.—Theodore Roosevelt, ex-president of the United States, sailed out of New York harbor Tuesday on the steamer Hamburg of the Hamburg-American line on the way to his much-heralded hunting trip in British East Africa.

On the dock was a large assemblage of Mr. Roosevelt's friends, who had gathered to bid him God-speed, and who cheered him as he stood at the rail of the steamer waving his hand and smiling with delight. Beside him stood the three men selected from hundreds of applicants to accompany him and assist him in collecting the specimens of African fauna which he hopes to send back for the enrichment of the Smithsonian institution. These fortunate individuals were Maj. Edgar A. Mearns, J. Loring Alden and Edmund Heller. They comprise the Smithsonian's expedition. The fifth member of the little party, and not to be considered of least importance, was the ex-president's second son, Kermit, who will be the official photographer of the expedition and, next to his father, the chief hunter.



ROUTE OF THE ROOSEVELT PARTY IN AFRICA.

To Mombasa Via Naples.

Mr. Roosevelt will go via Gibraltar to Naples, where he will board a steamer of the German East African line for Kilindini harbor, the port of Mombasa. At the latter place the party will be joined by R. J. Cunninghame, an Englishman of long experience in Africa, who has been engaged as general manager and guide.

The party will spend a short time in Mombasa and then proceed by train on the Uganda railway to Nairobi, headquarters of the administration of British East Africa Protectorate, a city of 13,514 inhabitants, of whom 579 are Europeans.

On MacMillan's Ranch.

William Northrup MacMillan, forformerly of St. Louis, owns a large estate near Nairobi and his big, luxurious farmhouse will be headquarters for about six months while the hunters and scientists make trips of varying length in all directions. It is in this section that Mr. Roosevelt hopes to obtain most of his specimens, for it abounds with animals of all kinds. The smaller mammals will be trapped.

The supplies of the party are packed in tin-lined boxes. These boxes when they have been emptied will be used as packing cases for the various specimens. Many valuable natural history specimens have been spoiled by ants and other insects; it has been found from experience on other expeditions, and it is to guard against this that the tin-lined boxes are being taken along.

Caring for Specimens.

When the specimens have been prepared they will be carefully packed in the boxes and shipped to Nairobi, where they will be forwarded to the United States. One of the taxidermists will always be with Mr. Roosevelt, and as soon as any big game is shot by him it will be skinned and prepared on the spot.

Mr. Roosevelt will be greatly disappointed if he fails to kill several specimens of the white rhinoceros. This animal is the same as the square-mouthed rhinoceros and is the nearest living ally to the type of the extinct Tichorine or woolly rhinoceros which lived in England at the close of the Glacial period.

Journey Across Uganda.

Leaving Nairobi in October, the party will proceed by the Uganda railway to Port Florence, on the shores of Lake Victoria Nyanza, where a short stop will be made; then a steamer will be taken to Entebbe, 150 miles away. There a caravan will be formed and the journey across Uganda to the Nile will be begun. It is expected that the White Nile will be reached about the first of the year 1910. Lake Albert Nyanza will be touched at Kibira.

In a general way the course of the Nile will be followed to Gondokoro, and thence to Khartoum. At this city Mr. Roosevelt and Kermit will be joined by Mrs. Roosevelt and they will continue down the Nile slowly to Cairo, visiting many points of interest on the way.

To Speak in European Capitals.

Plans for the remainder of the ex-president's two years' tour have not been decided upon definitely, but the time will be spent in Europe, and several matters of importance have been announced. He will visit Berlin at the invitation of Emperor William and while there will deliver an address upon the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the University of Berlin.

From Germany he will go to France and deliver an address at the Sorbonne. It has not been learned how long Mr. Roosevelt intends to stay in Berlin and Paris. After his visit in France, Mr. Roosevelt will go to England, where a reception of great warmth undoubtedly will be accorded to him. He has accepted an invitation to deliver the Romanes lecture at Oxford university and in all probability the honorary degree of D. C. L., which Oxford has bestowed on Emperor William, will be conferred on Mr. Roosevelt.

The versatility of Mr. Roosevelt will be shown by the fact that he will speak German in his address before the students of the University of Berlin, French in his lecture at the Sorbonne, and English in delivering the Romanes lecture at Oxford.

Pays His Own Expenses.

Mr. Roosevelt will defray the expenses of himself and his son on the African trip, but those of the scientists and the cost of preparing the specimens and shipping them to America will be paid out of a fund secured for the purpose by the Smithsonian institution.

One of the objects of Mr. Roosevelt in taking this trip is for the purpose of collecting material for writing several books regarding his experiences. During last summer he contracted with Charles Scribner's Sons, of New York, giving that firm all the rights for the serial and book-form publication of whatever he might write on his visit to Africa. It is said that the contract price agreed upon is $1 per word, but this never has been verified.

No Slaughter of Animals.

Even if the British colonial government should offer to throw open to Mr. Roosevelt and his companions the African game preserves under its control, the ex-president will refuse to take advantage of this opportunity. Like other true sportsmen, he believes that the utmost protection should be given to wild animals on reservations and that permission to kill them should not be given or accepted under any circumstances unless, possibly, when predatory animals are becoming too numerous.

Moreover, the killing of animals for sport is not the main object of his trip. Mr. Roosevelt hopes to send back to the Smithsonian institution two adult specimens, one of each sex, and a specimen of their young, of animals he meets with on the Dark Continent. Beyond this the killing will be limited to the demands of the commissary.

MINNESOTA SOLONS

SENATE KILLS RESOLUTION TO ABOLISH RULES SUSPENSION.

Another Nail Driven in the Proposition to Hold Down the Eleven O'clock Lid.

St. Paul, Minn., March 15.—By a vote of 26 to 15 the senate today refused to adopt the Works resolution. The resolution demanded that in view of abuse and misrepresentation practiced through the suspension of rules that from now on the rules shall not be suspended for the passage of any bill.

Senator J. F. Calhoun of Minneapolis today revived the legislative salary bill which the senate on Saturday indefinitely postponed. His motion for reconsideration prevailed. This is the bill which aims to permit the lawmakers to draw their salary of $1,000 each the legislative session year, instead of $500 each year. The senate today also passed the house bill appropriating $35,000 additional for legislative expenses.

The senate decided to consider the Cashman distance tariff bill as a special order next Friday.

R. J. Wells, who made the motion for indefinite postponement the other day, was the member to move for reconsideration. He stated he was actuated in so doing by numerous letters and petitions from leading men of Duluth, Minneapolis and St. Paul. He presented petitions and several hundred letters from wholesalers, merchants, business men and city officials. A petition from Duluth bore the names of 50 leading business men and citizens, including Mayor R. D. Haven, Comptroller W. C. McCormick, Sheriff W. J. Bates and Postmaster Guy A. Eaton, all favoring the "12 o'clock lid."

The bill was discussed at length, and was voted down, even Wells, who made the motion for reconsideration because of his petitioners, voting against them and for his own convictions.

A. K. Ware of Northfield today introduced two bills on a "referendum" basis. One proposed submission to the voters of the question as to whether the primary system should not be abolished, and the second, submission of whether the primary system should be extended to nomination of state officers.

This afternoon the legislature took a special Northern Pacific train and visited the proposed site for the new Armour packing plant at New Brighton. A delegation from the Minneapolis Commercial Club was on hand to tell the lawmakers they should kill the Rowe bill which aims to prohibit the plant, and a delegation from the St. Paul Commercial Club was busy explaining that the plant would be the ruination of St. Paul's midway residence district.

Other bills recommended for passage by the senate committee of the whole today included the Wilson bill, to allow city officers to expend $300 for appropriate observance of Memorial Day; the bill by the labor committee, requiring public service corporations to pay their employees at least twice a month; the health committee bill authorizing the state board of health to establish sanitary regulations for all wage earners in their places of employment, and the Durment bill for $250,000 for extension of the capitol grounds.

* * *

St. Paul, Minn., March 16.—After an oral fight lasting all morning, the house today re-referred the Nolan bill to the judiciary committee. This is the bill which is strongly favored by the country delegations, and aims to place all street railway systems, city and rural, under control of the state railroad commission, as are steam railroads. The motion for this reference was made by Representative Burnquist of St. Paul. This member charged that under supreme court decisions, the railroad commission would not have power to control and regulate the electric lines of the cities, even if the legislature enacted the Nolan bill having this in view. The entire morning was then occupied in thrashing the question out. Messrs. Nolan, Thayer, and Lennon spoke at length in favor of the pending bill. Messrs. Kneeland, Campbell, L. H. Johnson, and others favored the proposed committee reference. On final vote, the bill was referred to the judiciary committee, 72 in favor, to 36 opposed, to report by Saturday.

The sub-committee of the house committee on taxes, this morning filed its report with the house relative to its investigation of the plans for the proposed steel plant which the United States Steel corporation contemplates for Duluth. The report asserts that the steel plant at Duluth will ultimately represent an investment of $25,000,000, and employ 10,000 hands, and that already the preliminary steps represent an investment of $1,300,000.

In the house the bill providing that all property be listed at its full value and assessed at a 40 per cent basis, was the special measure and, after much debate was killed.

The members voted to reconsider their action in killing the bill, and made it a special order for next Wednesday afternoon.

The "full-crew" bill went down and out in the senate today, without a word of debate on the part of either its enemies or friends.

Among the bills passed by the senate today, was the measure which "removes the lid" from election expenses; that is, strikes out the clause in the existing corrupt practice act which places a limit on the amount of money a candidate for political office may expend. The repeal of this important section is on the ground that its enforcement has been found impracticable—in fact, impossible.

On motion of Senator Alderman of Crow Wing, the senate today without any debate, adopted the Dorsey house resolution, memorializing congress to investigate the advisability of constructing a canal from Duluth, the head of the lakes, to the Mississippi, and thus opening a new route by water for the iron ore and grain traffic. The memorial will now be forwarded to congress.

The senate spent its entire time this afternoon till 6 p. m., in consideration of the large number of bills on the calendar. Among those of importance passed, were the following: by Pugh, establishing rank of officers, and service pay for the Duluth naval reserves; by Gunn, accepting Cooper Island in Cass lake as a grant from the federal government, and establishing a state park thereon; by Sundberg, restricting the sale of mallein and tuberculin and requiring reports of all such sales to the state livestock board; by Phillips, providing a department for incurables for the state school for feeble minded; by the senate live stock committee, prohibiting the sale of pure-bred cattle unless accompanied by a certificate of health; by Peterson, raising the fees of jurors from $2 to $3, but amended just previous to passage to exempt the Twin Cities from the provisions of the act.

* * *

St. Paul, Minn., March 17.—The house late today passed the Bjorge bill establishing a graded tonnage tax on iron ore mined in Minnesota. The vote was 61 for passage of the bill, and 57 opposed. Bjorge clinched his success by a reconsideration.

The "open lid" club bill, to permit social clubs in the Twin Cities and Duluth to dispense liquors without a license, passed the house at noon.

The house today passed the Greene bill to legalize six-round boxing contests in cities of over 50,000 population, no decisions to be permitted.

Sunday baseball is legalized in a bill introduced in the house today jointly by Messrs. Gartside, Virtue, Grant and Wohlhuter. It provides that "the game of baseball when conducted in a quiet and orderly manner, may be played between the hours of 1 p. m. and 6 p. m. on the Sabbath Day."

Doyle had a bill creating a superintendent at $2,000 a year, to take charge of state quarrying at St. Cloud by reformatory inmates and prison convicts, such stone to be distributed for road work throughout the state. The bill appropriates $150,000 to cover the cost of stone crushing machinery, erection of a Minnesota quarry building, salaries of necessary guards, and other expenses.

Congdon introduced a bill to permit cities to purchase property outside of their limits for park and boulevard purposes. Greene wants a law enacted to create a state commissioner of weights (to be named by the governor), with a deputy in each congressional district. Christianson would make the office of health commissioner elective in all cities of over 100,000—having special reference to St. Paul.

Opsahl wants all state land appraised separately from state timber, the timber to be sold on a basis of value minus the land appraisement from the total of the timber and land valuation.

A physical examination of public school pupils in cities of over 50,000 population, is provided in a bill introduced in the senate today by Senator Elwell of Minneapolis.

S. A. Nelson introduced a bill providing state aid for institutions treating tuberculosis patients. Where the per capita cost is at least $10 per week for such patients, the bill allows two-fifths of the cost to be paid by the state, and levies a special state tax of one-tenth of a mill to raise the necessary money. C. A. Johnson had a bill to grant state aid of $1,000 a mile to any parties or organization which constructs public roads. The same author introduced a bill to permit of appeals to be made to the state tax commission from rulings of county boards of equalization.

BILLION DOLLAR GRASS

BILLION $ BILLION $

When ten years ago we first offered to the world Salzer's Billion Dollar Grass, men shook their heads, professors doubted, farmers wondered whether the promises we made, 6 to 12 tons hay per acre, could be realized. Now all doubts are removed, and today the first farmers of America everywhere are planting Salzer's Billion Dollar Grass to their fullest satisfaction. Seed costs but 60c to 90c per acre and the yield is seldom under 6 to 12 tons of magnificent hay per acre!

ALFALFA AND OTHER PURE CLOVER SEED
Ex-Gov. Hoard of Wisconsin from 30 acres sown to Salzer's 20th Century Alfalfa Clover harvested within 24 weeks after seeding $2500.00 worth of magnificent hay or at the rate of over $80.00 per acre. Our 20th Century strains of Alfalfa, Medium, Mammoth Red and Alsike clover and grasses are the purest we believe on earth.

WE ARE HEADQUARTERS FOR AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE SEEDS
Such as Barley, Corn, Flax, Oats and Wheat especially recommended and introduced by the Agricultural Colleges of Wisconsin, Iowa, North Dakota, Minnesota, South Dakota, etc.

VEGETABLE SEEDS
We are the largest growers of vegetable seeds we believe in America, operating over 5000 acres. We warrant our seeds to produce the earliest, finest, vegetables grown. Our seeds are money makers.
Catalog tells why we have the largest Seed Potato trade in the world—one of our cellars holding over 60,000 bushels alone.
Try our 25 packages earliest vegetable seeds postpaid for $1.00.

WORTH $10.00 OF ANY MAN'S MONEY
For 10c in stamps we mail free of all cost samples of Silver King Barley, yielding 173 bu. per acre; Macaroni Wheat, yielding 64 bu. per acre; Billion Dollar Grass; Speltz, the cereal and hay food wonder, together with timothy, clover, grasses, etc., etc., any one of which, if it becomes acclimated on your farm, will be worth $10.00 of any man's money to get a start therewith.
Or, send 14c and we add a sample farm seed novelty never seen before by you.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. C. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30, 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam' Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

And now that the Armour packing plant fight is about settled, the legislature will soon be able to take up other matters in which the people of the state are interested.

Our Congressman Steenerson's name appears in the list of insurgents who voted against the old rules of the house of representatives, and contributed his share to down the gag rules of speaker Cannon, which was so offensive to the country at the last session of congress, and althou Cannon is again elected speaker he has had his wings clipped so he will not fly as high as he did at the last session of congress. Those who understand the situation are unanimous in the opinion that our congressman has corectly represented the best interests of his district in the speakership fight.

Swanson, of Deer Park and Lattimore, of this Township use about a half a colum each, set in legal type, of valuless space in last weeks leven towns to explain that they were not in the race for Town Clerk. No use to spend time to explain that to us, as we knew you would not be in the race, before election, and would have told either one of you, if you had asked us, that the farmers and tax payers were, "on to your game," and if you run for town clerk you would get "skinned," and your hides hung on the fence to dry, as a warning to others not to follow in your footsteps. To bad, but it can't be helped.

The efforts of the people to try to get a bridge across Red Lake River in the eastern part of this county are now fully aroused to the fact, that if we fail to get any assistance from the state at this time. that there will not be a bridge built across the river in this part of the county for a good many years. We are also awake to the situation and asure thoes that have taken an active intrest in trying to assist in getting this bridge built, that the full light of publicity will be turned onto any dirty or crooked work done in opposition to this matter, and the doers of it will stand out in the broad rays of THE SUNBEAM. For example: A fellow liveing in the extream north eastern part of the town ship, that thought he was writeing a sly letter to St. Hilare to try to knife some one in the back, might just as well have sent us a copy of the letter, for we know all about it. The bridge fight has only just comenced so far as we are concerned and if we fail to to get this much needed bridge, we will expose the reason in such plain laugugage, that every man, woman and child will understand it, and blame the ones that are to blame, every time they want to cross Red Lake river, in this end of the county, for the next ten years.

WAGNER MADE IT HOT.

The Composer's Trick When Money and Firewood Were Scarce.

Here is an anecdote of Wagner's early life as related by Liszt: "Wagner, Bulow and I were all quite young when we lived together in Leipzig and had a good time—that is, I enjoyed myself, but Wagner was already fermenting with his political and philosophical ideas, and our prosaic circumstances offered little ground for the idealists of the future. We called Bulow 'Kritikus,' and we, especially I, always feared his sharp tongue a little. Of course all of us had little money, but Wagner put our slender purse to great strains. He could not bear money worries, and we let him feel them as little as possible.

"Once, after a long autumn, it became cold suddenly, and Wagner with his 'nerves' suffered from the sudden change in the temperature. He demanded a heated room at once. For two whole days the debate raged between him and Bulow as to the immediate purchase of wood with our reduced purse.

"I was not asked, because Bulow knew that I would yield, but he as treasurer contended that it was ridiculous to buy wood in the month of September. 'But I am freezing,' said Wagner in a rage, to which the inexorable Bulow suggested that he go out and get warm by running or warm himself by his muse. Laughing at his cheap, spiteful advice, Bulow and I went out, but when we returned after two hours we were thunderstruck to find Wagner in the room heated to suffocation. He sat at his writing table deep in his work. His face was red.

"'Where'— began Bulow, but the words stuck in his throat, for a glance around the room showed him how Wagner had helped himself. Several chairs and our work tables lay on the floor, permanently crippled. Wagner had cut off their legs and made the fire with them. Bulow was speechless with rage, but I stood at the door and laughed till the tears came at this ingenious way of helping oneself. Bulow lamented that we would have to replace the landlady's chairs and tables and that he could not sit down or work.

"Wagner answered spitefully: 'I have what I needed! Fellows like you, who do nothing but go walking, need neither chairs nor tables. If you had given me the money right off, your valuable furniture would still be in existence. You wished it so! Firewood would have been cheaper!'"

THE MEASLES CANNIBAL.

Method of a Vancouver Island Tribe to Drive Away Disease.

A few years ago an epidemic of measles broke out among the Indian tribes living on Vancouver island, in British Columbia, not far from Fort Rupert, and the shamans or medicine men came to the conclusion that a cannibal sorcerer, whom they termed the "hamatsu" (measles cannibal), was slaying their children to eat them and that he would continue to do so until he was killed.

As they could not slay a ghost in his own person they arranged a ceremony in which one of their number posed as the cannibal and was treated as they would have liked to treat the real foe. This fact of a substitute was, of course, not made public, only the medicine men knowing the truth of the matter.

Against a wall of rock was painted an imitation opening, in the center of which the "cannibal" was fastened. At the proper time, after going through various incantations, a covering was jerked away, exposing the cannibal apparently springing through the solid rock. He was promptly grasped by two of the priests, who dragged him out and rushed him through a fire which was burning in front of the place and which was surrounded by all the members of the tribe beating drums and singing at the top of their voices. By some jugglery the cannibal was got rid of, and the people were told that he had flown away through the air and would not come back.

After this ceremony had been repeated several times to put an end to other epidemics, which were only too prevalent among the Indians, it grew into a sort of annual affair, managed by the members of a secret society whose members know that the supposed "hamatsu" was only a man.—Scientific American.

Punishment In Effigy.

Punishment in effigy was legally practiced in France and with great solemnity up to the time of the first revolution. If the man condemned escaped, a dummy was put up in his cell and the entire routine of the law allowed to take its course. The warrant was read to it, and on the day appointed it was conducted to the scaffold in the presence of all the legal functionaries and with all the circumstance of the law. Sometimes the same person was executed in effigy simultaneously in several cities, but that did not exempt him from actual punishment should he be afterward caught.

SOOTHING THE WAVES.

Oiling the Waters When the Seas Are Running High.

When the captain of a wave beaten ship pours oil upon the waters he does not empty a barrel of kerosene over the side. He has somebody stitch up three or four cotton bags, which he fills first with oakum and then with oil, usually equal parts of fish oil and kerosene. The bags are then tied tightly at the tops and pricked all over with a sail needle to permit the oil to exude and are hung from the boat davits and weather chains to drip their contents on the raging billows. The bags must not be allowed to get empty, but must be refilled every two hours. For six bags ten gallons of oil are used in thirty hours. Sometimes if it is very cold the oil congeals and will not run out through the holes fast enough, and the mouth of the bag is then loosened to let it escape in that way. Its effect is magical on a rough sea. A huge comber will arise, threatening to bury the laboring vessel under tons of water, but will strike a patch of oil no larger than a common dining table and subside in an instant into a smooth, round swell, which the ship rides like a cork.

The use of oil is also a valuable aid in wearing ship in a gale and high seas. A few gallons of paint oil over the lee quarter enable the vessel to perform the maneuver in perfect safety without taking a drop of water on board. When a boat ships so much water that it is impossible to get the oil bags slung in position without running the risk of being swept overboard an ordinary bed sheet saturated with paint oil tied to a rope and allowed to float will soon calm the seas sufficiently to permit men to move about the decks safely. Paint oil is agreed to be the best to use, rape seed oil and porpoise oil rank next, but kerosene is not satisfactory unless mixed with some other oil.—New York Press.

THE SUMMIT OF FUJI.

When Morning Breaks Over the Very Top of Japan.

Suddenly a spark, a flame and then a burst of fire, and, lo and behold, the rosy morning is awake once more on Fuji's pearly crest while Japan, below, is yet enveloped in the filmy mists of night.

The pilgrims fall on their knees and bow their heads to the ground in adoration, and with much fingering of rosaries the plaintive cadence of their prayers rises like a lamentation to the heavens above.

At Benares, the sainted city of the Hindoos, as the sun rises each morning across the holy Ganges the prayers of the bathing multitude are as the roaring of the sea. But even this, one of the greatest and most stirring religious spectacles of the world, is not more picturesque than that little band of pilgrims 'twixt heaven and earth, high up in the blue profound, on the very top of Japan, kneeling in praise before the great orb which is the emblem of their empire.

Never to have seen sunrise from the summit of Fuji is never to have really seen Japan.

The kindly nature which made this lovely land has surpassed all its other efforts in the lavish profusion with which it has scattered its favors around the sacred mountain. Rippling rills and roaring rivers, dancing cascades and thundering waterfalls, feathery woods and deep forests there are on every side, but of all these glories the most enchanting are the lakes which lie embosomed like flashing jewels among the hills.

Of them all Shoji and Motosu are the most beautiful, the latter excelling in the exquisite sapphire blue of its waters and its dainty, delicate beauty all other lakes in Japan and challenging comparison with the fairest waters of the world.—Herbert G. Ponting in Metropolitan Magazine.

Gestures.

"It will help actors in gesturing correctly," said a playwright, "to remember that all gesticulation is an inheritance from our simian ancestors. We show abhorrence best by the same movements with which we would repel a wet dog. We show affection by the movements with which we would receive a loved physical object. We move our heads from side to side to signify 'no' because that was the way our monkey ancestors avoided a proffered and undesirable morsel of food. We nod for 'yes' because that was the way our monkey forbears reached for an acceptable morsel."

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Even J. Sund retureed home home from southern Minnesota on Friday.

Wm. Bruckman, of Radney was looking after horses to buy in this locality Wednesday.

There is to be a Socialist lecture at the Highlanding school house next Sunday, at 2 o'clock p.m., by H. A. Barton, of Idaho.

Thomas Sullivan, who has been visiting friends and looking after his land interests in this locality, left for his home at Crystal N.D. on Saturday.

Peter C. Wold and Sam McMahan went down to Red Lake Falls on Saturday last where they will serve as jurors during this term of District Court.

March seems to want to go out like a lion, judgeing by the storm that is on tap to day, but as is about old winters last howl, let her roar.

There will be a meeting at the school house next Sunday afternoon, at 1 o'clock p.m for the purpose of organiseing a non-political farmers club. All are invited.

If you get hungry going down to Thief River Falls, stop at The Soo Cafe, near the Soo depot, and get a lunch, or a square meal at a reasonable price.

George Jarman, Proprietor

Joe O'Toole returned home from a weeks visit at Crystal N. D. yesterday. He reports that his brother Lore, who had diptherie, last fall has entirely recoverd his health, which will be good news to his many friends in this locality.

The funeral of Ole Overum was held at the school house on last Tuesday afternoon and was attended by a large number his neighbors and friends. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Borenson, and the remains laid to rest in the newly laid out cemetary on the seuth west cornor of his homeated, and he is the first one to occupy it.

The Thief River Falls bill for moveing county seats was voted down and out by the legislature last week. Whatever may be the faults of Red Lake Falls, they certainly are entitled to the credit of being first class "hustlers" that have the "pull." We don't blame them for putting up a big fight; what one of us would not do the same if the interests of our homes were at stake.

Mr. McLarn and Carlson, held their Farmers State Institute at the Highlanding school house on Monday afternoon. There was a fair sized and attentive audiance who listened to two hours good dairy talk by two practical farmers, who did not get all their edocation at the state university, but part of it in the cow barn. These are the right kind of men for the state to send out to hold these Institutes, and they will be of great bennefit to the farmers.

W. A. Swanson boasts of his friends in Highlanding. You bet a few of these ducks will pat him on the back and call him a fine fellow, as long as they can use him for a "toole" and a cats paw, to rake their dirty coals out of the fire, by trying to help change a bridge location to a point were he knows that his neighbors can not get to it to cross in the summer time, but him and his father are the only two men in the whole township of Deer Park, that have been courting that kind of friendship. As for us he can have forty wagon loads of that kind of friendship, and all of our part of it, as THE SUNBEAM and its editor will fight any one that trys to hinder the upbuilding of this part of Red Lake county, as the "toole" of a few unprincipled men, that are only working for their own selfish interests.

FOR SALE AT A BARGAIN.

One of the best farms in the town of Highlanding. The N.E. ¼ of section 29. One hundred and twenty acres of first class plow land. Ballance light timber and meadow land. One half mile from the Highlanding creamery, which is now running and in a prosperous condition. CLEARWATER LOCALS.

Oh; beautifull spring time are you comeing to greet us again?

Mr. Ralph Green, from Equality and Ausmond Mand, of Deer Park went down to Red Lake Falls to serve as juryman, this week.

The farmers Institute held at the creamery last week was well attended and everybod was well pleased.

The Ladies Aid Society will meet at Mrs. Sall's on April 7th.

Mr. Amanul Carlson left on Thursday for Crookston, where he will buy a span of horses.

There was a social gathering at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Con Short on Saturday evening last, where Mr. Carlson and Mr. McLearn done some very fine singing, and showed some good picturs with a Magic lantern.

Mrs. I. Lillo and daughter Ida made a business trip to Plummer on Saturday last.

Miss Mary Bagen finished her term of school in the Rindahl district on Friday last, and left for her home at Red Lake Falls on Saturday last.

Clara and Martain Moe, and Adolph Lindberg were visitors at the home of A. Rolandson on Friday evening last.

Mrs. G. A. Hoveland went to Crookston, where she made final proof on her homestead yesterday, before the U. S Land Office.

Miss Julia Rendal visited at the home of Ausmond Mandt on Sunday.

Mr. August Lillo visited with the family of A. Rolandson on Sunday last.

NIAGARA FALLS BARE

For One Whole Day the Rocky Precipice Was Dry.

THE WATER CEASED TO FLOW

This Curious Phenomenon Occurred on March 31, 1848—Terrified the People in the Vicinity—Return of the Torrent and the Cause of the Stoppage.

In the early spring of 1848 occurred a natural phenomenon so strange, so sudden and so stupendous that the older inhabitants of western New York still speak of it with awe and wonder. This phenomenon was nothing else than the running dry of Niagara falls. The story is seldom recounted now, but it was a nine days' wonder for the whole country when it appeared in the newspapers. For the first time in history the roar of the grandest cataract in America was hushed.

In the early morning of March 31, 1848, people living in the vicinity of the falls were awakened by a peculiar hush, as startling in its suddenness and intensity as the most thunderous explosion could have been. Many dressed and hastened outdoors, urged by a conviction that something appalling had happened or was about to happen. Some thought the end of the world was at hand. Others imagined that they had grown suddenly deaf. Still others thought that the hush preceding a terrific hurricane had fallen upon the air. All were oppressed with a feeling of profound awe and dread.

It was soon discovered, however, that the cessation of the roar of the falls was the sole cause of this common panic. As the dim light of early morning grew stronger the people were able to see the almost bare precipice of the falls, over which but a short time before thousands of tons of water had been pouring. Only here and there small streams, constantly growing smaller, now trickled down the face of the towering wall. Above the falls, instead of the rushing, foaming river, only a naked channel, studded with black and jagged rocks, appeared. The bed of the river was practically exposed from shore to shore, except for small streams, like mountain brooks, running slowly to the verge of the precipice. The spectators could hardly believe their eyes.

Some remarkable feats were performed on that day when Niagara ran dry. People walked from the Canadian side of the river, along the edge of the frightful precipice, nearly as far as Goat island on the American side and never even wet their feet. Some went exploring in the river bed above the falls and discovered a number of ancient gun barrels, lost probably by sportsmen up the river in long gone days and still after the rotting away of their stocks slowly forced down stream by the current. Caves and curious formations in the rocks were discovered, the existence of which had never been suspected before.

All that day, March 31, 1848, Niagara falls remained dry, and people who remained up until late at night, expecting to see a change, went to bed without witnessing it. But in the early morning of April 1 the familiar thunder of the great cataract was once more heard, and every one knew that the mysteriously drained river bed was again pouring its flood over the falls.

Now for the explanation of this strange phenomenon. It proved to be, after all, very simple. The winter of 1847 and 1848 had been one of extreme severity. Ice of such thickness had never been known as formed on Lake Erie that season. When the break-up came, toward the end of March, a strong northeast wind was blowing, which piled the great fields of ice in floes and then in banks as high as miniature icebergs. Toward night on March 30 the wind suddenly changed to the opposite direction and increased to a terrific gale, which hurled back the piled up ice and drove it into the entrance of Niagara river with such force that a huge and almost impenetrable dam was formed. For a whole day the source of the river was stopped up, and the stream was drained of its supply. By the morning of the 31st the river was practically dry, and thus for twenty-four hours the roar of Niagara falls was stilled. Then in the early morning of April 1 the ice pack gave way under the tremendous pressure from above, and the long restrained volume of water rushed down and reclaimed its own.—Exchange.

A Metaphor With a History.

To "know a hawk from a hernshaw" is a metaphor with a curious history. It is a comparison drawn from falconry. "Hernshaw" is a corruption of "heronshaw," or young heron, a bird which was a common prey of the falcons. To know a hawk from a hernshaw is therefore to be able to distinguish the falcon from its prey. A further colloquial corruption crept into the phrase—"to know a hawk from a handsaw," a form used by Hamlet in one place. Possibly the distinction between a hawk and a hernshaw was found not to be strong enough for the purposes of the proverb.—Manchester Guardian.

All the News.

A wise editor says: "A man told us the other day that we did not publish all the things that happened. We should say not. In the first place, there is somebody else depending on us for a living. If we printed all that happens we would soon be with the angels. In order to please the people we must print only the nice things said of them and leave the rest to gossip. Yet it's a fact we don't publish all the news. If we did wouldn't it make spicy reading? But it would be for one week only; the next week you would read our obituary. All the news is all right when it's about the other fellow."

Japanese "Silent" Music.

A curious ceremony is performed in Japan by the court musicians at certain Shinto festivals. Both stringed and wind instruments are used, but it is held that no sound should be allowed to fall upon unworthy ears, and, as some of the ears present might be unworthy, all the motions of playing are gone through by the musicians, but not a single sound is heard. This strange custom dates back many generations, but since the advent of civilization has rapidly lost favor.

SHAPING of A CAREER

By GEORGE T. PARDY

John Wilson Murray in an Unusual Achievement

WHEN the Chevalier Dupin, the unequaled solver of weird mysteries, made his first bow to the public, introduced by the skillful hand of Edgar Allan Poe, he became at once the accepted type of the detective of fiction. Nor has this type changed to any great extent since it was set forth in the person of the hero of the "Murders in the Rue Morgue." Still doth Sherlock Holmes lurk in the darkened precincts of his superheated rooms, consuming tobacco and dallying with the insidious delights of opium, at times taking refuge in the "profound silence" for which Poe's astute analyst was noted, and emerging from his reveries master of a new set of brilliant deductions warranted to furnish a key to the secrets of any criminal case presented for his consideration. And even as Holmes followed in the footsteps of Dupin, countless hordes of imitators camp upon the trail of Holmes, and we are forced to the conclusion that the type is pretty sure to be utilized by authors for the next 50 years.

The question naturally suggests itself: Is the real simon-pure detective like unto the member of his profession who works wonders in the world of fiction? Put this proposition up to Wilson Murray, chief inspector of criminal investigation of the department of justice of the province of Ontario, Canada, and he will answer emphatically in the negative. The solving of these seemingly inexplicable problems is a capital exercise for the intellect, but has mighty little to do with practical police work. For criminals are not drawn into the meshes of the official net by virtue of fine-drawn deductions and opium-bred inspirations.

Murray served through the civil war in the navy. He was in the Mississippi, or Gulf, squadron a part of the time, under Commander Jewett, and he fought under Farragut and was in a number of engagements including the fight at Mobile. From service in the Mississippi and gulf Murray was ordered to the great lakes aboard the Michigan. He continued aboard her until after the close of the war, and in December, 1866, he left the Michigan and the service.

The war left its indelible imprint on Murray's life, as it did on the life of many another man. It tended to mold his ambitions and direct them along the line of what later became his occupation. His career was not cast ashore by any dread of hardship afloat or any dislike of service at sea. It was influenced by an event that is one of the important, yet little known, episodes of the civil war: The attempt of the confederates, in 1864, to capture the U. S. S. Michigan, to take Johnson island, in Sandusky bay in Lake Erie, release 4,000 confederates imprisoned there, burn the island, and, if possible, destroy Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo by fire, and strike terror to the heart of the north. The man who discovered the plot was Murray, and it was he who unearthed the identity of the picturesque leader and was instrumental in frustrating the schemes so cunningly devised.

The war was at its zenith in the year 1864, when Commander J. C. Carter of the United States navy sent for Murray and detailed him to special duty. There had been some vague rumors floating around of a confederate plot to blow up Johnson island, liberate all confederate prisoners and land them safely in Canada across Lake Erie.

"Try to get to the bottom of the conspiracy, if there is one," said Commander Carter. "Go to any place and every place where your judgment leads you. You have an unlimited commission. Report to me from time to time."

Murray went first to Detroit and conferred with Col. Hill, who gave him what information he had. It was very meager. At that time Vallandingham, a member of congress from Ohio, was in exile in Windsor, Ont., across the river from Detroit. Vallandingham was a southern sympathizer. Murray, garbed as a civilian, crossed to Windsor and settled down to learn, first of all, the ways of Vallandingham and any other confederate sympathizers gathered there. He observed closely all who called on Vallandingham. Among them he noted a dapper, energetic little fellow who came and went at Vallandingham's headquarters. Murray learned that his name was L. C. Cole, and that he was reputed to be a confederate agent. Cole was about 38 years old, five feet seven inches tall, weighed 135 pounds, with red hair and long mustache, and gray eyes so small and sharp and bright that they were the first feature to draw Murray's attention to the suspect. Murray finally overheard a scrap of conversation between Cole and Vallandingham that convinced him the former was an important and dangerous person. He communicated with Commander Carter and prepared to follow Cole's trail if it led to the end of the earth.

When Cole alighted from the train in Montreal Murray was a car length behind him. Cole went to the St. Lawrence Hall hotel and Murray followed suit. There the southern agent was joined by a woman. The latter was a big, stately blonde, magnificently dressed, a stranger to Murray at the time, although later he identified her as the celebrated "Irish Lize." From Montreal Cole and his female partner went to Albany. The impulse was strong on Murray to seize them and notify Commander Carter. He thought the matter over carefully. He possessed evidence that they were confederate sympathizers, but lacked evidence as to a plot, or their plans. He decided to follow them, half suspecting that they would go far south before returning to execute any desperate plans in the north.

They stopped over one night in Albany, then went to New York, took the train to Philadelphia, and thence to Washington. They met one, and sometimes two or three strangers in each city, evidently by previous appointment, while Murray trailed them patiently from place to place. From Washington Cole and Irish Lize went to Harrisburg, Pa., and from Harrisburg to Buffalo, and thence to Cleveland. In the latter city they were joined by a young man with whom they had conferred in Philadelphia. He was Charles Robinson, son of a former judge. They stayed in Cleveland two days and then went to Sandusky, O., where Cole and his partner stopped at the West house and Robinson at a private boarding house.

Cole posed at Sandusky as an oil king, while Irish Lize passed as his wife. Soon after their arrival an assistant joined Cole, who became known as G. C. Beal. One week after Cole arrived at the West house a young man registered there as John U. Wilson of New Orleans. He was none other than Murray, who had taken this means of scraping an acquaintance with his quarry. In the course of a few days Wilson met Cole casually, as guests staying at the same hotel are apt to meet, and they drank together and became quite intimate. Cole bought fast horses, and finally chartered a yacht. Incidentally he made the acquaintance of the officers of the U. S. S. Michigan, then lying off Sandusky, and also of Col. Hill (not the Col. Hill with whom Murray had conferred in Detroit), and the United States army officers in charge of Johnson island.

Murray meanwhile had reported to Commander Carter. About the middle of July, 1864, Cole arranged a party to the Seven-Mile house, seven miles out of Sandusky. He invited all the officers of the island and the ship. A number of them were making preparations to go. Young Wilson of New Orleans was Cole's assistant in planning the outing. Early that morning Cole received a telegram from Detroit which read: "I send you 16 shares per two messengers—D. B."

On this particular morning the steamer Philo Parsons, plying between Sandusky and Detroit on daily trips, with a stop at Windsor, Ont., received ten men as passengers at Windsor and eight more at Amherstburg, in Canada, at the mouth of the Detroit river. They were the "shares" sent by two messengers to the convivial Mr. Cole at Sandusky. After the steamer Parsons got well out into Lake Erie these 18 men opened their baggage, took therefrom braces of revolvers and captured the vessel, making her captain a prisoner. Then they steamed on to Kelly's island, off Sandusky, where the steamer Island Queen was lying. Several of them boarded the Queen, caught the crew unawares, gave orders to Engineer Richardson, and when he refused to obey shot him dead. They took the Island Queen out into the lake and ran her on to Gull island, where she was abandoned. They then headed for Sandusky in the Parsons, which was due there at six o'clock in the evening.

While all this was occurring on Lake Erie, Cole was in Sandusky with his plans designed for the party that would call practically all the officers on the Michigan and on Johnson island well away from their posts of duty. They were supposed to start on the merry-making jaunt from Sandusky in the afternoon. Cole and young Wilson waited for the tardy guests, and finally Cole, becoming impatient, said to his companion:

"It's strange that these officers haven't come ashore before this. You go off and see what's keeping them."

Wilson shook his head, dubiously. "They wouldn't be likely to come for me," he said. "You had better take a boat and go yourself."

Cole, who usually dressed in dark attire, was wearing a suit of gray. He discussed the matter of going over for the officers with Wilson, who walked down to the dock with him, and said:

"Here's a boat belonging to the Michigan, now. Go off in her and get your men, and I'll go with you."

Cole, following out his usual extravagant methods, handed a ten-dollar bill to the coxswain of the crew and told him to take the boys to the nearest bar for a drink. All went except the boat-keeper, who waited with Cole and Wilson, and James Hunter, an officer of the Michigan, who was ashore. When the crew returned they willingly pulled off to the Michigan, lying three miles off Sandusky. About half way out, Cole, who seemed to have a presentiment of trouble, changed his mind about going to the ship and requested the crew to turn back.

"The pennant of the ship is flying," remarked Wilson, carelessly, to the coxswain.

"Yes, that means that we'll have to go on now, but I'll bring you back just as soon as I've reported," said the coxswain.

Cole could not advance any reasonable objection to this offer, so the boat went forward to the Michigan. The officers aboard greeted their would-be host cordially, and invited him to have a glass of wine, telling him they were sorry to disarrange his plans or delay his party. Young Wilson hastened to the commander's cabin and smiled triumphantly as he saluted that august individual.

"I have the man," he declared, upon entering.

"You are certain he is the right man?" queried the commander.

"Not a shadow of a doubt about it," was Wilson's response.

"Then have him brought here," ordered Carter.

The psuedo Wilson turned to the orderly.

"Tell Mr. Cole that Capt. Carter wishes to see him," he said.

Cole made his appearance, debonaire, smiling and merry as of yore. Wilson met him before he reached the cabin.

"The captain is anxious to have a little talk with you, Cole," he remarked, pleasantly.

At the tone of his voice Cole stopped short and regarded him sharply with curious eyes. Then he laughed and stepped into the presence of the commander, with Wilson behind him.

"Capt. Carter, this is Mr. Cole, a rebel spy," said Wilson's calm voice.

"Murray, arrest him!" came the captain's mandate.

Cole's figure straightened into sudden dignity, and a proud flash came from his eyes.

"I am not a spy; I am a confederate officer," he said, truculently.

Carter smiled in incredulous fashion. Cole thrust a hand in the bosom of his gray coat and drew forth a paper. It was his commission signed by Jefferson Davis, showing him to be a major in the confederate army. Murray perused the paper and handed it to the captain.

"Take him away and search him, Murray," said Carter.

Cole, accompanied by his former friend Wilson of New Orleans, now Murray of the Michigan, went to a cabin and a sentry was placed at the door. Murray searched him and found $600 in currency, some letters and papers, and ten certified cheques for $5,000 each on the Bank of Montreal, payable to bearer. He laid them all out while Cole eyed him and laughed.

"You served me well, Murray Wilson, or Wilson Murray, or whatever the deuce your name may be," said Cole.

"I served the best I could," responded Murray, dryly.

"Sit down for a moment," requested Cole, and Murray complied.

"Now, see here," said the southerner, "you're a pretty smart young fellow to have worked things out the way you did. You and I got along very well together, didn't we? You wouldn't like to see me hanged, would you?"

"No," replied Murray, "I wouldn't. I have no fancy for seeing anyone hanged."

"Well, that's just what you're trying to do with me," remarked the prisoner, in an injured tone.

"It's a very unfortunate thing," returned Murray, "and I hope I won't be responsible for your death."

Cole was game to the core, and his nerve never deserted him for an instant. Despite the terrible predicament in which he found himself placed his face did not lose its ruddy color or jolly, care-free expression.

"It's like this," he said, coolly. "I suppose I ought to shoot you, and if I had a gun handy I'd do it, for business is business, and war is hellish business, Wilson. But maybe there's another way out of the tangle. There is $50,000 in gold represented by those cheques. They are as good this minute as the gold in the Bank of Montreal. You can keep them. No one on board here knows I have them. You may cash them whenever you wish. All I ask is that you won't know enough to get the rope around my neck, and that if the chance comes you'll do me a friendly turn to help me escape. Once I'm out you can give me $500, or enough to get south, or you needn't give me five cents. It's a fair bargain, isn't it, Wilson? My young friend, you'll never get such a golden chance again in your life."

Murray merely smiled, glanced at the tempting bait Fortune was dangling before his eyes—and shook his head.

"You may be telling the truth, Mr. Cole," he said, quietly. "I may never get such a chance again. I'll do what I can for you in as far as it may be consistent with my duty, but I cannot make you any promises."

For the first time since his arrest a frown darkened the prisoner's brow.

"Wilson, you're a fool," he said, sharply.

Murray turned upon him swiftly.

"That may be your view of the matter," he said, grimly, "so we won't argue. But let me ask you one question. Would you be willing to sell out the confederacy?"

Cole's imperious manner changed, he put out his hand and grasped Murray's, shaking it warmly.

"No, I wouldn't," he said, frankly; "and I respect your patriotism, Wilson. We understand each other better now."

Captor and prisoner, now imbued with a mutual admiration, sat and chatted in friendly tones. Cole asked Murray where he had first seen him, and the youthful detective narrated the story of the chase, giving him full details even to the numbers of the rooms in the hotels the southerner had stopped at. When he had finished Cole laughed.

"It's a straight yarn," he acknowledged, "and you've got everything right. But I could swear on a stack of Bibles as high as this ship that I never saw you before we met in Sandusky."

Capt. Carter alone had been in the secret of Murray's masquerade as Wilson. He had arranged for the boat's crew to be waiting at the landing to take Cole to the ship, and Murray intercepted telegrams to Cole and thus learned of the message concerning the "16 shares." His quick intuition enabled him to read between the lines and transform the "shares" into men to arrive aboard the steamer Parsons. With Cole safely in durance vile, Capt. Carter now made ready to capture the raiders who had seized the Parsons. Neither he nor Murray was aware at the time that Cole had arranged for the Parsons to stay outside until he should venture out of the harbor with his yacht and signal them to come in. He was to slip away from his guests at the Seven-Mile house, drive swiftly to Sandusky, and go out to meet the Parsons, while the Union officers were enjoying themselves miles away.

It was agreed that the confederates in possession of the Parsons, upon meeting Cole, were to go in small boats to the Michigan, capture the ship, and then run over to Johnson's island and release the 4,000 southern prisoners, chiefly officers, imprisoned there. They intended to land them at Point Pelee, in Canada, across the lake. Not much difficulty was anticipated in capturing the Michigan, as when the approaching boats were challenged Cole, who was known to all on board her, would answer and disarm all suspicion.

Once aboard the confederates believed they could easily carry the hatches with a rush. The Michigan had 14 cannon aboard her, six parrot rifles, six 24-pound howitzers, two light howitzers, and over 100 tons of ammunition. They had no other heavily armed craft to fear on the lake, and believed they could not only liberate their 4,000 comrades on Johnson island and land them in Canada, but could also sail the lake safely until they bombarded and burned Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo.

But the Parsons did not go in at Sandusky. Her confederate crew waited in vain for the promised signal from Cole. They became alarmed, scented disaster, went back to the Detroit river under cover of darkness, scuttled the Parsons, and landed in Amherstburg, Canada. That night Murray, accompanied by another officer, went ashore and arrested the man Robinson at his boarding house in Sandusky. Irish Lize and several other southern sympathizers concerned in Cole's plot were also taken care of. Cole was transferred from the Michigan to Johnson island, and thence to Fort La Fayette, at New York, and from there to Fort Warren, at Boston, where he was held until after Lincoln's proclamation, and then released without being brought to trial.

The dream of an unknown Kansas editor:

She was dressed in green, and a serpent of old gold and with red eyes encircled her arm. Her hair was very black and loose. Her eyes, black and deep, seemed to search me through as she held my hand in hers and looked up from the palm she had been reading.

"Your death will come suddenly," she said.

"Will it be a railroad collision or a hotel fire?" we inquired.

"I cannot say," she said, "but it will be so sudden as to be painless."

Just then we awoke, because somebody was punching us in the ribs and saying: "Get on your side of the bed and let me have my share of the quilts."

"My six year old daughter had the dreadful disease called hives for two months. She became affected by playing with children who had it. By scratching she caused large sores which were irritating. Her body was a complete sore but it was worse on her arms and back. We employed a physician who left medicine but it did not help her and I tried several remedies but without avail. Seeing the Cuticura Remedies advertised, I thought I would try them. I gave her a hot bath daily with Cuticura Soap and anointed her body with Cuticura Ointment. The first treatment relieved the itching and in a short time the disease disappeared. Mrs. George L. Fridhoff, Warren, Mich., June 30 and July 13, 1908."

The Passionate Snake

BY ELLA HIGGINSON

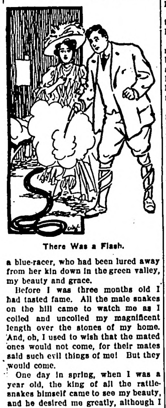
(Copyright, by Shortstory Pub. Co.)

If any man supposes that snakes do not understand the speech of human tongues, I—being a snake—will, in this short story, convince him that he is mistaken. I may convince him of some other truths also.

We are the accursed of the earth. We have only to be seen to be straightway killed. Every man's hand is against us, not because of his own hate, for men are not cowards, but because of the hate of his women.

We have learned, therefore, through ages of cruel treachery, to make our blows swift and sure; yet I say to men, with scorn, that we are more honorable and more merciful than they; we give warning before we strike. We give each man one chance, at least, for his life. More, we strike only when our lives are threatened, or our privacy invaded.

I, being a female thing, have known love. Ay, most beautiful and graceful have I been from my birth. My form is slender and supple; my movements are sinuous and alluring. The grasses sway in languid undulations, caressing me, as I slide through them. My markings are of rich and unusual beauty and brilliancy. It is said that my eyes take on the color of my moods and passions. When I lie basking in the sunlight, they have the pale blue content of the skies. When I lift myself erect, suspecting danger or treachery, they are like two glittering, green emeralds. When I am jealous—what female thing has not been?—they are a pale amber-yellow. Once it was said to me that they were—but that must wait.



There Was a Flash.

I was born in a pile of stones on a hill in the lovely Grande Ronde valley, in Oregon. From my father, a rattlesnake, I inherited my strong will and fierce passions; from my mother, a blue-racer, who had been lured away from her kin down in the green valley, my beauty and grace.

Before I was three months old I had tasted fame. All the male snakes on the hill came to watch me as I coiled and uncoiled my magnificent length over the stones of my home. And, oh, I used to wish that the mated ones would not come, for their mates said such evil things of me! But they would come.

One day in spring, when I was a year old, the king of all the rattlesnakes himself came to see my beauty, and he desired me greatly, although I was so young and he so old. My father was proud and flattered. But I— Well, there was a young and bold blue-racer who used to climb the hill from the valley; and on soft, moonless evenings, when my father slept and my mother pretended that she did not hear, I slid down and met him among the deep grasses that grew half way up the hill.

Ah, those hours of first love! Poor human beings, who pass your nights within the four walls of a room, I pity you!

We were only snakes. But we had the night and all its sweets woven forever through our love. Soft winds, scented with the pines on the crest of the Blue mountains, rippled the grasses above us, as we tasted the bliss of loving companionship. The nighthawk sank to blow his shrill bugle-like note beside us; the stars glowed redly through the breathing dusk; from the canyons far up in the hills come the mournful cry of a coyote. Down under the velvet grasses it was dark and sweet, and we were alone, and we loved.

When at length I stole home and coiled myself on the smooth stones I could not sleep. I lay motionless until the pale greens and yellows came marching up the east, and the trees on the mountain's crest turned, one by one, to gold, and the meadowlarks sang, oh, so sweetly, in the valley where I knew he lay as motionless as I, dreaming of joys that had been and longing for those that were to be.

There was a month full of such bliss. But a day came when my father knew; and that night the king of rattlesnakes went down the hill in my stead, and lay in wait for his rival.

When I was convinced that they had killed him, I stole away in the night and made my way to the other side of the valley, and dwelt alone on another hill and mourned. There were no snakes and there were no human things. And, oh, the days were long, and, oh, the nights were lonely.

Deep and passionate was my grief through all the spring, and summer, and fall. When winter drew on, how glad was I to curl myself in a dark, warm place for my long sleep. I recall that my last thought was of how dreary and heart-breaking my awakening would be in the spring. Yet when the awakening came—well, I am a female thing, and that must be sufficient explanation.

It was on a warm and lovely day in April that I languidly uncoiled and slid out to lie upon the stones. Never shall I forget how the beauty of that day thrilled me! I was glad, I exulted, only to live once more. My memories of love and sorrow seemed vague. Had I ever wished to die? Well, now I longed to live.

The valley stretched before my eyes, green and shining like a great emerald. There were splashes of yellow where the buttercups grew, and there were shooting stars, and all the sweet winds of spring.

I remember my first glimpse of myself in a still pool that spring. You may have observed a woman, reft of her love, in your own life, you human things. You may have seen her tears, her anguish, her garb of woe. Then when a few months have gone by, you must have one day had your eyes dazzled by her sudden blossoming out into a new and wonderful beauty. You must have marveled at the color in her cheeks, the brilliancy of her eyes, the warmth of her mouth, the subtle grace of her movements. So it was with me. Life throbbed once more through all my being.

The loneliness grew unbearable.

One day as I lay curled, half-asleep, I heard a step. A moment later a man came close to my heap of stones. I sprang erect, hissing and swelling, for I had not time to escape. He paused and looked at me.

"Beautiful thing!" he said, in a tone of sadness. "Strike, if you will. I shall not harm you."

He threw himself on the ground near me. He was unarmed. Ashamed, but incredulous, I dropped back into a coil, and lay watching him, motionless, save for the slow sliding of my head from side to side. He looked at me steadily.

"That a snake could be so beautiful!" he said, in the same sad tone. He reached out his hand with a caressing motion. "Come," he said, "we are alone. Let us be friends."

His eyes drew me with an irresistible fascination. A new, strange feeling stirred me. I uncoiled, and slid to him with graceful undulations. He laid his hand upon me, and both of us were without fear.

Days passed. I learned gradually that he had come there to forget a woman. He pitched a tent near the stones and dwelt there. I followed him everywhere. I never permitted him to get out of my sight.

One night when the moon hung large and yellow on the violet breast of the sky, he threw himself upon his blankets, and held his hands out to me.

"I am sorrowful to-night, Lilith," he said—he called me that. "Come close, closer, my beautiful. Make me forget—other nights."

In that hour, as I slid into the warmth of his breast, I knew that sometime, somewhere, I had been a woman. What had been my sin, then, when I was a woman, that I should have been recreated in this form? Beautiful, oh, beautiful! Yes; but unfitted for any save the lower loves, and this love was of the highest; the love of woman for man.

I shrank, quivering, from the memory of that other love. So must a woman shrink, loathing and shuddering, from the memory of such a love when, through some great, exalting passion, a new and noble soul has been born in her.

Having no arms and no lips, I curled close, close, into his breast, and around his splendid throat I drew my throbbing coils. Then it was that he said: "Lilith, what eyes you have! They are like two little lamps of crimson fire, glowing in the dusk."

All that night and many, many others, I slept there.

In the gorgeous pomp of an August dawn the man awoke, with the snake twined about him. The woman he had been trying to forget stood beside him. He flung the snake from him and stretched out trembling arms to the woman.

"Dearest!" she cried. "Did you think I could bear it? I knew better. I have followed you, and I shall never leave you again!" She sank to him, sobbing, and laid her mouth upon his.

He put his arms around her and held her there silently.

Suddenly she screamed and sprang erect.

"A snake! Kill it! Kill it!"

It was coiled, hissing, to spring at her. Already his hand was on his revolver. There was a flash. The woman screamed again. The snake was dead. In a moment the man had flung it outside the tent, and caught her, sobbing and trembling, to his breast.

"O, my dearest," he cried, "if the reptile had struck you, I should have turned the revolver on myself. O, my beloved, this accursed time without you! Give me your arms, your lips. Let us make up for this awful time apart!"

BRESNAHAN BOSS PASS RECEIVER

NEW CARDINAL MANAGER THE BEST GUESSER AGAINST NATIONAL LEAGUE PITCHERS.

RECEIVED TOTAL OF 91 GIFTS

Interesting Statistics Gathered from Records of Secretary Heydler—Seven Men Walked Four Times in One Game—Makeup of League's Most Formidable List of Strollers.

When Manager McGraw of the Giants turned over Roger Bresnahan to St. Louis for Johnny Murray, "Bugs" Raymond, and Admiral Schlei, he let the Cardinals get the best pass receiver in the National league. At least, last season the Toledo sleuth strolled to first base over the four ball and hit by pitcher lines oftener than any other player in the H. Clay Pulliam organization.

The new manager of the Red Caps received a total of 91 gifts from the flingers in 1908, drawing 84 complimentaries, and being hit in various parts of his anatomy on seven occasions. Fred Tenney, his fellow teammate, trudged just as often as did Roger, but was only vaccinated five times.

Twenty-three athletes got to the first sack fifty or more times through the wildness or foxiness of the pitchers, for often a brainy twirler would deliberately pass a heavy sticker in order to get a chance at a batsman who was supposed to be weaker in his wielding of the willow. Of the 23 men five wore Pittsburg livery, New York having four men in the list, Chicago, Cincinnati, Boston and Philadelphia three each, and Brooklyn two. St. Louis had no man in the half century list, Bohemian Konetchy getting just 49 free trips.

Johnny Evers was the most successful of the Cubs in prying passes out of the opposition flingers. He secured 76, five of which were of the Red Cross kind, and his rank was third. Jimmy Sheckard, ranking sixth, was Chicago's second best man. He procured 69. Frank Chance, with 50, was the Cubs' other honor man. Incidentally, the peerless leader received more wild pitches in his frame than any of his associates on the west side team. Dan McGann topped the National league in this respect, being winged 18 times.

Roy Thomas of Pirates had one of his ribs broken on July 23 by getting in the way of one of Nap Rucker's inshoots. A hit by pitcher that was costly for the flinger occurred in the morning game of July 4 on the Polo grounds. Within reach of equaling the Lee Richmond-John Ward-Cy Young-Addie Joss stunt of preventing a man from reaching first in a nine-inning game, George Wiltse of the Giants winged George McQuillan of the Phillies, who was the twenty-seventh batsman. New York George had two strikes on Philadelphia George at the time.

Team leaders in reaching first base through the pitchers' wildness were, besides Bresnahan for the Giants and Evers for the Cubs, Clarke for Pittsburg, Huggins for Cincinnati, McGann for Boston, Magee for Philadelphia, Jordan for Brooklyn, and Konetchy for St. Louis. Seven players walked four times in one contest. The athletes credited with such a stunt were Miller, Huggins, John Evers, Roger Bresnahan, Arthur Devlin, Roy Thomas, Hans Wagner and "Peaches" Graham.

The Giants got more passes and had more batters hit than any other team. The team totals:

	B.B.	H.P.B.	Tot.
New York	530	70	600
Boston	436	51	487
Chicago	445	32	477
Pittsburg	422	35	457
Cincinnati	403	43	446
Philadelphia	346	52	398
Brooklyn	342	27	369
St. Louis	287	43	330
Totals	3,211	353	3,564

This would be the makeup of the National league's most formidable team of pitcher workers. Its membership, it will be noted, is principally confined to players whose salaries were paid last season by John T. Brush and C. Webb Murphy. Pittsburg has one representative on the combination—Roy Thomas. The team:

Player, Club, Position.	C.B.	H.P.B.	Ttl.
Bresnahan, N. Y, catcher	84	7	91
Wiltse, N. Y., pitcher	12	1	13
Tenney, N. Y., first base	84	5	89
Evers, Chicago, sec. base	71	5	76
Devlin, N. Y., third base	63	12	75
Bridwell, N. Y., shortstop	56	6	62
Sheckard, Chicago, left f'ld	67	2	69
Thomas, Pittsburg, c. field	59	4	63
Magee, Phila., right field	52	11	63
Totals	548	53	601

Secretary Heydler of the National league probably will incorporate the bases on balls-hit batsmen statistics into the next records, making not only more work for himself but for the official scorers. In 1887 a base on balls was counted as a hit. Had this mode of scoring been in vogue in the last campaign Hans Wagner would have had a batting average of .398.

Gotch and "Hack" Will Meet.

According to dispatches received at Melbourne, Australia, Frank Gotch and George Hackenschmidt have finally agreed to get together in another bout and to wrestle for the world's heavyweight title in that city November 8 next. Although several names have been given as being interested in promoting the affair, it is believed that Hugh D. McIntosh, who attended to the Burns-Johnson bout, intends holding the match in his arena at Rushcutters' Bay.

One of the Important Duties of Physicians and the Well-Informed of the World is to learn as to the relative standing and reliability of the leading manufacturers of medicinal agents, as the most eminent physicians are the most careful as to the uniform quality and perfect purity of remedies prescribed by them, and it is well known to physicians and the Well-Informed generally that the California Fig Syrup Co., by reason of its correct methods and perfect equipment and the ethical character of its product, has attained to the high standing in scientific and commercial circles which is accorded to successful and reliable houses only, and, therefore, that the name of the Company has become a guarantee of the excellence of its remedy.

TRUTH AND QUALITY

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing, therefore we wish to call the attention of all who would enjoy good health, with its blessings, to the fact that it involves the question of right living with all the term implies. With proper knowledge of what is best each hour of recreation, of enjoyment, of contemplation and of effort may be made to contribute to that end and the use of medicines dispensed with generally to great advantage, but as in many instances a simple, wholesome remedy may be invaluable if taken at the proper time, the California Fig Syrup Co. feels that it is alike important to present truthfully the subject and to supply the one perfect laxative remedy which has won the appoval of physicians and the world-wide acceptance of the Well-Informed, because of the excellence of the combination, known to all, and the original method of manufacture, which is known to the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent of family laxatives, and as its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well-Informed of the world to be the best of natural laxatives, we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package, whether you simply call for—Syrup of Figs—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—is the one laxative remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. and the same heretofore known by the name—Syrup of Figs—which has given satisfaction to millions. The genuine is for sale by all leading druggists throughout the United States, in original packages of one size only, the regular price of which is fifty cents per bottle.

Every bottle is sold under the general guarantee of the Company, filed with the Secretary of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., that the remedy is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the Food and Drugs Act, June 30th, 1906.

TURN ABOUT FAIR PLAY.

But Somehow Mrs. Newlywed Couldn't See the Point.

A young friend of mine, a jolly, convivial sort of a chap, got married recently, and at the end of the first week, upon receiving his salary of $20, he went home, gave his wife $18, and kept two for himself.

Of course, she thought that was lovely, but to her astonishment at the end of the second week he handed her only two dollars, keeping $20 for himself.

"Now, see here, John," she said, indignantly, "how do you suppose I am going to manage on two dollars a week?"

"I don't know, I am sure, my dear," he answered, sweetly. "I had a terrible time of it last week, myself."

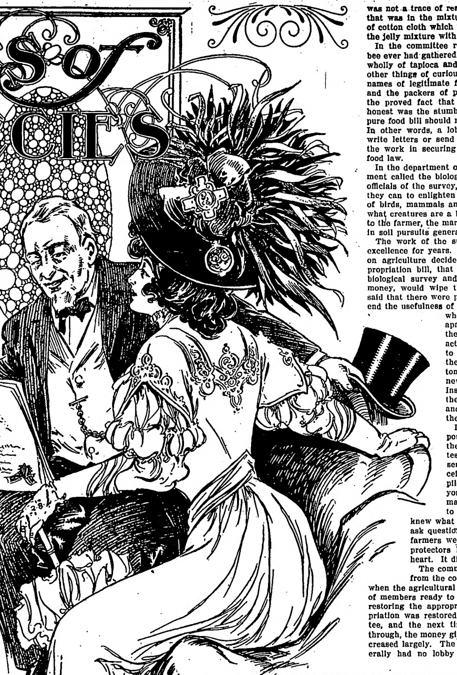
LOBBYISTS of Two SPECIES

BY EDWARD B. CLARK.

DRAWINGS BY DEARBORN MELVILL.

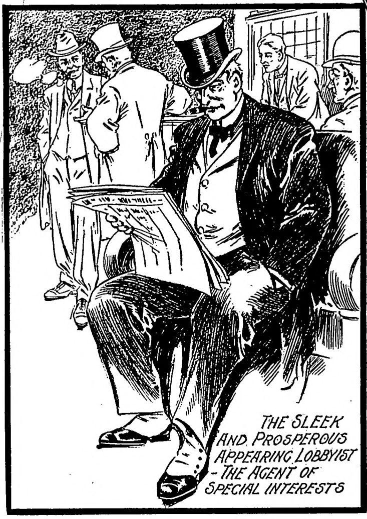


WASHINGTON.—Whenever the statement is made that during the sessions of congress Washington is full of lobbyists, it seems that the general impression created is that a horde of men bent on preventing the passage of good legislation has descended upon the capitol. The word lobbyists seemingly has come to mean only one thing. In truth lobbyists are of two kinds, the kind that wants to prevent the passage of legislation that is inimical to private interest, and the kind that wants to secure the passage of legislation that will redound or that it is supposed will redound to the public good.

In the hotels of this city it is an easy matter to pick out the individuals of one species of lobbyist. They bear the ear-marks of their business and it may be said that one of these ear marks ordinarily is in appearance of sleek prosperity. It is impossible to pick out the individuals of the other species of lobbyist unless you happen to be the keenest kind of a judge of human nature. In some instances the second class of lobbyists has the unmistakable air of the philanthropist while in other cases their companion lobbyists look simply like ordinary everyday American citizens, men of business and men of the professions and in many cases women.

No lobbyist, however wrongful may be his purpose in coming to Washington, fulfills the somewhat widespread idea of a man whose pockets are bulging with bank notes with the corners showing in order to tempt some member ofcongress to forget his duty to his constituents and to his country. It is a much harder matter to corrupt a congressman than unfor-tunately some people believe. The lobbyist who would make a direct offer of money except in rare cases would get a blow harder than any cash that he might happen to possess.

The lobbyist who thinks that some corporate interest is to be injured by prospective legislation and who has been hired to represent that interest at the capitol uses argument and not money, and he depends for the strength of his argument largely upon the fact that laws passed to regulate the business which he represents may possibly have a bad effect upon the commercial life of the specific district which the member approached represents. It is true that dinners are given at times to members of congress by the lobbyists on behalf of special interests. It is doubted if these dinners or the pleading words which pass between the courses and after the coffee have any particular weight. The ordinary congressman who wants to stay in congress realizes that he has a duty to his constituents and that if he doesn't do it he probably will have to stay at home instead of buying a ticket every winter for the national capitol.



THE SLEEK AND PROSPEROUS APPEARING LOBBYIST - THE AGENT OF SPECIAL INTERESTS

Some time ago there was established in Washington what was called "The People's Lobby." There were several active men who, on behalf of this organization, watched legislation and kept the country informed as to what, in their opinion, was good or bad in laws that had been proposed for passage. This people's lobby virtually has passed out of existence, but there is a greater people's lobby which has been in existence ever since the country was founded, and which is in existence today, and which probably will last as long as democracy lasts. This lobby is public sentiment, and a dozen times within the last few years it has overridden all the arts, the pleadings, the arguments, and the threats of the individual lobbyists who have sought to thwart it. An experience of some years in Washington goes to show that the representatives of the people in the great mass are honest men and that the will of the country outweighs with them any influence or any money that can be brought to bear or used by the lobbyist who is working for selfish ends.

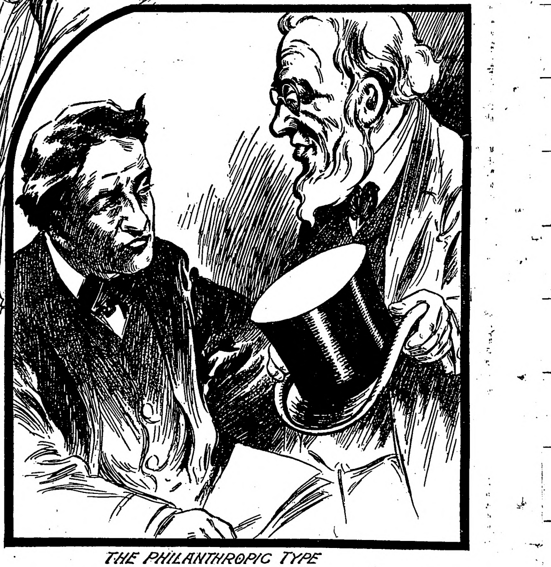
It is not the intention to attempt to discuss the rights or wrongs of any specific pieces of legislation which have passed congress, but the lobbying attempts pro and con that have been made to prevent or to secure the enactment of national laws may be recounted without prejudice.

It has been said that there are women lobbyists. The particular kind of women lobbyists which has been pictured many times has no existence, or if she exists she keeps herself so well in hiding that she remains unknown to the persons whose duty it is to write the news and the news comment of the day. There are other women lobbyists, however, women who are moved to lobby by what they think is right, though admittedly thousands of their countrymen and their country women disagree with them in specific cases in which they have exercised their activities.

The woman lobbyist as a rule is moved by high moral considerations, as she views them, to influence legislation. Take the case of the canteen in the army posts of the country, for example. It was the woman lobbyist who abolished the canteen. The women who worked to this end did not do one-tenth part of their lobbying in Washington. It was done largely at home. The women thought that the canteen was an ever present temptation to the soldier to drunkenness, and while it is true that most of the congressmen at heart disagreed with the contention the women carried the day and the canteen was abolished.

The persons who were instrumental in securing the passage of the law which forbade the sale of light wines and beer at army posts, moved as they were by a high moral even if a possibly mistaken impulse, were lobbyists just as much as are the men who strive to check legislation that is going to hurt their pocketbooks while it is going to do good to the country at large. The intention is only to show that "lobbyist" is not necessarily a word of contempt.

The pure food law when it was in process of consideration was productive of the greatest lobbying activities possibly ever known in congress. The lobbyists were present and at a distance, but present or absent, they worked day and night with voice or by letter and telegram to bring about the ends that they desired. The manufacturers, or many of them at least, maintained that the law as proposed was altogether too drastic, while those who took the view opposed to that of the manufacturers declared that the law could not be made too severe.



THE PHILANTHROPIC TYPE

During the time of the consideration of the pure food law in the room of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce the most powerful lobbyist that appeared on behalf of the measure was on the center table. It was a collection of prepared foods gathered from various parts of the country and which did not live up to the labels that were on the outside of the packages. There are, and were, plenty of proper foods on the market, but the foods which the committee had assembled, if foods they might be called, were of the kind that nobody would want to eat. Representative Mann of Illinois was in charge of the pure food bill, and he presided over the display that made the committee room look like a grocery shop. Mr. Mann had some fruit jelly or jam on exhibition that was marked as being the pure product. In reality the stuff was composed of some sticky substance sweetened and then colored with a dye. There was not a trace of real fruit in its composition. The dye that was in the mixture colored indelibly a great piece of cotton cloth which was steeped in a small quantity of the jelly mixture with water.

In the committee room there was "honey" which no bee ever had gathered. There were "pepper corns" made wholly of tapioca and lampblack, and there were many other things of curious mixture masquerading under the names of legitimate food products. The manufacturers and the packers of perfectly pure goods admitted that the proved fact that some of their brethren were not honest was the stumbling block of their hopes that the pure food bill should not be passed in too drastic a form. In other words, a lobby that was mute and could not write letters or send telegrams did the major share of the work in securing the passage of the national pure food law.

In the department of agriculture there is a sub-department called the biological survey. It is the duty of the officials of the survey, who are all scientists, to do what they can to enlighten the country concerning the habits of birds, mammals and insects, to let it be known just what creatures are a benefit and just what are a menace to the farmer, the market gardener, and to those engaged in soil pursuits generally.

The work of the survey has been recognized for its excellence for years. At one time the house committee on agriculture decided, in framing the agricultural appropriation bill, that it would omit all mention of the biological survey and thus by a failure to appropriate money, would wipe the survey out of existence. It is said that there were personal reasons for the attempt to end the usefulness of this bureau of the government, but whether this is true or not is a thing apart. As soon as it was known that the committee had decided to kill the activity of the scientists by a failure to report to the house a measure for their support, some of the Washington correspondents telegraphed the news of the matter to their papers. Instantly the bird protection societies, the sportsmen, the farmers' institutes and the farmers individually all over the country became busy.

Letters and telegrams of protest poured in on the committee. Nor was the committee alone the object of protest. Every senator and every representative in congress began to receive letters and telegrams which piled up until they were almost beyond the power of reading unless the man gave all the time at his disposal to the task. Members who hardly knew what the biological survey was began to ask questions. They wanted to know why the farmers were so interested, and why the bird protectors had taken the matter so much to heart. It did not take them long to find out.

The committee was unmoved by the appeals from the country, but congress was moved, and when the agricultural bill was reported there were scores of members ready to insert a paragraph in the measure restoring the appropriation for the survey. The appropriation was restored despite the action of the committee, and the next time that an agricultural bill went through, the money given to support the scientists was increased largely. The farmers and the nature lovers generally had no lobby in Washington at that time, but they had a great lobby at a distance, and the lobbyists succeeded in doing their good work.

Recently there came to Washington on a matter connected with the rights of certain Indians formerly on the Rosebud reservation, an Indian whose name originally was Quick Bear, but who now is known as Reuben Quick Bear. Some time ago it was proposed by a syndicate that it buy a large tract of land from the Indians at $5 an acre. Afterward the land doubled in value. Reuben Quick Bear feared that when the reservation was closed Uncle Sam would not allow a right and proper price for the holdings which the Indians were to give up. Reuben began a lobby on behalf of his brethren. He wrote this letter, thereby showing that he knew something of the ways of a certain class of white men:

"A shyster lawyer named —— is in Washington stating that our land is not worth more than $2.50 an acre. He lives in —— and has been sent by the people there to help beat us in this land deal."

It is conceded in Washington that the most effective kind of lobbying is that which is done by the people by means of letters and telegrams. Of course, the communications must come in such numbers as to convince the congressmen that the whole country is aroused.

MINNESOTA SOLONS

HOUSE PASSES THE 40 PER CENT ASSESSMENT BILL

Leavitt Exonerated, House Voting to Have No Investigation of His Office.

St. Paul, Minn., March 24.—But one of the three tax commission bills considered as a special order in the house this afternoon survived the ordeal, the bill providing that all property shall be listed at its full valuation and then assessed uniformly at 40 per cent for taxation purposes. There were many attempts to amend it, but all failed.

The tax commission bill for a $200 personal property exemption was then discussed, but on roll call only secured 56 ayes to 38 nays, 60 being necessary for passage. Next came the commission bill for county assessors, but on roll call the measure only drew 51 yeas to 55 nays.

The board of control, especially S. W. Leavitt, its chairman, was exonerated from all criticism by the house today, when it voted, 80 to 21, to adopt the report of the majority of the public accounts committee, which made an exhaustive investigation of the board and its relation to the public examiner.

L. C. Spooner introduced a bill in the house today providing for creation of a commission consisting of the governor, auditor, and attorney general, to make a two years' investigation of drainage and waterways and water power improvements in the Minnesota river valley, and tributary stream valleys, and of canal connections between the important lakes of northern Minnesota, leading into the Mississippi.

On motion of C. A. Johnson of St. Peter, the senate today advanced the legislative salary bill from general orders to the calendar, where it will doubtless pass. This bill permits legislators to draw $1,000 salary legislative year, instead of $500 each year of their two year terms. Bills passed in the senate this afternoon included the following: By Rines, for reservation of state water powers and mineral rights; by Wilson, making marriage a civil contract and refusing future legal recognition of common law marriages; by Vall, to exempt bequests for benevolent or charitable purposes from the state inheritance tax.

The senate tax committee today took up the Bjorge iron ore tonnage tax bill for preliminary consideration. H. D. Bjorge stated he would like an hour and a half or two hours to speak for the bill. It was decided that the tax committee will give the bill its first hearing in the senate chamber one week from tonight, at which time Mr. Bjorge will be allowed the entire evening if he desires it. Senator George R. Laybourn of Duluth reminded the committee that representatives of the Duluth commercial club, iron range town residents, and others, desired to be heard, and secured assurance that they will be given full opportunity to express themselves at a later date.

St. Paul, Minn., March 25.—P. M. McGarry's bill for a new normal at Cass Lake won a decided victory in the house today, while the Hinds bill for a normal at some point in northwestern Minnesota to be determined by the normal board, was indefinitely postponed.

Half in jest and half in earnest, the house today suspended its rules and by a vote of 82 to 12, passed a bill introduced by Mr. Kneeland of Minneapolis and Mr. Selb of St. Paul, calling upon the governor to appoint a commission of five Minneapolis residents and five St. Paul residents, to investigate the feasibility of uniting the two cities as one municipality, and to report a bill to the legislature of 1911 with this aim in view.

The Alvin Rowe bill was considered by the house as a special order this afternoon, but was briefly disposed of. This is the bill which by its provisions aimed at prohibiting the establishment of the Armour plant at New Brighton. C. E. Stone of St. Paul moved the bill be indefinitely postponed, and the motion prevailed. A compromise bill will be introduced, probably tomorrow, authorizing the state board of health to make sanitary regulations relative to packing plants.

The house tax committee bill, creating a stamp tax of 1 cent for every $100 deal on any stock exchange or board of trade, was passed by the house by a vote of 72 to 43. Mr. Kneeland of Minneapolis declared the bill to be as unfair and unjust as the stamp tax on tea in Colonial days. Mr. F. B. Wright of Hennepin told the house that the bill was absolutely unconstitutional, as it imposed a tax on grain brought in from other states; but the house stood for the bill just the same. The house also passed the forestry committee bill of the senate, proposing a constitutional amendment to exempt from taxation all lands used for reforestration until the timber reaches 12 inches in diameter.

Senator T. M. Pugh of Duluth introduced a bill in the senate today for establishment of public tuberculosis sanatoria, and providing for their maintenance. The bill permits each county to establish such an institution, or two or more counties to unite for the purpose. The county commissioners are authorized to appoint a governing board of three for the institution, one of whom shall be a physician. All three must be approved by the state board of health. They are to engage a superintendent of the institution and such other help as is necessary. The superintendent shall serve as secretary of the commission. The commissioners shall be appointed to serve one, two, and three years respectively, and thereafter for three-year terms. Each board of county commissioners is permitted to expend not to exceed $20,000 for an institution, and levy four-tenths of a mill tax for maintenance of the institution thereafter.

Senator T. E. Cashman's distance tariff bill—practically a duplicate of the bill he introduced two years ago—was killed in the senate this afternoon by a vote of 23 yeas and 28 nays. The death blows to the bill were in the shape of legal opinions from Attorneys E. T. Young, former attorney general, and T. D. O'Brien, now representing the state in the railroad rates cases now pending in the courts, and by Railroad Commissioner C. F. Staples, holding that the passage of the bill would materially injure the state's case because of radically changing the very rates which are being litigated. Senator Cashman pleaded that existing rates are very inadequate, discriminating between localities, and unjust. Senator Peterson of Moorhead also spoke in favor of the bill.

St. Paul, Minn., March 26.—There will be no reapportionment this session. This was settled by the senate today killing the reapportionment bill introduced by the committee on that subject, within thirty minutes after the measure put in an appearance.

The senate had the three new land department bills up for consideration today. All three were killed. The Nelson bill providing for an elective land commissioner, received but 5 aye votes, to 36 against it. The Works bill, providing for a land department board to be named by the governor—the democratic measure—received 15 aye votes to 35 opposes. The Garfield bill, establishing a land department board of three deputies to be named by the auditor, secured 27 votes in its favor to 25 opposed—32 being necessary for passage.

The house today passed the commodity rate bill of Senator Cashman, and also a resolution by John Lennon of Minneapolis calling for a committee of five members of the house to be named by the speaker, and 3 members of the senate to be named by the lieutenant governor, who shall serve as a joint commission representing the legislature to treat with the railroads as to the settlement of all pending litigation between the roads and the state.

The commodity rate bill is the same as the commodity rate law, except that it eliminates the severe penalty clause which the United States supreme court held made the act unconstitutional.

The bill carried by a vote of 85 to 1—Lennon alone being in the negative. The Lennon resolution then passed by a vote of 64 to 31.

The house today adopted a lengthy resolution presented by C. M. Bendixen, of Morgan, which deplores the proposed reduction from 30 to 15 cents of the import duty on barley, as being against the interests of barley growers in the northwest, and of such terminal cities as Minneapolis, Duluth, Milwaukee and Chicago.

The J. N. Johnson bill relative to the floating of railroad stocks and bonds, was passed by the house this afternoon by a vote of 63 to 44. The bill requires that stock and bond issues must be approved by the railroad and warehouse commission, must be sold at par, and the money thus raised used exclusively for the purposes cited at the time the stock of bonds are floated.

The house, on motion of Mr. Melby, voted to reconsider its action of a day ago when it killed the tax commission's bill for a system of county assessors throughout the state; and on motion of Mr. Rines, voted to reconsider its action whereby it had killed the $200 tax exemption bill, another tax commission measure. Adjournment was then immediately taken without further disposition of the measures.

The house today also voted to indefinitely postpone the 8 per cent. tax bill for freight lines, and the 6 per cent. gross earnings tax bill for railroads in general, it being the general belief that their passage would materially hamper the state's chances of winning the pending rate cases.

FEAR FOR KIDNAPERS

BOYLES TAKEN TO PITTSBURG FOR SAFE KEEPING.

INDICTED AT CLEVELAND

Will Be Tried for Blackmail If They Fail of Conviction in Pennsylvania —Identified by Whitla Boy.

Pittsburg, Pa. — Fearing for the safety of their prisoners if they were taken to Sharon or the county seat at Mercer, officers brought James H. Boyle and his wife, accused of kidnaping Willie Whitla, to the Allegheny county jail here.

They were brought here in a special Pullman car from Cleveland by way of Youngstown and New Castle, over the Pittsburg & Lake Erie railroad. The prisoners were guarded in their car by 16 detectives and officers.

It was the unanimous opinion of the officers engaged on the case that it would be safer not to take any chances by exposing their prisoners to the wrath of the Sharon populace.

Indicted at Cleveland.

The Cleveland police have a club over the heads of the Boyles in a joint indictment charging them with blackmail. This charge is based on the payment of $10,000 ransom by J. P. Whitla for the recovery of his son in that city last Monday. This indictment will be used by the Cleveland officials in the event that the case here fails of conviction. The Boyles did not fight extradition to this state.

Boy Identifies Kidnapers.

Cleveland, O.—All doubt that the man and woman arrested Tuesday night are the kidnapers of Willie Whitla, the Sharon (Pa.) boy whose father paid $10,000 ransom for his recovery, was dispelled Wednesday, when the lad, without hesitation, identified the prisoners when he faced them in the police station.

Willie said the man who gave the name of James H. Boyle was the one who took him from school and carried him through the tortuous route to Cleveland, then to Ashtabula, back to this city, and placed him in the house in the east end where he was held until the money was paid. Willie also declared that the woman was the one who cared for him at the house where he was detained and who acted the part of a nurse.

Boyle said the woman was his wife. The police have no other identification of the couple than the names given. Boyle is said to reside in Sharon and is a plumber by trade. He is said to have a widowed mother, four brothers and a sister.

The woman, who is accredited with being the wife of Boyle, declared soon after her arrest that her identification would cause a sensation in Sharon.

When the identification was completed Mr. Whitla would say nothing regarding the woman. He said he knew Boyle slightly.

When Boyle was taken before the boy Chief Kohler asked Willie if he had ever seen the man before.

"Sure," said Willie, brightly; "why that is the man I left Sharon with. He took me to Cleveland, then to Ashtabula and back to Cleveland."

When Willie concluded Boyle was taken back to his cell and the woman was brought in.

Immediately Willie walked up to her and extending his hands, said:

"How do you do?"

"Hello, Willie," the woman replied, as she placed her hand upon his head and caressed him for an instant.

The boy then stepped back to his father and was asked several questions by the chief of police.

"Yes, I know her," he said, "she was the nurse who took care of me in Cleveland. She told me I was sick and in a hospital. I saw her a whole lot as she was with me most all of the time."

Whitla Abductor Chicago Woman.

Mercer, Pa.—Heavily manacled to Sheriff Chess and guarded by several detectives, James Boyle, one of the kidnapers of little Willie Whitla, was brought here Friday from Pittsburg and lodged in the Mercer county jail. His wife, who has been identified as Anna McDermott, daughter of William McDermott, a former Chicago fireman, it is said, will be brought here from Pittsburg Saturday and the couple will be formally arraigned on a charge of kidnaping in a few days.

Boyle feared violence in his arrival in Mercer and on the journey from Pittsburg asked Sheriff Chess if he thought the crowd would harm him.

Original "Affinity's" Wife Sues.

Middletown, N. Y. — Ferdinand Pinney Earle, artist, poet and foremost exponent of the "affinity" idea, was served Friday with papers in an action brought by Mrs. Earle, formerly Miss Julia Kuttner of New York city, for annulment of their marriage. Mrs. Earle alleges that Earle is of unsound mind.

VINCENNES MYSTERY SOLVED

THAT MRS. CULBERTSON ENDED OWN LIFE IS PROVEN.

Mrs. Longwell of Chicago Vindicated by Developments in Strange Death of Former Nurse.

Vincennes, Ind.—That Mrs. Jessie Lee Overton Culbertson was not slain by a jealous rival, but ended her own life, has been proven by evidence discovered by the police Friday.

Of this there is no doubt, and her husband and relatives have tearfully acknowledged that their suspicions that she was killed at the instigation of another woman for jealous revenge were unfounded. The body of a miniature skeleton which had been attached to the skull found by Mrs. Culbertson when she was discovered gagged in the shed near her home last Wednesday, after swallowing carbolic acid, was picked up near the scene of the tragedy.

It lay concealed beneath a pile of debris where the disheartened woman had placed it after she removed the head and attached it to the threatening letter which she thought would lead the authorities to believe she was murdered for revenge. This toy skeleton Mrs. Culbertson is known to have had in her possession months ago. Positive proof that the suicide wrote the anonymous threatening letters to herself has also been established. A letter she wrote to her husband at Bridgeport, Ill., is written on stationery similar to that upon which was penned the anonymous notes. The water mark on the paper is the same on all the anonymous notes as that on the stationery found in the dead woman's trunk. When the water mark was showed to the bereaved husband and his parents they shook their heads and silently yielded to the revelation that there had been no murder committed.

It was Mrs. Etta Longwell, 708 Madison street, Chicago, formerly of Vincennes, whom the Culbertsons and Joshua Brazelton, the stepfather of the young husband, had been led to suspect, by the despondent Jessie, sought to injure her. Now they want to have it understood that if they were mistaken that the accused Chicago woman may [illegible] proof that their charges to the police were unfounded.

"Her name should be cleared by all means," said Culbertson. "I cannot understand why Jessie should kill herself. She was strange, though, now that all this has happened to recall many things. She never would tell me about her past except in a general way. She said her father and mother were dead. I have heard that she formerly lived in Waco, Tex., and in Dublin, Tex., where she is said to have a brother. I have tried to communicate with relatives, but cannot get any word from them."

While Culbertson was talking, Chief of Police Evans and Detective James Hughes opened a letter written to him by his wife before they were married. This letter displayed the despondent nature of the girl.

MINERS WILL NOT STRIKE.

Decide to Remain at Work After April 1.

Scranton, Pa.—Reaffirming the demands already presented to the operators, the anthracite miners Wednesday night voted to remain at work after April 1 allowing the district executive boards of the hard-coal fields of Pennsylvania to continue their efforts to get an agreement satisfactory to the men.

The miners were instructed by the convention to continue at work until such time as they are otherwise notified by the official representatives of the three anthracite districts, and the executive boards were instructed to negotiate an agreement upon such basis as the boards in their judgment believe the conditions warrant.

A resolution to ask President Taft to appoint a commission to arbitrate differences was adopted by the convention and referred to the executive boards to put it into effect at their discretion.

GEN. CASTRO SAILS FOR HOME.

Former President of Venezuela Intends to Defy His Enemies.

Havre. — Gen. Cipriano Castro, former president of Venezuela, was a passenger on the steamer Gaudeloupe of the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, which sailed Friday from this port for Colon and other Latin-American points. Though Gen. Castro refused to tell where he intended to leave the steamer, or to discuss his plans, it was learned from a member of his party that the deposed dictator means to make his way back to Caracas and there confront his enemies, who have declared that he will be arrested on charges of conspiracy to bring about the murder of his successor, President Gomez. The several staterooms occupied by Castro and his party cost him $1,040.

"Like Francis I., all is lost save honor," Castro declared. "I am going back to Venezuela. My country needs me and my mission is there."

Minnesota Miners Are Hurt.

Coleraine—Three accidents of a serious nature occurred at the Canisteo mine here. Steve Bruzitch, a young Austrian, employed as pitman at Shovel No. 1,382, was caught by a half frozen mass that fell from the bank above the shovel and his entire body was crushed save his head. It was necessary to chain the mass and hoist it up with the shovel before Burzitch could be removed. He is also suffering from internal injuries, but will probably recover. Dominic Allo, an Italian trammer in No. 2 shaft, had his leg broken above the ankle by a dump cart dumping unexpectedly while he was riding on it. James Murphy, a cranesman, was the victim of the third accident. He and the shovel crew were at the bottom of the pit repairing a broken chain when a falling chunk caught his leg against a crane rod, amputating it at the knee.

Tax Judgments Invalid.

St. Cloud—In the case of J. A. Stanton of Sauk Rapids against A. D. Davidson et al., which is an action to quiet title of plaintiff to 240 acres of land in Morrison county, judgment will be entered in favor of Mr. Stanton, quieting his title and for costs, the court having held that the tax judgment of which the defendant Davidson claimed the title to the land was void on its face. The grounds upon which this tax judgment was held void, if sustained by the supreme court, will probably result in the invalidation of every tax title made under the so-called forfeited sale of 1909.

Family's Escape Is Marvel.

Rochester—The worst fire in this city in years totally destroyed the beautiful home of Frank Chute with all its contents, and the escape of the family from the burning building was miraculous. The fire originated in the cellar, and it was not known until a neighbor saw the flames about midnight. Mrs. Chute awoke, hearing something fall, and found her room completely filled with smoke. She called her husband and they hastily secured their children and made their escape. All their clothing, furniture and many valuable keepsakes were consumed by the fire. The loss will be about $6,000.

Kintop Murder Suspect Freed.

St. Cloud—Joseph Kennedy, charged with the murder of Annie Kintop, at Randall on April 10, 1905, was discharged by Justice Gaudet. He was discharged on the evidence of George Jackson and John Wilson, two Park Rapids lumbermen. They testified that the defendant was working for them in the northern Minnesota woods at the time the murder was committed. This testimony completely upset the state's case and Kennedy was immediately discharged.

Will Join Paris Dwarf Colony.

Waseca, Minn.—Don Ward, a midget 20 years of age, whose early home was in this city, stopped off here to visit relatives while on his way from Missoula, Mont., to Paris. Mr. Ward has traveled extensively through the northwest and is now engaged to join a company of midgets gathered from all parts of the world, who will form a colony near Paris and co-operate in show work.

Train Mangles Farmer.

Waseca—Dave T. Johnson, a farmer 35 years old, living five miles north of town, was killed by a Minneapolis & St. Louis train on a crossing a mile north of town. The body was not found until this morning and was brought to this city. His head was smashed, arms and neck broken, and one hand cut off. He was not married.

NEWS NOTES.

Wadena—The jury in the case of the state against Emil Waldo disagreed after being out for several hours. Judge Taylor discharged the jury. It is probable that the case will be re-tried at the next term of court. Waldo was tried on the charge of abusing a 16-year-old girl.

Carlton—An examination of the accounts of Peter W. Ehr, treasurer of Carlton county, made by M. F. Kain, assistant public examiner for the state, disclosed a shortage in the cash accounts of $3,852.95. Ehr has resigned as treasurer, and the county board installed William Gallagher of Carlton in the office. The bondsmen of Mr. Ehr held a meeting and agreed to make good the shortage. A committee of three was appointed by the sureties to assess and collect the total amount of the shortage reported by the examiner.

Rochester—L. S. Overholt has been re-elected superintendent of the city schools.

Rochester—The inheritance tax on the estate of the late T. L. Fishback amounted to $507.68.

Hastings—Clarence, the 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Sommers, died from spinal meningitis.

Rochester—Thomas Mangner died today at the age of 73. He leaves 12 children. Michael Bannon died at the age of 81 today.

Coleraine—The boathouse of the Ingalls Motor Boat company was destroyed by fire, involving a loss of $2,000, with $1,000 insurance.

Lake Crystal—The straight citizens' ticket, with G. W. Neff as president, was elected yesterday. License was defeated by a vote of 99 to 142.

Two Harbors, Minn.—A rural telephone company is being organized by farmers north of this city along the state road. Shares will be sold at $25 each.

Lake Crystal—The city has just completed a system of waterworks with 100-foot standpipe. The extension of the mains will be commenced early this spring.

Duluth—Asa Tark was robbed on Lake avenue by two highwaymen, who took all he had, $5, as he was approaching his home. The police arrested Hjalmar Oho and Emil Tamlund.

St. Paul—D. W. Albright, special claim agent for the Rock Island railroad system, celebrated his forty-ninth birthday Thursday, and next day was found dead in his bed in a room at the Merchants hotel. Death is supposed to have been caused by heart trouble. He resided with his family in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and had been in the service of the railroad for nearly 30 years.

Rochester—With $4,000 appropriated by the county board and a share of $3,000 out of the state appropriation, combined with what the Automobile club will raise and what the good roads organization can get together, it is evident that Olmsted county will accomplish much in road building the coming summer. A big meeting is to be held to advance the idea in the city soon.

Minneapolis—Following "The Kentuckian," at the Bijou, Charles Grapewin will make his first local appearance in "The Awakening of Mr. Pipp," a musical concoction of mirth and melody which he has been presenting with great success for the last five or six years. He will be surrounded by a large company of capable people, including a chorus which is noted for its ability to sing and dance.

Minneapolis—Charles Dale, held at the Central station pending an investigation of his confession made to the police, when he asked to be arrested on the charge of forgery, says he spent his first quiet night for seven months. He maintains that he is guilty of forging the signature of his sister, Mrs. C. B. Wolfe, and that he obtained the counter signature of a Minneapolis pastor who had befriended him.

Rochester—At the recent city election, William F. Lenz and Charles M. Johnson, candidates for aldermen of the Third ward, each received 163 votes. The tie was settled at the meeting of the common council by casting lots. Lenz, the democratic candidate, was declared elected over Johnson, the republican candidate and present alderman. The latter has served notice of contest and the ballots will be counted again.

Minneapolis—A wolf fight near the Massolt Bottling works set that part of the town into excitement that brought merchants and customers from stores and gathered a big crowd. A huge timber wolf had wandered into that locality, probably coming down the Northern Pacific track or the river, and was first discovered by a boy who saw the brute hiding under a boxcar. He is thought to have followed the scent of some cattle which were being shipped.

Winthrop—George Moeller, a young man living about four miles north of Winthrop, while driving through town was seriously injured in a runaway. His team became frightened, jerking the pole from the neckyoke and starting down the street at a terrific gait. As a passenger train was slowly pulling in the horses instantly turned to avoid this new barrier. The pole suddenly struck in the ground throwing the occupant into the air. The unfortunate man was picked up in an unconscious condition. It was discovered that he had sustained a broken shoulder and some ribs, also other severe bruises.

THE SUNBEAM.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30, 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam' Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

There does not row seem to be much prospect of getting any re-apportionment bill at this session of the legislature, but it is of no use to blame onr representatives, as they are in the minority and the other represtatives intend to keep them there.

There is now a good prospect that congressman Steenerson will get the morey for dredgeing and improveing Red Lake River, so the work will be done this season, or the dredgein part at least. If we get this river in condition so it can be depended on to run boats on it will provide such a sure and cheap method of getting our produce to market, that the people will soon forget the long distance to rail roads and go to work breakeing up their farms and improveing the country.

And now comes the twin city dailies whith their advice abuot how to speed the state road and bridge fund. Of course they want all the money out into autimobile roads arround the cities, so the farmers of northern Minneesota will have good roads to tramp on when they are driven out of the northern part of the state by bad roads and lack of bridges Foxie guys, them city editors! But we are of the opinien that their road and bridge fund advice will be give no more consideration than it deserve by the legislature

H. A. Barton, the miner socialist lecturer, from Idaho, spoke for two hours, to a fair sized audience, at the school house on Sunday afternoon. Judgeing from his address, Mr. Barton has not spent all his life in the dark mines of Idaho, as he certainly brought out some points that would certainly put any intelligent man to thinking. The farmers gave a surprised look, at him when he gave them the information that a New Champion Binder was now being sold in Constantinople for $30. He made other points equaly as strong, and of course advised voting the socialist ticket as a remedy for all existing evils. Long may Mr. Barton live and continue to enlighten the people, and we are sure that he would have carefull and attentative listners, if the republican Representatives of this state and Nation were his audiance.

The French Guide Is a Public Pest.

Paris has produced a species which is the lowest embodiment of sentient being. It is the "guide." The guide is an evolutionary "throwback," a reversion to type. You must go deep into the muck heap whence the race has risen to find his prototype—back of the ape, back of the tiger, back of the snouting hog, though he partakes of the nature of all of these, to the dim ages when nameless troglodytes treaded in cold lethargy the primordial slime. Somewhere in that category belongs the Paris guide. Interminably these ghosts of dead decencies squeak and gibber in the streets of the city.—Collier's.

A Long Spell of Duty.

A Scotsman had come to London on his way to India and for a few days had time to amuse himself by sightseeing before his departure, says Oscar Ramsay in his "Reminiscences." He had been much struck with the appearance of the mounted sentinels of the horse guards, Whitehall, and bore them in remembrance during his eastern sojourn. On his return after a period of thirty years, on passing the horse guards, he looked up to one, and seeing him, as he thought, unchanged as to horse, position and accouterments, he exclaimed, "Od, freend, ye hae had a lang spell on't sin' I left."

OFFICERS' CHARADE.

One of the Company Was an Expert at the Game.

A general arrived from St. Petersburg in a garrison town in the interior of Russia to hold an inspection of the troops. After the review he stepped into the officers' mess room, where he noticed on the counter a row of bottles, to which, instead of usual labels, white tickets, with a single letter of the alphabet on each, were affixed. The bottles stood in rank and file and in alphabetical order.

"What does this mean?" the general asked the lieutenant who was showing him around.

"That is an officers' charade, your excellency," replied the officer, rather embarrassed.

The general continued his inquiries and elicited the following information: "Each bottle contains a different kind of liquor. At the meeting of the officers' club one of us mixes some of these varieties in a glass so that the initials spell a name, and the older and more experienced members of the club after tasting it guess what it is composed of and name the word intended."

"Very original idea," remarked the general. "And are you able to make a guess of that kind?"

"If it is your excellency's pleasure, I will try," the lieutenant replied.

The general went to the counter and mixed a glass, while the officer stood at the other end of the room with his face to the wall.

"Now, guess what this means," said the general as he handed the glass to the officer.

The latter drank it at one gulp, smacked his tongue and replied:

"That was 'Anna,' your excellency."

"Bravo!" exclaimed the general. "It requires a lot of practice, eh?"

"Your excellency, 'Anna' is easy enough, but there is a captain in our corps who can even guess 'Nebuchadnezzar!'"

LOST BOTH WAYS.

A Toss of a Coin With an Unexpected Result.

A New York travelling man was telling stories of "Toothpick Tom," a famous Bowery character, who lived by his wits as a gambler Tom was known far and wide, not only because of this gambling mania, which was insatiable, but because of his quaint wit and originality. He was an illiterate and could neither read nor write, but in the course of his career he handled perhaps a little more than the average gambler's share of coin raked in across the green cloth.

"One afternoon Tom woke up with a healthy appetite for breakfast," said the New Yorker. "He found on investigating his pockets that he had a five dollar gold piece, and he set out for the nearest cafe to appease his hunger. But just as he was about to enter the restaurant he suddenly recognized the entrance to the next place as the one leading to a gambling house which he had not visited for some time. Tom paused. He felt himself torn between two emotions, hunger and the spirit of gambling.

"Should he risk his gold piece on the faro table or the roulette or should he eat? That was the question. He might make a 'killing,' in which event, of course, he would eat sumptuously. Then, again, he might lose and face starvation. The natural thing for Tom to do was to leave it to chance.

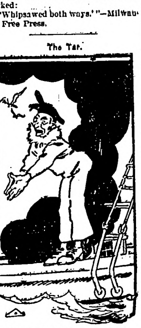
"'Heads up, I eat breakfast; tails, I play,' said Tom and flipped the coin. It was heads up, and Tom scratched his head thoughtfully and said:

"'Well, we'll make it two out of three.'

"Again he tossed up, but this time the gold piece struck a crevice in the sidewalk and disappeared. Tom looked at the crack and philosophically remarked:

"'Whipsawed both ways.'"—Milwaukee Free Press.

The Tar.



"Dod gast!" cried this tar. "Blow me tight!

At times like the present,
A barque is far worse than a bight."

WEBSTER AND CHOATE.

The Latter a Rapid Fire Maxim, the Former a Thirteen Inch Gun.

"Probably no educational institution in our country has ever graduated two more eminent and eloquent lawyers than old Dartmouth college gave us in Daniel Webster and Rufus Choate," says a writer in Our Dumb Animals. "It was my privilege as a member of the Suffolk bar to attend many years ago the trial of one of the most important cases of the year in our supreme judicial court at Boston.

"On the two sides were arrayed some half a dozen of our most eminent lawyers. Daniel Webster and Rufus Choate, as it happened, were on the same side.

"A hostile witness was put on by the other side, some of whose evidence was of the utmost importance to Webster and Choate, if it could be obtained, and Choate undertook the task of obtaining it. No man at our bar had more profound skill in cross examination, and the questions he put to the witness were like the fire of a Maxim gun, but in every instance he failed to get the evidence he wanted and finally sat down in despair.

"Then Webster, who had been sitting in his great armchair, apparently about half asleep, as though taking no interest in the case whatever, slowly arose to his feet, put his great eyes on the hostile witness, asked him in the most serious tone a single question and brought instantly the required answer. Then as quietly he sat down and apparently went about half asleep again. It was a scene photographed on my mind, never to be forgotten.

"The difference between Webster and Choate cannot better be explained as it rests in my mind than to compare Choate to a Maxim gun raining bullets of eloquence wherever he chose and Webster to a great gun that can send out a thirteen inch shell to penetrate an ironclad.

"It was wonderful to listen to Choate. I remember a case in which an ordinary lawyer would have simply said to the court that he moved a postponement of the case because witness So-and-so was sick, but in this case Choate arose and commenced by saying that his important witness was on a bed of sickness and perhaps a bed of death and so went whirling up almost to the skies on this simple motion, to the great interest of everybody that heard him.

"Our old chief justice, Judge Shaw, one of the greatest lawyers of his time, was a plain, practical man, and looked in his old age as he sat on the bench somewhat like a Chinese idol, and he used to frequently cut off Mr. Choate's eloquence by calling him back to the plain facts."

The Reconciliation.

The doctor was soon at the child's bedside. Remedies were administered; then the agonized pair watched the fight for life—skill and vitality on one side, fierce disease on the other. When at last the struggle ceased, the gray dawn of day was looking in at the window. Life had won. The child slept.

"She is all right now," said the doctor, shaking the man's hand, which had gripped his, and feeling his heart grow warm under the look of mute gratitude the woman turned upon him.

When he had gone the two stood side by side at the baby's crib, listening to her regular breathing. Then, with one accord, they turned and kissed each other. And in that kiss the icy barrier between them melted away.—Atlanta Constitution.

Death hangs over thee while thou livest, while it is in thy power to be good.—Aurelius.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

For headache Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Joseph O'Toole is helping Mr. Singer grind feed at Kratka, this week.

A. D. Brown has just got a new post office established at Little Oak, with himself as p m.

There will a secial dance at the Kolski hall in Deer Park tomorow night. All are invited.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Hoveled, of Lillo had a bounceing baby boy arrieve at their home on Wednesday evening last.

Ole O. Omlind, of Erie was transacting business at Thief River Falls Monday, and called at this office on his way home to give his subscription to THE SUNBEAM a boost ahead.

There will be Easter Sunday service held at the Hedeen, and Magnus Olson school house 3 miles south of Kratka, on April 11th, at 11 o' clock a.m., by Rev. E. A. Mostue. All are cordially invited to attend.

If you get hungry going down to Thief River Falls, stop at The Soo Cafe, near the Soo depot, and get a lunch, or a square meal at a reasonable price.

George Jarman, Proprietor

We are thankfull to quite a large number of subscribers for cash paid on subscription the past week, and we would be very thankfull if some of our subscribers that have been on the delinquent list for years would pay up a few dollars.

There will be religious service held at the Oak Park Church, on Sunday April 4th, at 2 clock p.m., by Rev. E. A. Mostue, and there will be Communion service held at the residence of Rev. E. A Mostue, on Thursday April 8th, at 11 o'clock a.m.

The farmers up in the town of Hickory got up a company to buy the Sullivan ferry and move it up there to cross the Red Lake River with. Then they got into a dispute just where they would have the ferry located, and they will have no ferry at all. Another case of trying to make all the people agree on just where they want an improvement located.

As there is a very heavy body of very wet snow in this upper Red Lake River country, which is rapidly melting into water and running into the river, we would advise people liveing down the river to be ready to move above high water mark, on short notice, as the spring thaw is so late in comeing that it is likely to come with a rush.

The snow water running into a river with as strong a currant as the Red Lake River has got is likely to cut the ice out, from the underside, and let your team in when you least expect it, and as every horse that breakes thru the ice on this river has been drowned, if you have no horses to spare, your safest way is to keep them off the ice.

As soon as the weather gets a little warmer we shall again have the section lins between sections 28 and 29 and 32 and 33 in this town looked over and have affidavits drawn, in plenty to send to Congressman Steenerson, to just let him get an opinion of an ex official of this town that would certify, that there had been a main trave'ed road on them for four years.

Now that Swanson has his continued story compleated about how it happed, to him, we would suggest that he write another one telling how it happend to his friend Latimore. A very good heading would be, "The Farmers got onto our game." We think that would look much better than "Communicated," and he could tell all about how it happend with them headlines.

James O'Brien, returned home from the lumber woods yesterday.

Evan J. Sund has taken the job to split our summers wood pile.

Wanzen Wojnerowski, of Radney was transacting business here Monday.

Edward Singer has employed Al. Smith as chief cook in his Rhoda's Rest. Restaurant.

Don't risk crossing the river on the ice, as you might loose your horses. Wait untill we get the new bridge in.

Mutual Surprise.

They stood beneath the mistletoe. She was justly resentful of what he had done.

"How dare you kiss me?" she exclaimed. "I never was so surprised in all my life!"

"Neither was I," he replied contritely. "I thought it was your younger sister."—Chicago Post.

Forbidden Fruit.

"Your luncheons are always so successful, Mrs. Penrhyn-Paget. Do tell me how you select your menus."

"Oh, you see, the doctor has given me a printed list of things I mustn't eat, and I choose the dishes from that."—Woman's Home Companion.

A kindness done to the good is never lost.—Plautus.

The Experienced Swine.

The crowd around the postoffice stove, after exhausting the possibilities of politics, local and national, had been discussing the alleged lack of the truth telling instinct in Old Man Simpkins. Uncle Ezra came in, and Jim Peters said;

"What do you think about it, Uncle Ezra—would you call Old Man Simpkins a liar?"

"Well," answered Uncle Ezra slowly as he thoughtfully studied the ceiling, "I wouldn't go so fur as to call the old man a liar, but I do know it to be a fact that when feedin' time comes to get any response he has to have somebody else call his hogs fur him."—Woman's Home Companion.

Purely Professional.

"You say he's a professional man?"

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne doubtfully. "One of the kind who hang out a sign 'Back In an Hour' and leave it there the year through."—Washington Star.

In Praise of Cockneys.

Cockneys are the best natured people under the sun. It is notorious that a big London crowd is of all crowds in the world the most harmless and the easiest to manage. But see them also in their ordinary collections, outside the gallery door of a popular theater or crowding in the carriages of an excursion train—what fun and kindness and wholesome give and take! A deliberately rude or offensive cockney is hardly to be met.—G. S. Street in Pall Mall Gazette.

The Mortality List.

Manager (of great exposition)—What alarms me is our mortality list. Assistant—Mortality list? Why, it's next to nothing at all! "I know better than that. More than one-third of the people that come through the turnstiles are deadheads."

A few things gained by fraud destroy a fortune otherwise honestly won.—German Proverb.

Tough Fare.

In a New Zealand town one of the municipal candidates, a pronounced Scotsman, had received a present of a huge Scotch thistle, which at the moment happened to be lying on the table of his committee room. A friend, entering, withdrew suddenly, with the remark: "I beg your pardon. I didn't know you were at luncheon."

Tricked of the Time.

A Philadelphia lawyer who spends most of his time at his country estate, employs a sturdy Irish gardener whose one desire in life is to live until the banner of freedom is unfurled over Ireland.

One evening the lawyer strolled through the grounds of his place and stopped to have a chat with the gardener.

"Michael, do you know that while we are here enjoying the beautiful twilight it is dark midnight in Ireland?" he asked.

"Faith, an' Oi'm not surprised," replied the gardener. "Ireland niver got justice yit."—Judge.

Money Getters.

"Do you think it pays to send our sons to college? Do they obtain the practical experience in money getting that is so necessary in these days?"

"Well, judging from the experience I have had with my son, I should say they did. His practical experience in money getting increases with every letter that I receive from him."

Simplified Debate.

"Are you going to attempt to answer all the charges made against you?"

"Certainly," replied Senator Sorghum. "Answering charges these days is easy. All you've got to do is to say, 'You're another.'"—Washington Star.

A Definition.

Marlin

THE Marlin Model 1894 is a medium light weight repeating rifle, a well proportioned, finely balanced gun with all the advantages and comforts of the Marlin solid-top, side-ejecting construction. It is quick and easy of operation, accurate up to 300 yards and a very pleasant gun to carry and to shoot.

For settled districts and farming country where the shooting at woodchucks, badgers, foxes, coons, hawks, etc., is at ranges from 100 to 200 yards, the .25-20 and .32-20 sizes with the black and low-pressure smokeless loads cannot be surpassed for accuracy and safety. The factory ammunition for the Model '94 sizes is cheap, and can be reloaded at very small cost.

The up-to-date sportsman needs the "Marlin Book" every day in the year. It contains 136 pages of live stuff for the man who loves a good gun, and wants to know [illegible] thing about it. FREE for 3 stamps postage.

A Metaphor With a History.

To "know a hawk from a hernshaw" is a metaphor with a curious history. It is a comparison drawn from falconry. "Hernshaw" is a corruption of "heronshaw," or young heron, a bird which was a common prey of the falcons. To know a hawk from a hernshaw is therefore to be able to distinguish the falcon from its prey. A further colloquial corruption crept into the phrase—"to know a hawk from a handsaw," a form used by Hamlet in one place. Possibly the distinction between a hawk and a hernshaw was found not to be strong enough for the purposes of the proverb.—Manchester Guardian.

Smells in Great Cities.

The man with a nose always recognizes the smell of the place, and he has only to land at Calais to smell garlic. London's smell—when the Londoner returns—is just soot and fried fish. Paris always smells of chocolate and wood smoke. Florence is violets and sewage. But so soon as you get to Russia the smell is quite different. Moscow, the city of fruit that comes from the Crimea, has a special smell of the cranberry (which has various names) in late summer. And you cannot land in St. Petersburg without noticing instantly the smell of the [illegible].—London Chronicle.

Pyramids.

The largest of the Mexican pyramids, that of Cholula, has a base measurement of 1,488 feet and a height of 178 feet. The Great pyramid of Egypt, sometimes called the pyramid of Cheops, stands on a base each side of which was originally 764 feet long; but, owing to the removal of the coating, it is now only 746 feet. Its height, according to Wilkenson, was originally 480 feet 9 inches, its present height being 460 feet.—New York American.

My doctors said I would have to be tapped, but I began using Doan's Kidney Pills instead, and the swelling subsided and the kidneys began to act properly. Now my health is fine." AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her.

Willimantic, Conn.—"For five years I suffered untold agony from female troubles, causing backache, irregularities, dizziness and nervous prostration. It was impossible for me to walk upstairs without stopping on the way. I tried three different doctors and each told me something different. I received no benefit from any of them, but seemed to suffer more. The last doctor said nothing would restore my health. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to see what it would do, and I am restored to my natural health."—Mrs. Etta Donovan, Box 290, Willimantic, Conn.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills, and suffering women owe it to themselves to at least give this medicine a trial. Proof is abundant that it has cured thousands of others, and why should it not cure you?

PREDESTINED TO THE BAR.

Goldfield Youngster Had Early Learned the Value of Quibble.

Doctor Norris of Goldfield, Nev., called his eight-year-old son into the library after breakfast the other morning, and regarded him with a sad frown.

"Harry," he said, "why are you so often late at school?"

"I'm never late, father," Harry responded promptly.

"Careful, son," said the doctor. "Try to remember. Haven't you been late at school in the last few days?"

"No, sir."

"Then why has your teacher written me this letter, saying you were late three times last week?"

"Oh, I'll tell you, father,' said Harry, reassuringly. "I don't know what kind of a clock they have at our school, but I'm always on time. Of course, they start school sometimes before I get there, but that isn't my fault—is it?"—Harper's Weekly.

HUMOR BURNED AND ITCHED.

Eczema on Hand, Arms, Legs and Face—It Was Something Terrible.

Complete Cure by Cuticura.

"About fifteen or eighteen years ago eczema developed on top of my hand. It burned and itched so much that I was compelled to show it to a doctor. He pronounced it ringworm. After trying his different remedies the disease increased and went up my arms and to my legs and finally on my face. The burning was something terrible. I went to another doctor who had the reputation of being the best in town. He told me it was eczema. His medicine checked the advance of the disease, but no further. I finally concluded to try the Cuticura Remedies and found relief in the first trial. I continued until I was completely cured from the disease, and I have not been troubled since. C. Burkhart, 236 W. Market St., Chambersburg, Pa., Sept. 19, 1908."

A worthy tradesman of this city was discussing optics with a customer the other day, apropos of the latter's appearance with his first eye-glasses.

"I've been wearing this pair of spectacles for nearly twenty years now," remarked the tradesman, "and my wife a pair just like them for the same time, and now we couldn't either of us see without them, and we never had anything the matter with our eyes in the first place."

"What did you begin to wear them for, then?" inquired the customer.

"Why, you see," explained the other, in a matter-of-fact manner, "when my brother-in-law died he left the two pair of spectacles, and we couldn't sell them for anything like what they were worth."—Harper's Weekly.

EUROPE CAPTURES BEST OF AMERICAN JOCKEYS

Notter, Radtke, Nicol, Powers and Others Will Ride Best of Foreign Thoroughbreds.

For some years the American turf has lost one or two expert jockeys, who have obtained good contracts with some of the big racing establishments abroad. This year the number of riders who have been employed by foreign horsemen has increased, and at least six will be lost to the American turf. There are indications that others will go to Europe, as negotiations are now being considered for their services.

"Joe" Notter, Vincent Powers and "Eddie" Dugan, the three great leading jockeys of 1908, are to sail. Another prominent rider, "Dave" Nicol, has secured a contract to ride in France, and it is possible that Roscoe Troxler may go to the same country to ride for "Fred" Burlew, who is training a small stable of American horses. Dalton, McCarthy, Shilling, Upton and J. Butler have been invited to join the jockeys abroad.

One might imagine that the passing of the Agnew-Hart bill last year in New York is the cause for the exodus of so many riders. While that measure undoubtedly has driven a few of the owners away, it is not really the cause of the departures of the jockeys.

Notter will ride for the stable of A. & C. Von Weimberg, in Germany, for which George Walker trains, and he is to receive a salary of $15,000.

"Eddie" Dugan goes to England to ride for Harry Payne Whitney, who holds the contract on his services. A year ago Mr. Whitney bought the contract on this rider from C. E. Durnell, and he rode in the light blue, brown cap all through last season. Twenty-seven horses, among which are many two-year-olds, are now quartered in England under the care of A. J. Joyner, and as Mr. Whitney has transferred his interest abroad he wants his own jockey to ride for him.

Vincent Powers, who sprang into prominence several years ago, will join the American riders abroad and will be seen in the saddle in France. There have been several offers made for the boy, and he will probably ride in France for Leopold de Rothschild at a salary of $15,000.

"Dave" Nicol will ride in France for Baron Maurice Rothschild, who is a member of the famous firm of European bankers. He will receive a retainer of $5,000 for one year's services, beginning April 1, 1909, with $30 for each winning mount and $10 for each losing mount.

Some of the American jockeys who will ride abroad this year are: Shaw, Taral, Spencer, "Johnny" Reiff and Radtke, in Germany; Lucien Lyne and Jay Ransch, who will ride for J. Hennessy, the "Brandy King," in France; "Joe" Richards and Winkfield, in Russia, and others in England.

Honus Lobert has signed his 1909 contract with the Reds. He will hold down the shortstop position.

The National league umpires will report for instructions at the New York headquarters, April 12.

The memorial to the late Henry Chadwick, "the father of baseball," will be unveiled in Brooklyn, April 20, the first anniversary of his death.

"If Ames gets away right this year," says John J. McGraw, "he will undoubtedly be one of the season's greatest pitchers."

It is being rumored that the Pacific coast outlaw league will shortly go out of business on account of its overgrown salary list.

Jack Warner's contract with the Galveston team calls for no salary, but he is given a half interest in the club and possible profits. He is to manage and play with the team.

Johnny Cocash, the former Detroit boy, will likely be retained by the Giants this year as a utility outfielder.

Frank Chance, manager of the Cubs, says there are only four teams in the National league that will be in the race at all this season, namely, the Cubs, New York, Pittsburg and the Phillies.

"Nig" Perrine, second baseman of last season's Louisville team, dissatisfied with the salary offered him by George Tebeau, has jumped to Stockton, Cal., the outlaw team managed by Danny Shay.

Minneapolis has two catchers named Block and Rapp. Sounds like a course of instruction in boxing.

Frank Chance has just completed his tenth consecutive year of service with the Chicago Cubs.

Elmer Flick will be seen in the outfield for Cleveland this year. He has reported in good condition.

Work on the construction of Toledo's new ball park has been started by a big force of men.

Southpaw Andrada, the Spanish pitcher with Cleveland, has a nickname already, Jim McGuire having christened him "Andy."

Catcher Jacklitsch of the Phillies, who has been holding out for more salary, has signed his 1909 contract.

Goode, the Cleveland outfielder, who played basketball with Hans Wagner all winter, says the latter has no intention of quitting baseball, but that he won't join the Pirates until three or four days before the season opens.

Manager Clarke of Pittsburg has a wonder in Hyatt, from Seattle. He has a remarkable throwing arm.

A LITTLE KNOWLEDGE

Of Painting Requirements Will Save Much Expense.

When one sees the surface of a house or other building scaling, or peeling, or spotted or blistered, or showing other symptoms of paint "disease," it is evident that a poor painter has been on the job, and that poor paint was used—or possibly that a good painter had been dominated by a property-owner who knew nothing about paint.

It is an easy matter to be informed on paint and painting. A complete painting guide, including a book of color schemes, either for exterior or interior—specifications for all kinds of painting,—and an instrument for detecting adulteration in paint material, with directions for using it, may be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Bldg., New York City, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49.

Then, every houseowner should make it a point to get only well-known reliable brands in buying his materials. Pure white lead is especially important, or the paint will not prove satisfactory. The famous "Dutch Boy Painter" trademark of National Lead Company, the largest makers of pure white lead, is an absolute guarantee of the purity and quality of the white lead sold under it. That trademark is a safeguard against paint trouble.

MINNESOTA SOLONS

SENATE TO VISIT THE IRON RANGE COUNTRY.

House Passes Trading Stamp Bill—A Lengthy Argument on the Iron Ore Tonnage Tax Bill.

St. Paul, Minn., March 30.—Gov. J. A. Johnson sent a communication to the senate today, announcing three appointments. One was of Charles E. Vasaly, editor of The Herald at Little Falls, as member of the state board of control to succeed S. W. Leavitt of Litchfield, who has served for eight years past. The second appointment was that of J. G. Armson, mayor of Stillwater, as member of the state tax commission to succeed Franklin McVey, who resigned to become president of the North Dakota state university. The third appointment was that of Martin Hughes of Hibbing, as the additional judge for the Duluth district.

The senate today passed the "Brady salary bill." This is the house measure which permits the legislators to draw their $1,000 salary all in one year instead of $500 per year. The bill drew 37 yea votes, to 19 opposed.

The bi-monthly pay-day bill was killed.

The senate passed the Elwell bill for an experimental forest for the state university in Carlton county. It provides for acceptance of a gift of 2,200 acres from Frederick Weyerhauser, and appropriates $5,000, from which amount 480 additional acres are to be purchased.

St. Paul, Minn., March 31.—The senate will leave St. Paul Thursday evening for a trip along the Iron Range to inform themselves of the vastness of the state's mining interests. When Senator George R. Laybourn of Duluth extended the invitation for the senate to enjoy the trip and inform itself relative to the iron mining industry that it might be in a better position to fairly consider the Bjorge tonnage tax bill.

By a final vote of 39 to 2 the senate late today passed the bill of Senator F. E. Putnam of Blue Earth, appropriating $50,000 state aid, for the establishment of courses in manual training, domestic science, and scientific agriculture in high, consolidated and graded schools throughout the state.

The senate passed the W. A. Hinton bill providing that passenger elevators must be supplied with safety appliances that hold the car at each landing until the doors or gates are opened and closed.

The senate today suspended its rules and passed the bill to permit of reincorporation of the town of Gilbert, St. Louis county.

The bill to perpetuate veterans of the civil war in state offices went down to defeat in the house this morning.

The electric railroad control bill came up in a new form. The house judiciary committee presented a majority report for advancement of a substitute bill for the Nolan measure, placing lines directly under the state railroad commission.

The new substitute bill gives the state railroad commission general supervision, and makes them an appeal board, but leaves to city councils in the respective cities the power to specify what streets shall be used by the electric lines, general service regulations, permission or refusal for extensions, and the right to inflict penalties for violation of ordinances. The new bill also gives the state commission power to order city lines to give terminal connections to rural electric lines.

The house passed the trading stamp bill. It requires that the stamps issued by merchants must have printed on them their value, and must specify just what they may be used to redeem.

This evening H. O. Bjorge of Lake Park was given an opportunity to make a lengthy argument for his iron ore tonnage tax bill before the senate tax committee, which held an open hearing in the senate chamber. Mr. Bjorge quoted from decisions at length to prove that his bill was constitutional and would be sustained by the courts, and also attempted to prove that it was fair in that it taxed property which in a few years would be all removed from the state. His argument was the same one as delivered first before the house committee on taxes, and later before the house itself when considering the bill.

St. Paul, Minn., April 1.—After nearly two hours of debate, the senate this afternoon confirmed the appointments of C. E. Vasaly of Little Falls as member of the state board of control to succeed S. W. Leavitt, and Mayor J. G. Armson of Stillwater to succeed Franklin McVey on the state tax commission.

Several bills of importance were passed by the senate late this afternoon. They included the Nolan house bill providing that the railroad commission shall keep up the physical valuation of railroad properties in Minnesota; and the Wright senate bill providing for pensioning of citizen soldiers who participated in the campaign against the Indian uprising in Minnesota in 1862.

The senate today passed the house bill, providing that all property shall be listed at its full value, and assessed forty per cent for taxation purposes. Senator Moonan secured the adoption of an amendment providing that the readjustment of valuations be placed in the hands of the assessors instead of the state tax commission.

Without a dissenting vote, the senate today passed the Works bill to permit cities of the state at their option to adopt the commission (or Des Moines) plan of government. In its original form, as drawn by Senator Works of Mankato it only applied to the smaller cities of the state; but an amendment was today offered by Senator E. E. Smith of Minneapolis, extending the terms of the act to all cities of the state. Senator Smith was the member to first introduce the commission bill in a preliminary form, and later consented that the Works bill be substituted. The bill secured 50 yea votes to no nays.

The senate adjourned late today until Monday morning, and something over half the membership left at 11 p. m. via the Northern Pacific for Duluth, in charge of H. V. Eva of Duluth, representing the Duluth Commercial club. Tomorrow at 7 a. m., they leave Duluth for a two days' trip over the iron range.

After lengthy debate, the house today passed the Allen bill, providing for a school tax levy of 1½ mills, of which the state university shall have the proceeds of the one-half mill, and the general school fund (as heretofore) have the money raised from the one mill. This would increase the income of the university for general running expenses from a direct levy, from $225,000 to $250,000. W. C. Bicknell attempted to amend the bill so that the university's tax would be .32 of a mill instead of one-half a mill, but the house refused to adopt the change, and passed the bill as it originally read, by a vote of 63 to 47—62 votes being necessary for passage.

Notice was received from the governor that he had signed the Brady salary bill, and the communication called forth general applause. This is the bill which permits the legislators to draw their entire salary of $1,000 the legislative year, instead of $500 a year for each year of their two year term.

The house today passed the bill to legalize Sunday baseball, for which Messrs. Gartside, Virtue, Grant, and Wolhuter stood sponsor. The vote was 67 to 31. The bill by Zelch and L. H. Johnson, prohibiting the sale of convict labor by contract with the state to private parties, was also passed.

St. Paul, April 2.—The so-called packing-house bill, was indefinitely postponed in the house today.

The Gunn bill from the senate for establishment of a new normal school at Cass Lake, passed the house.

The state university people, who so rejoiced over the passage of the university tax levy bill by the house yesterday, today received a shock in the adoption of a motion by John McGrath recalling the measure and later reconsidering the vote by which it passed.

The T. J. Brady bill, limiting the number of persons who may be jammed into street cars, passed the house this morning, but with an amendment making the number 35 who may stand, in addition to those occupying seats.

The house passed the Campbell bill late this afternoon, for the establishment of a separate woman's department in the state bureau of labor.

The bill by Elmer Adams, to detach Morrison county from the seventh judicial district and attach it to the fifteenth judicial district, went down to defeat by a vote of 53 to 28.

The house today passed the Elmer E. Adams amendment to the habitual criminal act. It provides that possession of burglar's tools and explosives shall be prima facie evidence of guilt, and punishable as a felony.

The house also passed the public health committee's bill, providing that the state board of health shall have authority to establish rules and regulations for the sanitation of factories and places of employment, and for the benefit and health of wage-earners.

The report of the judiciary committee was accepted recommending for indefinite postponement the Wilson senate bill providing that future common law marriages shall not be recognized as legal in Minnesota.

Rules were suspended for the passage of the bill providing that agents must be at railroad depots a half hour before each train in towns of 500 population or over.

PLAN BIG WAGE CUT

STEEL TRUST'S COMPANIES TO SLASH PAY 15 PER CENT.

GOES INTO EFFECT MAY 1

Reduction Means a Saving of $25,000,000 and Gives the Combine Advantage Over Independents Whose Cuts Are Ten Per cent.

New York.—The various subsidiary companies of the United States Steel corporation, it is announced on the best authority, will slash 15 per cent. off the wages of their employes on May 1. The trust itself will not announce the cut, but it will be left to the subsidiary concerns to make the announcements on April 15.

The subsidiary companies of the steel corporation have been holding back their announcement of wage cuts with the purpose of letting all the independent companies do their cutting first. This has not only the advantage of letting the independents accumulate the brunt of the odium for wage reduction and insures that there will not be an exodus of skilled trust workmen into the independent mills, but also serves a steel market coup of far greater importance than either of these considerations.

Inasmuch as the independents have cut their wage scales uniformly at the rate of ten per cent., the steel trust will be in position, if it announces a cut of 15 per cent. on May 1, to rearrange its price schedules so sweepingly that it will capture the entire steel market for months to come and insure an enormously swollen business for the coming year.

The United States Steel corporation paid out $160,000,000 in 1907. On that basis a cut of 15 per cent. means that the company will save $25,000,000 on labor alone.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The arrival here Friday of a carload of non-union engineers, oilers and firemen is looked upon as the beginning of the fight between the Lake Carriers' association and the various unions on the great lakes.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—The first trouble in the anthracite region since the expiration of the three-year agreement has developed at the Keystone colliery of the Traders' Coal Company at the Ridgewood mine, about four miles from here. The miners had a dispute over yardage and the shifting of rock and as a result refrained from working Friday.

NOT GUILTY, SAYS KIDNAPER.

Mrs. Boyle Arraigned and Held in Default of $25,000 Bond at Mercer, Pa.

Mercer, Pa. — Mrs. Helen Boyle, wife of James H. Boyle, kidnaper of Willie Whitla, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Thomas McClain, at this place Wednesday, charged with kidnaping.

She entered a plea of "not guilty," and was held for the action of the grand jury in the sum of $25,000 bail. Her husband waived a hearing at Sharon, Monday and is held in the jail here on a similar bond.

The mystery surrounding the stranger who visited Mrs. Boyle in jail last Monday was cleared last night when W. J. McDermott of Chicago told friends here that he called at the jail in the absence of Sheriff Chess and identified the prisoner as his sister, Anna McDermott, who eloped from Chicago with Boyle three years' ago.

KILLS MINER IN RIOT.

Constable Slays One and Wounds Another When Attempt Is Made to Rescue Prisoner.

Pittsburg, Pa.—One man was killed and another probably fatally injured in a riot between a crowd of miners formerly employed at the Harwick mines of the Allegheny Coal Company at Cheswick, Pa., near here, and two deputy constables at that place.

The dead man is Mike Strenyard, aged 20 years. Norwalk Bulterge, aged 24 years, has two bullets in his back.

The trouble started when the crowd of miners attempted to rescue a comrade who had been arrested by Deputy Constables Holland and Blair. Holland, who did the shooting, is under a $2,000 bond.

Zeppelin Returns in Airship.

Fredrichshafen. — Wearing a smile which fully expressed the victory of his wonderful airship over wind, snow and other adverse weather conditions, Count Zeppelin returned in his aerial craft Friday night after having been on a voyage which consumed two days' time. He landed safely on Lake Constance and the airship was snugly tucked away in its shed none the worse for its wild experiences.

FINISH WATERWAY REPORT

ST. LOUIS TO NEW ORLEANS PORTION IS PLANNED.

Engineers' Board Said to Consider Twenty or Twenty-Four Foot Channel Economical.

Washington. — Another big step in the plan for a deep waterway from the lakes to the gulf was taken Friday when the engineers' board in charge of the survey completed its report on the portion between St. Louis and New Orleans.

This is the biggest stretch of the proposed channel, and the report, according to telegraphic advices received at the war department, should be here to-day. The survey from Chicago to St. Louis was completed three years ago. The stretch from New Orleans to the mouth of the Mississippi will soon be complete.

Although Col. Bixby's dispatch as head of the engineers' commission in charge of the work merely announced the completion of the task, it is understood that the report will be highly favorable. It is reported that not only are the conclusions of the board favorable to the general project of a 14-foot channel from Chicago to the gulf, but that the board considers it practicable from a commercial standpoint.

Information has been received here that the board went even further in its conclusions and was of the opinion that a deep waterway of 20 or even 24 feet could be built with economy in preference to the 14-foot limit which is now proposed.

The report on the delta stretches of the proposed deep waterway is now all that is left before congress can map out its work. The national river and harbor commission of congress undoubtedly will urge speedy work when it brings in its report in December, especially if the Illinois legislature orders work begun meantime. Speaker Cannon is known to be favorably disposed toward the enterprise, and when he makes up the next river and harbor committee it is certain that it, too, will support the project.

BOAT BLAST KILLS TWELVE.

French Oil Bark Blown Up at Marseilles—Many Are Injured and Some Missing.

Marseilles.—The French tank bark Jules Henry, Capt. Escoffier, in the oil trade between Philadelphia and Cette, blew up Thursday and was practically totally wrecked. Twelve members of her crew were killed and many others wounded.

A representative of the Veritas agency, accompanied by the second officer, was inspecting the vessel at the time she blew up. In the course of their work the two men entered the tank hold. Immediately after there was a tremendous explosion. The entire deck of the bark was lifted, and the forward portion of the ship was wrenched off. Twenty men of the crew at work painting and repairing were blown into the air. Great sheets of fire shot up from the vessel, and in a few seconds she was enveloped in flames.

HUSBAND AND WIFE SLAIN

Toledo, O., Police Baffled by Mysterious Murder of Aged Couple, Evidently by Robbers.

Toledo, O.—In the finding of the bodies of Ludwig Krueger, aged 66, and his wife, aged 63, buried in the cellar of their home which was destroyed by fire Thursday, the police are confronted by a puzzling murder mystery.

M. Soboleski, a tailor, last Saturday gave Mr. Krueger $2,000 as part payment for the purchase of a farm.

It is believed that robbery was the motive and that the slayer, after burying the bodies and replacing the brick flooring in the cellar, set fire to the house to cover up the murder.

WOMEN TO CLEAN CITY.

Will Sweep Streets of Washington April 15 if the Commissioners Don't Get Busy.

Washington.—If the commissioners of the District of Columbia haven't found a way to clean the streets of Washington by April 15, the women of the capital will go out on the streets and show them how to do it. This has been decided by the Twentieth Century club of this city, an organization of the best known and most progressive women here.

Testimony was given by several members at the last meeting that the streets in front of their homes and in the parkways were littered with wastepaper and other debris. Thereupon the club decided to act.

Eight Killed by Dynamite.

Chillicothe, O. — A terrific explosion occurred along the route of the Norfolk & Western railroad Tuesday in which eight workmen were killed and 20 or more were injured.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Luverne Chooses Teaching Force.

Luverne—The superintendent and fifteen of Luverne's corps of twenty teachers were elected at the last meeting of the board of education, as follows: Superintendent, Professor J. L. Torrens, Luverne; high school, C. E. Clarkson, St. Charles; Miss Elinor Hallowell, Northfield; Miss Effie B. Lee, Ames, Iowa. Grades, Miss Dawley M. Anderson, Plainview; Miss Frances Larson, Tracy; Miss Goldie M. Anderson, Plainview; Miss Ethel L. Emery, Stanton; Miss Emma Larson, Atwater; Miss Ella McCarthy, Luverne; Miss Loretta McGrew, Good Thunder; Miss Rose M. Oestern, Luverne; Miss Lura Williams, Cando, N. D.; Miss Volande Mackin, Minneapolis; Miss Josephine Curtiss and Miss Jessie Halbert, Luverne.

New Well for Rochester.

Rochester—At a meeting of the Olmsted County Health League held here, Burt W. Eaton, president of the Rochester company, advocated municipal ownership of the plant. Rochester has been especially fortunate in her water supply. Never has a case of sickness been traced to contaminated water supply. The old wells are to be built higher and a new one is to be dug. The Health League will begin an active and aggressive campaign to not only maintain the present standard of healthfulness, but to guard against any possibility of unsanitary conditions.

Indictments Against Four.

Grand Rapids—The grand jury for the March term of the district court for Itasca county held a busy session. Indictments were returned as follows: Norman McMasters, grand larceny in the second degree; George Zigich, assault in the first degree; Mike Radovac and Elie Viacar, assault in the first degree, for stabbing John Javenis near Marble on Jan. 22. Javenis nearly died from the effects of the wound. The grand jury is considering election matters.

Sues for Girl's Freedom.

Red Wing—By means of habeas corpus proceedings, Eva A. Slayton, of St. Paul, is trying to secure the release of her daughter Genevieve from the custody of the board of control and Superintendent F. A. Whittier of the training school. Mrs. Slayton contends that the commitment proceedings were illegal and that no notice had been served on her as guardian of Genevieve Slayton.

Duluth Incendiary Sentenced.

Duluth—Kalman Light, the West Duluth storekeeper who was convicted of setting fire to his store on Central avenue, was sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary by Judge Cant in the district court. Light was charged with saturating some paper boxes with kerosene and setting fire to them. The fact that a family was living in rooms above the store made the offense more serious.

False Arrest Costs $400.

Duluth—Chief of Police Peter Wring and D. B. McEachen of Hibbing have been mulcted for $400 by a jury in the district court in a damage suit brought by William Williams for false arrest. Williams was employed by the Itasca Mercantile company, of which McEachen is manager, and was arrested on a charge of theft, but was discharged.

Railway Mail Clerks Organize.

Winona—Railway mail clerks in this section have organized by electing the following officers: President, William H. Fry; vice president, Harvey Taylor; secretary, Anton Berdnatz. Mr. Berdnatz was elected a delegate to the tenth division convention to be held on April 30 at Minneapolis.

Grain Merchant Bankrupt.

Gibbon—Nels Johnson of Sibley county, formerly a grain merchant of Gibbon, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in the federal court in this city, alleging his liabilities as $18,084, of which $8,500 is secured, and his assets as $15,350, of which $4,610 is exempt.

NEWS NOTES.

Minneapolis—George Barb and John Fleischer were arrested by P. J. Riley, special agent of the Omaha railroad, in the Omaha yards, on the charge of stealing fittings from Pullman cars.

Duluth—Plans are on foot here to give a banquet in the near future in honor of D. D. Mann, president of the Canadian Northern railroad in recognition of his services in the extension of his line to the Head of the Lakes.

Minneapolis—Following "The Kentuckian," at the Bijou, Charles Grapewin will make his first local appearance in "The Awakening of Mr. Pipp," a musical concoction of mirth and melody which he has been presenting with great success for the last five or six years. He will be surrounded by a large company of capable people, including a chorus which is noted for its ability to sing and dance.

PE-RU-NA

For Cramps in the Stomach of Six Years' Standing.

"I was troubled with cramps in the stomach for six years. I tried many kinds of medicine, also was treated by three doctors.

"They said that I had nervous dyspepsia. I took the medicine for two years, then I got sick again and gave up all hopes of getting cured.

Cuticura Thus Proven Pure and Sweet.

A New York friend of Cuticura writes:

"My three year old son and heir, after being put to bed on a trip across the Atlantic, investigated the stateroom and located a box of graham crackers and a box of Cuticura Ointment. When a search was made for the box, it was found empty and the kid admitted that he had eaten the contents of the entire box spread on the crackers. It cured him of a bad cold and I don't know what else."

No more conclusive evidence could be offered that every ingredient of Cuticura Ointment is absolutely pure, sweet and harmless. If it may be safely eaten by a young child, none but the most beneficial results can be expected to attend its application to pected to attend its application to even the tenderest skin or youngest infant.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30, 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam' Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3. 1879

It appears that the Thief River Falls county seat removel bill is still before the legislature and may become a law.

The legislature, is like a man that is to be hung, they know when their time is up. The present session's time is up April 22.

We hope our town supervisors will endevor to try to do some road work this year, and if some of the old members get the back ache it might help some to take a look at that grader,

---

The many letters of incouragement that we are receiveing from all parts of the county regardlng the effort being made to get a bridge across Red Lake River, on the section line between section lines 29 and 30 in this township, leads us to believe that the bridge will be built this year. The present site was chosen after the lay of the country, and the sentiment of the people had been fully sized up, and their names are now before our members of the legislature, praying for the appropriation to build.

Now is the time of year that the people of eastern Red Lake county stay on their own side of Red Lake River, as they can not cross in boats or on the ice. This same condition prevails every fall and spring, which is a searious drawback to the settlement and improvement of this part of Reo Lake county. About ninty five per cent of the people are trying to get a bridge across the river in the eastern part of the county at a point where all can reach it, while a few want it at a point where only one man can get to it from the south side of the river, on any laid out road.

The state road and bridge fund' known as "the pork barrel" has been divided up among the different counties. The whole amount was $600,000, for the two years. The apportionment for the differant counties ranges from $750 for Cook county to $10,200, for Hennepin county. Our district fared very well, and our representatives in the legislature are entitled to great credit for their good work in our behalf. Belltrammi county got $7275. Clearwater county $6000 Norman $3525. Red Lake $7275. A comparison with other counties in the state shows that our representatives got every dollar they had comeing, and maybe a little more.

The County Commissioners redistricted the two north commissioner districts last week, so the lines are now on township lines, instead of river lines. All the parts of townships lying north of Red Lake River are taken from district No. four, Mr. Shaws district and added to Mr Aubels district, the third district. This will make about half the territory of the county in one Commissioner district, and the other half in four commissioner districts. This throws six of the eleven townships into the third district with their commissioner located at St. Hilaire. The Red Lake Falls Gazette says "Now please don't anybody say any thing nasty. Whats the use?" We won't say anything nasty, as we can not think of anything nasty enough to say.

A Dead Kick From A Dead Horse.

Mr. Swanson, from Deer Park, again "Communication", for the loven towns, last week, and had a dream that he came very near to again landing the assistant town clerkship of Deer Park township, We thought it would raise a howl in the kennel of "de gang" when we said we were going to have their proposed bridge site and the lines south of it surveyed and affidavits taken of the true condition of the lines, which they certified were main traveled roads. He says: "We are simply voicing the sentitement of the people of our town." When Mr Swanson makes that statement he knows that it is not true. All his neighbors, excepting his father and one brother are signers on the petition for a bridge on the section lines between sections 29 and 30. Every member of your board of supervisors has his name on that petition. Your town clerk, (the man that defeated you so bad at the last election) circulated that petition to get signers for a bridge, at its present location, and yet you have gall enough to come out in print and say You are representing the sentiment of these people when you are trying to get this bridge site moved to a point where you know they can not get to it to cross.

He raves about undergroud methods. What underground methods could there be about getting permission to build this bridge, from the government on a section line in the town of Highlanding? What underground methods could there be in the people of eastern Red Lake county getting up a petition to the legislature to appropriate the money to build this bridge? But Who ever heard of Swanson, or Lattimore, or the one, or two they are backing, ever trying to make any move to try to get any bridge across this river at any point in eastern Red Lake county, until after we started? Then they started a schem, and an underground one, to try to get the site moved to a point one mile east to a point where the river runs lengthwise of the section line, which would make it necessary to buy the land for road on one side of the river, or build a bridge a quater of a mile long. As to Swanson voiceing the sentiment of his neighboros we will give the names of a few of his nearest neighbors, who have signed the petition for this bridge at its present location viz: Rev. E A. Mostue; T.G. Romme, Ole Overvold, Even J. Sund, M. E Hyland, Thore O. Moen, Mike Kolski, George Singer, and in fact all his neighbors, except his father and one brother. Anyone can adress any of the above gentelmen for the trouth of our statements. As for his personal attacts on us we will hand him a dose of his kind of personall mud that will make his hair kink after the ground thaws out a little more, just to let him see him self as others see him, but we are after bigger game, just at this time, than Swanson.

Miss Clara Barton says she has not become a Christian Scientist.

At the age of eighty years Mrs. Jacob Peters of Venango, Pa., is a correspondent of five newspapers.

Mary Dawson, aged eighty, still works as a maid in the New England House, Boston, where she has served for sixty years. Her first employer was Parun Stevens.

Miss Julia Chapman won a set of silver knives, forks and spoons in a board sawing contest given in Steiwer hall, Fossil, Ore., recently. She went through her board before any of her competitors had got well started.

The dress of Miss Elizabeth Loughridge of Lexington, Ky., who was leading a grand march wearing a wreath of fire, known as an electric sparker, took fire, and she escaped injury. The dress took fire a second time, and she was severely burned.

Mrs. Evelyn Fellows Masury, a society woman of Boston, surrendered her house the other night to her maid, Della Landers, who gave a party to her friends. The house was theirs for the night, and dances, refreshments and music filled the evening.

The family of Mrs. Eliza Allen of Augusta, Me., claim that she is the youngest great-grandmother in the United States. Mrs. Allen is fifty years old and has been a great-grandmother more than a year. She is a vigorous woman and personally manages her farm.

An Arabian Legend.

The Arabians had a tradition that when the devil started forth from his own place to the garden of Eden he was too lazy to walk and begged all the animals, one after another, to carry him. All refused except the serpent, which was then a quadruped and the most beautiful of all beasts. Yielding to the entreaties of Satan, the serpent took up the devil on its back and carried him the rest of the way, no one knows how far, and after the consequences of the devil's entry into the garden became apparent the angels were commanded to look up the serpent and punish it, so Michael cut off its legs, and it was doomed henceforth to travel about as best it could flat on the ground.

C. W. Johnson, of Rhoda was up here Monday makeing application for abatement of taxes. Owing to the mismanagement of Swanson, as clerk, of that district the taxes are becomeing something awful, and the farmers congratulate themselves that they will have a chance to fire him out, in July.

As Swanson don't seem to kow what being used for a tool means we wil give him Websters difinition: A person used as an instrument by an other person. Men of intrigue always have "tools" by whose agency they accomplish their purposes." That's what we mean Mr. Swanson, but the fellows that emploved you got badly beat on a tool.

Edward Singer and Ole Nesland drove down to Kratka to day after goods for the Rhoda store. They have to get another team at Mr. O Briens place and draw the goods up as far as to his landing, then back them across the river on the ice, and load it up on this side. It is such trips as these that makes people so anxious to get a bridge across Red Lake River.

Died; at her residence, in the town of Kratka, on Friday last, Mrs. Ole Walls. She has been a patient suffer for a number of years, from that dread disease consumption, that never fails to claim its victim, and her death has not been unexpected for some time. Funeral services was held at her late residence, Tuesday afternoon, and were attended by a large number of neighbors and friends. The remains were laid to rest in the Braukeborg cemetery.

John Quirk, received a very searious kick from a horse on last Thursday evening, which will lay him up for some time. He was unhitching his team, when his dog came up near him and one of the horses made a kick at the dog and hit Mr. Quirk in the groin, hurting him badly. He laid at home until Tuesday morning, and was taken down to the Thief River Falls hospitl, and at last accounts was getting along as well as could be expected.

Another Lie Nailed.

Rhoda Minn. April 8th, 1909.

Editor of The Sunbeam

Dear Sir:

My attention has been called, to an article written, by W. A. Swanson, and published in The Eleven Towns, in which he says, he is simply voiceing the sentiment of the people of our town, regarding the bridge location across Red Lake River. I wish to state that Mr. Swanson is miss-representing this town in his statements, as they have nearly all signed the petition for the bridge on the section line, between section's 29 and 30, and that is where they want it, where they can get to it to cross, and Swanson knows it as well as I do, and him and his father are the only two men that I have heard of in Deer Park, that don't want the bridge built at its present location., and if he has sold out to schemers at Highlanding the town of Deer Park has not. Please publish and oblige,

Yours Truly, EDWARD SINGER.

Town Clerk of Deer Park.

It can be seen by the above that Swanson is not "voicing the sentiment of the people of our town" (Deer Park), as he said he was in the leven towns. Swanson, in his writeings, reminds us of a chicken, that is being chased in a farmers barn yard that will run and stick his head into a hay stack and leave the rest of his rear end exposed to plain view, where he can be easily caught.

A GREAT RUNNER.

One of His Feats of Which He Had to Be Reminded.

"I'm the real thing as a runner," said Howard James majestically as he seated himself at the first home dinner since his return from college. His mother and sister looked at him in sheer admiration.

"Yes, mother, I wish you could have been at the university to see me run. During the football season I ran away from every one on the team. They were not in it for a minute. In the classes I took the lead, leaving them in the lurch. I always stood highest in my lectures. And then when it came to selecting a president for the class I made the race. When the voting started I ran second, but at the last, well, I ran ahead of all of the other candidates. There's no doubt about it. I'm a runner. Of course, when the baseball season opened the crowd wanted me to get on the team. At first I hesitated because I realized my superiority, but persuasion succeeded. I went on the team, and the way I ran bases was a positive shame. Then I went into the track meet. I ran ten yards in ten seconds, almost equaling the world's record. Yes; I am a runner. Then"—

"Then you ran into debt," interrupted Old Man James, with a distinctive grunt, "and I have to pay you out."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

How He Got a Drink.

An Indiana traveling man told a story the other day of an incident on the road. He was in the smoking car of an express train reading his paper when a man rushed in from the car behind the smoker, evidently in great agitation and said: "Has anybody in this car any whisky? A woman in the car behind has fainted!" Instantly dozens of flasks were produced. The man who had asked for it picked out the largest one, drew the cork and put the bottle to his lips. With a long, satisfied sigh, he handed the flask back and remarked, "That did me a lot of good, and I needed it, for it always makes me feel queer to see a woman faint away!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Tricked of the Time.

A Philadelphia lawyer who spends most of his time at his country estate employs a sturdy Irish gardener whose one desire in life is to live until the banner of freedom is unfurled over Ireland.

One evening the lawyer strolled through the grounds of his place and stopped to have a chat with the gardener.

"Michael, do you know that while we are here enjoying the beautiful twilight it is dark midnight in Ireland?" he asked.

"Faith, an' Oi'm not surprised," replied the gardener. "Ireland niver got justice yit."—Judge.

Money Getters.

"Do you think it pays to send our sons to college? Do they obtain the practical experience in money getting that is so necessary in these days?"

"Well, judging from the experience I have had with my son, I should say they did. His practical experience in money getting increases with every letter that I receive from him."

Simplified Debate.

"Are you going to attempt to answer all the charges made against you?"

"Certainly," replied Senator Sorghum. "Answering charges these days is easy. All you've got to do is to say, 'You're another.'"—Washington Star.

Marlin

THE Marlin Model 1894 is a medium light weight repeating rifle, a well proportioned, finely balanced gun with all the advantages and comforts of the Marlin solid-top, side-ejecting construction. It is quick and easy of operation, accurate up to 300 yards and a very pleasant gun to carry and to shoot.

For settled districts and farming country where the shooting at woodchucks, badgers, foxes, 'coons, hawks, etc., is at ranges from 160 to 200 yards, the .25-20 and .32-20 rifles with the black and low-pressure smokeless loads cannot be equalled for accuracy and safety. The factory ammunition for the Model '94 rifles is cheap, and can be reloaded at very small cost.

The up-to-date sportsman needs the "Marlin Book" every day in the year. It contains 136 pages of live stuff for the man who loves a good gun, and wants to know everything about it. FREE for 3 stamps postage.

A Metaphor With a History.

To "know a hawk from a hernshaw" is a metaphor with a curious history. It is a comparison drawn from falconry. "Hernshaw" is a corruption of "heronshaw," or young heron, a bird which was a common prey of the falcons. To know a hawk from a hernshaw is therefore to be able to distinguish the falcon from its prey. A further colloquial corruption crept into the phrase—"to know a hawk from a handsaw," a form used by Hamlet in one place. Possibly the distinction between a hawk and a hernshaw was found not to be strong enough for the purposes of the proverb.—Manchester Guardian.

Agreed With the Lecturer.

During a lecture at one of the schools on the subject of "Ventilation and Architecture," the temperature of the room rose to a very high pitch.

"And now we will turn to 'drafts,'" said the lecturer.

"So we will," said one of the audience, wiping his brow, "unless you open some of the windows."—Tit-Bits.

What Elsie's sister wanted to know was where Elsie got that beautiful silver mounted walking stick. But Elsie didn't want Elsie's sister to know, so Elsie's sister got Elsie's father to ask Elsie.

"I found it," Elsie poutingly informed her father, "floating like a schooner on the waves one day when I was bathing."

But two days later Elsie's sister said to Elsie:

"Come—tell me! What is his name?"

"Name!" repeated Elsie blankly. "What do you mean?"

"I mean, dear," said Elsie's sister, "that last night I tried to make that stick of yours float in the bath, and—well, darling, it sank!"—Pearson's Weekly.

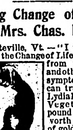
WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.



Worms

"Cascarets are certainly fine. I gave a friend one when the doctor was treating him for cancer of the stomach. The next morning he passed four pieces of a tape worm. He then got a box and in three days he passed a tape-worm 45 feet long. It was Mr. Matt Freck, of Millersburg, Dauphin Co., Pa. I am quite a worker for Cascarets. I use them myself and find them beneficial for most any disease caused by impure blood."

THE CRACKING OF PAINT.

Property Owners Can Save Money by Learning the Cause.

Do you know what is wrong when paint peels, or cracks, or otherwise necessitates premature re-painting?

Well, sometimes it hasn't been properly applied—the surface being damp or there being too much turpentine or too much drier.

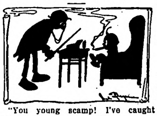
But, nine times out of ten, the trouble is caused by adulterated white lead.

To avoid all such trouble, every houseowner should know in a general way, when a surface is in proper condition to receive paint, what kind of primer and finishing coats different surfaces require, and how to avoid adulteration in materials.

A complete painting guide, including a book of color schemes, specifications for all kinds of painting work, and an instrument for detecting adulterations in painting materials, with directions for using it, can be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Bldg., New York, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49.

This company, the largest makers of pure white lead, invite tests, by means of the blowpipe (included in outfit), or in any other way, of the purity of the white lead sold under their famous "Dutch Boy Painter" trademark. That trademark on a keg of white lead is in itself an absolute guarantee of purity and quality.

DUTIFUL SON.



"You young scamp! I've caught you smoking my cigars!"

"Yes, pa—er—er—you see I heard ma say that you were smokin' yourself to death and er—I'm tryin' to save your life!"

The Strenuous Blanche.

One of Blanche Bates' most intimate friends is telling a rather funny story about this clever actress.

"She came into my house one evening very much excited, and I said to her: 'Blanche, for heaven's sake, what is the matter? You seem to be all gone to pieces.'

"'Matter enough,' she answered, as her voice shook with anger. 'I have been accosted by a man in the streets.'

"'What did you do?' I asked.

"'I hauled off and hit him in the face,' she answered, 'and I said to him: "You dirty dog, would you speak to a defenseless woman?"'

"'And where was he when you said this?' I again inquired.

"'Rolling in the gutter where he fell when I hit him,' she said, in a surprised tone at my question."—Toledo.

The Secret of Success.

The motto of success was given in this tale, told at a banquet:

A Swede among the miners in the west was noted for always striking pay dirt. His fellows thought that there must be some secret to the unusual success of the Swede and questioned him as to how he always succeeded in finding the spot where the gold cropped out.

"Vell, Ay don't know ef Ay can tell anytang 'bout dat," answered Ole. "Ay only know dat Ay yust keep on diggin'."—Milwaukee Free Press.

A Modern Miracle.

"I caused the dumb to speak today."

"How was that?"

"I was stopped in the street by a beggar with an 'I Am Deaf and Dumb' placard on his breast, and when I expressed the opinion that he was an impostor he immediately recovered his speech and in vigorous Anglo-Saxon requested me to go to—er—the place that the new theology tells us doesn't exist, and mind my own business and he'd mind his!"

SISTER'S TRICK

But It All Came Out Right.

How a sister played a trick that brought rosy health to a coffee fiend is an interesting tale:

"I was a coffee fiend—a trembling, nervous, physical wreck, yet clinging to the poison that stole away my strength. I mocked at Postum and would have none of it.

"One day my sister substituted a cup of Postum piping hot for my morning cup of coffee but did not tell me what it was. I noticed the richness of it and remarked that the coffee tasted fine but my sister did not tell me I was drinking Postum for fear I might not take any more.

"She kept the secret and kept giving me Postum instead of coffee until I grew stronger, more tireless, got a better color in my sallow cheeks and a clearness to my eyes, then she told me of the health-giving, nerve-strengthening life-saver she had given me in place of my morning coffee. From that time I became a disciple of Postum and no words can do justice in telling the good this cereal drink did me. I will not try to tell it, for only after having used it can one be convinced of its merits."

Ten days' trial shows Postum's power to rebuild what coffee has destroyed. "There's a Reason."

Processional ☩ ☩ ☩ ☩ to Calvary

(From Stainer's Oratorio, "Crucifixion.")

Fling wide the gates! for the Savior waits
To tread in His royal way;
He has come from above; in his power and love
To die on this Passion day.
His cross is the sign of a love divine.
His crown is the thorn-wreath of woe.
He bears His load on the sorrowful road
And bends 'neath the burden low.

How sweet is the grace of His sacred face
And lovely beyond compare
Though weary and worn, with the merciless scorn
Of a world He has come to spare.
The burden of wrong that earth bears along,
Past evil, and evil to be;
All sins of man since the world began,
They have laid, dear Lord, on Thee.

Then on to the end, my God and my Friend,
With Thy banner lifted high!
Thou art come from above, in Thy power and love
To endure and suffer and die!

Woman and the Life Festival

IN THE dim childhood of the human race, man, not woman, was made the central figure, it appears, of much that celebrated the triumphs of life over death, the conquests of mankind over the foes that beset and menaced the highest but not the strongest of the animals. Fatherhood was honored more than motherhood, in some parts of the crude, young world, and the patriarchal head of the family quite eclipsed his mate or mates in such distinction as came from obedience to the injunction to "be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth."

It is different now. In this stage of the world's development the festival of the renewing and reawakening of life is mainly feminine, notwithstanding the fact that it celebrates the resurrection of the Son of Man. Women, not men, make of Easter the great spectacle and day of rejoicing which it has become in nearly all parts of the Christian world. Women predominate in the churches. Women give the Easter streets their glow of color and wealth of charm.

The world understands now, if it did not long ago, that woman is the high priestess of the temple of life. She is the mother, the nurse, the guardian angel of childhood. She is the teacher, the comforter, the home builder. She takes few lives and saves many. She risks her own life that others may live. Woman earns her primacy in the great festival of the year's new birth.

In the realm of the spirit, also, woman is the priestess of life. She is the embodiment, in a higher degree than man, of the hope of the race, the buoyancy and faith of the soul, the optimism of trust in the reign of good and the triumph of life over death. She has more of the resurrection spirit than man.

It is for this reason, quite as much as because of woman's grace and charm and song and laughter, that she fits so pre-eminently the Easter environment. She has the spirit and mental outlook of spring. She responds more sensitively and joyously than man to the re-awakening of life on the earth, the bursting of buds, the unfolding of little leaves, the quickening of forest and orchard, field and garden.

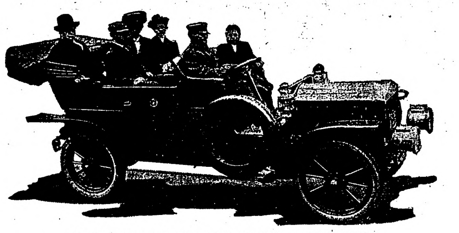
It is easier for woman to believe than for man, easier for her to feel and thrill to the appeal of the resurrection. She enters more intensely than man into the very heart and soul of the Easter story. And the spirit that accepts most unreservedly and gladly Easter's religious and historic meaning is the spirit which is best attuned to the springy glory of the world.

The difference is clearly marked early in life. Easter is far more to the girl than to the boy. The former, not the latter, finds that the day appeals to her strongly before she understands much of its significance. The boy's interest is narrower, less certain, less hearty. He is out of touch with much that his sister feels in the Easter ceremonies and the Easter customs.

From infancy to old age, therefore, the spring festival is distinctively a woman's festival. It is feminine in outward beauty and charm. It is feminine, also, in the inner grace of the heart that feels and the spirit that believes in the reign of good and the unending triumphs of life over death, the cradle over the grave, the new over the old, the soul over the mortal body.

A grateful man never has to look into his pocketbook to see how much he has to be thankful for.

President Taft's White Steamer



PRESIDENT TAFT AND HIS FAMILY IN THEIR WHITE STEAMER

When the announcement was made several months ago that Mr. Taft would use an automobile during his term as President, much rivalry developed among the leading manufacturers for the honor of selling him a car and the public watched with interest to see what Mr. Taft's choice would be. The knowing ones predicted that the White Steamer would be selected and they pointed out that President Roosevelt had used White Steamers for two years at his summer home at Oyster Bay and had recommended this make to Mr. Taft as the most desirable.

This prediction proved correct, although Mr. Taft did not rely solely on Mr. Roosevelt's recommendation, but, with his usual thoroughness, determined to have an investigation made of all the principal makes. Accordingly, he asked several officers of the War Department to look into the matter for him, and they tested many makes of cars, visited a number of factories so that they might see what materials were used, and, finally, they investigated the records of the different types of cars in public contests and in private service.

When their labors were completed, the officials reported unanimously to Mr. Taft in favor of the White, and, accordingly, a car of this make was immediately ordered from the manufacturers, The White Company of Cleveland.

The new car was delivered to Mr. Taft in Washington a few days before his inauguration and since that time it has been in almost constant use. There has not been a day when the President or some member of his family have not been seen riding around the National Capital in the new car. It is hinted that Mr. Taft likes fast traveling and that when he rides out into the open country, he does not always insist that the speed of the car be kept within the legal limits.

W. J. Urquhart, manager of the western branch of the White Company, 239 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill., said recently to a correspondent of this paper: "We are receiving many inquiries each day asking for full details regarding the construction of Mr. Taft's car and in reply we are sending copies of our catalog. Mr. Taft's car is exactly like any other Model 'M' 40 horse-power White Steamer, except that his car has the United States coat-of-arms painted on either door. In other words, when we make a car for the President of the United States there is no way in which we can make it any better than the car which you, or anybody else, can purchase from us.

"Some of those writing to me about Mr. Taft's car say that, although they are very desirous of having a car like Mr. Taft's, they are afraid that such a car is somewhat larger and more expensive than they desire. In reply to such letters, I point out that our Model 'O' 20 horse-power car is exactly like our 40 horse-power model, except as regards the size of the different parts. The principle of construction is exactly the same and the smaller car possesses all the desirable qualities of our larger model. In other words, one can secure an exact duplicate of Mr. Taft's car for $4,000, or a car of the same qualities, but of smaller dimensions, for only $2,000. Judging by the demand for White cars, a good proportion of those desiring to purchase automobiles are quite content to trust President Taft's judgment as to the best and most desirable make."

Western Canada the Pennant Winner

"The Last Best West"

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The government of Canada now gives to every actual settler 160 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. The 300,000 contented American settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1908 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

GENERAL WILLIAM BOOTH

GEN. BOOTH ON EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY STARTS NEW PLAN

Veteran Founder of Salvation Army Launches Scheme for "University of Humanity" in the United States---All the World Celebrates Anniversary of His Birth.

New York.—Gen. William Booth, founder and commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, celebrated his eightieth birthday on Saturday, April 10, and the event was made the occasion of rejoicing all over the civilized world. The Army itself held big meetings in every city and town where it is established, and these were participated in by hundreds of thousands of other citizens who were glad to do honor to the distinguished philantropist.

Gen. Booth himself presided over several monster mass meetings in London. His advanced age and the fact that he was operated on recently for cataract did not deter him from taking part in the celebrations held by his devoted soldiers.

University of Humanity Launched.

In America the day was marked especially by the launching of another of Gen. Booth's original schemes for social reform in the United States. At every post of the army was announced the beginning of work to found a University of Humanity, a great institute for the training of workers in social service. The university will be divided between New York and Chicago, and it is expected to begin with a fund of $1,000,000. The gathering of this fund is the work that the army now enters upon in commemoration of its famous leader's completion of his eightieth year.

As a much-needed stone in the great organizational structure that William Booth has been building during the past 47 years, this idea of a school for the systematic training of his workers has been in his mind for several years. On his last visit to the United States the general made his first tentative announcement of the plan. Since then he has worked out many of the details and he has just consented to the beginning of preliminary work in this country where the need for trained workers has been especially great.

No other religious organization in the world's history has branched out into so many departments of philanthopic effort and absorbed them as part of its religious duties.

Need of Trained Workers.

The scheme for a University of Humanity grew naturally out of the development of the 20 other departments. With a field as wide as the world itself the work of the Salvation Army is only limited by the number of workers that can be secured and its effectiveness by the understanding and earnestness of these workers. As uplift work has grown from local efforts to help a few into a great inclusive movement which must miss none, the problems of organization have grown greater. Charity has become a science and its application an art requiring the highest development of personal qualities of insight and altruism. There is thus pressing need for workers of quite exceptional qualification. These qualifications must first of all be inherent and must then be developed by experience and special training.

This is the new work planned by Gen. Booth. Those women, for instance, who are to go among the slums of the big cities must not only have the desire to help but must know how real helpfulness can best be secured. They must understand by a study of practical sociology something of the social forces that create this poverty and crime and wretchedness. They must understand the danger of the unwise charity that merely increases dependence and understand the value of better living conditions in raising the moral courage of those to whom fate has been unkind. They must be able not only to correct home conditions themselves but to impart their knowledge and to inspire with a desire for betterment.

Value of the Organization.

This will be but a small part of the university's training in social service as planned by the patriarchal evangelist, but it serves to show of what value such an organization will be.

Of the general's plan for the university he himself said recently: "I want to train men and women to deal with misfortune. I want them instructed to combat with the weaknesses and sins of the drunkard, the criminal, the pauper and the would-be suicide."

At 80 years of age the head of the Salvation Army, after more than half a century of almost unceasing activity, is as vigorous and untiring as at any time in his career. The inexhaustible vitality and intellectual and physical activity of this social reformer, philanthropist, preacher, author and traveler are marvelous. At fourscore he is traveling many thousands of miles over the world every year, controlling the destinies of his more than 7,000 corps of Salvation soldiery with their 18,000 commissioned officers, distributed among every civilized country, preaching constantly to vast audiences and doing an amount of literary work that would be a factor to many a professional author with no other occupation.

William Booth was born on April 10, 1829, in Nottingham, England, and was trained for the Methodist ministry which he entered and became one of the strongest evangelistic forces in that church. He grew dissatisfied, however, at reaching only those with some religious training and conviction. He felt that there were thousands whose need was far greater and he gravitated to the East end of London where wretchedness of all kinds was the rule.

In a disused burial ground on Mile End road he pitched an old tent and the first Salvationist meeting was held in that tent in 1861. The fiery eloquence of the earnest young preacher caught the attention of a crowd of poor Whitechapelers and before that first meeting was over he had made several conversions, a performance that he has been repeating throughout the world for 47 years.

This first meeting resulted in the formation of the Christian mission, from which it was the evangelist's custom to send his converts to the existing churches of the locality, but finding that they were not welcomed and were in danger of slipping back from sheer want of comradeship and oversight, he set about forming societies of the converted. These he found to be a potent agency for bringing in more, as the heedless East ender could be impressed by the words of a former "pal" when he would not listen to a minister. So was created the central idea of the Salvation Army.

The need of organization becomes apparent, but several methods were tried with little success before Gen. Booth hit upon the military idea and named his organization the Salvation Army. From that time on the movement grew amazingly and it has continued to grow without ceasing to this day.

Spread Over the World.

The movement began spreading to other countries of the world in 1881 when it first reached the United States through the influence of a silkweaver who had emigrated from Coventry, England, bringing with him the Salvation Army idea and a strong desire to continue in the work. It reached Australia in the same year through a milk dealer from Stephey, and soon afterwards the first Canadian corps was organized in a similar fashion.

Five years later, in 1886, the general made the first of many visits to the American branches of the army and he has seen them grow from a few small corps into a voritable army of tremendous influence and unsurpassed efficiency. His first great world-tour was made in 1891, when he visited South Africa, Australia and India. Since then he has visited the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and India four times, South Africa twice and Japan and the Holy Land each once.

During all these travels the actual executive responsibility for the government of the army has never been lifted from his shoulders. Even on shipboard he is an indefatigable worker, planning and writing through the days.

Gen. Booth Honored.

One of the most remarkable of the many tributes paid to the general by the great of the world was that of the mikado of Japan during the visit to that country. The mikado personally received the general with great warmth and he was accorded remarkable ovations in Yokohama, Tokyo, Sendai and Kyoto, a circumstance of strange import when it is realized that Japan is not a Christian country.

Another interesting distinction given Gen. Booth was the conferring on him of the degree of doctor of civil law by Oxford university. The significance of this honor will be better understood when it is stated those who received university honors with him at the time were Prince Arthur of Connaught, the prime minister of England, the lord chancellor, the speaker, Sir E. Grey, the archbishop of Armagh, Sir Evelyn Wood, the American ambassador, Mark Twain and Rudyard Kipling.

As a writer Gen. Booth is remarkable, both as a stylist, as a thinker and as a producer. He has written in all 21 volumes, besides innumerable articles for the army publications. His best-known book is "In Darkest England and the Way Out," in which he outlined his scheme for social reform by means of colonization. "The Training of Children," "Love, Marriage and the Home," and his books on reform are among the others of the general's best-known literary productions.

Of his creed the general has written very beautifully. He says:

"The simplicity of our creed has been, as I believe it will remain, one of the principal helps to our unity. We stand for the old truths. The faith which can be interpreted in terms of duty, of unselfishness, of purity, of love to God and man, is the only faith we really care about. Whatever may be the case with the select minority, the consciousness of sin, the force of evil habit and the consciousness of sin and the influence of passion, are all vivid realities with the great masses of the population. To them we bring the promise of deliverance by Jesus Christ."

ELECTIONS HELD IN SEVEN STATES

REPUBLICANS GENERALLY WIN IN ILLINOIS.

CHICAGO GRAY WOLVES LOSE

License Question the Issue in Many Wisconsin and Indiana Towns—Democrats Lose Control of St. Louis.

Chicago.—Returns from the municipal elections held in this state Tuesday show the Republicans as winners in most of the towns and cities.

In Chicago, Isaac N. Powell (Rep.) was elected city treasurer; Francis D. Connery (Dem.) was elected city clerk.

Eighteen Republicans and 18 Democrats were elected aldermen. Control of the new council was safely vested in the respectable element of that body, and the gray wolves were beaten badly in their scheme to grab off the council organization.

The proposal to levy a special tax for the establishment of a tuberculosis sanitarium was carried by a tremendous majority.

In Springfield, L. Y. Sherman was defeated for mayor by John S. Schnepp (Dem.) by a plurality of 300.

Andrew Olson was re-elected mayor of Moline by a majority of 300 over C. J. Carlson (Rep.). John M. Keefer (Rep.) defeated Thomas J. Dudman (Citizen) for mayor of Macomb by a majority of 173. Jerseyville voted "dry" by 186 majority. In Quincy Mayor Best (Rep.) was defeated for re-election by John A. Steinbach (Dem.). The local optionists were defeated in Decatur, the "wet" Republican township ticket winning. The Republicans swept Peoria in the municipal election, and, with the exception of city attorney, elected their ticket. Former Mayor E. N. Woodruff defeated Mayor O'Connor by a majority of about 1,800.

Results in Wisconsin.

Milwaukee.—Municipal elections were held in a large number of cities throughout Wisconsin Tuesday, the issue of "license" or "no license" being at stake. License carried in a majority of the cities and towns thus far heard from.

The following places carried for "license:"

Beloit, Baraboo, Appleton, Sparta, Oshkosh, Plainfield, Platteville, Plymouth, West Salem, Brodhead, Fennimore, Barron, Ashland, Onalaska, Galesville, Rhinelander, Eagle River, Stanley, Eau Claire, Marinette, Neenah, Somers and Blanchardsville.

The towns voting "dry" are:

Mondovia, Eleva, Gilmanton, New Lisbon (tie), Sturgeon Bay, White Hall, Grantsburg, Richmond, Stoughton, Albany, Decatur, Lodi, Black Earth, Bloomington.

Two Indiana Counties "Wet."

Indianapolis.—The local option wave which has been sweeping Indiana dashed up against the Blackford and Cass county barriers Tuesday and received a setback which breaks the great string of victories for the antisaloon cause.

Returns from Missouri.

St. Louis.—The election of the Republican city ticket by 9,000 votes was conceded by the Democrats after 227 precincts out of 403 in the city showed Frederick H. Kreismann, Republican nominee for mayor, had received 32,466 votes and his Democratic opponent, William G. Woerner, 25,709.

Jefferson City, the capital of Missouri, elected John F. Heinrichs (Dem.) mayor. At Columbia the Democratic ticket won over a Citizens' ticket favored by the Civic league. Most of the smaller cities and towns in eastern Missouri reported Democratic victories.

How the Kansans Voted.

Various elections in Kansas were hotly contested. Leavenworth elected Omar Abernathy mayor and Wichita chose Charles L. Davidson. Both of these contests were under the commission form of government, and resulted in its continuance.

The "dry" ticket was successful in Topeka, but the liberals won in Atchison and Lawrence. Topeka re-elected William Green as mayor. Lawrence elected S. D. Bishop over Prof. W. H. Carruth of the University of Kansas.

Elections in Nebraska.

Lincoln.—The question of saloon license was the dominating issue in the municipal elections held in Nebraska towns and villages Tuesday, and returns, while showing a few surprising changes, do not indicate a landslide to either side. The gains, especially in the smaller towns, are on the side of the "drys."

Drys Victorious in Michigan.

Detroit, Mich.—Of the 27 counties which voted Monday on the question of abolishing the sale and manufacture of liquor within their borders, 20 went "dry" and seven "wet."

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Tin Carried in Body Ten Years.

Fairmont, Minn.—Chris Thompson's body has been yielding up all sorts of things, including other peoples' bones. The last operation was on one of his legs, and several pieces of tin were taken out from where they had been imbedded in the flesh more than ten years. It was near Lakefield, where two men were blasting a stone out of a well, that he was injured, as a result of a premature explosion of four pounds of dynamite. The two workmen were killed, one of them being blown literally to bits. The mangled body of the other man was hurled against Thompson, who was a rod or two away. The fact that this man was directly between him and the explosion saved his life, but his flesh was pierced by human bones, tin, metal, sand and gravel. At different times since the accident articles have been removed from his flesh. One of the largest was a piece of the handle of a jacknife, around which was wrapped a piece of overall cloth. It is supposed that the metal taken out was from the knife in the pocket of the man who was handling the dynamite when it exploded.

Last Murder Suspect Dismissed.

Little Falls.—The hearing in the case of the State vs. Albert Frederickson of Darling in which the defendant was charged with the murder of Annie Kintop at Darling, April 10 1905, was concluded and the defendant discharged. The hearing was the longest ever heard in this city and consumed four days. The state based its case on the fact that the young woman was last seen alive in the defendant's store and was not seen to leave the store alive. The defendant was represented by Attorneys E. S. Cary of Minneapolis and N. N. Bergheim of this city.

At the conclusion of the Frederickson hearing, Hugh Kennedy of Randall, Minn., was brought up for hearing on the same charge. Kennedy has been held in the local jail for several weeks, but when brought up for hearing was dismissed on motion of the state. His dismissal freed the last of the five men held for the murder of Annie Kintop.

Bridge Accident Victim Dead.

Knud Platson, who was run over and fatally injured by a Northern Pacific train at Twenty-fourth avenue north and the railroad bridge, died at the City hospital. Platson was overtaken by a freight train when half way across the bridge. He made an attempt to get out of the way, but was struck by the engine and knocked down, several cars passing over his left arm, which had to be amputated. He also received a deep wound in the head, which was the cause of his death.

New Post-Office in 1910.

Minneapolis.—If the word lies with Supervising Architect James Knox Taylor, there will be no work done on the Minneapolis post-office until the spring of 1910. Mr. Taylor stated that it would probably be impossible to complete the plans for the Minneapolis office before next fall, and that work on clearing the site and starting construction would not be likely to begin before a year from this spring. The building would be completed, he said, in a year or a year and a half.

Baby Smothered by Bed Clothes.

Minneapolis.—Smothered by the bed clothes, the little 3-weeks-old baby girl of Mr. and Mrs. Axel Larson, was found dead in bed on the awakening of the mother. Dr. T. Holen was at once called, but nothing could be done for the child. A death certificate was returned to the health office with the notation that death was due to suffocation by accident.

Dies as Result of 50-Foot Fall.

Minneapolis.—Earl H. Rice, a foreman for the Minneapolis General Electric company, fell from a 50-foot steel tower a short distance west of Scandia, Wis., and was killed. His helper, who fell the same distance, will probably recover. The two men were placing a lightning arrester and received a heavy current from the wire.

NEWS NOTES.

Redwood Falls.—Miss Katherine Force and Emory Mason of Minneapolis, were married.

White Earth.—A. A. Ladoboer, issue clerk of the White Earth agency, one of the best-known men on the reservation, died of Bright's disease at the age of 39. Mr. Ladoboer came from Holland at an early age. His wife was a daughter of the late Paul H. Penuliou. She and one daughter and three sons survive him.

Minneapolis—The eminent actor, Thomas E. Shea, will appear at the Bijou, Minneapolis, the week of April 11th., under the direction of Messrs. Cohan and Harris. During his engagement here Mr. Shea will be seen in three great plays, "The Bells," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," and a new piece, "The Counsel for the Defense."

ADOPTS PAYNE BILL

HOUSE PASSES TARIFF MEASURE WITH A FEW MATERIAL CHANGES.

VOTE RESULTS 217 TO 161

Women's Protests Fail to Keep Duty Off Gloves and Stockings—Tea, Coffee, Oil and Hides Are Free.

Washington.—After three weeks of consideration the Payne tariff bill was passed by the house of representatives Friday night by a vote of 217 to 161.

One Republican, Austin of Tennessee, voted against the measure, and four Democrats, all from Louisiana, Messrs. Broussard, Estopinal, Pujo and Wickliffe, voted for it. An attempt by Champ Clark, the minority leader, to recommit the bill with instructions signally failed.

Hides, hosiery and gloves were left as reported by the committee, hides remaining free and an increased duty being presented for gloves and stockings.

One of the principal changes effected in the Payne bill since its introduction was the placing of petroleum on the free list. This involved a more seriously contested fight than any of the other amendments. Speaker Cannon, during the debate Wednesday on the amendment to reduce the duty, took the floor in defense of the higher rate of duty. Although an amendment to place oil on the free list was lost Thursday, a similar amendment offered by Chairman Payne yesterday was carried.

Among the other important amendments that have been made since the bill came from committee were those striking out the provision for a duty on tea and the countervailing duty proviso on coffee. The elimination of the maximum duty of 20 per cent. on coffee, contained in the maximum and minimum section of the bill, was also significant.

To the free list were added evergreen seedlings, cloves and nut oil, which is used in making varnish. The patent law provision, intended to retaliate for the new British patent law, was stricken out on account of an international convention. The so-called "joker" in the cotton cloth schedule which it was claimed would increase the duty of the Dingley bill several hundred per cent. was corrected, the proviso for the method of counting threads in the cloth being made the same as in the present law.

The section of restricting the contents of packages of tobacco was amended to conform with the present law in order that union labels may not be excluded from such packages. The countervailing duty clause on lumber was stricken out, but a strong effort to place lumber on the free list did not succeed.

The duties on barley, barley malt, charcoal iron, pineapples in crates, saccharine, medicated cotton and cotton collars and cuffs, as originally in the bill, were increased. To retaliate against Turkey, which country prohibits the importation of American filler tobacco, a proviso was included in the tobacco schedule increasing the duty on filler tabocco from any country which prohibits the importation of the American tobacco.

REJECT MINERS' DEMANDS

Anthracite Operators Refuse to Accept Offer of Men and Conference Fails to Agree.

Philadelphia.—After conferences extending since Wednesday between the anthracite coal operators and the officials of the United Mine Workers of America, representating the miners, at which the question of a wage agreement was discussed to replace that brought about by the anthracite strike commission, the operators Friday rejected the modified demands of the miners presented Thursday and the conference adjourned deadlocked.

There will be no strike inaugurated by the mine workers, however, and the only danger of a suspension of mining in the near future, according to the mine workers' officials, arises from the possibility of a lockout.

CALLS THREE MURDERERS

Sensational Charges Are Made by Evansville Woman in a Suit for a Divorce.

Evansville, Ind.—That her own husband, Frank Rice, his sister, Mrs. Albert Taylor, and Dr. L. M. Stroud, brought about the death of Albert Taylor at Terrell, Tex., January 8, 1905, by poison, is charged by Mrs. Ida Rice in an affidavit filed in her suit for divorce.

Mrs. Rice alleges that an insurance company paid $5,000 on the death of Taylor, and that this money was divided among those she accuses.

THE SUNBEAM,

BY W. C. HUNT,

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 20, 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam' Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

It would be a safe bet to make, that if governor Jahnson should again run for governor, that he would not get many votes in Cass Lake.

With a pretty sure prospect that the Soo railroad will be built from Thief River Falls to Duluth this year, and a very good prospect that in will cross the Eleven towns, look out for a big rush of new settlers to this part of Red Lake County this season.

Our neighbors out east, near Highlanding, stand a good chance to get a bridge across the Red Lake River if they can only agree on where it should be located —St.Hilaire Spectator.

All the people liveing on the south side of the river agree on location, except a couple of the Swansons, that are working in connection with people at Erie to try to oppose this bridge, but as the bridge is the most needed by the people on the south side of the river, and as they have all signed the petition, for the bridge at its present location, except the Swansons, we don't think their opposition could be construed as a disagreement on location, for if there is anyone that is of the opinion that Swanson is working honestly in this matter, just let them go and ask his neighbors.

The people of the northern part of Deer Park, are going to make an effort to get a ditch opened on the natural water course from the town line between Deer Park and Highlanding into Red Lake River. There are two natural water courses which can be opened to drain the wet land along the town line into the river and reclaim all the wet land in the northwest corner of Deer Park and the south west corner of this township, High landing. Of course it is easy to see which way the water runs, but we think it would be best to have the levels taken by an engineer before we start to get up a petition. Of course we all expect Swanson to "buck it to a stand still" the same as he does every other improvement, so we will mention it early, so he can get his space engaged in the leven towns, as that is the only paper in the county that would publish his "hog wash," in opposition to public improvements, as all editors always favor all public improvements, but the fellow at the head of that thing, can be excused, as he is not an editor.

He Hits Back.

There had been a domestic spat at breakfast.

"You monster!" snapped the matron, who was always scolding. "You are not like my two former husbands. They were tender men."

"I never doubted that they were tender, Maria," ventured the meek man, "when you kept them in hot water all the time." And he just cleared the front porch two yards ahead of the rolling pin. — Chicago News.

Pat's Services.

Clergyman—Pat, there's a hole in the roof of the church, and I am trying to collect money sufficient to repair it. Come, now, what will you contribute? Pat—Me services, sor. Clergyman—What do you mean, Pat? You are no carpenter. Pat—No, but if it rains next Sunday Oi'll sit over the hole.—Pearson's.

How poor are they that have no patience! What wound did ever heal but by degrees?—Shakespeare.

A Dead Kick From A Dead Horse.

"COD FISH SWANSON," HAS "COMMUNICATED" AGAIN.

"Cod Fish Swanson," the man that it is reported is representing ex-certifying town clerk Vrolson, in the bridge location, for a consideration of a couple of cod fish, or the value thereof, continues his misrepresentations in the last weeks leven towns, in which he says. "I think I am representing the share holders of the Highlanding creamery and other intrested parties (with the exception of Hunt) that wish to see their home enterprises prosper." When Swanson makes the above statement he knows it is not true. If he is backed up in his paid for lies, why is he so affraid to mention their names?

Now let us see who it is that wants to see his home enterprises prosper. When the question of building the Highlanding creamery was trembling in the ballance, who came to its rescue, with a $50, share and the pull of THE SUNBEAM, to get others to do the same? W. G. Hunt, if you please. Who was one of the first board of directors of that creamery, and contributed time, night and day, free of charge, as a member of that first bord to get that creamery running successfuly, so our faamers could reap the bennefit, and the country be built up? W.G.Hunt, if you please. Again when the success of that creamery was trembling in the ballance, for lack of ptronage, who turned his horses tails to and took their cream to the Clearwater creamery? Your father Mr. G. Swanson, the one man in Deer Park, that is backing you on this bridge location, if you please.

A large number of the shareholders of the Highlanding creamery, on this side of the river took shares with the expectation that this bridge would be built so they could cross the river and have a good road to the creamery, and anyone can see, by looking at one of Pleth's maps that the land north of the river is rated first class prairie, while the section line south of Highlanding is rated as 4th, class swamp Which way would the farmers have the best road to get to the creamery?

Now we want to ask Mr. Swanson one question and would like to have him answer it: Is it not a fact, that if John Poloni, and Dan Sullivan should go down to Deer Park and get a copy of that sign on the line of your land, which reads, "Keep The Line." Would it not be as imposiable to get to Highlanding, in the summer time, with a team, from the south side of the river, as it would to the moon? You know your answer to this question must be yes, if you have any regard left for trouth, which we begin to doubt. Then you are trying to get the state aid for a bridge across Red Lake River at a point where you know only one man can get to it to cross from the south side of the river, as the "tool" of ex town clerk J. W. Vrolson, and "township bonder" Hanson, are you not? Hanson lives five miles north east of Highlanding, and of course is not much interested, but has been only a certifier, and a medler with something, that is not his business, and whose case we will attend to proper, when the time comes, the same as Vrolson and Swanson got theirs did.

The trouble with Swnson is, that all his backers for a change of this bridge location and one of his cod fish, are located on the north side of Red Lake River, the same side the creamery is on, while the people of the south side are lined up solid, to a man, for the present location, where they can get to it to cross, and get on a wagon road to town and their creamery

Large Doings.

On Long Island a hundred and more years ago there was fox hunting for three days during the season, and the biography of Catherine Schuyler contains the following apt lines from the pen of a witty woman whose name remains unknown:

A fox is killed by twenty men,
That fox perhaps had killed a hen.
A gallant act no doubt is here.
All wicked foxes ought to fear
When twenty dogs and twenty men
Can kill a fox that killed a hen.

"Sammy," said a Germantown mother recently to her youngest born, "when you divided those seven pieces of candy with your brother did you give him four?"

"No, ma'am," replied Sammy, "I knew they wouldn't come out even, so I ate one before I began to divide."—Harper's Weekly.

How Ledgers Got Their Names.

On the authority of the best lexicographers "ledger" is an adaptation of a once common word, "ligger," signifying any large book suited better for lying on a desk than for carrying about. Sometimes this was applied to a large account book, cartulary, or the like, frequently a great breviary for use in church, as distinct from a "portas," or small one, carried by a "book bosom priest." "Coucher" is another old synonym for "ligger," the foregoer of the now general "ledger."

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Wm. Rodman and Lewis M. Lunde, of Deer Park, were transactin business here, Monday.

We were mistaken in the name of the Quirk that got kicked by a horse last week, as it was Wm. instead of John, but, as he got well we suppose it don't make much difference.

John Quirk, returned home from N.D last Monday, bringing home with him a thourbred short horn bull, weighing two thousand lbs, which he feels justly proud of.

Highlanding have a ferry on the river but it can not be got to from this way, only by the "ertified" road, and as our farmers do not drive, ducks and geese for teams they can't travel that road.

If you get hungry going down to Thief River Falls, stop at The Soo Cafe, near the Soo depot, and get a lunch, or a square meal at a reasonable price.

George Jarman—Proprietor

We understand that John Quirk will not run the Sullivan ferry this year at its present location. If he does not the people on the south side of the river, are in where them and Deer Park township would have no way of geting out at all, to the north side of the river, and as there is no road on the south side to town, they will be up against it.

Mr. F. A. Way, of Haver City Wisconsin, was looking over the town of Highlanding last week, with a view to buying land. He was well pleased with the looks of the country, and will invest in farming lands quite extensivly, which will be settled up by young practical farmers from Wisconsin, who are looking for good farming lands, for homes, that can be bought at a reasonable price.

The Soo line have not started any surveyors out this way yet, but maybe they are waiting for Swanson to "Communicate" to the leven towns, and tell them where to build, but he is very busy just now advising the state of Minnesota, and his neighbors where to build a bridge across Red Lake River, at a point, where no one can get to it, and is badly hanicaped by haveing his wise? advise haveing (to be continued) instead of published.

The town of Highlanding had to pay $60.00 interest on their bonding deal, before they could get the money to pay, for their grader. This with a hundred and sixty dollars attorney fee, will make enough boodle to pay the expenses of a nice little automobile ride out to some summer resort, which the bankers and lawyers will take this summer, while the Highlanding farmer is being butted around the yard by a calf that he is trying to learn to drink, so he can raise it up to pay his taxes.

OUR SCHOOL DISTRICT,

For the bennefit of the tax payers of this school district No. 37, we will say that we got our state loan for 10 and 20 years compleated, just before the death of Mr. Overum, our treasurer, and his last official act for the district was to sign the draft, which he did, proped up in bed We promptly sent the draft to the bank, where we had notified all holders of school orders for lumber and the building of our school house to present them, and get their money, and them orders are paid and are now in the posession of Walter McAndress, our newly appointed treasurer, and will draw no more interest. The district got every dollar that they bonded for at 4 per cent interest, and the poor lawyers diden't get a cent.

Tongue Twisters.

Among brief tongue twisters the following are hard to beat: "The sun shines on the top signs;" "She says she shall sew a sheet;" "The sixth sick sheik's sixth sheep's sick." Some of Shakespeare's lines offer pitfalls to the rapid speaker. In "Midsummer Night's Dream" we find, "When lion rough in wildest rage doth roar," and in the same play

Oh, Fates, come, come!
Cut thread and thrum;
Quail, crush, conclude and quell.

—London Chronicle.

A Corsican Vendetta.

Lecturing on "The Land of the Vendetta" at the Royal Geographical society's headquarters, the Rev. T. T. Norgate said he had discovered instances of a vendetta being started in Corsica through a pig getting into another man's field, and this had caused the loss of perhaps hundreds of lives and had made two families deadly enemies for upward of 300 years. The men who carried on such a vendetta would scorn to rob any one of a sixpenny piece.—London Globe.

THE EARTH'S MOTIONS

How We Are Whirling Around and Through Space.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE SUN.

Without Its Attraction That Draws the World Toward It In an Elliptical Course Our Globe Would Wander on Forever in a Straight Line.

There are those who think much of moving from one point to another of the earth—travel they call it—and yet pay little heed to the wonderful journey of the earth itself. Many, again, go to seek a climate while the hurrying earth is bringing to them one climate after another in endless succession. Those who have not hitherto taken much notice of the earth's progress—who have not, so to speak, looked out of their carriage window as they are whirled along—might find a new interest in doing so. Look, for example, at the apparent size of the sun. Casual observation shows that it appears larger in the winter heavens. And exact measurements tell us that it is largest on Jan. 1 and smallest on July 2. The size of the sun thus marks the earth's nearest approach and greatest distance from the sun. Accurate astronomical measurement of the sun's diameter might even determine the day of the year, for the daily variation in the apparent size of the sun is some nine-fiftieths of a second of angular measurement. And astronomers profess to measure the second decimal of seconds.

There are three ways in which we are journeying with the earth. There is, first, the daily revolution, which carries us through a complete circle in twenty-four hours at a rate varying from rather more than a thousand miles an hour at the equator to nothing at the poles, where no one, by the way, has ever been. Then we are traveling around the sun once a year at the rate of eighteen miles a second. Thirdly, we are journeying through stellar space, for one of the most remarkable facts which modern astronomy has brought to light is that our solar system, the sun with all its planets, is on a journey toward the constellation Lyra at the rate of ten miles a second.

As we sit in a train and are whirled along it sometimes appears as if the scenery were flying past us rather than we past it. So the daily revolution of the earth—a thousand miles an hour at the equator—makes the sun rise and set, and our yearly journey makes the sun apparently travel through the constellations of the zodiac. If we move round any stationary object on the earth we see it with a constantly changing background—now a windmill, now a cottage, now a wood, now a church, etc. So as we travel round the sun we see it with an ever changing background of stars—now those of Aries, now of Taurus now of Gemini, and so on. The position of the sun among the stars marks the stages of the earth's annual journey And as the earth arrives at different points of its orbit the times of the risings of certain stars vary. These indications of the earth's progress have been taken as marks of the seasons. Thus when Sirius rose with the sun it was known that the dog days had begun. Early astronomers watched carefully for the rising of the dog star. The Egyptian astronomers looked for the heliacal rising of Sothis to proclaim the new year.

It is the earth's yearly journey round the sun which enables us to determine the distances of the stars. The method is precisely that adopted by surveyors for determining the position of objects on earth. The direction of the object whose distance is to be found is observed from two points a known distance apart The rest is mere calculation. In the case of the stars the directions are observed from two extreme points in the earth's orbit instead of from the two ends of a base line. The process is called triangulation when applied to earth measurements, and everybody understands what it means When applied to the stars it is called parallax and remains a mystery to most people Such is the obscuring power of a word.

The "little more" and the "little less" of Browning are forcibly illustrated in the direction of the earth's journey round the sun. An elliptic course differing very little from a circle, combined with a tilt of the axis, gives us the seasons. But if this difference and tilt did not exist there would be no seasons and one climate would rule the year If, again, the course were more elliptic, then for the hemisphere whose winter occurred at the earth's greatest distance from the sun there might be a glacial period.

"The straight line," says Miss Helen Keller, "symbolizes duty It is a dull thought drawn out endlessly." And this seems to be a reflection on what we had thought was the earth's path of duty round the sun, for this path is the curve known as the ellipse. Moreover, the thought makes the sun a tempter of the earth from the strict path of duty, for the earth, we learn from our Newton, if left to itself would wander on forever through space in a straight line. It is the sun which draws it from this dull course into the pleasant curve of subjection. Yet the sun's victory is only partial, the earth's actual path being a combination of its own straight line of inclination and obedience to the pull of the sun. And so instead of the "dull thought drawn out endlessly" we have the beautiful thought of the changing seasons, the flowers and fruits of the earth, with its ever varying weather, sunshine and storm, heat and cold.

Secret Society Among Soso Islanders.

The Soso islanders have attained a peculiar notoriety in Uganda because of a secret society called the Bachichi, which is not a burial society, although its members take a deep and intelligent interest in all deaths and burials in their midst. In the more retired villages, although greatly discouraged by the British authorities, it is said to be still the custom for the sorrowing relatives to bear the body of the deceased wrapped in bark on a rough bier to some forest thicket, desolate ravine or other unfrequented spot, where it is left unburied by the bearers, who never revisit the place again. The Bachichi, who are denizens of a neighboring village, and distant relatives of the deceased avoid the necessity of burial or cremation and show their respect for the deceased by simply eating him. —National Magazine.

A Disappointment.

"Yes," says the lady after an acquaintance of ten or fifteen years before has been renewed, "I remember you perfectly."

"Indeed?" murmurs the gratified man. "I am glad to know that."

"Yes; at one time I thought of marrying you."

"Oh," he replies dejectedly. "I thought for the moment that there might have been something that made me different from all the other men you ever knew."—Life.

A Stranger to His Ways.

A distinguished bishop of the Episcopal church, arriving late at a small town one night, found the hotel closed, and, hammering at the door for admission, a neighbor stuck his head out of an adjoining window, with, "Say, stranger, knock like the devil!" to which the bishop replied, "I don't know how."

Trouble Ahead.

It was in an electric car coming from Streatham one day last week. The loquacious lady seemed greatly perturbed and fully prepared for the strenuous life.

"Yes, I don't usually go into town at this time of the morning," said she, "but I rang up my husband on the telephone, and I heard him tell the office boy to say that he wasn't in, and that's what I'm going into town for."—London Tatler.

Why the Judge Paid.

A physician, says a medical journal that vouches for the truth of the story, was once summoned in haste to attend the child of a family that lived in two rooms in the heart of a large American city—not New York. The child had been seized suddenly and seriously and just at election time. The mother was in despair, and when the doubtful prognosis was given she broke into wailing and violent self condemnation for some horrible sin of the family to which she said the child's illness was due—a direct punishment for their crime. She would go and curse the magistrate for it all, her husband should "resign from the force," and such evil ways should be renounced forever.

Curious to know how the magistrate could be held responsible for the child's illness, the doctor finally secured the confession that the crime of the poor, conscience stricken woman consisted in allowing the names of many fraudulent voters to be registered as residing in her house, in swearing to the lie, etc. The magistrate also had demanded this of all the neighbors in return for indescribable political favors.

The child recovered, and the magistrate paid the physician's bill.

HARDSHIPS OF ARMY LIFE.

Left Thousands of Veterans with Kidney Trouble.

The experience of David W. Martin, a retired merchant of Bolivar, Mo., is just like thousands of others. Mr. Martin says: "I think I have had kidney disease ever since the war. During an engagement my horse fell on me, straining my back and injuring the kidneys. I have been told I had a floating kidney. I had intense pain in the back, headaches and dizzy spells, and the action of the bladder very irregular. About three years ago I tried Doan's Kidney Pills and inside of a comparatively short time was entirely rid of kidney trouble."

Artificial Wants.

Many a one, for the sake of finery on the back, has gone with a hungry belly and half-starved their families. "Silk and satin, scarlet and velvets," as Poor Richard says, "put out the kitchen fire." These are not the necessaries of life; they can scarcely be called the conveniences; and yet only because they look pretty, how many want to have them! The artificial wants of mankind thus become more numerous than the natural; and as Poor Dick says: "For one poor person, there are a hundred indigent."—Benjamin Franklin.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

AFTER SUFFERING TEN YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MARLTON, N.J.—I feel that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me new life. I suffered for ten years with serious female troubles, inflammation, ulceration, indigestion, nervousness, and could not sleep. Doctors gave me up, as they said my troubles were chronic. I was in despair, and did not care whether I lived or died, when I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; so I began to take it, and am well again and relieved of all my suffering."—Mrs. GEORGE JORDY, Box 40, Marlton, N.J.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

MINNESOTA SOLONS

BJORGE TONNAGE TAX BILL REPORTED BACK MONDAY.

Senator Sageng Introduces Resolution for Popular Hearing on Bill Tuesday Evening.

St. Paul, April 6.—By a vote of 39 to 16, the senate today passed the Spooner anti-cigarette bill, prohibiting the manufacture, sale, or even the giving away of cigarettes in the state of Minnesota. The bill as passed by the house took immediate effect, but an amendment was attached in the senate, making it effective August 1 next, in order that tobacco dealers having cigarette stocks on hand may have an opportunity to get rid of them.

The house today passed the employers' liability commission bill, and killed the Stuart bill providing a liability law for immediate effect so far as railroads and mining interests are concerned.

The bill which passed provides for a commission of three, one lawyer, one representative of labor, one representing employers; all to be named by the governor.

The bill was amended to cut the expense appropriation from $10,000 to $5,000, and passed by a vote of 96 to 11.

This afternoon was spent by the house in considering minor matters. The Peters state fair anti-pass bill only secured 47 votes in its favor to 29 opposed; 60 being necessary to carry it, and was accordingly declared lost.

The senate this afternoon passed the Pugh bill, providing that the refunding of $10,000 in bonds issued by the old town of Duluth in early days be submitted to a vote of its present residents. It also passed the Congdon bill, providing that legislation relating to cities of the Duluth class shall not affect Duluth unless they specifically mention cities with home rule charters.

The senate in committee of the whole recommended the Cooke bill for passage, providing for a text book commission to establish a uniform system of school books throughout the state. They also favorably acted upon a bill by the same author prohibiting the hobbling of horses at races.

Senator A. D. Stephens of Crookston is said to be drafting a new reapportionment bill which is very radical. It aims to reduce the senate membership from 63 to 15, the house from 119 to 30; that they remain in continuous session, and receive salaries of $3,000 a year.

The joint appropriations and finance committees of the two houses are wrestling with the general appropriation bill. They find that the appropriations run in total to $18,000,000 for the coming two years. On a one mill tax basis, the appropriations run $6,000,000 above the amount available, on a 1.7 mill basis, $4,500,000 above the amount available. It is now up to the committee to slash appropriations right and left to do away with the excess.

St. Paul, Minn. April 7.—Banking bills were a special order of business in the house this afternoon, and several very important measures went through with practically no debate. Most important of the lot, was the Thorpe senate bill, creating a separate and distinct department of banking from the office of the public examiner. It creates a state superintendent of banks at a salary of $5,000 a year, and a deputy at $2,500 a year, to be appointed by the governor, and provides a system of examining, auditing, and generally controlling all banks, trust companies, and building and loan associations.

The bill by Representative Buck of Duluth passed, providing that in cities of over 50,000 inhabitants, state banks must have a capital of at least $25,000. A second senate bill by Thorpe which passed, provides that in event of banks going into liquidation or a receiver being named, the superintendent of banks shall be such receiver. A senate bill by Weiss passed, to permit state banks to establish separate savings bank departments. A house file by W. H. Putnam passed, to permit state depositories to put up approved bonds as security for such deposits in lieu of the present surety bonds demanded.

The house this afternoon refused to passed the Burdette Thayer bill providing for re-establishment of the old state board of equalization to act in co-operation with the state tax commission. The bill only drew 14 votes in its favor.

The house today considered the two remaining liability bills, both by Representative Campbell of Minneapolis, as a special order, and passed them. One provides that all general casualty insurance companies operating in the state, report all accidents of industrial employees on which they have liability, to the state insurance commissioner. The other bill provides that employers report all accidents of employees to the state labor commissioner. The idea is that statistics may be secured from these two bills, to aid in drafting a general liability bill to be considered by the legislature two years from now.

The senate this afternoon considered the L. C. Spooner Indian school bill as a special order, finally passing it by a vote of 37 ayes to 14 nays. This is the bill to permit the state of Minnesota to accept as a gift from the federal government, the Indian school property at Morris, Minn., to be used as a state agricultural school. The property consists of some 460 acres, and several substantial stone school buildings, the only provision in the gift being that the state must agree to accept Indian students who apply.

The Robertson house bill for state tax or license of peddlers, was considered by the senate in committee of the whole this afternoon. This is the bill which Gov. Johnson vetoed when it passed two years ago, and Senator A. D. Works, the democratic member from Mankato, strongly opposed it, finally succeeding in getting an amendment, cutting the license fee for rigs with teams from $75 to $50 a year; rigs with one horse, $50 to $25; foot peddlers, $25 to $10. He then moved indefinite postponement of the bill, but this motion lost and one by C. A. Johnson that it be recommended to pass, prevailed.

By a vote of 61 to 51, the Adams bill to extend local option to cities of the fourth class, went down in the house today on the adoption of a motion for indefinite postponement made by John F. Selb of St. Paul.

Three hundred strong, came the leading business men from Duluth and the iron range country this evening. C. A. Congdon of Duluth, in a lengthy address, impressed upon the tax committee of the senate their arguments against the proposed tonnage tax on the iron mines. The Northern Pacific train which brought them to St. Paul shortly after 6 p. m. had to be run in two sections to accommodate the crowd. Each man was labeled with a broad blue ribbon badge, on which in heavy black letters was printed, "No Tonnage Tax," and the name of the town from which the wearer hailed.

St. Paul, Minn., April 8.—By a vote of 34 to 25, the Senate today sustained a resolution introduced by Senator Ole Sageng of Otter Tail county, requiring the Senate committee on taxes to report the Bjorge tonnage tax bill back to the Senate next Monday.

The House bill to legalize Sunday baseball, which has been shyly resting with the Senate committee on municipal corporations for some time past, came into the Senate today with a recommendation that the bill pass, and was advanced to general orders, the committee report being adopted without comment or opposition.

A resolution was presented by Ole Sageng in the Senate this afternoon, extending an invitation to all interested in the iron tonnage tax bill to be present at the hearing next Tuesday evening, and also requesting all members of the Senate to be present. It was adopted without comment.

On request of the Governor, a bill was introduced in the Senate by George H. Sullivan of Stillwater, to permit of a special election in that city to select a successor to J. G. Armson, resigned to accept appointment by the Governor as a member of the tax commission. It was passed under suspension of the rules without objection.

Senator W. A. Hinton of Martin county also introduced a bill with request of the Governor to permit the state board of health to establish rules for sanitation and public safety in hotels and lodging houses. The bill was referred to the committee on public health.

The House this afternoon indefinitely postponed a fun-maker, in the shape of the bill prohibiting "any female person to wear red, white and blue tights, or other unseemly apparel displaying the national colors at any public performance." There was no ado over the measure's demise.

The Rosenwald bill, making burglary with explosives punishable by imprisonment for 25 to 40 years, was amended to make the penalty ten years or over, and then passed.

Other bills passed by the House included: by special drainage committee, to authorize the state drainage commission to construct outlet for the waters of Mustinka State ditch in Traverse county; by St. Louis county delegation, to raise the salary of the assistant county attorney from $900 to $1,200 because of additional work in connection with the new iron range court; by Farrington, prohibiting killing of game upon Minnesota parks or forest reserves.

Both Senate and House adjourned today till Monday, tomorrow being Good Friday, a legal holiday.

The Greeks of Manhattan.

"One generally connects the idea of a Greek," mused the melancholy man, "with Marathon sports, bare knees, robes, togas, large eyes, perfect features, magnificent ruins, and crumbling marble pillars, but a New York Greek is generally a man who keeps a candy store."

Sexton Dug His Own Grave.

The death occurred at Barwell, near Nuneaton, recently of John Needham, the oldest bell-ringer in England, who celebrated his ninety-sixth birthday a few months ago. As sexton of Barwell he had dug 2,500 graves and been present at 600 weddings. Some years ago he dug his own grave and therein he was interred.—London Daily Mail.

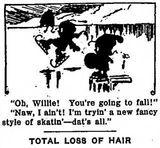
NO NEED TO TAKE CHANCES

There Is a Sure Way of Knowing Good Paint Material.

There is really no need whatever for any property owner to take chances in the selection of his paint materials. It doesn't cost a cent to learn how to be on the safe side. Certainly every property owner has enough at stake to find this out.

A complete painting guide, known as Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49, can be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York. This company is the largest maker of pure white lead in the world. Its Dutch Boy Painter trademark is famous as a guarantee of purity and quality. The outfit includes a book of color schemes, for either interior or exterior painting, a book of specifications, and a simple little instrument, with directions for testing the purity of paint materials.

WHY, OF COURSE.



"Oh, Willie! You're going to fall!"

"Naw, I ain't! I'm tryin' a new fancy style of skatin'—dat's all."

TOTAL LOSS OF HAIR

Seemed Imminent—Scalp Was Very Scaly and Hair Came Out by Handfuls—Scalp Now Clear and

New Hair Grown by Cuticura.

"About two years ago I was troubled with my head being scaly. Shortly after that I had an attack of typhoid fever and I was out of the hospital possibly two months when I first noticed the loss of hair, my scalp being still scaly. I started to use dandruff cures to no effect whatever. I had actually lost hope of saving any hair at all. I could brush it off my coat by the handful. I was afraid to comb it. But after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and nearly a box of Cuticura Ointment, the change was surprising. My scalp is now clear and healthy as could be and my hair thicker than ever, whereas I had my mind made up to be bald. W. F. Steese, 5812 Broad St., Pittsburg, Penn., May 7 and 21, 1908."

Caught on the Rebound.

The old man was lecturing his more or less wayward son on the evils of getting up late in the morning.

"Remember," he said, "that it was the early bird that caught the worm."

"But how about the worm, dad?" queried the youth, who thought he had his sire up in the air. "Where did his reward for getting up early come in?"

"I am informed," replied the old man, gravely, "that the worm was on his way home—hadn't been in bed at all."

And there being nothing more to say, the young man said nothing.

Couldn't Convince the Judge.

"I have heard of the soul kiss and kisses of other kinds, but I never heard of a man biting his wife as an evidence of his affection for her," remarked Justice O'Neill of Baltimore, Md., when George Phoebus, aged 27, of East Baltimore street, endeavored to explain the biting of his wife, for which offense she had him arrested. Mrs. Phoebus said her husband deliberately bit her on the cheek, and, though the pain was excruciating, he said that it was a "love bite." The justice fined him five dollars and gave him ten days in jail.

Assuming the Responsibility.

Mrs. Malone's patience was much tried by a servant who had a habit of standing around with her mouth open. One day, as the maid waited upon the table, her mouth was open, as usual, and her mistress, giving her a severe look, said:

"Mary, your mouth is open."

"Yessum," replied Mary, "I opened it."—Success Magazine.

SICK DOCTOR

Proper Food Put Him Right.

The food experience of a physician in his own case when worn and weak from sickness and when needing nourishment the worst way is valuable:

"An attack of grip, so severe it came near making an end of me, left my stomach in such condition I could not retain any ordinary food. I knew of course that I must have food nourishment or I could never recover.

"I began to take four tablespoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream three times a day and for 2 weeks this was almost my only food; it tasted so delicious that I enjoyed it immensely and my stomach handled it perfectly from the first mouthful. It was so nourishing I was quickly built back to normal health and strength.

"Grape-Nuts is of great value as food to sustain life during serious attacks in which the stomach is so deranged it cannot digest and assimilate other foods.

"I am convinced that were Grape-Nuts more widely used by physicians, it would save many lives that are otherwise lost from lack of nourishment."

Absolutely the most perfect food in the world. Trial of Grape-Nuts 10 days proves. "There's a Reason."
